COMMENCEMENT AT DELAWARE COLLEGE

Large Class Graduated--Frazer Field Creates Enthusiasm

Ennis Pleads for Leaders--Wants Opportunity for Women

A steady downpour of rain in the early morning did not prevent a large and representative crowd of the friends of Old Delaware from thronging the halls of that institution on this her 87th annual commencement day.

The exercises proper began at 10 o'clock, and enthusiastic applause from the audience that greeted the appearance of twenty-two graduates until the pronouncement of the benediction. Following the invocation and music by the orchestra, orations were delivered by representatives of each of the departments of the college. It was evident that each graduate displayed his "habby" from the knowledge and enthusiasm displayed. The speakers and their subjects were:

R. G. Hill, "The Rural Problem."

"A Plea for Leaders," Howard Taylor Ennis.

"Technical Education--A Factor in Modern Progress," David Livingston Sloan.

Mr. Ennis in his plea for leaders urged better educational advantages for Delawareans. His earnest declaration that he would rather see the walls of his Alma Mater razed to the ground than have the institution deny an education to the girls, called forth hearty applause.

The speaker of the morning was Hon. Charles W. Henisler, of the Supreme Bench of Baltimore.

Judge Henisler introduced his remarks with reference to Dr. Holmes' statement that as long as there were colleges there would be commencements; as long as there were commencements they would be held in June, and as long as he lived in June they would be hot, when conclusion could not be applied today.

Judge Henisler addressed his remarks to the graduating class urging them to an optimistic outlook and a career of usefulness. The day, he said, is well called commencement, for it is indeed the beginning of real life. All men are essentially social beings. Strength is not gained from isolation but from constant contact with the world of men. Social intercourse is the aim of duty. There is thank and thinking, but that which profits is that which is derived from the contemplation of action of the present and the past. The duty of citizenship involves each individual to study in as far as he is able the principles of government. We were never given the God-like reason to rust unused. Strive for the memorial of having lived in it. If we are to hold unimpaired, transient untarnished, the glorious heritage of our fathers, we must surround ourselves with labor, training and personal contact with all that is high and noble.

We can remember that the uplifting home, society and state are interwoven and interdependent. To hope of our national life lies in the possession of men who made their rights and are going to take them.

The speaker pointed out the many beautiful opportunities of life, and left as his parting word, Dr. Holmes' message from "The Chamber Nautilus."

Alumni Notes

The lure of commencement at Old Delaware was too strong for Edward N. Vallandigham, of Boston, the former professor of English, so affectionately remembered by his old students. Mr. Vallandigham is a special editorial writer for the Boston Herald and the Boston Transcript, but his abiding interest in his alma mater and his native town generally brings him to Newark at this time. He was most warmly greeted by a host of old friends.

Frederick C. Clark, class of '03, and now connected with the U. S. Bureau of Standards at Washington, has recently been promoted to be head of the paper testing division. He stopped over at Newark this week on his way north on a tour of inspection of some large paper mills in New England.

Congressman William H. Heald, class of '83, was here looking over his "fences" Farmers' Day. Mr. Heald is particularly busy just now as a member of the Pujo Congressional Committee that is so vigorously investigating the so-called money trust.

"Judge" Lewis W. Mustard, of Leves, of the class of '01, jovial and happy as ever, was a commencement visitor. Two of his daughters have also been enjoying the week's festivities here.

Other members of the Alumni who visited their Alma Mater were: Willey, ex-'11; Chauncey Robinson, '10; Wm. J. Taggart, '06; Harry Maier, '01; H. A. Ward, '06; Joe Truiston, '04; Ayres Stockley, '08; George Nockwood, '03; W. J. Bratton, '10; P. W. Conner, '07; A. Rae Dubell, ex-'12; Wm. M. Francis, '08; J. R. Davis, '11; W. L. Kirby, '11; Everett Warrington, '05; R. M. Carswell, '09; A. P. Shaw, '10; C. P. Messick, '07; W. W. Hubbard, '11; Ellis, '07; Jones, '09; Griffin, '09; Bush, '03; Haugner, '11; Stump, '11; Morrow, '11; Hearn, '80; Mustard, '83; Watts, '09; Edgar, '10; Houston, '11; Taylor, '11; McIntire, '09; Lind, '11; Clark, '10; Laws, ex-'12; Wright, '81; Lattomus, '83; Collins, '83.

The Frazer Field

Work will begin on the Joseph Frazer athletic field at the college within a few days now that the survey work and detailed plans for the grading and the grand stand are completed. The first thing to be done will be to tear down all the buildings east of Mechanical Hall, that is the old gymnasium, powder magazine and hot house. Following that will come the grading, which will mean the transfer of several thousand cart loads of dirt from the higher parts of the field to the low lying land on the north. Then the track will be built and later the grand stand, which will occupy the southeast corner of the field and seat probably a thousand people. The baseball diamond and the gridiron will both be laid out within the circular track.

A notable feature of the new field will be the formal entrance, a magnificent gateway consisting of stone piers about nine feet high to support a beautifully designed wrought iron gate 12 feet wide and nearly as high. This great gate will be flanked on either side by smaller iron gates for pedestrians the whole to extend from the end of Mechanical Hall to the southeast corner of the new gymnasium. On large tablets set in the brickwork of the piers will be a simple inscription showing that the field is a memorial to Joseph Frazer, erected by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eben B. Frazer. The gateway is in many respects similar to one erected on the Yale campus at New Haven as a gift from a wealthy alumnus. This projected memorial is very near Mr. Frazer's heart and now that the engineer in charge, Wilbur T. Wilson, has the plans and specifications all ready it is believed that work can go ahead rapidly enough to assure the playing of the first football contest of next fall on the new field. And a great day it will be for Old Delaware and for its benefactor.

FARMERS' DAY A GREAT SUCCESS

Many Interesting Features on the Program

While "Farmers' Day" has always been a great success since it was first inaugurated several years ago, the observance of the day at the Delaware College Experiment Farm on Monday of this week surpassed in every way all previous years. This was equally true as to the attendance, general appearance of the farm, number and condition of the experiments that are being tried, the buildings, live stock and even the weather man to help out did a little better than on previous years, although the occasion has always been favored with good weather. One prominent man put the case well when he remarked that it could well be called "Delaware Day." This was true, for probably at no other time of the year or at any other place does such a representative crowd of Delawareans get together. It is another proof that the farm is the possible advertisement for the college and is doing more than anything else to draw the citizens of the State and from all parts of the State closer to the college.

The crowds started to arrive at the farm early Monday morning. Every train added to the numbers, while hundreds of teams and automobiles brought visitors from many different points. There were many prominent strangers from both Sussex and Kent counties. The crowd however was not made up entirely of farmers however, as many prominent business and professional men were also gathered there to see personally the Experiment Farm that they often heard of. Nor was the crowd confined to Delaware. There were large numbers from Maryland and Pennsylvania, while even New Jersey was well represented. It was seen early that all previous records for attendance would probably be broken and this proved to be true, for at noon it was estimated that between 3,500 and 5,000 persons were in the grounds. The large number of women in the gathering was especially pleasing to the farm officials, as it indicates that the wife is interested in the matter of scientific farming as well as the husband.

Words of praise and commendation of Professor Harry Hayward and his able staff could be heard on all sides for the excellent manner in which all the details had been arranged and the fact that the entire program was carried through without a hitch. The matter of serving the large crowd with lunch was a problem but this was also gone through satisfactorily to all. Over 6,000 sandwiches, 100 gallons of coffee and many gallons of ice cream were served. Professors Hayward, McCue, Grantham, Mann and in fact every member of the station staff were at the call of the visitors at all times and showed hundreds of them over the farm on tours of inspection. The agronomy fields never looked better and attracted many of the farmers. The orchards and berry patches also got their share of notice, while the thoroughbred live stock to the visitors was a feature.

