Riverwalk residents outraged

By SHARON R. COLE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

A HANDFUL OF RECENT HOME buyers in the Riverwalk community are speaking up about the numerous repairs and construction problems they are experiencing in their newly-built community.

The development located on Walther Road in Bear consists of about 38 completed two-story townhomes with 32 more being built by the Pulte Home Corporation.

Pulte is an international corporation licensed to build in New Castle County that has been a member of the Home Builders Association of Delaware since 1993, according to Joe Thompson, director of the association.

According to Gilberto Medina, a resident of Riverwalk for the past six months, his family continues to deal with water leaks from the second-floor tub, lack of air-conditioning on the second floor, and sagging ceiling beams on the first floor.

ing beams on the first floor.

Medina said his neighbors have similar complaints. "Everyone has the same problems here," he said.

Medina said that the situation is so bad that his wife does not give her two young children a bath anymore because of the leaks coming through on their first floor ceiling. Instead he said that she only runs the shower.

Although Medina said that repairmen come to fix the problems, they just keep recurring.

"We finally got Conectiv (who is not contracted through Pulte) out here to fix our air-conditioning," said a frustrated Medina. "They said that there is bad engineering here."

Neighbor Danielle Harris also expressed dissatisfaction with her new home.

"You move in thinking that you don't have to do any (major repairs) with your new house and right away we've all been repairing and repainting," she said.

Iron Hill sting

Local residents have complained for years

New Castle County Police arrested at least 37 men ranging in age from 27 to 72 in the past week for soliciting sexual acts at Iron Hill Park south of Newark.

Officers reported that the park located on Whittaker Road off Old Baltimore Pike, was the target of an ongoing sting operation. "During a four-day period, 36 subjects were arrested for 51 criminal charges," said Officer Trinidad Navarro.

Charges included 35 counts of loitering for the purpose of engaging or soliciting sexual intercourse, 10 counts of indecent exposure, four counts of offensive touching, one count of unlawful sexual contact, and one count of lewdness. No names were released by police.

Navarro said there has been an average of about nine arrests each day of the project. He also reported that all of the subjects have been men

Leadership academy piloted

By SHARON R. COLE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Administrators from the Christina School District recently completed the test run of a week-long leadership academy developed by the University of Delaware.

According to Jeff Raffel, director of the University of Delaware's School of Urban Affairs, the program included educational exercises, special workshops, and presentations from school leadership experts, including keynote speaker Philip Hallinger, director of the International Institute for Principals at Vanderbilt University.

"The idea of most of the program was to get administrators to look outside of the box and to learn how to get something done that might seem impossible," Raffel said. "If there is no benchmark or expectation, you don't know how well you are doing, or how much you can do."

Christina's 25 participating school administrators had the opportunity to upgrade skills that are critical for

POLICE BRIEFS

Suspects sought

Sometime between 7:30 a.m. and 1:15 p.m. on July 20, unknown persons entered a residence on Wither- spoon Lane and removed an RCA TV and a Magnavox TV with a total value of $400. During the investigation, officers interviewed a pawn- broker who said items matching the description of this property were brought in for sale by three men who left when the store asked for ID. The suspects are described as white males, one 5 feet, 8 inches, 250 pounds, blonde hair and wear- ing a green shirt, one 5 feet, 11 inches, 300 pounds, brown hair and wearing a blue shirt, and one 5 feet, 11 inches, 150 pounds, with a mus- tache, wearing a baseball cap and a tank top shirt. Anyone with infor- mation is asked to call police at 366-7111.

Vandalism at Downes

Newark Police report two boys, ages 13 and 16, allegedly broke six windows at Downes Elementary School on Casho Mill Road some- time between July 20 at 5 p.m. and July 21 at 7 a.m. Damage was esti- mated at $1,000 but police reported Christina District officials declined to prosecute.

Men assaulted

A 20-year-old Newark man told Newark Police he was punched for unknown reasons by an unidenti- fied man in the parking lot of apart- ments on Wharton Drive on July 18 around 3 a.m. After the victim fled back into the apartments, another man went outside and was struck with a glass bottle by a suspect described as a black male.

Police seek info

Delaware Crimestoppers and the Delaware State Police are seeking information about a road rage incident which result- ed in serious injuries. According to police, the incident occurred between two drivers on Feb. 27, 1999, in the area of Route 72 and Route 4 when stones thrown up from the road by one car struck another. In a confrontation, one driver struck the other with a tire iron causing serious injuries to the victim's head and face. The suspect fled westbound on Route 4 in a Chevrolet S10 4x4 pickup truck which had chrome rails on the bed area. The suspect, seen here in a composite drawing provid- ed by the state police, is described as a white male, early 20s, 5 feet, 10 inches tall, 150 to 160 pounds, with short red hair and freckles.

Anyone who may have wit- nessed this incident or has any knowledge of it is urged to call Crimestoppers at 1-800-TIP- 3333.

New law penalizes aggressive driving

Governor hopes for safer highways

Governor Thomas R. Carper signed a bill last week aimed at creating safer roadways by cracking down on a host of aggressive driv- ing activities. The bill penalizes drivers who engage in a number of risky driving tactics and disregard road safety while they are behind the wheel.

In a recent national poll, 60 per- cent of those surveyed identified aggressive driving as the top threat to their on-the-road safety. Delaware joins Arizona and Vir- ginia in enacting this legislation — the only states to do so to date.

"If this measure saves one life or one injury, it will have served us well," said Carper at the signing.

According to police statistics, aggressive driving in Delaware con- tributed to more than half the 107 fatal crashes in 1998 and 58 percent of the 57 fatalities to date this year. Nationally, aggressive drivers are involved in two-thirds of fatal acci- dents and nearly 35 percent of all crashes.

Under the new law, drivers who commit three or more identified traffic violations in one incident will be charged with aggressive driv- ing. Identified violations include tailgating, speeding, passing on the shoulder, unsafe lane changes, fail- ure to yield the right of way, driving through stop signs or red lights, and passing stopped school buses.

First-time violators will incur fines of $100 to $300 in addition to attendance in a mandatory driving behavior modification class. Drivers convicted twice within three years will have their licenses sus- pended for 30 days. Depending on the severity of the incident, the penalty could also include 30 to 60 days in jail.

City manager Carl Luft said mandatory water restrictions are a "good possibility" in Newark by next week.

"We're pretty sure we will be OK this week," Luft told city council on Monday, "but mandatory restrictions are probable next week under present conditions."

Mayor Hal Godwin said he was not sure everyone got the message about voluntary restrictions which went into effect throughout Delaware last Friday. "I see people's sprinklers going on green lawns," Godwin said.

Luft said thanked the city water department for quick-thinking which added to the water supply last week. "They realized rain up in Pennsylvania would bring more flow down the White Clay," said

Tax bills confusing residents

By LAURA SANKOWICH

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Local school district and property tax bills may cause many property owners in New Castle County a bit of a headache this year.

In the past both taxes were contained on one bill. This year the two taxes were placed on separate bills and due dates were moved up a month causing protest among many tax payers.

"The decision was made to separate the bills so people had a clearer idea of where their dollars go," said County spokesperson D.J. Guthrie Carter.

County officials have said they are falsely accused of raising the school taxes, even though those levies are set by districts.

Frequently the "bill" contains the words "This is not a bill. Do not pay." The phrase is repeated twice in outlined black letters. However it also contains the words "Please return this portion with your payment," pointing to a perforated line followed by instructions on how to write out the check.

The "bill" also contains the amount of tax due letting citizens know they can use their Discover card to pay, an additional notice warning people of a new due date of Sept. 1 for their taxes and a postage-paid envelope to enclose a check in payment.

Guthrie Carter said the bills containing the words "don't pay," were sent to people who have their bills paid out of an escrow account. "Our objective was for everyone to have exact information on where their taxes went. They're getting a copy of what their mortgage company receives."

She said the prepaid mailing envelope was inadvertently placed with the other documents and will not be done in the future. That left residents hoping that their mortgage company can figure out the county's strategy.

Gordon explained at a civic association meeting that there was some "miscommunication" about the county's due date. "Taxes are due the first of September, but people won't be fined until after the 30th," he said.

Joe Busier Sr., president of the Centennial Village Civic Association, was among several people at the meeting who accused the county of acting out of self interest and trying to incur a higher rate of interest on their tax dollars by moving the due date up 30 days.

Gordon said the original change in the date was due to the frequency of late payments that were being received by the county and the fines that had to be assessed.

At the meeting, Gordon said bills should be paid by the first, however there would be a grace period of one month for them to turn in their bills without being taxed. The ultimate due date was still the same as the original one, he said.

This week, the county was mailing out another notice to further clarify their policy. According to the latest information, the "due date" for New Castle County property taxes and local school district taxes is Sept. 30, and late penalties will not accrue until after that date.

Local legislators discuss recent session

By MEGHAN AFTOSMIS

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Schools, taxes and health care costs were among the top priorities in a recent discussion between area legislators and residents.

State senators Steve H. Amick (R-Newark West) and Liane M. Sorenson (R-Hockessin), together with state representatives Timothy Boulden (R-Newark), and Stephanie A. Ulbrich (R-Newark South) held a public meeting at the Newark Municipal Building last week to discuss bills that were considered and debated in the General Assembly this year and those that will come up again in the next session.

The legislators assured residents that the pension exclusion bill, which raises the current exclusion from $5,000 to $12,500 and the personal income tax reduction bill will provide an average reduction of .4 percent, lowering the top tax rate to 5.95 percent, would pass in an upcoming Special Session which starts Aug. 3.

"We don't want to send a message to citizens that we want them to move here, work and raise their families and then move away," Boulden said.

Amick said a measure providing a substantial increase in the child care tax credit would also pass.

The land preservation tax credit for permanent gifts of land or interest in land to public agencies and qualified private, nonprofit, charitable organizations, and a 25 percent cut in the gross receipts tax for manufacturers also will be likely to pass with the group of bills, said the legislators.

But, although residents were happy to hear about tax reductions, many were concerned with those bills concerning education.

Sorenson and Ulbrich have been working for months on a professional accountability bill, which would include teachers and school administrators.

"The major stumbling block has been whether student performance should have an effect on teacher evaluations," Ulbrich said.

But evaluations will no longer be based on a single test, she said. There are now multiple measures that will be taken every year. This new system is being revamped by the Delaware Professional Board, which includes a large number of educators, parents and business community members, Sorenson said.

Another school measure, the school capacity legislation awaiting the governor's signature, would require verification that local school's have classroom space for students from a new development said that she has had to come home from work at least four times to meet with repairs.

Harris has suffered water damage due to a leak in the main water line in her laundry room and leakage from her master bath. As a result, she has numerous patches on her ceiling and walls. Other problems inside her home consist of vertical cracks in the paint on several wall corners, poorly-done paint jobs that reveal uneven thicknesses with paint drippings, and a bowed door.

"Bowed doors are common here," said Harris while pointing at her laundry room door that severely bends on its top half and does not close properly.

Bayard and Annette Thompson, also Riverwalk residents, are livid about the poor workmanship of their new home.

