THE PRINTING OF YEARBOOKS

A SPECIALIZED JOB

Yearbook printing is a specialized job. Many technical problems are involved in even the simplest volume. The preparation of copy, the ordering of engravings (or artwork in the use of photo-lithography), the selection of proper binding materials, the choice of paper, ink, and other materials all vitally affect the appearance of the final book. With all these production problems to be considered, the editor of a yearbook is wise to consult a competent publishing firm so as to be assured that his editorial ability will be reflected in a book of physical beauty and durability. Such a publishing firm is the Hambleton Company. Housed in one of the finest plants on the Eastern coast are the men and machines which, together, produce high-quality printing economically, beautifully, and quickly by either photo-lithography or letterpress methods.