To avoid the possibility of visitors being dull or bored a number of features were arranged. The demonstration of subsiding by a representative of the DuPont Company attracted the largest crowd that has ever before witnessed this demonstration in Delaware. The dairy cow judging contest furnished much enjoyment. The registered bull calf which was offered as a prize was won by a 3D Davidson of Camden.

During the morning the college cadets gave a drill on the lawn and there was music by the college band. The college cadets also ably assisted in the serving of the lunch. Many visitors were especially interested in the new buildings that have been erected since they visited the farm last, with the money which the last Legislature was liberal enough to appropriate. No one seemed to have a complaint to make about anything and they left the farm more interested than ever in scientific farming and determined to put it into effect more on their own farms. The speechmaking could hardly have been improved on. Congressman William H. Heald, who presided, joined with everyone else in voting the day a great success and commending Professor Hayward and his staff on the work they are doing.

Henry B. Thompson, who is a trustee of Princeton University, sees great opportunities for Delaware College in the agricultural line in the future and urged that the college be broadened. He said in part: "To me," he said, "it seems that the people of this State have a great opportunity of making Delaware College conspicuous in the educational world along agricultural lines. Our State is essentially an agricultural state. We are surrounded by a great farming community, and we have already here a most useful department of this college devoted to the technical education of farmers. This could be made the nucleus of a much broader institution, reaching out on longer lines. I want to see an institution here that is not local. I want to see the name of Delaware College as conspicuous in agriculture as Pennsylvania in medicine, Harvard in law, Stevens in mechanical engineering, Princeton in liberal culture. None of these institutions are local in character; their offerings are sought after by the young men of all states. I want to see the offerings of Delaware sought after by the young men of Delaware, by the young men of New Jersey, of Maryland, of Pennsylvania, of Virginia. This is not an impossible dream. With laboratories for research work in agriculture established here, maintained and developed with the same spirit that obtains in Johns Hopkins University in the field of pure science, you could count on drawing here the best young intellect of the country. The value and inspiration of a great teacher in any field of science or culture will always bring the best young intelligence to it.

"The very foundation of our national life, the whole prosperity of our country rests on the intelligent work of agricultural classes. The development and conservation of our great national resources is largely the work of the farmer, and yet when we consider this vast and overwhelming work, we do not seem to be drawing to it in a large way the best young intellect of the country. While technical education on agricultural lines has grown by leaps, to me it does not seem to keep pace with the necessities of the case. We see year by year our universities turning out lawyers, doctors, civil, mechanical and electrical engineers by the score. The field is already so occupied in these professions that the competition is hard and fierce, and the reward small, except to the very best."

SIGMA NU FRATERNITY

The second annual dinner of Delta Kappa Chapter, Sigma Nu Fraternity, was held at the chapter house on Tuesday evening. Professor C. A. Short was toastmaster and toasts were responded to as follows: Charles P. Messick, Phi Sigma; Howard T. Ennis, Delta Kappa on The Campus; Thomas J. McLoughry, Delta Kappa's Future; Charles B. Evans, Our Alumni; Dr. George A. Harter, Sigma Nu and the College; D. C. Rose, My Views of Sigma Nu; Regent Wilson, The Fraternity. New brothers were welcomed into the fraternity.

LOSE GOOD MAN

Mr. M. O. Pence, assistant in agronomy in the agricultural department at Delaware College, has tendered his resignation, to take effect September first. Mr. Pence resigns to take charge of his father's farm in Indiana. Although he has been here for only a year, he has won the respect and good will of all his associates. Mr. Pence is an excellent teacher and a promising investigator. It is with the greatest reluctance his resignation is accepted.

A CHAPTER IN EDUCATION

BY MRS. FREDERICK CHORSTER

CORNELL: IN BUD AND IN FLOWER

On a certain beautiful afternoon in the early '60's, a Sunday, if I am not mistaken, my father and mother, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Cornell, and Mrs. Sage-Wood, a sister of Henry W. Sage, took a friendly walk which was destined to become memorable.

As is well known, Mr. Cornell's earlier fortune was amassed in western real estate, before the Morse telegraphy discoveries had attracted his attention, and increased his wealth.

The little party of friends was congenial, simply social, and above all, enthusiastic admirers of the far-famed Ithaca scenery.

All at that time residents of the valley town, it was natural that on this delightful day they should climb the hill—a negligible feat to every Ithacaan—in order to view the outspread panorama of Lake Cayuga, with its contributing gorges of streams below. Another interesting guest of my parents had stood on the same spot but a few months previous. Dr. Burchard, of New York, later the notorious denouncer of "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion" in American politics.

Standing thus on what is now the campus of Cornell University, Dr. Burchard had declared to my father that the more rugged beauty of Lake Cayuga and its environment was far superior to that of Lake Como, so extolled by tourists. Speaking of this remark to Mr. Cornell, as the little party paused on the brow of the hill overlooking the blue waters so beloved and admired by all, Mr. Cornell, with his usual gravity, and profound earnestness, replied:

"Yes, I have often thought, myself, that for natural charm, and varied grandeur, there are few spots in the world that can surpass this upon which we are now standing."

Mrs. Sage-Wood breathed a gentle acquiescence. "Surely, nothing anywhere more beautiful."

On the same fields—then rawly open and unencultivated, Dr. Burchard may have mused sadly over the sullying prospects for American progress and development, threatened as it was in his esteem by the trinity of horrors: "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion." Still more astounded and incredulous would he have been, had the future revealed upon that very soil where his foot so tranquilly rested, a Catholic club for the preservation of the faith among Catholic students of all nationalities, and the dream hall about to be realized, where history, science and literature may be taught from the Catholic, i. e., the universal, as distinguished from the provincial—viewpoint of secular and profane records and traditions.

My mother, of New York City birth and habits, was characteristically engaged with Mrs. Cornell and Mrs. Sage-Wood, in gathering the flowers of the field, with which that June day was "lush," as Keats would tell us. The daisy, the clover and the wild-rose, symbolical of the simplicity which was to give way to acres of granite buildings and stone walls, enclosing the scholarship and erudition of many nations.

Mr. Cornell and my father continued their conversation.

"It has long been my hope, I may say, my intention," said Mr. Cornell, "to found a great institution of learning, where young persons of either sex, without regard to station, or religious opinions, may obtain a practical and useful education in any branch of activity that they may select. I find my mind continually dwelling on the subject, and my resources are now such that I see no reason why I may not begin to practically develop my plans."

I suppose I am not the only person who has sometimes found in Mr. Cornell's personality a resemblance to Abraham Lincoln. Although at the time of this conversation, I was as yet unborn, later acquaintance with him easily sharpened the association. Grave to sternness, with a certain world-doubt which is born of the re-religious mind, his countenance was neither happy nor re-posed. My father, on the contrary, was profoundly and practically religious, and fearing to touch Mr. Cornell on this dynamic point, yet believing it fundamentally imperative in any scheme for educating the young, enquired:

"You will have it non-sectarian?"

"Entirely," said Mr. Cornell, the hard straight lines of his mouth softening. "No religious opinions should hamper its usefulness."

My father replied: "Has it not occurred to you that common morality cannot flourish successfully save in the soil of religious truth?"

Mr. Cornell's gaze traveled far and wide, over the lake and commanding hills, and my mother, from whom I had the account, paused among her daisies to listen for his reply.

"No religious instruction shall have any part in the curriculum of the institution that I found," was Mr. Cornell's firm answer—a dictum to which the trustees of the present popular university have ever adhered.

Mrs. Sage-Wood and my mother exchanged sorrowful glances. Was this idyllic spot—almost a sacred shrine of God and Nature—to be transformed then into a materialist's temple for the propagation of material worship only?