The Thompson's moved into the community on Jan. 27 of this year and have since been dealing with major water damage on their first floor ceiling due to leakage from the second floor master bath, flooding in their basement and a lack of air-conditioning flowing through the first and second level.

"It is very stupid for them not to satisfy me because I'm next to the sales model," said Annette Thompson.

After the Thompson's were told that a water leak coming from the model home that flooded their basement was repaired, a larger flood occurred only three days later.

In addition to that, the Thompson's first floor ceiling has been patched repeatedly which reveals impressions of the ceiling beams that appear to be sinking below the drywall.

"I (told Pulte management) 'I want my house the way I thought I was buying my house!'" said Annette Thompson. "They will never wear me down, so they might as well give in to me."

Steve O'Neil, Pulte's director of construction at Riverwalk would not respond when a reporter asked him about these complaints. "I will contact any person individually if they have problems, but I will not make a comment for public forum," he said.

O'Neil also requested the reporter not contact any other Pulte employees for information.

Another major concern of the residents, according to Medina, is the flooding that has occurred behind their homes. Although there hasn't been enough rain to see if it will happen again, Medina reported that earlier this year very deep water accumulated behind one family's swing set posing a possible safety hazard.

Although they understand that some kinks have to be worked out with new construction, the residents all have experienced too many situations that they said reflects poor workmanship.

"There are always going to be little things here and there because the house is made by man and man is not perfect, but this is really not good," said Mrs. Medina and six arrests were of people from Maryland and three from Pennsylvania.

► STING, from 1

"This is not just a local problem," Navarro said. "We have people from other regions coming here — that's how well known it is."

One resident of the Cooches Bridge area, who did not want her name used, said she had complained to police about questionable activity there over a year ago.

"They (make me uncomfortable), but I'll be damned if I let them chase me out," she said. "I still walk there."

The resident also claimed that she had seen many college and high school age boys in the park who she believed were prostituting themselves. "I saw men's underpants and cigarette butts on the paths all over the place," she added. "The boys would start arriving after school around three."

The woman said she did not see any change after she complained.

"If women were soliciting in short skirts, you'd have a problem with that," she said before the arrests. "Why hasn't anyone done something about college and high school boys who go there to make money?"

George Bursler, a Villa Belmont resident, said that three years ago he got a man arrested for lewdness. "I took my car up there to wash it and a man pulled up and stared at me," he said. "I drove away and he followed me (to where I re-parked)."

"Then he got out of his car, went to the woods, pulled his drawers down and pointed at his bottom," Bursler said that he had witnessed strange behavior at the park as recently as July 24 and has never felt that it was safe to take his family there.

"You don't know how to act because you might provoke them," he said, claiming that some of the men he saw there seemed to get angry. "Now we know how women feel."

Police reported complaints from residents and citizens concerning the sexual activity in the park led to the investigation. Navarro could not say how long police had been receiving complaints, but stated they had surveillance throughout the park prior to the special project which began on July 23.

During the assignment, several undercover police officers roamed through the pathways and parking lots. Police said men soliciting for sex approached the undercover officers and on several occasions actually exposed themselves.

Navarro also said that Iron Hill Park has been identified on an Internet site as a location where men can go to solicit sexual acts.

The park hasn't always been a place where families felt unsafe.

"Years ago, everybody went there and kids played ball there," said the woman resident. "It's a lovely park, but they've taken it and disgraced it."

Mary E. Petzak and Sharon R. Cole contributed to this story.

Christina District completes test run

► ACADEMY, from 1

amending student performance and school improvement.

Elva Brooks, principal of Thurgood Marshall Elementary School in Bear, said the program offered new ideas and hands-on experience.

"It was great having the opportunity to talk to other principals in all grade levels so that you have a perspective outside of your own building," Brooks said.

In addition to being exposed to a greater network of colleagues, Brooks said that she appreciated being able to use a technical simulator which gave her experience in picking apart student data.

According to Newark High School principal Frank Hagan, who was involved in organizing the program, the academy is something all administrators need with the inception of new state standards.

"There are some skills that need to be reinforced and developed in principals that we don't have in making the transition into new student accountability, particularly in utilizing data," he said.

Hagan stated that he wants to make sure that he and other administrators know what to do with the onslaught of new student data that will come from state testing.

In addition he said that the academy is not a one-week deal that would lose its steam among participants. "The administrators will continue to meet with faculty and outside experts every month for case study sessions throughout the year," he said.

The leadership academy has also gained full support from Paul Fine, the executive director of the Business/Public Education Council.

"We recognize that for many years, this has been a forgotten group," Fine said. "Without strong leadership at the school level, real education reform cannot be sustained."

According to Raffel, eventually the academy will become part of Delaware's educational system and will be offered to all districts. "The (Christina) district was really progressive on this," he said. "They jumped right at it and they deserve a lot of credit for it."

Use electric prudently during hot weather

Due to the region's continuing hot weather, Conectiv Power Delivery and PJM, the electric grid operator for the Mid-Atlantic region, are asking the public's help to prevent possible power shortages.

The suppliers suggest these guidelines:

-Set air conditioners at 80 degrees, or use fans.

-Minimize opening refrigerators and freezers.

-Use high-energy appliances, like washing machines and dryers, only at night.

-Keep window shades or drapes closed during the hottest part of the day.

-Limit use of electrically-heated water and turn off non-essential appliances and lights.

-Move lamps, TVs and other heat sources away from thermostats for accurate readings.

-Move obstacles away from air ducts to allow cooler air to circulate freely.

Extreme heat can be a danger to older people, infants and those with some medical conditions. Avoid heat stress by staying in cooled areas of homes, local shopping malls, libraries or public buildings, and drink plenty of fluids.

before a building permit was issued.

A related measure, House Bill 195, provides 100 percent of the costs would be billed to the state if new buildings were needed as a result of reducing class size under already passed legislation, Boulden said.

The school property tax reduction also is likely to be approved during the upcoming Special Session, Amick said.

The state will provide $30 million in funding to the public school districts and local school boards will be required to vote on whether to use the money in a school tax cut or to spend the additional money.

County information still costs too much, according to local organizations

Several months ago County Executive Thomas P. Gordon handed down an executive order regulating the release of information and fees for photocopying documents on file.

According to president of the 7 and 40 Alliance, Martha Denison, the policy, although under revision, is still taking its toll on local civic organizations.

"We find it prohibitive," she said addressing Gordon at a recent public meeting.

Under the Freedom of Information policy, in order to obtain documents or information from any New Castle County office, the person requesting the information must submit a written request either by fax or mail to the County Attorney's office identifying the file or record they wish to review. If a request is approved, the county has about 20 days to respond to a request.

"It seems to contradict state law," said John Flaherty, a member of Common Cause of Delaware. "In section 1001 under title 29 of the state Freedom of Information declaration of policy, the philosophy behind the law provides that citizens should have easy access."

Of particular concern has been the $1-a-page fee, when individuals pay 5 to 10 cents a page for copies at commercial copying facilities.

"FOI is being worked on," Gordon said. "Copies will be 50 cents instead of a dollar per copy."

Gordon added that some documents will be provided to the public for free. "We're working on revising it," he said.

Denison said because the group is community supported and their funds are drawn from their members, it is difficult to afford copying costs, especially for large documents.

Gordon suggested there is the possibility of exploring alternative solutions to the problem.

"I think there are some real communication problems, we're not getting things done," said Denison.

son."

Gordon said, "Marty, I meet with you every month, that's where I get things done. I stay until things are done." Gordon referred to a monthly appearance at president's meetings of civic organizations.

It's no laughing matter!

This started out as a satirical look at the decision by County Executive Tom Gordon to issue "tax bills."

But in the end the issue of tax bills was not worth a couple of cheap chuckles.

Gordon, like those before him, was resentful that county residents blamed his administration for their property tax bills. The problem was amplified by the large number of people who pay through an escrow account managed by their lender and don't know how much they cough up.

The administration then arrived on the idea of sending out bogus bills and even went to the trouble of sending out separate county and school tax bills.

While the notices for the county prominently displayed "this is not a bill" in outline type, the lower portion of the school bill did not do so.

Further confusion was added when return envelopes were added to the fake tax bills.

The county administration explained away the problems by citing difficulties with the vendor who actually sent out the bill and went ahead and put in all the enclosures, regardless of who was actually paying.

That's a good explanation because the other one — that the county was trying to get money by less than honest means — was frightening to contemplate.

Making the situation even more confusing was that the county moved up the deadline for the tax bills. The problem here is that in this computerized world, mortgage companies may have already programmed the due dates in for property tax bills. Without adequate notification, we could see late notices and black marks on credit records.

Gordon publicly announced that the county would allow a grace period. However, the bills did not indicate that and outlined harsh penalties for not paying on time.

County government is a pretty good deal. We get good police protection, improved building code enforcement, decent parks and...and...and...oh yeah, there was that Ice Cream Festival. Nice affair and a good way to keep county employees busy in the summer months.

Seriously, the tax bill escapade is not a laughing matter.

A letter sent by Gordon containing amount that is paid to the county and the amount paid to schools would be a dignified way to tell the story. In the interests of fairness, the county should also disclose the amount of state money that goes to schools, along with other federal and state funds that go to county government.

To do otherwise is an insult to the intelligence of taxpayers.

A RECENT SURVEY OF BEVERAGE consumption in the United States has indicated an alarming trend in our drinking habits. Not my drinking habits. The trend measurement had nothing to do with a recent stock price increase in Rolling Rock. I'm talking about soda, the stuff that teens are now swilling at three times the level they did 20 years ago. According to the Guzzle Gallon-o-meter, the dial comes to rest at close to 64 gallons per teenager per year. The disturbing portion of this trend, in addition to an obvious increase in sugar consumption, is that the yearly increase in soda consumption has to be offset by a decrease in the consumption of some other beverages. If not, bubble shaped teens would spontaneously explode on Main Street on a hot summer day due to high liquid levels and carbonation quotients.

The loser in this cola conflict is milk. The amount of milk products consumed by teens has decreased by the same proportion that sodas have increased, which is unfortunate since teens have extremely high calcium requirements during their "Wonder Bread formative years." Teenage girls, in particular, need to accumulate high levels of calcium to get a jump-start on preventing osteoporosis later in life. If these beverage consumption trends continue, it is obvious that the prospect for good health in our teens could be facing udder disaster (rim shot, please).

You may be asking yourself, what does increased soda slurping have to do with education? Since our high schools have teens as a captive audience for a good portion of the day, the perfect venue exists to educate students about the benefits of a healthful diet and to set examples for proper nutrition by providing appropriate foods. The response from schools: let's install soda machines so our kids can support this growing trend. In fact, the number of soda machines in Glasgow High School doubled at the end of last year.

Obviously, health is not the primary motivation for the appearance of the brightly colored monoliths in school hallways. No, the real reason they are present is (surprise) money. Actually, the stage was set to sell sodas in schools by soda manufacturers many years ago. It began innocently enough, or seemingly so, when soda manufacturers tempted principals and athletic directors with fancy scoreboards for the gym and stadium, far better than the variety the school budget or booster clubs could purchase.

The catch? There's always a catch. As Tom Waits says, "The large print giveth, and the small print taketh away." The contract for a scoreboard probably reads something like

Running new street through from Main to B & O Railroad

A new street, running north from East Main to the base of the B & O Railroad embankment, and connecting with Kershaw Street, is the latest civic development in Newark.

Mr. Wright said that a roadway thirty feet wide with pavements five feet wide on each side are to be run through the Curtis property, which he bought some time ago and which is now being cleared. The street line will run across the eastern portion of the property, near the residence of Dr. Kollock.

At the present time, workmen are busy tearing down the old mansion house and the stone barn at the rear thereof, preparatory to extensive alterations there. The barn lies partly in the right of the way for the new street.

Three miraculously escape death when car is smashed to pieces here

Two persons, a man and woman, both of Rose Hill, were badly injured when a small coupe in which they were riding collided with a touring car driven by Milton Brunner of this town, at the entrance to the old Jedell fireworks plant along the Cooch's Bridge-Newark Road about 6:15 last evening.

According to A.C. Rittenhouse, who lives in the Jedell home a few hundred feet from the scene of the crash, and from a statement made by Brunner, the latter was coming out of the Jedell Lane onto the road. The coupe driven by Davis suddenly shot into view coming north, struck the Brunner car a glancing blow on the fender, turned completely over in the air and landed upside down in the road.

City working for master water plan...and the officials are still eying the White Clay for future dam project

By next July the city hopes to have a master plan for supplying water to its 30,000 customers through 1995.

Betz engineers will help in the construction of a new water main along Delaware Avenue, and in the development of two new wells.

Secondly, the firm will evaluate Newark's current method of supplying water-groundwater pumped from well and some water purchased from the Wilmington Suburban Water Corp.-and recommend whether the city should, in the future, purchase more water, develop more wells, or switch from wells to surface water.

The county's Office of Water and Sewer Management has proposed a plan to interconnect the four water suppliers in the county.

The interconnection system, estimated to cost approximately $500,000, would permit water to be transferred from surplus areas to deficit areas, and is expected to solve county water problems for the next 20 years.

Women's prison explores housing children

The warden of the Women's Correction Institution wants to explore the idea of housing inmates' children at the prison in New Castle.

Warden Paul Howard said he is in the preliminary stages of checking the cost to house children with the incarcerated women.

The idea, he said, was formed about a year ago when a visitor from an African nation toured the prison and asked where the children were. He said in other countries when mothers are incarcerated the children follow the women to prison.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To: Editor
From: David Wagman, Newark

Some will say that our lives are journeys down a long road of life. Each of us drives a different car, a different way to go down that path, and each of us ends up at a different point along that path. There are those that are always looking for a nice, quiet, secure ride, searching for stability or a calmness in life. There are those who barely even live a fulfilling life, merely passengers along for the ride.

Newark resident Paris Walters, if anything, drove a Ferrari. A Ferrari one day, a Cadillac another, or maybe on some days, just a nice relaxing ride in his Lincoln Towncar. Whatever the car, Paris, who died in his sleep on Independence Day at the age of 94, lived his life with a passion. He had a desire to explore, to see & to do, that many of us could only hope to come close to in our own lives.

As many of you may know, I've only had the opportunity to know Paris over the past year. In that time however, I've seen a man who knew how to reach out to those around him, grab their attention, and if they were lucky, bring just a little bit of his own life into their own.

Paris was a giving and generous friend. He truly was. To Paris, the importance of money was always a distant second to the importance he placed on his friends, and those he loved. Whatever he did, wherever he went, whatever the costs involved, he was only too happy to take them on himself, because that was simply the type of man he was, and how he liked to live his life.

I remember, after we had just recently come back from seeing the Blue Ridge Mountains in Shenandoah National Park, he told me that he needed another carrot to dangle in front of him now that this trip was done.

Can you imagine? Just for a moment, living your life every day, like there was a carrot dangling in front of you — always striving for more, seeing what you want, and going for it, then seeing and going for more. At 94 years old, Paris Walters still had a lot of carrots.

I will miss Paris greatly, and always cherish the impact he's made on my life, and those around me.

In the past several months over 1,000 individuals and 60 organizations have joined with the "Buckle Up! First State Coalition" in support of House Bill 88, a primary seatbelt law. We would like to thank each of you who participated in this effort.

House Bill 88 was passed by the representatives by a substantial 3-to-1 margin in May. Unfortunately the Legislative session ended on June 30 before HB 88 was brought to the Senate floor for a vote. When the General Assembly reconvenes in January 2000, HB 88 will continue through the legislative process, where it was stalled June 30 in the Judiciary Committee.

It is rare that we are faced with the opportunity to support a law that costs nothing to implement and offers benefits in saving lives and money for Delawareans. We are counting on your continued support of this important public safety issue. Between now and January we will be launching a public awareness campaign through the media. We also ask you to urge the Senators to support HB 88 through any of the following means: Phone calls to the Senator's office at Legislative Hall; personal letters of support petitions of signatures in support of HB 88; presentation and discussion of the issue in meetings of civic organizations and request for endorsements.

Again, we appreciate your support of HB 88 to date and thank you in advance for your continued efforts on behalf of safety on Delaware roadways.

To: Editor
From: Alan E. Farstrup, executive director International Reading Association, Newark

I am deeply concerned about H.B. 261 which calls for "phonics as the primary form of reading instruction in grades K-4. If passed, this legislation will seriously impair our children's chances of receiving thorough and effective reading instruction and it will interfere with the ability of schools and teachers to provide reading instruction that meets the needs of individual students and communities.

The proposed legislation is problematic on several levels. First, phonics is only a part of reading instruction. If Delaware's children are confined by legislation to have reading instruction that focuses on phonics as the "primary form of reading instruction," they will be limited in several ways: they may not receive critical instruction in reading comprehension; they may have restricted access to a wide range of challenging print and other material; and, they may miss out on a whole range of other critical reading skills and strategies that are available to children who receive a balanced instructional program that includes phonics and pays attention to all aspects of reading.

The report of the National Research Council, "Preventing Reading Difficulties (1998)," and the recently passed federal Reading Excellence Act specify and define the critical factors that constitute reading as a total and complex set of related skills. Reading is much more than phonics and includes the following factors: having a working understanding of how sounds are represented alphabetically (phonemic awareness and phonics); sufficient practice to achieve fluency with different kinds of text (literary, informational, technical); sufficient background knowledge and extensive vocabulary to render written texts meaningful and interesting; control over strategies for monitoring comprehension and clarifying misunderstandings; and, stimulating interest and motivation to read for a variety of purposes.

There is a sound base of scientific research to support these components of good and balanced reading instruction. To limit instruction to a primary focus on phonics is to limit our students' potential for truly excelling in all aspects of reading.

We are also quite concerned that the legislature is being asked to micro manage by prescribing specific methods of instruction. The keystone of Delaware's reform effort is to define high standards and then to hold teachers and students accountable to those standards. The methods used to achieve these goals are to be left to local educators and teachers because they are the professionals closest to the children and best equipped to make decisions about which methods are needed for the particular children they work with. If teachers and schools are to be held accountable — and we believe they should — then they must be given all the tools and professional flexibility they need in order to meet high expectations.

Colas in schools mean money

this: "WE WILL GIVE YOU (THE SCHOOL) A RIDICULOUSLY GRAND SCORE BOARD THAT NOT ONLY GIVES THE SCORE, BUT ALSO HAS A CLOCK (THAT WORKS, UNLIKE STANDARD SCOREBOARDS). IT WILL TELL THE AUDIENCE WHICH TEAM HAS POSSESSION OF THE BALL (IN CASE THEY CAN'T FIGURE THAT OUT), ADD POINTS TO YOUR SCORE WHEN NO ONE IS LOOKING, AND MAKE AUTOMATIC PURCHASES ON THE STOCK MARKET THROUGH THE INTERNET. It will also say 'Buy Megadeath Cola For Real Refreshment' in bright orange neon letters." Set the hook, reel them in.

If soda sales are needed to provide additional scholarship or award money for student achievement, the reason given for soda sales in school, why stop with hallway machines? Schools should scrap the whole cafeteria idea and simply contract out to the highest bidder. The Reagan Administration already set the dietary standards for our nation by declaring ketchup and relish to qualify as vegetables; all that's needed is the burger (protein) and the sesame seed bun (carbohydrate). In doing this, fat and salt consumption could keep pace with the soda trend.

Adding a McWendy King franchise to the school opens up many other opportunities for our students. In addition to working after school until midnight, now students can work DURING the school day, too. Someone has to man the deep fat fryers, burger assembly lines, and cash registers. Speaking of cash registers, students could earn academic credit in economics and basic math by counting up money and making change.

Finally, I believe the addition of the "marketplace" to schools could solve the attendance problem. Where do kids go when they cut school? Right, they hang out at the mall. Why not line the hallways of our schools with shops found in every mall in the country. With stores in the schools, even when kids cut school, they would BE IN SCHOOL! Of course, profits would go to the school, the shops would need employees so they would have to hire.... well, you get the picture. I believe I've milked this for all its worth.

Household water saving tips for use

Drought conditions concern many people because not having enough water can hinder the way we live: from not having water to drink to not being able to bathe or shower the way we're used to, to our lawns being brown and our cars being dirty. We often take water for granted and yet it is one of the most vital elements in our life. In some countries wars are fought over access to water. In the U.S. we are blessed with a good supply of water but the fact is we are below normal levels in this area of the country.

Without water we literally couldn't live. So in times when it isn't as plentiful we wake up to ways we can begin to conserve water.

Recently I received a call from a concerned Newark resident asking what ways he could reduce the use of water in his household.

Here are a few things that are proven to work.

To conserve water used in the toilet. Place a weighted plastic gallon jug in the tank of conventional toilet to displace and save water with each flush. Another tip is to not flush unless it is necessary.

For the shower, install low-flow aerators and showerheads. Take shorter showers or turn off the shower while soaping or shampooing. We know that taking showers instead of baths saves lots of water, too, depending on the length of time you shower. Consider bathing small children together.

Don't just run water from the faucet. For example, stop the faucet flow while brushing your teeth or shaving. Put a bit of fresh water in a cup for rinsing your mouth and the toothbrush.

If you're in the habit of running water to let it get cold for drinking, refrigerate a bottle of drinking water instead.

Use a dishpan or plug the sink for washing and rinsing dishes. If you use a dishpan, use this water to feed your plants after you're done washing the dishes. Also operate the washing machine and dishwasher only when they are fully loaded. Wait until they're full before you use them.

Sweep sidewalks and driveways — don't hose them down.

For the long term, select more drought-tolerant vegetation and plant species for landscaping, and use mulches to retain moisture. This will help your landscape look green longer and will use a lot less water over time.

Direct downspouts or gutters toward shrubbery or trees, and/or collect the water in a large bucket for use elsewhere — like watering your garden. Just remember this is non-potable water.