Mrs. Cornell, a strong and capable thinker, was identified with the Episcopal church, but wisely forbore to predict the ruin of her husband's cherished plans.

On the homeward walk, all talked of the proposition in general terms, it being too vague to admit of special pros and cons, but Mrs. Sage-Wood and my mother thought much about it. "Carrie Sage," as Mrs. Wood was familiarly known to us, had a wealthy brother, Mr. Henry Sage, who later founded the Sage College for Women, of Cornell. His private residence, adjoining which he built a home for Carrie, is now the hospital of the university foundation. Mr. Sage's son, Dean, established, through his father's influence, after Mr. Cornell's death, a fund providing for non-sectarian preachers to deliver a sermon in Sage Chapel, every Sunday in the college year. This is no violation of Mr. Cornell's wishes, as the attendance is elective, and, in fact far more largely composed of town than of gown. A more heterogeneous outpouring of "doctrine to suit all tastes," could scarcely be found in an American city.

Wholly extraneous to the lecture, or recitation room, one may take or leave these strange doctrines, quite as the free-thinker, Ezra Cornell, would have desired. Yet there was something ruggedly grand in the humanity-yearning of the man: The common household longings for opportunities, so-called, that one has one's self lost.

The accompanying photographs are taken from my mother's album, and are excellent likenesses of these three notable prophets and time-masters, Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Cornell and Dr. Burchard.

One has but to note the record of Cornell graduates in the natural sciences to perceive how logically Mr. Cornell's ideal of education has evolved from the original bud.

For what are the natural sciences but material power, as Mr. Cornell conceived such power? To wrest from Nature her secrets, and make them marketable: To command the fury of elements, fire, wind and water: to direct them as lions in chains—such are the triumphs of Cornell's masters of science, and by such is she known the world over.

But we have today another phase of Cornell in flower: that phase which my father favored would develop from a scheme of Godless education, or education unsanctioned by religious authority. I quote from America:

"The Chicago Evening Post, April 26, publishes in its editorial column a delightful skit in which it respectfully calls attention to an organization that has been formed at one of our 'big' Eastern universities:

"... to study, investigate and criticize the existing religious and creeds, with a view to reconstructing the religious thought and setting it upon a basis of fact and truth instead of meretricious faith and traditional superstition, and to consider and discuss, with a view to the theological enlightenment of the world, such phases of ethics and morals as may assist in the discovery of truth and throw light upon the main subject of religion."

"The Post, quietly poking fun at the program, suggests: 'this would seem to indicate that some of the world's greatest savants had got together at last.' Unfortunately, such is not the case. The ambitious program is that of a society which has been started at Cornell University, with a large membership from the freshmen and sophomores." One readily appreciates the sarcasm contained in the Post's caption, "Where Wisdom Stalks." At the recent investiture of President Hildreth of Princeton, Colonel George Harvey was moved to say: "There was at least one real statesman present on that occasion, Chief Justice White." Such a statesman as Colonel Harvey cites is not the flower of a Godless education. He stands on the contrary, for that contention of the Catholic church, now before the world, "Religion in Our Schools."

Having banished religion from her schools and religious nurses from her hospitals, the government of France is now witnessing a curious spectacle.

Clemenceau, who, a short time ago, announced from the tribune of the Palais Bourbon that his father was the devil, is now stretched on a hospital bed in the care of Sisters of Charity. Asked why he had chosen that place, that establishment of clericalism, or clericalism whom he professed to hate for the good of the republic, he replied, with an oath: "What do I care? I want to be cured. That's the reason I chose the sisters." Waldeck Rousseau did the same thing, so did the son of M. Combes.

Religion would appear to be a good thing to have when facing death.

STATE BOARD FAVORS EDUCA- TION FOR WOMEN

OUTLINE PLAN

The recommendations of the committee on the higher education for women adopted by the State Board of Education follows:

A rather exhaustive study of the conditions in Delaware, and from our inspection of institutions providing for the higher education of women in other States, we are led to the following conclusions:

1. There is a strong demand for a suitable provision for the higher education of women in Delaware at public expense.

2. That this demand can be met in the most economical and efficient manner by an affiliated college for women at Delaware College.

3. That the cost of establishing such a college need not exceed $100,000 for buildings, and an annual expense for maintenance of $9,000 per year, or $4,500 more than Delaware now appropriates to the normal schools of Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

4. That the following courses of instruction should be provided:

(a) A course leading to the degree of bachelor of arts with an opportunity to elect rather freely in the junior year from the departments of education, general science and household arts.

(b) A course in household arts leading to the degree of bachelor of science.

(c) A two-year teacher's preparatory course.

(d) A two-years' course in household arts.

Such an institution should be directed by a dean of women very much as the Department of Agriculture is at the present time under the supervision of the board of trustees.

The instructors for the affiliated college and the courses of study to be offered to be selected and arranged for by a committee composed of the president of the college, the dean of women, and the professor of education, with the approval of the trustees.

A women's dormitory is essential as a home center for the affiliated college. It should be the home of the dean, and as many of the students as possible. In case it is not large enough to accommodate all the students, approved homes in the town shall be selected by the dean, who should make regulations governing the conduct of the students in such homes.

It is likely that further recommendations will suggest themselves as the question of higher education of women is discussed, both verbally and in the public print.

We are satisfied, however, that the recommendations embodied as a part of this report contain the essentials of what should be done to relieve the embarrassing situation in which the State now finds itself in regard to educational matters.

Respectfully submitted,

H. Hayward,
George W. Twitmyer,
Members of the Committee on the Higher Education of Women.

WOMAN'S PART ON FARMER'S DAY

A feature of the day at the farm was the talk of Mrs. Anna Scott, well known to the public through her domestic science department in the North American. Mrs. Scott appealed to the ladies. Her talk was an interesting one, filled with many helpful suggestions.

She claimed the country was not suffering so much from the high cost of living as from the cost of high living, and explained how she had lived in a fashion which would shame no one, for the past twelve weeks, never allowing her complete expenditures for a family of four to exceed five dollars per week.

Mrs. Scott has achieved this triumph of economy by a careful study of food values and a substitute for cheaper foods of the same nutritive value as the expensive ones. Meat is found but rarely on her bill of fare, yet she claims that her meals are just as satisfactory from the strength-giving standpoint as those on which this item is always found.

Rice, corn-meal, macaroni and cheese are some of the substitutes mentioned. She believes warm bread to be unwholesome if properly prepared.

Mrs. Scott lives in a sixteen-room house in Overbrook, Pa. She does her own housework, her own marketing, is her own deliveryman and declares it is all real pleasant to her.

She believes one cause of higher living expenses is the package form in which the public demands their groceries. One day recently Mrs. Scott purchased twelve packages of a certain grocery, each package claiming sixteen ounces therein.

Upon emptying and weighing she found she was just one pound short, and immediately wrote to the company concerned to demand a true weight, threatening them with exposure. It is only reasonable that the public, in addition to the risk of short measure, should pay the extra price of the cartons, the cost of packing, etc., and thus increase the cost of the common groceries.

Mrs. Scott believes no dinner can be properly balanced without a soup—not necessarily made from meat, but from lettuce, beet tops, celery, etc. She reduces her ice bill to thirty cents per week. All of her vegetables, chicken, etc., are prepared for cooking immediately upon entering the house. After being cut, washed and shaken dry, they are placed in bags (the kind used for paper bag cookery) which proves to be the best plan all around.

To relieve the tediousness of dish-washing Mrs. Scott washes each cooking utensil immediately after it is used. The dishes proper are scraped with a paper bag, rinsed with hot water and allowed to drain until after the third meal, when everything is washed in the usual way. She cautions against turning the dishes upside down and rinsing the wrong side. She declares her dish cloth is of the same whiteness as her napkin, and the tea-towels of the same shade. Best of all she pronounces all women who love their work and appreciate the art of home-making to be "Household Queens," far removed from "Household Drudges."

HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT Nine in the Graduating Class

Mr. Handy Speaker of the Evening

The annual commencement of the Newark High School held in the Opera House last Friday evening called forth hosts of friends of that institution who enjoyed the evening's exercises.

Edward L. Richards, president of the Board of Education, presided. There were nine members in the graduating class, as follows: Mildred Louise Ferguson, Carrie Null Jamison, Mildred Stock McNeal, Eleanor Bayne Pilling, Sarah Ethel Pierce, Helen Lorene Steele, Ona Sara Singles, Emily Aletta Worrall, John Milbert Ramsay. Four members of the class who had been selected by three judges from outside the school, read essays:

The U. S. Revenue Cutter Service, Mildred S. McNeal.
Jane Addams of Hull House, Eleanor Bayne Pilling.

The Inland Waterway, Emily Aletta Worrall.

Horace Mann, John Wilbert Ramsey.

All reflected credit upon the teachers and the school. The address of the evening was delivered by Hon. L. Irving Handy, who delighted the audience after his usual manner. His talk was argumentative, and considered the question, "Does Our Public School System Pay?" which he declared synonymous with "Does Popular Education Pay?" He made an eloquent plea for education for everyone, urging the greater power of enjoying life; the increased efficiency in the world at large. He lamented the fact that only one boy in our community had availed himself of the opportunity which had been provided.

Mr. Handy spoke of the ever changing demand. In our earlier history the cry was for liberty and freedom; today that has changed to a demand for actual government. How can such a nation exist without a great public school system?

Dr. J. S. Gilfillan read the annual report of the Board of Education, which is published in another column.

Mr. R. F. Friedel, principal of the High School, presented the diplomas and in well chosen words commended the class upon the work they had done and bade them "God speed."

The prizes of one dollar, offered by the New Century Club for the greatest improvement in English during the school year were won by the following: Fifth grade, Harlan Tweed; sixth, Clarence Evans; seventh, Mattie Guthrie; eighth, Sarah Potts; ninth, Frances O'Rourke; tenth, Anna Gallagher, commercial department, Dora Law.

Music was furnished by the Stansbach Orchestra of Wilmington. The hall was beautifully trimmed with ferns, daisies and potted plants. A lattice work made of daintily twined box-wood across the front of the stage was most effective. A solid square of laurel displayed large class numerals made of daisies.

Superintendent A. R. Spaid and Miss Margaret Derriekson of Williamson School were guests of the evening.

Nothing is rich but the inexhaustible wealth of Nature.

He who knows what secrets and virtues are in the ground, the waters, the plants, the heavens, and how to come at these enchantments, is the rich and royal man.

Havre De Grace Now Leading

Rain prevented two of the Tri-County League games last Saturday. Havre de Grace by defeating Northeast, while Elkton and Port Deposit were idle, secured the undisputed lead in the race, at least for the present. Aberdeen by forfeiting to Newark, allowed the locals to tie them with 5 wins and 4 defeats.

Aberdeen Forfeited Game

Newark claims the game played with Aberdeen on the local grounds last Saturday by forfeit. After the visitors had batted in their half of the tenth inning and the score stood 3 to 3, they refused to continue the game and give Newark their bat in the tenth, claiming that they had to stop at that time to catch a train. It would seem to be a clear case of a forfeit game and it is hard to see how President Moore could possibly give any other decision, should Aberdeen make an appeal. While the game was started a little late because of wet grounds, it is understood that no agreement was made relative to stopping it to let the visitors catch a train. What makes Newark's case all the stronger is the fact that Aberdeen had batted in the tenth and then refused to give the local club the same chance. Had Aberdeen scored one or more runs in that inning, putting them in the lead, it is dollars to doughnuts that there would have been no dispute about stopping the game for a train. They would have went right on without saying a word about catching a train.

Played In The Rain

Considering the fact that the game was played in drizzling rain, it was one of the best contests of the season. Bonnett and Murray, who did the twirling for their respective teams, were both in rare form, and notwithstanding the fact that the balls were wet most of the time they had good control. Murray, however, had the best of the argument and should have won the game but for Morris' errors. "Dick" had a bad day in the field, making four errors out of nine chances and two of them were directly responsible for two of Aberdeen's runs. He not only booted a couple of easy grounders, but also made two bad throws to first, when he had plenty of time to catch the runner, had the throws been good. Outside of these errors by Morris, the team supported Murray well, while the support received by Bonnett was perfect, not an error being made back of him. Jackson at third for Newark and Cole and Creager for Aberdeen, featured the game by their clever work in the field. Marcey's throwing was also good and kept the visitors hugging the bags when they did get on.

Murray and Bonnett were each touched up for eight hits, but Murray kept them more scattered, as not more than one hit was made off him in one inning. Newark bunched hits on Bonnett in the first, third and sixth innings. Murray fanned 11 and Bonnett 9.

Newark got away for a good start. After Aberdeen had been retired in the first inning without scoring, Jackson, who lead off for the home club, cracked one over the right field fence for two sacks. Marcey sacrificed him to third, but this, it proved was not necessary, as "Del" Willis made the longest drive of the season over center fielder Gilbert's head for three sacks, scoring Jackson. Aberdeen tied the score up in the second by scoring one run on two errors by Morris, not a hit being made in the inning. From this time until Aberdeen left the field, refusing to play it out, it was a see-saw. Newark forged ahead again in the third on Murray's walk and two hits. Aberdeen came back in the sixth and put another run over again, tying the score on an error by Morris and a single. In Newark's half of the sixth, they went in the lead again by scoring on three singles. Aberdeen tied it up again in the seventh on Nealon's home drive to centre. This should have been an easy out for Geoghegan, but he first ran up on the ball and when he did get it judged and started back for it he could not reach the ball and it rolled in the hedge for a home run. With two men on the bases in the third inning, "Vic" Willis drove a long fly to deep right centre, which looked good for at least three bases, but Gilbert backed into the hedge and made a pretty catch of it.

Both pitchers tightened up after the seventh inning and were going good when the game was stopped. The score follows:

Tri-County League Notes

Murray pitched a splendid game last Saturday considering the condition of the ball.

Jackson and Del Willis are starting to hit and this pair is likely to break up a game at any time.

Creager, who covered first for Aberdeen, fielded hard hit grounders in his territory in big league style.

Cole showed some class at short for Aberdeen and had Morris done as well there would be no dispute over stopping the game.

Rufus Roberts was sent in for "Bob" Montgomery in the sixth inning and fanned.

The drive made by "Vic" Willis would ordinarily be good for a home run, but Gilbert was playing a deep field waiting for just such a clout.

Several of the tri-county league teams will be materially strengthened at the end of this month when a number of college players will join them.

It has been suggested that Captain Hoeh of the Delaware College team would make a valuable man on the Newark team if a place could be found for him.

The Newark club will not be home again until the afternoon of July 4, when North East will be seen here for the first time. The team plays in Aberdeen next Saturday and Saturday of next week in Elkton.

More of that essential thing required on every successful and winning club, a fighting spirit, is still needed. This does not mean a physical fight but simply a fight for every point in the game that will help to get runs.

Newark is drawing better, it is said, than any other team in the circuit, and even last Saturday when it rained practically all day there was a good crowd out.

Finn, North East's new twirler, is doing some good work.

Peterson is playing a great game in center field for Elkton, and is batting about the .300 mark. Last season he played with the Juniors.

Sweitzer, who was given a trial with the Cleveland American League team, and also with the Wilmington Tri-State team, the first of the season, has returned to Havre de Grace and is again pitching for that team.

Scott, Steele and Creswell have left the Elk Mills team, and, as a result, that club has not made a very good showing this season.