Lastly, cover pools and spas when they are unoccupied to reduce evaporation. That way you don't need to replace the water as often.

These are appropriate techniques to use whether during a drought or any time of year.

State has more disc golf courses per capita than any other

Hughs.

Hughs, owner of Churchman's Liquors in Christiana, designed almost all of the course at Lum's Pond in Bear. "It's a finesse course," he said. "You have to throw for accuracy."

When Hughs started playing 15 years ago after a friend taught him, he was one of about 13 or 14 people who played for recreation locally. "A friend of mine who is very good at ball golf enjoyed disc golf also. He took me out and I enjoyed it very much — it's an addictive sport."

Hughs said he started to become more deeply involved with disc golf when he approached park officials at Brandywine about ordering special discs for people to use when they play, instead of the Wham-O Frisbees they sold at the time. From there he also helped other people order discs and began to help organize local tournaments.

"Thirteen or fourteen people came out, I developed handicaps and developed the tournament. They played nine holes and it was only $1 to enter. One out of three people got prizes."

When Hughs organized the first disc golf tournament at Brandywine Creek State Park, 100 people turned out for the event. "It was very overwhelming," he said.

Delaware now has seven courses. New Castle County courses include Lum's Pond, Bellevue, White Clay Creek and Brandywine Creek state parks, all of which Hughs had a hand in designing. The other two are courses at Killan's Pond in Dover and a private course at Camp Arrowhead in Lewes.

As former president of the Mid Atlantic Disc Golf Association and vice president of Delaware Disc Golfer, Hughs knows every facet of the sport. He said there is even a Pro Disc Golf Association and a pro tour that is both national and international.

Bob Trump of Newark and Jim Johnson of Wilmington are both fans of the sport. "It's really grown," Johnson said. "Corporations like Pizza Hut are sponsoring some of the pro tours."

Johnson said there are both professional men and women disc golfers in the national and international circuits.

"There are even magazines and videos that tell you about playing," Trump said.

Hughs said some of disc golf's popularity comes from the sports accessibility. "It's a great sport," he said. "Anyone can play, I've seen people as young as 7 and as old as 70 in tournaments."

"It's also the cheapest — it only costs you a frisbee. Everyone has at least one frisbee in their closet," Hughs said.

People interested in taking up the sport can also purchase discs at Lum's Pond or the Fairfield News Stand.

For more information about disc golf or to find out how to enter local tournaments call Rich Hughs at 834-8040 during the evening or 456-5700 during the day.

George Washington exhibit at Brandywine River Museum

OK! So you know he pitched a dollar across the Potomac. So you know he chopped down a cherry tree. So you have seen the Gilbert Stuart "unfinished" or "Athenaeum" portrait which was in just about every schoolroom in the United States. But what else do you know about George Washington and what other famous works of art involve his likeness? (It doesn't count if your answer is "The One Dollar Bill!")

Actually, the area in which we live was very important to both General George Washington and President George Washington. Now, in this the 200th anniversary year of the first president's death, an excellent new exhibit in his honor has been mounted at the Brandywine River Museum in nearby Chadds Ford, Pennsylvania, where US Route 1 crosses the Brandywine. The title of the exhibition is "George Washington: American Symbol." It will be open throughout the summer, closing on Monday, September 6, Labor Day.

The current BRM show explores Washington's lasting legacy as the United States' most enduring icon. There are over 90 paintings, prints, sculptures, decorative objects and memorabilia created over the last two centuries now in one place for us to see, to enjoy and to learn. Together they trace the constantly evolving portrayal of our first president and the father of our country.

It all began, as far as historians can discover, with Charles Wilson Peale when in 1772 he painted Washington's first portrait. Since then Americans have had a fascination with his image. That continues into this computer age. Check your own programs and discs to see how many pictures and "cutouts" of the man are at your fingertips. I did that about an hour ago and was really surprised. You may be too.

During Washington's lifetime, both writers and artists presented him as a distinctive and potent symbol to inspire patriotism in the newly-formed country. Works of art created during this period such as Jean-Antoine Houdon's "Bust of George Washington," done in 1785, were often placed on a pedestal and given near religious worship. Some were covered in gold to add to the aura. He was, according to the artists, virtuous and faultless. While modern day historians no longer "buy" that story, the image remains in the minds of most Americans as untainted.

The works range from some truly fine art to that huge, hideous, semi-nude sculpture by Horatio Greenough which has poor George looking like a cross between Jupiter and Parsifal seated on a great deity variety throne. If you have never seen it on exhibition in Washington, don't hurry. The good news is that it is NOT in the show at the Brandywine River Museum!

There was another awful work "of art?" I just recalled. Have you ever seen the 1802 painting by John James Barralet? It was titled simply enough "Commemoration of Washington." The work, however, was simply horrendous. It shows Washington's ascension into heaven with the angels carrying him on the clouds. He is dressed like portrayals of Moses with something resembling the 10 commandments in his lap!

One of the many images of George Washington now on exhibit at the Brandywine River Museum is this one of our first president as a boy and involving the famous Cherry Tree incident. It is entitled, "Father, I Cannot Tell a Lie" and was engraved by John C. McRae in 1867.

This interest in memorabilia of the first president began in 1799, the year of his death. Records show that mourners flocked to jewelers and engravers to buy any trinket they could get their hands on. The merchants responded and the rush became very profitable. It still generates a fine business as anyone who has ever visited Philadelphia or Mount Vernon can attest.

The BRM exhibit comes at a great time. School is out. It is a lovely ride to Chadds Ford. The museum is air conditioned. A great family field trip awaits and one which can really give you kids a head start on show and tell this fall. It can't hurt the history grades of your older children either.

There is a truly outstanding catalog of the exhibit with the same title as the exhibit. This catalog can stand on its own as both an historical and artistic document. It is a must for families and those interested in George Washington. It is on sale at the museum store just inside the main entrance.

Chadds Ford is an easy drive from our area and there are many routes from which you may select. If you go up Route 41, turn right until you come to the Brandywine Creek and the museum. If you go up Routes 100, 52 or 202, turn left and stop just before you cross the Brandywine. There are plenty of signs.

Delaware playgrounds 'relatively' safe

More than halfway through their nationwide survey, the National Program for Playground Safety (NPPS) gave Delaware's playgrounds a "B" grade for safety, the highest in the country to date.

Of the 242 public playgrounds in Delaware, 19 are in the city of Newark. In order to comply with Linda A. Gould, spokesperson for the county's Special Services Department that maintains all county playgrounds. "I am happy to see that our efforts are recognized as being effective."

The national organization based its rating on four elements of playground safety: supervision, age-standards-revised recently of the Consumer Product Safety Commission and the American Society of Testing Materials, city staff are in the process of repairing, retrofitting, removing and/or replacing equipment in all parks where play equipment has been installed.

As of October 1998, the city had completed work in 15 of the parks. Newark's 1999 capital budget provides for an additional $25,000 to continue the repair or replacements.

New Castle County owns and maintains 120 parks in some of the heaviest-populated areas of the state.

Of the 26 states tested in addition to Delaware so far, two states received a "B-," 20 states received "C" grades, and three states received "D" grades.

The NPPS takes random sampling of park, school and child-care playgrounds, but does not release the names of the playgrounds tested for the study.

By addressing safety issues at playgrounds, the NPPS, established by a grant from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, hopes to see a decline in the annual 200,000 playground-related injuries in America.

Bunzl to handle Rita's delivery and distribution

Rita's Italian Ices, which have a store in the Newark Shopping Center, appointed Bunzl Distribution Inc. to handle all of the company's delivery and distribution needs to its 200 plus locations throughout the East Coast.

Bunzl Philadelphia will be responsible for coordinating the distribution of most of the company's supplies, from food and paper products to cleaning supplies. Previously, Rita's corporate headquarters handled the sale and distribution of supplies to all of its locations.

Bunzl Philadelphia is an integral part of Bunzl Distribution Inc., a major distribution company based in St. Louis, Mo., with 65 branches across the United States, Canada and Mexico.

Rita's Italian Ices was founded by Robert Tumolo, a former firefighter in Phila., Pa., who opened a small ice stand in 1984 as a way to supplement his income. His small business was met with such great success and popularity that in 1989 he began franchising the concept.

According to the company, Rita's is the nation's largest Italian ice chain, with almost 225 operating stores by the end of 1999 throughout the Northeastern and Southeastern United States, and as far west as Ohio. The company expects to sell 30 million cups of Italian ice this year.

Franchise information can be obtained by calling 1-800-677-RITA.

Conectiv buys independent Internet service provider

Conectiv Communications has purchased iNet Communications Consulting Inc., an independent Internet service provider (ISP). iNet offers dedicated and dial-up Internet service, consulting, data security and web services to 2,500 residential and business customers in Delaware and southeastern Pennsylvania.

The iNet acquisition reinforces a recent series of strategic initiatives, including additional investments in telecommunications, that will better position Conectiv, the holding company that owns Conectiv Communications, for future growth.