Russell George, substitute first baseman for Elkton, was married in Wilmington, Del., last week to Miss Isabelle Davis, of Cherry Hill, and has quit the game.

Elkton will shortly lose one of its best players in Harvey, who has accepted a position near Pittsburgh, Pa.

Manager Sioniker, of the Elkton team, has signed J. J. Hill, a Cecil county boy, who has been playing second base for Western Maryland since this season.

College of Grace is putting up a strong fight for the pennant this season, and, with such a corps of pitchers as Flowers, Sweitzer, Hea miller and Sweitzer, it looks like it will keep well to the top of the list.

Flowers, of Joppa, who has signed with Havre de Grace, to do the twirling, has found the Tri-County League much faster than he anticipated.

Lewis, who played short and left field for Elkton last season, has developed into quite a twirler since returning to Washington College. He will be with the Elkton team in about three weeks.

Clay, the Elkton twirler whom Manager Mack, of the Philadelphia Athletics, sent a scout to Elkton last season to look over, is again doing good work in the box this season.

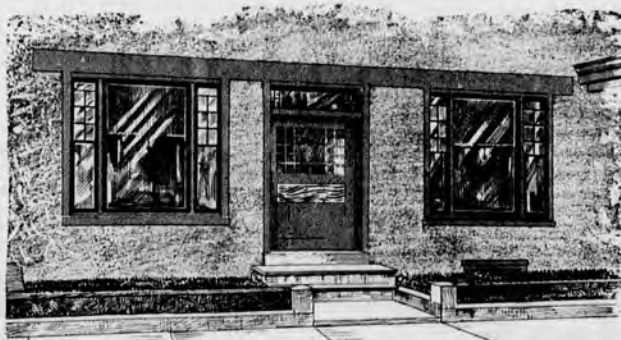

Rising Sun has organized a team and has announced that it will take the place of any team that drops out of the circuit. Rising Sun was always represented in the league until this year.

PENN-MAR LEAGUE

The Newark Field Club did not play a game last Saturday because of the rain. The club was scheduled to play in Strickersville. The latter team will come here for a game on Saturday next.

The local club is going fine at this time and should be holding down first place by the end of the month.

GOOD LUCK

We are releasing our space to the news of this week. No word or comment of ours can add aught to the occasion.

Delaware College has become in fact, as well as in name, a State institution. Yet with all her success, it is a prominent fact that she is just entering upon her real career. With the aroused interest by all the State, there has come a responsibility on the management that will demand sober thought and keen judgment. Her opportunities have at last been realized and every alumnus, every Delawarean should take renewed zeal in her progress.

As our parting word to the graduates, we recall Napoleon in addressing his generals: "You have today won a wonderful victory, but what are you going to do tomorrow?"

So with you. What are you going to do tomorrow? Your victory today is only the preparation for another day. And the world needs you. The usual commencement platitude that the world needs men is, today, a stern, stubborn fact.

Although public life with its prejudices and bickerings may be repulsive, you have a duty, as college men, a special duty of citizenship. Not only are you expected to make good in your chosen profession, but your State and country demand a leadership, or at least a healthy activity, in the affairs of society.

You who go out as engineers and agriculturists have the same responsibility as those who go into the law and ministry. In fact, the engineers, the farmers and the business men will in all probability lead the pace. The lawyer is by his very association, most likely to become an ultra conservative. Do not think that your profession precludes you or excuses you from taking this part.

We may be reluctant to admit it, but in a perusal of the daily papers we must sense a responsibility that we cannot escape.

We do not mean that you must necessarily enter the arena of office-seeking and power. That may, in fact, be to you, disgusting. But all the more reason that your sense of right, of honor, or judgment, should be expressed in strong words and telling action.

Realize that by doing this you court abuse, slander, opposition, in proportion to your powers of activity—but it's worth while and you young men must play the game. Realize that any man who does, or attempts to do, anything, gets his full measure of petty criticism. But realize too, it comes from ancestry specialists, pink tea conferences and death-struggling aristocracy.

Life is a fine game. Make it interesting for those less fortunate than you. That's your greatest success.

The Delaware State News of Dover is just entering on its eleventh year.

Let us offer our congratulations and best wishes for continued prosperity. Although we do not always agree with the News, we welcome it at our desk. And we read it, too. It has a spice and get up about it that is refreshing. It makes its readers sit up and take notice. Its special "Progress Edition" of a few months ago holds the ribbon for the best special issued in the State.

Our reference to the Senior Class being raised on turnip greens and hogs' jowl was resented by some of the Wilmington students. In fact, some of them go so far as to admit that they never partook of this Delaware dish.

That is their misfortune and we would urge that they go down State at once and get acquainted with this food. No man can lay rightful claim to Delaware citizenship with his shocking admission. The Wilmington lads are much to be pitied.

It was good to see old Andy Marvel back again. No one could ever say Mr. Marvel. He is now practicing law at Georgetown and is one of the leaders in the development of Sussex county.

Old Lamps for New Ones, by Charles Dickens.

Stunned By Lightning

Lightning played havoc in the home of Albert Stroud during the electric storm of last Monday evening. A tree in front of the house was torn and shattered and the telephone put out of commission.

Mrs. Stroud, who was sitting by an open window, was severely stunned. She was thrown to the floor by the force of the shock and is still suffering from the nervous strain.

Mr. Richards Hurt

John Richard, a farmer of the old Morrow farm, met with an accident yesterday afternoon. He was returning from the field driving a two-horse team, when the hind wheel of the wagon caught in the cable of the silo. The horses gave a sudden lurch, which threw Mr. Richard from the wagon, severely cutting his head. A doctor was called and several stitches were necessary.

Annual Y. M. C. A. Services

Mind and Religion Discussed by Rev. Harry Mitchell.

The annual Y. M. C. A. sermon was delivered last Sunday morning by Rev. Harry Mitchell of Newport, from the text, Isaiah 1, part of the 18th verse: Come let us reason together, saith Jehovah. He discussed the theme, "Mind and Religion," stating that too often we think of religion as something connected with sentiment merely, losing sight of the gracious invitation which the text brings us from our Lord.

He urged everyone to apply his intellect to his own religious development, not to be willing to accept the experience of others. The speaker cautioned against the movement away from doctrine, saying our religion must be founded on some such fundamental principle as faith, love or immortality.

Mr. Mitchell considered the word "simple" as applied to the Christian faith, an ill-analyzed one, saying its depths could never be sounded by the gigantic intellects of the earth. It is simple only as the sun that warms the earth, whose rays can outshine the light of millions of stars or as the wondrous power of mother love.

Mr. Mitchell is a graduate of Delaware College, class 1903. Arthur Houchin, class 1913, presided at the exercises. Old hymns were chosen and the congregational singing was a pleasing feature of the service.

Baccalaureate Attracts Large Crowd

A large audience attended the annual baccalaureate service held in the oratory last Sunday evening.

Rev. Charles R. Erdman, Professor of Pastoral Theology, Princeton Theological Seminary, addressed the graduating class from the text, Matthew, eleventh chapter and eleventh verse: Verily I say unto you, among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist: notwithstanding he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he. The sermon was a scholarly but practical one.

Dr. Erdman referred to John's doubt as expressed by his action to ask of Christ, "Art thou He or do we look for another?" The reply teaches us that we are to look for the answer to the doubt which is bound to assail us, in the evident things around us.

The questions which Christ put to the multitude revealed the type of man he considers great. Not "a reed shaken with the wind," that bends smoothly and gracefully with every breeze of popular opinion that blows, but he who holds firm to the ideas that he believes right. Not "a man clothed in soft raiment," one who surrounds himself with all physical comforts, and lives for that alone, but he who makes use of the comforts of life only to the degree that is necessary to achieve his greatest efficiency.

He urged the young men before him to be messengers for Christ, not from the pulpit alone, but in their daily life, in their business, in the home, on the street, in the college, or wherever they happen to be.