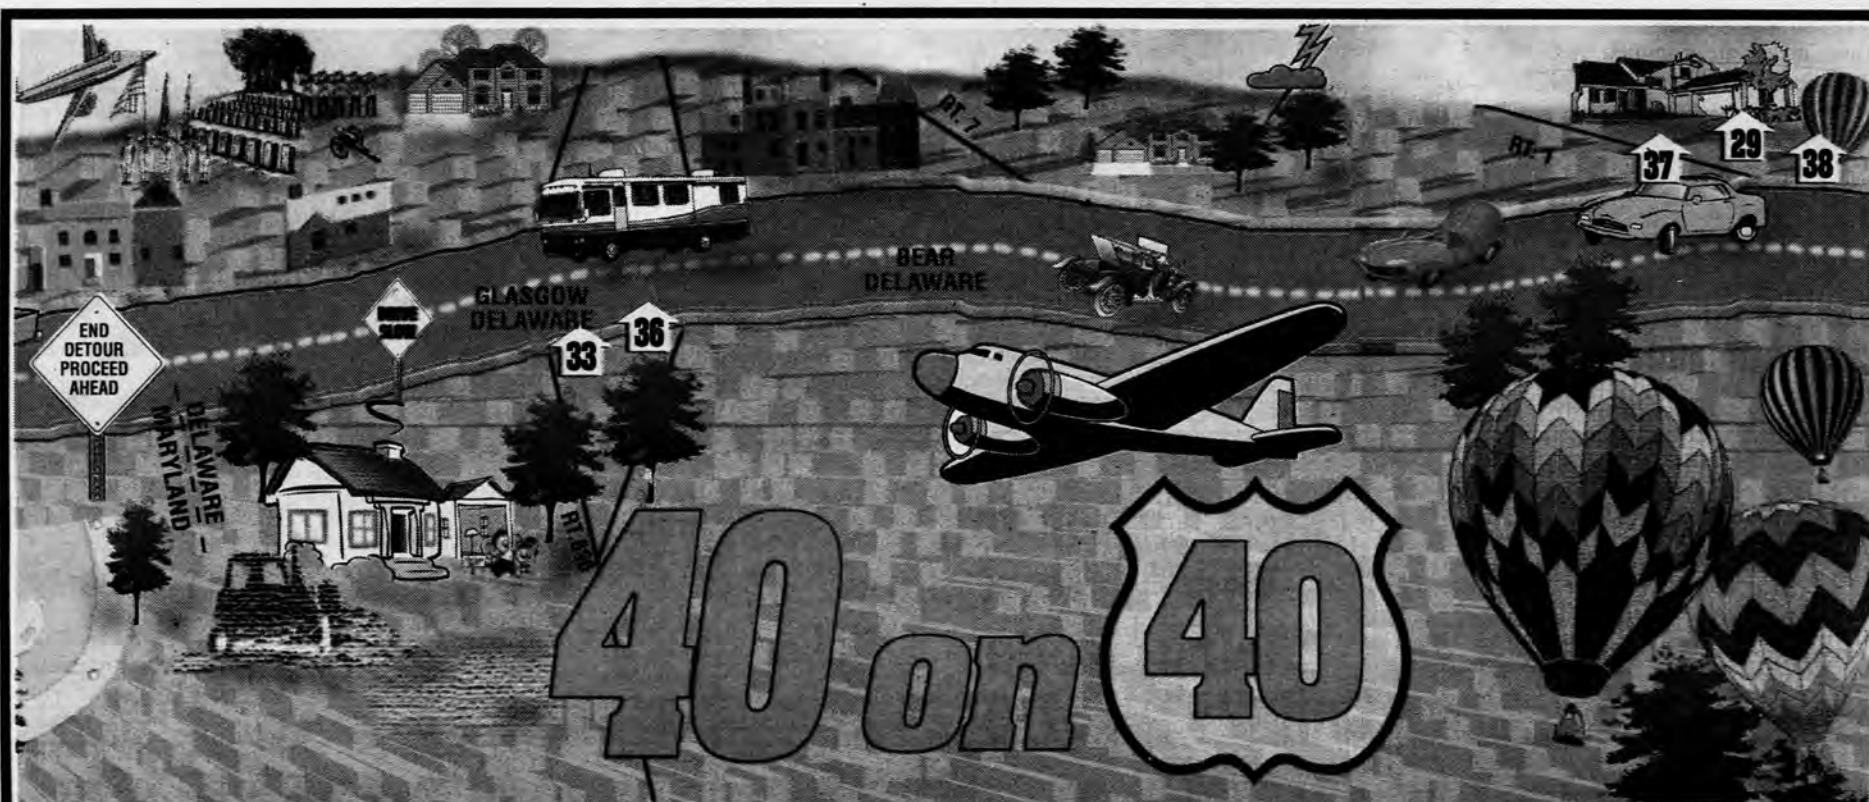

Jeffrey Allen, vice president and general manager of Conectiv Communications, said, "Combined with our recently announced DSL (high-speed data service) service, this move positions us to offer end-to-end Internet service."

Conectiv Communications' offers 7 cents-per-minute rate on outbound toll calls to anywhere in Delaware, New Jersey, Maryland, and Pennsylvania and plans to begin offering high-speed (DSL) data service this summer.

Allen noted that iNet has local access points available in more than 150 cities, including all major cities in Conectiv Communications' mid-Atlantic regional service territory. He said the acquisition will allow Conectiv Communications to provide a full suite of Internet-related services, including: Dial-up and Dedicated Internet access services, as well as Internet and Intranet consulting, web design, and data security services.

As part of the acquisition, Scott Saunders, former owner of iNet, will take a position as director of internet operations with Conectiv Communications. All current iNet employees will also join Conectiv Communications.

Subcontractors can continue to self-certify

The Small Business Administration (SBA) announced that qualified small disadvantaged firms can continue to self-certify their small disadvantaged business (SDB) status while seeking subcontracting opportunities on federal projects with large prime contractors such as DuPont, Conectiv, Hercules, Chrysler, Texaco, etc.

Effective Oct. 1, and thereafter, these firms will have to submit their formal SDB certification papers, obtained from SBA, so they and the prime contractors they work with will get contract evaluation credits reserved for SDB firms.

SBA's Small Disadvantaged Business Program also provides SDB firms seeking prime federal contracts a price evaluation adjustment of up to 10 percent for contracts in selected industries. To qualify for this adjustment, these small firms must also receive their formal SDB certification from SBA and be registered and listed in SBA's on-line database of small businesses, PRO-Net. PRO-Net's web site is at <http://pro-net.sba.gov>.

The SDB program's subcontracting phase, initially scheduled for Jan. 1 and now Oct. 1, involves the same selected industries and the same small firms eligible for the price credit. Prime contractors who use SDB firms for subcontracting can qualify for evaluation credits and monetary incentive. Again, these small firms must receive their formal SDB certification from SBA and be registered and listed on PRO-Net.

Delaware has more than 24,000 minority-owned, women-owned, veteran-owned and disabled-owned small business firms. However, currently only 400 of these firms are registered in PRO-Net and of these only 13, of more than 6,600 SDB certified firms listed in PRO-Net, are from Delaware.

Currently Delaware has one private SDB certifier to assist small firms with their SDB certification application. It is Federal Qualifiers, Inc. at 18 Union Station Road in Newark, Del. 19711 and the firm, whose President is Robert T. Lhuler, can be reached at (302) 234-1246.

Additional information on the SDB program and its certification process can be obtained by calling 1-800-558-0884 or by visiting the agency's web site at <http://www.sba.gov/>.

Canal Majors softball season ended by M.O.T.

By CHRIS DONAHUE
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Some cold Canal bats and warm Middletown-Odesa-Townsend ones helped eliminate Canal from the 11-12-year-old All-Star State Softball Tournament last weekend at Suburban Little League in New Castle.

M.O.T. scored four runs in the first inning en route to an 11-8 victory in the first game and six runs in the first inning of an 11-6 win the next day.

Shannon Szabo had Canal's lone hit and scored two runs in the opener.

Jenna Ranauto had a triple and scored on a single by Katie Walsh to provide two of Canal's hits in the second game. Lara Krygier had a single for Canal's third hit.

Also in the second game, Kelly

Russ walked with the bases loaded to score Lindsey Hopper, and Szabo drove in Candace Wasson on a groundout.

“We were hoping to take at least one game from them,” said Canal Manager Cindy Szabo. “Our hitting just stopped. We hung in there, but for one reason or another, we just weren’t hitting the ball.”

To get to the finals, Canal had beaten New Castle and Suburban twice. Those wins also clinched the District II crown for the 18th consecutive season.

“I was glad to keep that streak going,” Szabo said. “We’ll work hard to take it again next year. They’re young and they’ll be with me next year. They’re a great bunch of kids.”

Canal will lose only five of its players for next year, Szabo said. Returners include starting pitchers Krygier and Ranauto.

Newark National eliminates Newark American

Spiese goes the distance, allows five hits in 8-0 win

By LEN BROWN

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

One week earlier when Newark National and Newark American squared off against each other in the Little League District II Major Division All-Star Tournament, both were trying to keep their post-season tournament records spotless.

Their second meeting this past Saturday in the District II loser's bracket final meant even more - tournament survival.

In the first game contested at the Brandywine Little League Field, National won a tug-of-war, 6-5, pulling off a two-out, two-run final-inning rally to dump the American stars into the loser's bracket of the double-elimination tournament.

Last Saturday at National's George Clark Field, no such drama was needed as National's Steve Spiese silenced the American bats in a no-doubt-about-it win, 8-0.

The victory earned National - the defending District II champions - a berth in the District finals against unbeaten Capitol at Suburban Field near New Castle. It was the Capitol stars that had tagged National with its first tournament loss the previous Wednesday.

For Spiese, who will enter eighth-grade at Kirk Middle School in September, his complete game shutout performance against American was sweet redemption.

“I wanted to pitch again (vs. American),” said the 12-year-old.

Spiese had also started for National in its first meeting with American.

Capitol ousts Newark National

Newark National's tournament run was ended two days later when it lost 2-1 to Capitol.

Capitol scored both its runs in the first inning. Winning pitcher Kevin Brown allowed one hit.

Jeff White's sacrifice fly scored Anthony Redmond in the second for Newark's run.

Newark finished with a 4-2 tournament record. Both of its losses were to Capitol.

But, he was hit around in the three-plus innings he worked. The big blow was a three-run, first inning homer to deep center off the bat of Kosta Papanicolas.

“I remembered that home run,” smiled Spiese.

But, there would be no hitting display by American the second-time around against the slender right-han-

Newark American cools off red-hot Naamans

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

In order for Newark American Little League to earn a second showdown with Newark National in District II Majors play, it had to get by a Naamans team that had drenched most of its opponents in runs.

It took seven grueling innings, but host Newark American earned that right by holding Naamans to two hits in a 5-2 victory last Friday night.

Naamans had entered the game with a 3-1 record and had scored 41 runs in the four games.

But Newark American starter Danny Ryan and Mike Ingram, who came on in relief in the fourth inning with two runners on base and one out, shut down Naamans, backed up by solid defensive play.

Newark Manager Mike Von Steuben, whose team improved to 3-1 with the win, credited a corps of players who have been together since they were all stars as 9-year-olds for the team's never-say-die attitude.

“When they were nine years old, which is the heart of this team, they lost their second (tournament) game, and they battled all the way to the championship game, winning seven games in the losers bracket,” Von Steuben said. “So, since that year, this team has had that mentality of just playing every game as if it's their last game. So it's a mindset out there.”

“But I think we've finally impressed on them that little things make the difference.”

Newark's Will Sheppard had the only hit for either team through the first three innings when he singled with two outs in the third.

In the fourth, Ryan singled home Ingram, who had also singled, to give Newark a 1-0 lead.

In the bottom of the inning, Ingram worked out of a bases-loaded jam to maintain the lead. However, Naamans tied the game in the fifth when Dan Meany led off with a walk, stole second and later scored on a groundout.

Ingram led off the sixth by reaching base on an infielder error and later scored on another infield error to make it 2-1.

In the bottom of the inning, Ray Carr singled and reached second on an ensuing error. With two outs, Meany singled to center to score Carr.

American rips New Castle

Newark American played soundly in almost every aspect of the game to help it earn a 10-1 victory over New Castle in a District II Majors Baseball Tournament contest last Wednesday at Canal.

The victory sent Newark on to host Naamans in a losers bracket final two nights later.

"What I liked about this game was that everybody contributed," said Newark Manager Mike Von Steuben.

"I told them, 'Everybody came up with big plays; hitting, defensive, base-running.' And that's what makes a team.

"We have a chance to win the district. It's going to take some breaks because of our (6-5) loss to Newark National, but we have a chance to win the district and I think it's just a matter of making some big plays.

"And the other thing is all the little things add up in games, whether it's hitting the cutoff, covering home on a steal, hitting behind the runner, recognizing what pitches (to swing at). It all comes down to making good decisions on the field. We're looking forward to the next game against Naamans."

New Castle, which beat Canal National 1-0 in the first round, was eliminated with a 1-2 record.

Newark took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Chase Darden led off with a single and later scored from second on a two-out double off the fence in left-center by Mike Ingram.

In the second, Randy Von Steuben got on with a two-out, bunt single. Von Steuben scored when Will Sheppard doubled down the rightfield line.

New Castle got its first hit of the game off starter Kosta Papanicolas in the third when Elijah Leiter singled. After striking out a batter, Papanicolas walked Willie Marshall, and he was lifted for left-handed pitcher Eli Turkel. Turkel struck out the first batter he faced and got the third out on a fly ball to second.

In the third, Ingram, a right-handed hitter, hit an opposite-field home run to make it 3-0. Newark scratched out two more runs in the third to take a 5-0 lead.

New Castle scored its only run in the fourth when starting pitcher Albie Subach walked, stole second, and later scored on a wild pitch. In the fifth, Turkel robbed New Castle of its second hit and a possible run by snaring a line drive off the bat of Rob Bryson. The next hitter, Stephen Pearson, doubled, but Turkel got out of trouble when Dave Sartin's liner was caught by the shortstop, Ingram.

Newark put the game out of reach with five runs in the sixth. Dylan Green and Pat O'Donnell each singled home a run, and O'Donnell scored on a wild pitch. Evan Walker completed the scoring with a two-run homer.

Canal junior girls top Stanton-Newport

After its 10-0 opening-round victory over Stanton-Newport, Canal's 13-14-year-old All-Star team posted a 2-1 record to remain alive in the District II tournament.

In its second game, Canal lost to Suburban 5-4 in eight innings. Amber Hicken and Ashley James each doubled, and James also scored a run.

Canal then beat Stanton-Newport 13-2. Hicken went the distance on the mound and also had two triples and scored two runs.

Stacy Maloney aided the victory by going 3-for-4 with three runs scored and Hicken also scored three times.

Last weekend, Canal trailed Suburban 7-5 going into the top of the seventh but scored four runs and won 9-7.

Maloney and Billic each had RBI-hits in the seventh.

Canal faced Suburban again in the championship game Tuesday at Canal.

National eliminates American

► NATIONAL, from 22

der. Spiese was touched for just five hits while striking out nine. He had such good command of his pitches that the only walk he yielded came with two outs in the bottom of the sixth.

In last Saturday's second meeting between the two Newark entrants, National turned the tables on American, plating four in the top of the first. And, they did it without any long-ball.

In fact, National built its 4-0 start with just one hit, Butch Covey's RBI single to right-center - Covey added a second RBI hit later - and a run scoring fly-out wrapped around four walks.

American never recovered as Spiese, staked with the early lead, went right after the American lineup.

"The whole team went and watched American play (in a loser's bracket game Friday night)," said Tom Farley, National manager. "I think (the players) wanted American to win so we could play them again."

Farley, who managed the National 10-year-olds all-star team last Summer, knows how difficult it is when you have to play out of the loser's bracket.

"When he lost to Capitol, I wasn't sure how the team would respond," said Farley. "But they were all business at practice (the next night) and they responded very well today.

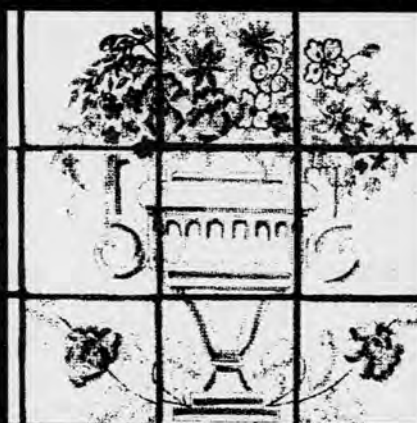

As for his winning pitcher, Farley said that against American the second time, Spiese hurled the kind of game that he knew he was capable of pitching.

Canal American season ends with loss to Naamans

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The difference between Canal American and Naamans in last Wednesday's District II Majors game came down to a couple hits.

Unfortunately for Canal, Naamans' hits came with lots of runners on base.

Naamans hit a pair of two-run homers and a grand slam to power it to a 10-4 victory in a losers bracket game at Canal. The defeat ended Canal's season at 2-2.

"We made two or three bad pitches," summed up Canal Manager Chris Potts about the loss. "We were in the game the whole way. Another day we win. I give (Naamans) a lot of credit. We had them down and they came back. But I'm real proud with the way our kids played today. Matt Goodman pitched great."

America's victories were a 5-1 win over Midway and a 1-0 win over Canal National. In the win over National, Nick Neel pitched a two-hitter with five strikeouts. Brian Moore scored the only run on a fielder's choice by Sean McLaughlin.

"The kids played real well (in the tournament)," Potts said. "They came back real well after the (14-0) Newark National loss, but they just came back like gangbusters and I'm real proud of them. Just a super bunch of kids. All 14 of them."

Canal took a 2-0 lead in the first inning against Naamans on an RBI-single by Nick Neel that scored Brandon Bell, who had singled, and an RBI-double by Goodman that scored Moore, who had also singled.

Canal took a 3-0 lead in the third when Moore walked and later scored during a rundown.

Naamans made it 3-2 in the bottom of the third on T. J. Knight's two-run homer.

In the fourth, Canal's Enrique Pabon hit a two-out double and reached third on a passed ball, but was stranded.

In the fifth, two walks and a bunt single loaded the bases for Naamans' Matt Steele, who belted a pitch over the left-field fence near the foul pole to make it 6-3.

In the same inning, Chris Sanna singled home another run, and Todd Menchaca plated Sanna with a two-run homer to make it 9-3.

Bell, who finished the game 3-for-4, led off the fifth with a double and came home on a single by Neel to provide Canal's final run.

Sanna singled home Knight in the sixth to complete the scoring.

American knocks off Naamans

► AMERICAN, from 22

In the seventh, Newark's Pat O'Donnell reached first on an infield error and Chase Darden followed with an infield single. Evan Walker then singled to left past a drawn-in infield to provide the eventual winning run.

"I was just trying to put the ball (in play) wherever I could," said Walker.

Darden later scored on a wild pitch by losing pitcher John Dischert, who went the distance. Walker scored the final run on another infield error.

In the bottom of the seventh, Ingram struck out Matt Steele, got Dischert on a flyout to left, then ended the game by striking out Chris Sanna.

"I'd say Mike's been sharper, but it's tough," Von Steuben said. "There's a lot of pressure out there and I thought he kept battling and the defense played well. I thought the defense came up with a couple big plays."

Family health starts with exercise — kids, too!

(AP) You thought all kids were just naturally spry and energetic? Steven Smith, associate professor of kinesiology at Hope College in Michigan, has some bad news — and some advice — for parents.

Nearly two-thirds of all school-age children can't measure up to the minimum standard of fitness in muscular strength and endurance or aerobic fitness, he says. More than half of elementary-school girls and a quarter of the boys can't perform a single pull-up. And a third of the boys and half of the girls can't run a mile in less than 10 minutes.

About five years ago, Smith helped start a physical education class at Hope designed for children who are home-schooled. About 40 elementary-age youngsters participate each fall, guided by kinesiology students at the college. That set the stage for this advice from Smith for parents who don't want their youngsters to waste away on the sofa:

— Take part in fitness activities with your children. Parental attention is a big motivator. "Try to focus on what pleases them, not what interests you," he cautions. "Find something you all enjoy."

Set a particular time for a half-hour workout as a family group; it could be just before watching television or around mealtime. Set a time over the weekend if schedules are too complicated.

— Start gradually, and build over time. Five minutes of exercise each day, six or seven days a week, is right for getting the habit going. Then work up over 10 weeks to 30 minutes a day, three to five days each week.

— Keep a record. Participation logs will help your children visualize their improvements. Smith suggests using a mileage map of your state. A chart for each family member, posted on the fridge, could record distances, times and repetitions. Update with each workout.

— Emphasize participation, not performance. Give lots of reinforcement and recognition. "Reward the process of fitness rather than the final product," says Smith. "When you reach a goal, give yourself a prize." And when each family member reaches certain goals, consider rewarding everyone — perhaps tickets to a ballgame or an expedition to a water park or zoo.

— Encourage your children to practice motor skills. Share information learned outside the home about sports teams or other activity classes.

— Sign "contracts." Each family member can write down a fitness goal for the month, such as developing the ability to briskly walk two miles non-stop.

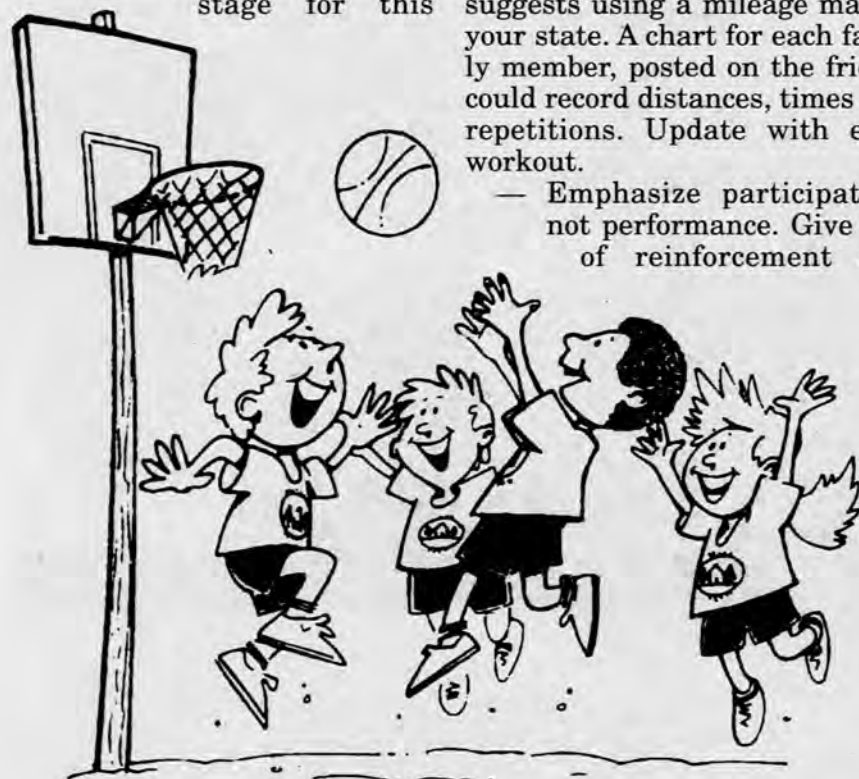

— Since kids like to watch television anyway, load the VCR with physical activity and fitness videos.

— Encourage sport parties — roller-skating, hiking, vigorous playground games, for example — and get your child involved in community recreation programs.

— Consider sending your child to a youth sports camp. Improvement in such a program can be fast and dramatic, providing the youngster with greater self-confidence and motivation to continue fitness activities.

— Volunteer as a sponsor, coach or helper for a community sports team on which your child plays. "Fitness automatically becomes a family affair because at least one and often both of the parents are present and active participants," says Smith.