Grand old hymns were sung with fervor by the congregation.

Class Day

Class Day exercises held in the Oratory on Monday afternoon called forth the usual throng. People crowded the aisles and seats were at a premium.

McLaughry, class 1913, presided at the exercises. The speakers of the afternoon were Messrs. Emis, Lewis and Ward.

The hits on members of the faculty and of the graduating class called forth much applause and laughter.

Oratorical Contest

Rev. W. J. Rowan presided at the oratorical contest held last Saturday evening under the auspices of the W. C. T. U.

The contestants and their subjects follow:

The Saloon vs. the Citizen, Alfred B. Scott; The Effect of Modern Business Requirements Upon the Liquor Traffic, Clinton H. Brown; The Case against the Saloon, Russel Paynter.

The judges, Rev. S. J. Cleland, Edward W. Cooch and J. David Jaquette awarded the prizes as follows: Mr. Brown, $25; Mr. Paynter, $15; Mr. Scott, $10.

Fire Works On Carnival Grounds

The firemen have arranged a special display of fireworks as an attraction to the carnival grounds on the evening of July 4th.

Through the influence of Mr. George G. Henry, a former townsman, the firemen have received a most liberal reduction in the price.

It has been suggested that if those who have been accustomed to having a private display will make their contribution to the carnival fireworks fund, it will further reduce the cost and assure a grand display for the evening.

Season of 1912

H. R. Tyson, the well-known Newark trainer, has arranged to race his horses on the southern circuit from Wilmington to Augusta, Ga., starting in July and closing on November 15th. Tyson, who started 25 trotters and three pacers in 1911 races during the past two seasons, has won 141 portions of the purses, including 77 first moneys. This year he will start with a string of 26 horses, 24 trotters and three pacers. He will be assisted in training by W. S. Loren, his blacksmith, T. J. Bevinney, will accompany him.

Miss Elsie and Elizabeth Wright entertained a number of friends at an afternoon card party last Saturday.

Messrs. Rawson and Harry Garrett of Strickersville, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Dayett of Landenberg, motored to Cooch's Bridge one day recently.

An Appeal to Delawareans--A Campaign for Historical Building

The Delaware Historical Society has recently issued a neat little booklet coming from the New Amstel Press, which presents a plea to the people of Delaware for their co-operation in the erection of a new fireproof building, where the priceless historical collection, the books and the manuscripts, shall be kept.

The Delaware Historical Society, after an existence of fifty years, has a membership of 350, fifty-six publications to its credit and a library of great value.

From the article, "The Need of a New Building," we reprint the following paragraphs:

"The functions of the Historical Society are numerous and varied. First and most important, perhaps, is the collection and preservation of what we may call the raw material of history.

"History occupies the high seat in literature today. The aims and methods of historical investigations have been revolutionized within the memory of students who are not yet old. Improved methods of study have given superior results in accurate and authentic work. Second-hand material, skillfully arranged, or rearranged, no longer answers the demand. Sources must be patiently sought and studied. Presumable facts must be analyzed and compared, and seductive theories avoided. It is the work of the Historical Society to collect and preserve the raw material with the historian works.

"Our Society, though hampered by insufficient funds, and a lack of co-operation on the part of many who should have been interested and active in its behalf, has a good record in this respect. MSS. of untold value have been preserved for future use. Of the missing journals of the Colonial Assemblies from 1704 to 1774, for which the writer has searched for years the only one known to be in existence—that of the Assembly of 1765—is in our MSS. collection.

"There is probably no state in the Union," says a high authority, "where one would find less material for writing its history than in Delaware. There is certainly no one of the original thirteen in which so few records have been made, and where so little care has been taken of those that have been made." At present the papers collected by the intelligent agent of the State Archives Commission—a priceless collection which includes a correspondence between George Washington and John Dickinson—repose in six packing boxes and seven cracker boxes in a room in the Kent County Court House, a building condemned years ago as a fire trap and utterly unsafe. When the Historical Society can offer a suitable and safe depository for such records, the time will have fully come for their removal thither.

"The lease by which we hold the old building of the First Presbyterian Church has less than a year to run. Its renewal is apparently not to be expected on terms the society can accept. It should not be renewed on any terms, for the old quarters no longer suffice. We have completely outgrown them. It is impossible for the society to accomplish its work, enlarge its collection or safeguard its treasures where it is. It must have more room. This, however, is not the chief reason for building. We are courting disaster while we remain in the present location. A single match may, in a moment, put the treasures gathered by the patient and persistent effort of the last fifty years, beyond the possibility of future usefulness.

"States whose history is to ours, as an hour to a day, put us to shame by the provision they make for their societies. It is high time for Delaware to put away this reproach."

Seventy-five thousand dollars are needed for the proposed building, of which perhaps, ten thousand will be needed for a site.

A Story of Progress

Growth of a Delaware Town

Interesting Letter from Gen'l Armstrong Editor of The Post: I have just returned from Selbyville, Sussex county, and as you first saw the light of day in Baltimore hundred, you might enjoy hearing a few good words for this progressive little town.

I visited Selbyville twenty-four years ago when there was but one store and four or five houses. Today it has a population of about eight hundred people. Every street in the town has been macadamized, the entire length of the macadam streets being about three miles. They use three-inch stone blocks on the bottom, then a layer of three-quarter stone next, and from two to three inches of stone dust on top. You cannot get out of Selbyville without driving on a macadam road. They have three miles of concrete pavement. The work was done by the town and paid for by the property owners. No better concrete pavements can be found than in the town of Selbyville. Being put down by the town the walks are all uniform, which adds to the beauty of the place. A petition was circulated and Council finding all were in favor of the action, had the work done.

There is a straight road vs. crooked road fight now going on. By straightening the road to Roxana—a small town near there—the distance from Selbyville to Roxana would be three miles; by the crooked road the distance is four and one-quarter miles. At an informal meeting held one evening, eight hundred dollars was pledged by the citizens for opening this road. The county expected to macadam the road, but it will be done either with or without the aid of the county. This will give the farmers a good macadam road to haul their berries over, enabling them to haul three times as much in a day as would be possible if hauling in deep sand. It will consequently add much to Selbyville in berry shipments.

During the berry season this is a very busy place. Sometimes the streets are lined with berry wagons waiting their turns with the brokers each load of berries is examined by the brokers, and the one paying the highest price gets the load. There were fifty cars shipped from here on June 7th, and when the season is over, Selbyville will have shipped about five hundred cars of strawberries, which will distribute about $250,000 to the farmers and the army of berry pickers. All the cars are iced before they start out. There are two large ice plants in the place with a capacity of manufacturing from thirty to forty tons of ice per day. The cost of construction of these plants was about $65,000. There are two large lumber mills which can furnish all the lumber to build their houses.

A National bank was started nine years ago with a capital of $50,000. It has an average amount of deposits of two hundred thousand dollars and surplus profits amounting to $35,000; (this bank paid out on Saturday $40,000 and received on deposit the same day $30,000). There is also a trust company in the town doing a prosperous business, but my stay being short I did not meet any of the officials, so I cannot speak of the volume of business done by this trust company. They have also had a meeting on the light and water question and there was not a dissenting voice. Light, water and a sewage system will soon be installed in this progressive little town.

The bonded indebtedness is four thousand dollars and the tax rate is 20 cents on the hundred dollars. They began to improve the town about nine or ten years ago. One of the main streets was only twenty feet wide and had shade trees on the sidewalk and brick pavement. They cut the trees down instead of saving them for posterity and made the street ten feet wider on each side, giving it a width of forty feet; put down concrete pavement and macadam road, on a street about a half mile long.