Strength training for kids

Innovative strength-training products, such as resistance balls and tubes, have captured the imagination of young exercisers, who may be more attracted to the opportunity they present for fun than for fitness. Which is fine, because the physical fitness levels of today's youth are piling in comparison to that of their parents and grandparents, and anything that sparks their interest and participation is helpful.

What's a parent to do? First, try to ignite a genuine interest in fitness in your children. Propose walks, bike rides, a little one-on-one basketball. Then, if your child is willing, do some strength training together.

Recent research indicates that strength training may actually enhance the development of bone and connective tissue in children and may favorably influence their growth.

Like any physical activity, strength training for children should be performed within appropriate guidelines. International fitness expert, founder and CEO of Jazzercise, Judi Sheppard Missett offers these tips:

- Take into account each individual child's maturity level, desire to participate, and ability to understand technique and direction.

- Have your child perform the movements without weights or equipment first. Perform all exercises slowly, with controlled movements through a full range of motion. When they've mastered the technique, they can add a light amount of resistance.

- Start with very light weights/resistance and increase the amount very gradually. A child's training program should consist of high repetitions and one to three sets of each exercise using relatively low loads. Children should not attempt to perform any maximum lifts.

- Avoid overhead lifts, such as an overhead press or overhead tricep press, with weights. Modify such movements to create exercises which move the hands no higher than shoulder level.

- Provide ample supervision and instruction, and be sure that your child's breathing is smooth and constant. Children should never hold their breath or strain to complete movements.

Don't forget to warm up

Perform a proper warm up and cool down before and after your strength training session. The following exercise stretches the hamstrings and lower back — two areas that work overtime during many activities and sports.

Begin seated on the floor with your feet extended in front of you. Bend one knee just slightly and bend the other to about a 90 degree angle. Sit up tall, keeping your abdominal muscles pulled in and your chest lifted.

Lean forward slightly from your hips, reaching for the toes of your extended leg. Stretch only to the point of mild tension; never stretch to the point of pain. You can place one hand on the floor if desired. Hold for at least 15 to 30 seconds breathing naturally and avoiding the tendency to slouch, rounding your shoulders forward. Reverse and repeat on the opposite leg.

Dentists advise teenagers to skip oral piercing

Even though the practice of oral piercing has become a popular fad, this eye-opening fashion statement may create unforeseen complications in the oral cavity, say dentists.

"Those who get their tongues or lips pierced usually do not consider the health consequences," says Aloysius F. Kleszynski, DDS, a general dentist who serves as president of the Chicago Dental Society. "There are numerous complications associated with oral piercing, including diseases spread through the use of unsanitary piercing needles, keloid scars, nerve damage and numbness at the site of piercing, prolonged or permanent drooling, altered speech, possible damage to the sense of taste, enlarged lips, swallowed jewelry, fractured or broken teeth, the possibility of stroke from clotting, and even toxic shock. It's quite a list."

Infection is the main danger. Piercing of the tongue, lips, cheek, or another oral site carries serious risk of infection because the mouth contains much bacteria. The tongue can swell, obstructing breathing and making swallowing difficult.

Metal allergies are another long-term possibility. The metal studs also can interfere with any x-rays involving the head or neck.

The tongue is a muscle and can be severely damaged by piercing. "If a nerve is pierced accidentally, it can suffer from permanent loss of taste or loss of movement," says Dr. Kleszynski. "The tongue has veins that run through it, and when pierced, can bleed. Persistent bleeding or a blood clot can result."

Pierced lips pose some interesting social problems. "Lips can remain inflamed and enlarged long after piercing occurs," says Dr. Kleszynski. "The presence of the metal means there can be persistent secretion of saliva — or drooling. The skin of the face does not have a natural defense against the bacteria in saliva that is supposed to be in the mouth. Plus many people do not realize that gold-plated or gold-filled and sterling silver jewelry is never appropriate for any new or unhealed piercing."

Few state and local regulations address the health concerns of oral piercing, especially minimum hygiene standards. "Also, I wonder about the circumstances in which piercing is performed," says Dr. Kleszynski. "It must be done under scrupulously clean circumstances. Think about how clean your dental office is. You want the same environment when getting pierced. The piercer should be knowledgeable, should wear a fresh pair of gloves, and should not be experimenting on your body. Would you want anything in your mouth, such as instruments or needles, that have not been sterilized before being used again? No."

The best advice, says Dr. Kleszynski, is not to get it done at all. "There are too many problems, and so much we don't know yet, so I would urge people interested in this fad to find another manner to express their individuality," he concludes.

Splinter removal 101

DALLAS (AP) Splinters are such pesky little devils — not really major but oh-so-debilitating.

Here's the drill on dealing with them, courtesy Dr. Pamela Okada, assistant professor of pediatrics at The University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas:

If it's a typical small splinter protruding from the skin, it can be removed with a gentle pull with clean tweezers.

Or, if it's more deeply imbedded, use a little more effort by nudging it out with a sterilized needle.

"For those stubborn splinters, first clean the skin with soap and water, but avoid soaking it because the splinter can expand," Okada explains. "Then free the splinter end with the tip of a sterilized needle and lift up the end of the splinter with the needle tip." Finish the job by removing the splinter with clean tweezers.

If redness or drainage occurs at the splinter site, see the doctor.

Summer heat increases the likelihood of athlete's foot

Whether you're at the beach, pool, gym, camp, work, or even hanging around the house, there's a good chance you may develop a fungal infection this summer.

"Summer heat and humidity brings excess moisture and sweating to our bodies, creating the perfect setting for fungi to grow or fungal infections to develop," says dermatologist Guy Webster, M.D., Associate Professor and Director for Cutaneous Pharmacology at Thomas Jefferson University. One of every five persons gets a fungal infection at some time.

Athlete's foot is the most common fungal skin infection in humans and affects an estimated 70 percent of adults. It occurs mostly among teenagers and adult males. Many people will develop it at least once in their lives.

Contrary to popular belief, walking barefoot in places like public showers, swimming pools, and locker rooms is not the main cause of athlete's foot, but it can be a contributing factor. "Sweaty feet, not drying feet well after swimming or bathing, wearing tight shoes and socks that offer no ventilation, and a warm climate present the perfect setting for the fungus that causes athlete's foot to grow," notes Ronald Lepow, D.P.M., president-elect of the American Podiatric Medical Association.

Symptoms include cracked, blistered, and peeling areas between the toes, redness and scaling on the soles, and intense itching. Athlete's foot may spread to other parts of the foot, including toenails.

Proper treatment of a fungal infection depends on the right diagnosis, which makes going to a physician so important, stresses Dr. Lepow. Before treating what you think may be athlete's foot or some other fungal infection, he advises to check with your podiatrist or dermatologist, who can diagnose the condition and prescribe the correct course of treatment.

Should you choose to first self-treat your athlete's foot with an over-the-counter antifungal cream, be advised that some of these products may relieve some symptoms fairly quickly, but don't necessarily alleviate the problem, cautions Dr. Webster. "While your skin may look better and temporarily feel better, the infection can remain for some time afterwards. Athlete's foot is notorious for its high rate of recurrence," he says. If you notice no improvement within two weeks of using an over the counter product, he suggests you call your doctor.

In more severe cases, a doctor may prescribe foot soaks before applying antifungal creams. If your athlete's foot is stubborn, antifungal oral medication may be prescribed.

While it is not easy to prevent athlete's foot and other fungal infections, both doctors say you can take steps to lessen your chances of infection by following some simple rules:

- Wash your feet daily.
- Dry your feet thoroughly, especially in between your toes.
- Avoid tight footwear, especially in the summer. Sandals are the best warm weather footwear.
- Wear cotton socks and change them daily or more frequently if they become damp. Don't wear socks made of synthetic materials.
- Go barefoot at home.
- Dust an antifungal powder into your shoes in the summer.

Don't let rashes go untreated, adds Dr. Webster.

Not treating the rash at all can result in skin blisters and cracks that can lead to bacterial infections.

Some more facts about feet

NEW YORK (AP) — Your feet have to lug around 100 to 200 pounds of humanity each day, encased in airless, often ill-fitting covers. They are generally ignored in the regular beauty routine.

This neglect and abuse can add up to a lot of problems, says Dr. Suzanne M. Levine, podiatrist with New York Weill Cornell Center of New York Presbyterian Hospital. Not looking nice in sandals could be the least of your concerns.

Levine has some advice for dealing with the most common foot worries:

Corns and calluses. Treat your feet with warm soaks and slough off some of these hard, thickened areas of skin with a pumice stone. Avoid those over-the-counter treatments that contain acid, Levine cautions, because the ingredients can burn skin or cause ulcers.

Cracked heels. Not only are they ugly, they can become infected. The doctor recommends using exfoliating products with an alpha-hydroxy acid (Lac-Hydrin 5 and Ureacin-10) for treatment.

Ingrown toenails. If one develops, first soak your feet in warm water laced with Epsom salts or vinegar. After soaking, gently push the skin away from the nail with a clean orange stick. Then file the ingrown nail with a clean new emery board, apply antibiotic ointment, and bandage. If the problem persists, or if the toenail is too painful to treat yourself, see a podiatrist.

Foot odor. Eating spicy foods often causes stinky feet. Avoid very spicy foods and drink lots of water. Dusting your feet at least twice a day with a deodorizing powder may offer some relief. One treatment Levine recommends is soaking your feet in a tannic acid solution, which can be made by brewing two teabags in a quart of warm water.

If you're vigilant, you can maintain good-looking feet year round, says Levine.

She recommends a regular routine including soaking feet in a warm Epsom salts solution, followed by a session with the pumice stone. Before bedtime, apply a moisturizing lotion or cream and massage your feet with your thumbs.

And, she adds, when you dress your feet again at the start of the day, make sure you choose shoes that are well-cushioned, substantially soled, and comfortable.

Pets are 'family' too – is yours making you sick?

NEW YORK (AP) — You share a lot with your little four-legged family members — but that can include infections that can make you sick.

A dog-owner, Dr. Philip Tierno, director of clinical microbiology at NYU Medical Center, has some tips for fellow pet owners who want to protect both their animals and themselves:

■ After you stroke, handle or pat your pet, wash your hands. That turtle you picked up out of his aquarium may carry salmonella, a leading cause of gastrointestinal diseases in humans.

■ Don't allow your dog or cat to lick your mouth, nose, or any open wound. Animals can transmit germs such as Pasteurella that can prevent healing of the wound.

■ Keep your pets' vaccinations up to date. Dogs and cats can get rabies or syphilis-like leptospirosis, both of which can be transmitted to humans.

■ Groom your pets. A clean, well-brushed dog or cat is less likely to be a source of fungal infections; he's also less likely to have fleas and ticks.

■ Don't let your pet go into the wild. House cats, for example, are usually healthier than cats that roam outdoors. The outdoor cat will eat mice and birds that carry toxoplasma, the world's leading parasite affecting 2 billion people each year. Toxoplasmosis in pregnant women, whose immune systems are already stretched, can cause fetal birth defects.