When I was in Selbyville twenty-four years ago I visited William R. McCabe, who afterwards served as representative from this hundred twice in the Legislature, once acting as speaker of the House, which position he filled in an able and acceptable manner to all who knew him. Then he was in the best of health; today he is an invalid, confined to his rolling chair, and unable to move hand or foot. His mind is as active as it ever was. He is president of Selbyville National Bank, president of Town Council, is engaged in farming several hundred acres of land, and up to about two years ago owned a freight vessel, which traversed the high seas between northern and southern ports, carrying freight from Halifax to the West Indian islands and bringing back cargoes in return. His vessel was wrecked off Cape Hatteras and he has abandoned that part of his business. All this he has managed from his home by the telephone and through agents. Most of the improvements of the town have been started through his energy and enterprise, assisted by many faithful and devoted friends. He is a member of the Methodist Church and has been along with others, a faithful worker in helping to build a beautiful stone church costing about twenty thousand dollars, which is about ready for dedication. His manner is one of easy and natural cordiality which attracts many friends to his pretty home, where his wife, as hostess, especially excels. He is loved, respected and honored by all who have the good pleasure to know him, and in his affliction has the true and sincere sympathy of the citizens of Delaware.

T. E. Armstrong.

Agriculture, wherein a man receives a real increase of the seeds thrown into the ground is a kind of miracle wrought by the hand of God, in his favor, as a reward for his innocent life and virtuous industry.—Franklin.

Report of Board of Education

To the patrons of the schools:
 It is the aim of the Board of Education to so conduct the public schools of Newark as to meet the demands of the patrons of the schools. More and more the demand is for a practical education and the purpose of the public school should be to meet this demand. While it should not ignore those who desire a broader and a deeper education—giving them a course that would fit them for entrance into the higher schools of learning—it must give heed to the larger majority of the pupils who pass out of the public school into life's work, and who depend entirely upon the public school for their equipment for life's duties and responsibilities.

To this end three courses are now provided for the pupils: The academic course, which is calculated to prepare for college. The general course for those who do not wish to enter college but who may desire a general education, without specific inclination to any particular calling, and the commercial course for those who wish to enter business life or to be fitted to enter business life, should the necessity arise.

This course was introduced at the beginning of the present year and its popularity has attested its pressing need. This course requires the last two years of the High School.

Any pupil may pursue either the general course of the academic course through the ninth grade and may then enter the commercial course and graduate in two years or at the same time that his companions who may pursue either of the other courses would graduate. We propose that the graduates of this course shall be competent to fill any position in the business world open to the graduates of a regular commercial college.

There are other needs in our schools which the board has not been able yet to meet.

Vocal music should be regularly and systematically taught. Several attempts have been made during the past three years to secure a teacher in vocal music for at least one or two days in the week, but the attempts have failed.

There is also a growing demand for the establishment of manual training and domestic science. The need of such courses is apparent to all. The difficulty which a young man experiences in obtaining a position as apprentice to his desired calling where he would receive proper encouragement and assistance should urge the necessity of the public school doing something for his relief. But these departments could only be introduced by the aid of the Legislature.

The next Legislature should be urged to appropriate fifteen certain centrally located high schools a sum sufficient to establish therein both a course in manual training and one in domestic science.

Newark is most advantageously situated to meet the demands of large adjacent districts.

During the last few years our attendance has been increasing rapidly. Three years ago the total enrollment was 473, last year it was 512 and this year it is 531. With the rooms full one can easily see that the addition of 58 new pupils must cause a crowded condition in some of the rooms.

The board tried to remedy this condition by securing an extra teacher and establishing an overflow room in the grammar grades. This year the High School demands relief, and another assistant has been secured for the coming year.

The matter of teachers' salaries has received the attention of the board.

This is the largest school in the county outside of Wilmington and it is our ambition to make it the best school. To do this it is recognized that able and efficient teachers shall be employed. It has been necessary to raise the salaries in all the departments of the school to carry out this policy and we believe we have a strong corps of teachers—able, alert, progressive and devoted to their work.

A word may not be out of place regarding the finances. For four or five years the board has been compelled to borrow money to close up the year and is has been asked why the board does not relieve the financial stress by levying an assessment rate sufficient to meet all the expenses, instead of each year facing a deficit.

To understand the situation it may be well to go back to see how the deficit was created. When the new school building was erected, the contract was accepted for the erection of the building, but with only the first floor to be furnished. The district was bonded for $12,000, but as in all cases of building or repairs, there are far more expenses than can reasonably be foreseen. The board found itself in debt to the building fund to the amount of $1,237.60. This the board voted out of the general fund and to close the school year borrowed $1,500. This loan was paid off in August when the taxes came in and toward the close of the year when in need of funds another loan was negotiated.

The reason the present board did not make an increased assessment rate to cover the deficit was that it judged that in two or three years with the present rate, the debt could be cancelled, and the facts approved their judgment. Last year we closed the year with only $409.57 deficit.

But at this point the board found itself face to face with a three-fold necessity for funds. 1. The increase in the number of pupils and the establishment of the commercial course necessitated the finishing furnishing of several additional rooms. 2. The increase in the number of teachers. 3. The necessity of increasing the teachers' salaries.

The finishing and furnishing of the additional rooms needed, has cost the sum of $2,356.12. Adding to this the deficit at the beginning of the year will make a total of $2,765.69, which will probably be close to the amount we will be compelled to borrow this year. So that notwithstanding the increase in number of teachers and the increase in salaries, had it not been for these needed improvements the board could have financed the year with the funds on hand.

A sinking fund for the payment of school bonds was established in 1905 by placing therein $100, out of the general fund. Since that date there has been added to that $939.84. All the old bonds, four in all, amounting to $1,000, have been paid off; and the new bonds as soon as they become due, will be provided for by the board.

Here and There

"What I aspired to be and was not, comforts me."

"Be such a man, live such a life that, if every man were such as you and every life like yours, this earth would be God's paradise."

"Who drives the horses of the sun Shall lead it but a day; Better the lowly deed were done And keep the humble way. The happiest heart that ever beat, Was in some quiet breast That found the common daylight sweet, And left to heaven the rest."

"There is no shadow in the day, No darkness in the night, What men call darkness is but this: The lack of light."

There is no hatred in the world, Beneath it or above; For what is hatred?—only this: The lack of love."

"One gave of gold, since he possessed So many precious things: Gift after gift robbed him no more Than land bestowed of kings."

One gave of time, since on his heart The hours so heavy lay, That he might thank the least who begged A portion of his day."

And one, with time nor gold to spare, Gave only sympathy— And yet men found his gifts by far The greatest of the three."

When Thales was asked what was difficult, he said: "To know one's self;" and what was easy, "To advise another."

COAL

Many of the best posted people believe it wise, for those who can do so, to lay in now their winter supply of coal.

For one-sixth of the entire year no coal has been mined, and it is deemed that when cold weather comes again the demand will exceed the supply, and prices, too, will be higher.

Benefit yourselves by filling up your bins now, and at the same time you will be out of the way of those for whom it is not convenient to buy until later on in the season. We have good coal and could deliver at any time entirely convenient to you.

BURNS BROS. HAVRE DE GRACE, MD.

Cecil County Letter

The wedding of Miss Alice Hamilton Frazer, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Frazer, of Elkton, and niece of Eben B. Frazer, of Newark, and Mr. John Brook Jackson, of New York, formerly of Wyoming, Del., is set for next Wednesday evening, June 26, at half past seven o'clock, in Elkton Presbyterian Church. Mr. Jackson is an alumnus of Delaware College, class 1910.

Friends of J. M. Post, long editor of the Elkton Appeal, who since the fall of 1907, has been conducting the Annapolis, Wash., American with great success, have learned with regret, that he is now in failing health. Mr. Post for several years printed the Delaware College Review from the Appeal press, and is well known to many of the recent alumni.