■ Feed your cat prepackaged foods only. An indoor cat who eats prepackaged foods usually will not carry toxoplasma.

■ Wash your hands vigorously after dealing with your cat's litterbox or your dog's pooper-scooper.

You can avoid picking up infections, including Toxocara, a roundworm that migrates in the body. There are 2,000 cases of visceral larval migrans each year, Tierno points out.

■ Take notice of any changes in your pet's appearance.

For example, if his coat suddenly becomes lackluster or sparse, he may have ringworm.

This fungus, which grows on the surface of animals' skin, can be transmitted to humans.

■ Be especially vigilant about cleanliness when your pet is ill.

When applying medications to a sick pet, always wash up with a germicide.

■ Don't let a dog or cat play with you to the point that it bites or scratches.

Even a housecat, if she draws blood, can transmit cat-scratch disease, bartonella. This organism lives in the fleas on cats and can cause swollen lymph glands in humans.

■ If you have more than one pet and one animal is sick, wash your hands thoroughly before touching the others. It's also a good idea to have all pets checked by your vet when one becomes ill.

HEALTH BRIEFS

Guard your teeth

Mouthguards prevent 200,000 injuries every year in high school and college football games, according to the Academy of General Dentistry. They also prevent injuries in boxing, soccer, hockey, lacrosse, and other sports.

An athlete is 60 times more likely to sustain dental damage when not wearing a mouthguard. They can also help prevent concussions, cerebral hemorrhages, incidents of unconsciousness, jaw fractures, and neck injuries.

Label smarts

HOUSTON (AP) — If you're intimidated by all those numbers printed on that can of veggies, just focus on serving size, calories, and fat content. That's the advice of Lynne Scott, registered dietitian at the DeBakey Heart Center at Baylor College of Medicine. "Nutrition labels can be very helpful," says Scott, "but the variety of information can be overwhelming to dieters." Also remember that fat-free does not mean calorie-free, says Scott.

The age for glaucoma

NEW YORK (AP) — Don't think that glaucoma is something that might creep up on you as you get older, warns the Glaucoma Foundation. It can happen at any age — even newborns can be affected. Tragically, 90 percent of the 120,000 Americans who are blind as the result of glaucoma did not have to lose their sight.

Glaucoma is tricky because it doesn't offer any warning symptoms. It is really a group of diseases which can produce increased fluid pressure inside the eye, over time damaging the optic nerve, with loss of vision. Usually side vision goes first.

But with regular exams, your eye doctor can detect early signs of the disease. The test is simple and painless. Treatment may include eye drops, medications, laser or conventional surgery, or a combination of these.

For more information about glaucoma call the Glaucoma Foundation, 1 (800) 452-8266.

Quick advice

NEW YORK (AP) — "Fitness and Exercise" and "Eating Right" are two health-oriented titles in the free "Life Advice" series of information flyers produced by MetLife.

The fitness flyer has a table showing how many calories you burn in various activities; the nutrition piece has information about food preparation, balance and whether to diet.

Make your summer celebrations fun, but safe

With summer in full bloom, we are faced with scores of fun outdoor events and activities. It is important to remember rules of safety while also being prepared for minor injuries.

Here are some suggestions for safely celebrating the hot, sunny season.

An outdoor party is a sure way to have fun and take advantage of summer weather. To celebrate a special occasion or a holiday, help organize a beach barbecue for your family and friends. Grill outdoors and allow the aroma of chicken and burgers to fill the air. Request that everyone bring a favorite side dish or dessert for a feast that will last throughout the night. Organize group activities such as water polo and sand volleyball.

Before the big day begins, put together a first aid kit with plenty of the first aid items most used by kids — adhesive bandages. Look for waterproof bandages with an adhesive that sticks in moist conditions and releases with virtually no residue. Bandages with fun designs will provide maximum play value for kids of all ages.

In addition to adhesive bandages, your kit might include a cold pack that activates instantly — no refrigeration needed — and reduces pain and swelling caused by bruises, bumps, and sprains that may occur during an afternoon of activity.

A first aid kit is also essential when venturing out for an afternoon of summer sailing. Always check the weather forecast before you make plans to set sail and develop a written float plan to provide to someone on land. This plan should include your destination and length of time you plan to be out on the water, so that in case of emergency, rescuers will be able to locate you.

Recreational sports enthusiasts should also follow a safety plan. In-line skaters should wear helmets as well as knee and elbow pads for extra protection. Bikers should also wear helmets and ride on designated bike paths or obey traffic laws when navigating streets.

Wherever you go and whatever you do, keep safety in mind and enjoy the months of summer.

Are you at risk for Lyme Disease?

(NAPS) Health officials predict that there will be an unusually high number of ticks this summer, dramatically increasing the risk for Lyme disease, the most frequently reported tick-transmitted infection in the United States.

How do you know if you are at risk? And, how can you best protect yourself? Taking a closer look at where you live can help. Several environmental factors indicate that you are at risk for Lyme disease:

- If you live in a Lyme disease endemic area.
- If work or leisure activities take you into wooded, brushy, and grassy areas.
- If your lawn is not regularly mowed and edges not regularly trimmed.
- If your landscape attracts deer.

Lyme disease is a bacterial infection spread by the bite of an infected deer tick and can cause a number of different symptoms that can be serious if left untreated. Ticks are found in wooded, brushy, and grassy areas; they also commonly seek animal hosts in residential gardens, shaded grass lawns, and in and around rock walls.

Lyme disease was first recognized in the U.S. in 1975 after an apparent outbreak of arthritis in school-aged children near Lyme, Connecticut. Since then, reports of Lyme disease have increased dramatically.

Symptoms of Lyme disease are often mild and easily overlooked. A common early symptom is a bull's eye rash at the site of the bite. This is often followed by flu-like symptoms, such as fatigue, chills, fever, headache, and muscle and joint pain. Fortunately, in most cases, Lyme disease is easily treatable with antibiotics if diagnosed early.

Because it takes only 24 to 48 hours for an embedded tick to transmit the infection, you should examine yourself, your children, and pets while outside and soon after returning indoors.

If you find a tick, use a pair of fine-pointed tweezers to remove it. Grasp the tick as close to the skin as possible and slowly pull out. After removal, apply an antiseptic such as alcohol or an antibiotic ointment. Contact your doctor if any symptoms of Lyme disease occur, especially if you know you've been bitten by a tick.

Use insect repellents and personal protection measures such as wearing light-colored clothing with long sleeves and tucking pant legs into socks or boots. Other Lyme disease prevention measures are under evaluation, including a vaccine.

Lifestyle choices help you live longer, better

(AP) Better be prepared. You're going to be around for a long time.

With life expectancies among Americans steadily increasing, the prospect goes beyond the old joke about outliving your money.

The Mayo Clinic Health Letter, in inaugurating a year-long "Living Longer" series, points out the obvious: taking better care of yourself now will let you enjoy the "extra" years relatively free of disability or declining health.

The publication notes that average life expectancy has increased from 47 years at the beginning of this century to about 76 today, near its end. One in 26 baby boomers will live to 100.

Currently, there are about 61,000 American centenarians, and predictions are the number will climb to as many as 600,000 in another 50 years.

... life expectancy has increased from 47 years at the beginning of this century to about 76 today. One in 26 baby boomers will live to 100.

And, says the letter, the longer you live, the better your chances for an even longer life.

The editors cite studies that suggest physical and mental disability during aging have more to do with lifestyle choices than inherited limitations. Among them is a 1998 Stanford University study which found that people who don't smoke, exercise regularly and are not obese not only live longer, but better.

"This landmark study contradicts old stereotypes of aging as a time of inevitable mental and physical decline. It suggests that how you live your latter years — either in health or disability — can be significantly influenced by decisions you make throughout your life," they write.

Aging well depends on choosing to follow familiar advice:

- Exercise daily for 30 minutes. Inactivity is responsible for most of the physical decline that takes place in older age.
  - Don't smoke or use other tobacco products. Even people who quit later in life can improve their health.
  - Drink alcohol in moderation, if at all.
  - Eat a balanced diet. Include fruits, vegetables and whole grains every day.
  - Maintain a healthy weight. Overweight people tend to have more medical problems.
  - Make your health a priority. Simple things like wearing your seat belt in the car or getting a yearly flu shot and a periodic pneumonia vaccination can help you live longer.
  - Challenge your mind. Short-term memory loss often associated with aging can be lessened with daily mental engagement.
  - Invest in your relationships. People who stay connected with family, community and friends live longer than those who are isolated. The same is true for those who maintain a spiritual connection.
  - Keep a "can-do" attitude. It will help you maintain your independence, which also is linked to longer life.
  - Plan financially. If you're 60 now, you may live another 20, 30 or 40 years. Allocate your resources accordingly.
- "Aging is inevitable. But don't believe that weight gain, high blood pressure and chronic illness are necessarily 'normal' parts of aging," the letter says. "You are, to a large extent, responsible for your own longevity. And you're never too old to start taking steps toward living longer healthfully."

Clearing up the myth that sun cures acne

Clear complexions achieved during the summer may mislead many of the United States' 37 million acne sufferers into believing their problems are behind them. But that's not the case, note dermatologists.

"When exposed to sunlight, skin tends to swell, and oiliness and redness is reduced, leaving acne-prone individuals with a temporary appearance of clear skin," explains Katie Rodan, M.D., Assistant Clinical Professor of Dermatology at Stanford University. "As the summer progresses, and people are exposed more to the sun, the skin begins to shed dead cells, clogging pores and making acne worse."

Acne sufferers, whether they are in their teens or their forties, need to pay special attention to their summer skin care regimen, advises Kathy Fields, M.D., a clinical instructor of dermatology at the University of California, San Francisco Medical Center.

To help protect your acne-prone skin this summer, the two dermatologists recommend the following:

► Apply a sunscreen or sunblock product daily with a minimum SPF of 15 to all exposed skin (including the lips), even when it's hazy or cloudy. Additional sunscreen should be used in periods of prolonged sun exposure. "Sunscreen is essential to keeping skin healthy. It should be part of everyone's daily summer skin-care program," says Dr. Fields. Avoid intentional sunbathing or tanning, as well as sunlamps and tanning beds.

► Don't wash your face more than twice a day, and only use mild, non-drying soaps. Use gentle cleansers that will not irritate the surface of the skin but are strong enough to combat the acne. Try cleansers that contain salicylic acid.

► Avoid using creamy moisturizers and oily sunscreen; use non-comedogenic products instead. "Non-comedogenic products will not clog pores," says Dr. Rodan.

► Use benzoyl peroxide lotions as part of your regimen - these are de-greasing and help kill acne-causing bacteria.

► All prescription retinoid products affect the skin by making it more susceptible to sunburn. Exfoliating agents, including alpha hydroxy acids, are also known to increase the skin's sensitivity to sunlight.

"Contrary to popular belief, if you're using one of these products you do not have to avoid the sun at all costs," explains Fields. "Follow basic sun-protection guidelines, avoid extensive sun exposure, and talk to your dermatologist about your summer skin-care regimen."