Members of the State Highways Commission took a trip over the Elkton-Perryville road last week, work upon which will likely begin this summer, under the $4,000 appropriation voted by the Legislature last winter. The Bel Air-Conowingo road is about completed. With the improvement of the Elkton-Perryville and the Elkton-Newark roads, auto-tourists will have two routes from Newark to Baltimore—by the Telegraph road to Conowingo and via Elkton and Havre de Grace.

State Attorney Constable's illness has been diagnosed as Bright's disease, but he is showing signs of improvement, and his many friends are hoping that he will shortly be about again.

Tony Martore, the former star sprinter of the Elkton High School team, has been chosen captain of the Toms School track team for next year. Toms was unbeaten this season, which it closed with a notable victory over Lawrenceville, by a score of 65 to 43 points.

John R. Mahoney has been appointed a notary public at Elkton. J. W. Perkins, previously named, was appointed sheriff, following the death of the late J. Myron Miller.

The festival held on the "Parting Hill" lawn for the benefit of Union Hospital, Elkton, yielded upwards of $100, despite the encumbrance of attendance by chilly evenings.

Mr. Robert B. Goodyear, Jr., and Miss Edie M. Packard, of Baltimore, were married at the home of the groom's father, near Elkton, on June 11, by Rev. William Scholer.

A festival with ice cream, cake, candy and fruit on sale, for the benefit of the Kembleville Band, will be held at Allen Wilkinson's this (Wednesday) evening. The band will furnish music.

Following Elkton's recent "Clean Up" week, a number of residences have been repainted, among others those of John M. Tucker and Miss Katharine Wilson, on East Main street.

The dedication of the new M. E. Church at North East has been set for Sunday, June 30.

The late W. Clifford Kirk, of Farmington, by his will left his farm and other property to his wife, formerly Miss Helen Howard Wells, of Elkton, expressing his wish that, should she die without leaving issue, she make a will devising the property to the testator's nephew.

The need of extending Water street parallel with Main street, to the Elkton cemetery, has long been urged, and the work has finally begun and will be pushed gradually. The new street would lessen much heavy traffic on Main street and would be of great advantage in fighting fires, thereby lessening insurance rates, which are quite high on properties on the south side of Main street.

Major John A. Morgan, Captain Carroll Edgar and Lieutenants Charles B. Finley, Jr., and Theodore Foster, of Elkton, all of the Maryland National Guard, have been attending the officers' camp of instruction, held at Westminster, Carroll county.

The County Commissioners and the Trustees of the Poor and Insane held their joint annual meeting on Wednesday at the almshouse, and at its close enjoyed a fine dinner served by James Harborth, the superintendent, and wife. The almshouse and insane asylum are both admirably managed, and the inmates are well treated and comforted.

Allen G. Jaquette, a popular young farmer and dairyman, died at his home, "Pine Grove," near Elkton, on Thursday, of heart trouble attendant upon Bright's disease, aged 28 years. His wife, who was Miss Alice Witworth, of Elkton, five sisters and two brothers, Robert and Clinton Jaquette, survive him. His funeral was held on Sunday with interment in Cherry Hill M. E. cemetery.

Thieves broke into the building used as a store and postoffice at Childs, one night last week, and carried off a lot of cigars and tobacco from the stock of the proprietor, Daniel H. McCauley. The residence of David Reese was also entered and several articles were stolen.

Lawrence Keir, who some months ago purchased the general store of Matthew Scarborough, at Leeds, has sued out a writ of injunction against the latter, restraining him from conducting his store recently opened at Elk Mills, on the ground that Scarborough has violated the terms of the contract under which Keir purchased the business at Leeds.

Daniel L. Krause, a farmer of the Pleasant Hill section, procured a warrant on Thursday for the arrest of William Greenly, a hand whom he had employed, charging him with stealing 200 pounds of meat from Krause's premises. Greenly was given a hearing by Justice J. M. Ash and admitted the charge, stating that he sold the meat to Henry Henderson, who conducts a store at Pleasant Hill. In default of bail Greenly was held for court. Henderson was charged with receiving stolen goods but waived a hearing and gave $500 bail for his appearance at the September term of court.

The "Chautauqua Week" program given under a spacious, brand new tent, made in Kansas City, pitched in the lot in the rear of the old Farmers' Hotel, at North and High streets, Elkton, has been drawing large and increasing audiences daily. The music by Cincello's splendid band and the Austro-Hungarian Orchestra received unusual praise. The lectures thus far given have been timely, helpful and informing, notably that on "The Poetry of Life," by Prof. Paul M. Pearson, of Swarthmore College, given on Saturday afternoon. The program closes today with afternoon and evening sessions.

The old McCullough, later the Drennon office building, on North street, Elkton, sold about a year ago to J. F. Myers, of Chesapeake City, as a site for a new building for the Elkton Banking and Trust Company, chartered by the Legislature of 1910, has been purchased by Emerson R. Crothers for the company. The concern, it is stated, will be in business in the fall with a capital of $50,000, held mostly in small blocks by county residents. A suitable building will be erected on the site just purchased. It is thought that the venture will prove successful, and the aim will be to prevent any single stockholder or group interests securing control of the policy and management of the concern.

Seeking to quiet a crowd of young roysterers at Childs one night last week, William Glenn, a resident of the village, was pretty roughly handled. Arrests are talked of and the young "bloody" are likely to pay the fiddler.

Ladies of Cherry Hill M. E. congregation will hold a festival on the church lawn tomorrow (Thursday) evening.

Robert Harvey of Childs and Robert C. Levis of Elkton, members of this year's graduating class at Delaware College, have secured positions with engineering firms of New York City.

Weldon-Biles.

Mr. Alfred J. Weldon, of Philadelphia, and Miss Helen Louise Biles were married Wednesday, June 12, at noon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Biles, at "Brick Hill." The ceremony was performed by Rev. Bernard J. Brinkman, pastor of the Rock and Zion Presbyterian Churches, under a bower of roses under the trees on the lawn, the wedding march being played by Mrs. Manly G. Miller, of Elizabeth, N. J. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an Empire gown of ivory satin de soie trimmed in Duchess and rose point lace, with train and veil. She carried a bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley and orchids. Mrs. Clarence P. Landreth, of Philadelphia, a sister of the bride, was matron of honor. The bridesmaids and matrons were Miss Audrey W. Hunt, of Steubenville, Ohio; Miss R. Elizabeth Miller, of Oxford, Pa.; Mrs. Alexander Schreiber and Mrs. Franklin P. Hudson, of Philadelphia. Misses Emily Wherry, of Providence, and Marian Clark, of Philadelphia, were flower girls and Master Drayton Landreth was page. Mr. Lee Haskell Malatesta acted as best man. The reception that followed the ceremony was attended by guests from Eastern, Baltimore, Detroit, Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Scranton, Washington, Pittsburgh, Wilmington and the immediate vicinity.

THE CAR that is the superior of any stock gasoline car at any price in power, speed, easy riding qualities, simplicity and all-around ability. A car to be operated and maintained by its owner at the maximum of efficiency and minimum of up-keep cost; not a flimsy, assembled toy but the product of fifteen years experience and ample capital.

It has no fly wheel, clutch, shaft, chains, change-speed gears, universal joints, carburetor, magneto, batteries, cooling system, self-starting mechanism; in short, none of the complicated and cumbersome harness required to make up, to some degree, for the deficiencies of the gasoline engine.

It is subject to no disorders that cannot readily be located and remedied, usually without recourse to machinist or repair shop. The engine cannot be "killed" or stalled.

It is longer lived than a gas car, for it does not shake itself to pieces. There are only twenty six moving parts.

Its tires wear longer from its light weight and smooth, gliding motion. There is no jerk or jar when starting.

In material, workmanship, style and finish it is the peer of any automobile constructed, yet its cost is moderate.
