UP FRONT

Time for fans to ante up

By MARTY VALANIA

MVALANIA@CHESPUB.COM

Yes, people are up in arms about the University of Delaware's proposal to assign the best season tickets and parking spots to Blue Hen football games to those who donate the most to the athletic program.

The easy and popular opin-ion is to lambaste the university for such a greedy decision. You've come to the wrong place, however, if you're looking for those thoughts here.

Actually, what people are really up in arms about Valania is the prospect of not being able to sit in the exact seats they've been sitting in for many years because they don't want to give any money to the school's athletic program.

This, despite schools all over the country already having similar policies in practice. This, despite other schools in the same conference having similar policies and this, despite the fact that these same people will hoot and holler at every misguided play during a game - let alone

The fact is all current season ticket holders will still be able to get seats - but some may not be able to get the same seats.

Parking is another thing that needs to change. Good spots should go to people who donate the most. That's the way it is every other place. It's not unfair for that to happen here. Again, every fan will have a spot – maybe a different one but they'll still

UD ROTC program hosts military display on campus

If you saw Army helicopters circling Newark last Thursday, April 17, no need to be alarmed.

The Delaware Army UH-1 Iroquois and Black Hawk helicopters were in Newark as part of a military display hosted by the University of Delaware Army ROTC battalion. Along with the chop-pers, the display included Humvees, night vision goggles, an obstacle course and a flight simulator.

The event today is designed to raise awareness about ROTC," said Captain Zeke Austin, a faculty member with the UD program.

The program has a long history at UD. Since as early as 1870, the school – then Delaware College – had a professor of Military Science. The Cadet Corps later proved valuable in preparing the Delaware Militia for its role in the Spanish-American War, and many graduates served as officers in the World Wars.

Police arrest suspects in Dunkin Donut robbery

Newark Police have arrested three men suspected of robbing a Dunkin Donuts in the 1000 block of Elkton Road on Sunday, April 13, at 12:15 a.m.

Police said Robert Waldridge, 29, of Townsend, Gunther Chapman, 22, of Elkton, Md., and Tyler Holbrook, 23, of Elkton, Md., have been arrested and charged with robbery first degree, possession of a weapon while committing a felony, aggravated menacing and conspiracy second degree.

Police said Waldridge and Chapman were developed as suspects after they were charged by the Delaware State Police for a robbery that occurred about five hours after the Dunkin

Donuts Robbery.

A 57-year-old clerk reported the robbery at the Dunkin Donuts. The clerk said two suspects entered the store together, one of them with a knife. The suspect demanded that the clerk open the cash register, and the suspects fled after taking cash. They were seen leaving the parking lot in a Ford pickup truck driven by a third suspect.

Police said Waldridge,
Chapman and Holbrook remain incarcerated at the Howard Young Correctional Facility.

Prowler arrested outside Newark apartment

A 20-year-old female University of Delaware student reported topolice on Wednesday, April 16, at 12:45 a.m., that she was followed down Main Street by an unknown suspect who then crawled onto the roof of her apartment in the unit block of Main Street.

Officers responded to and searched the area. They arrested Brett H. J. O'Neill, 21, of Newark, after finding him hiding between two adjoining buildings. He was charged with trespassing with intent to peer, harassment and loitering/prowling. He was released pending his arraignment in Alderman's Court, said police.

Men arrested after staging robbery

Two Wilmington men who staged a robbery in an effort to defraud a third individual of a Wii console were arrested on Wednesday, April 16, said Newark Police.

An officer was patrolling the parking lot of the College Square Shopping Center when he saw two people who appeared to be arguing on Wednesday, April 16, around 4:30 p.m. When the officer intervene, the subjects said they had just been robbed by a person with a gun.

The 41-year-old male victim said he met the defendant Darryl Justin Cebenka, 19, of Wilmington, in the parking lot with the intent to sell him a Wii game console for $600. During the transaction, a third person approached them, displaying a handgun and stole the Wii and cash. No one was injured, and the suspect fled.

Other officers searching the area located the robber, Rocco Grossi, 20, of Wilmington in the shopping center a short time later. A New Castle County Police K-9 unit found a pellet gun and some of Grossi's clothing near a trash compactor in the shopping center, said police.

Police investigation revealed that Cebenka and Grossi had been working together to set up the robbery. Both were arrested and charged with first degree robbery and second degree conspiracy, said police. Grossi was charged further with wearing a disguise while committing a felony. Both men were committed to the Howard Young Correctional Facility in default of bond.

Police warn of rental property scam

On April 14, the Newark Police Department handled two complaints almost identical in nature. The complaints involved a person identifying himself as "Steve Banes" who was allegedly seeking housing for a daughter attending the University of Delaware. In both cases, Banes answered an online advertisement regarding local residential rental properties via e-mail.

Through a series of emails, Banes advised the potential landlords that he would be sending a check or money order for the deposit and first month's rent. Banes then advised that he would be sending more than the required amount and requested the overpayment be forwarded to his daughter after providing a name and mailing address.

Police said the subsequent checks/money orders received by the landlords proved to be fake. Had they returned the amount of overpayment to the suspect, they would have lost more than $6,000.

The Newark Police Department warns residents to take the following precautions in mailing money.

1. Money should not be sent to persons or organizations that you are not familiar with or do not personally know.

2. If you have any questions regarding the source of requests for donations, you should investigate the organization or person by using all resources at your disposal (i.e. telephone, internet, better business bureau, chamber of commerce, etc.)

3. Older citizens should be

 Older citizens should be particularly careful as they are often the targets of such crimes as telephone scams, mail fraud, home improvement fraud, etc.

Meeting to address child poverty here

By CHRISTINE NEFF

CNEFF@CHESPUB.COM

Families in poverty face many challenges – paying for childcare, finding affordable housing and navigating public transportation, among them.

This month, the state's Child Poverty Task Force has been hearing from Delaware families who live in poverty about the issues that matter most to them. Working mothers have shared their concerns about raising children on minimum wage; adults in the workforce have expressed their realization about the need for a good education.

"It really has been an eyeopening experience," said State Rep. Terry Schooley, D-23 Newark, who chairs the task force. "I know the numbers, but to actually hear the stories has been amazing."

The numbers alone may be

The numbers alone may be surprising. According to the state, 13 percent of children in Delaware, nearly 27,000 of them, live in poverty – and that rate continues to increase.

In an effort to change this fact, the task force, created in December 2007, has the goal of finding ways to reduce the number of children living in poverty here by 50 percent over the next 10 years.

The task force started its work by meeting with poverty experts from around the country. Then, the group scheduled a series of seven public meetings to get "a much better picture of what was going on," said Schooley. The Newark area meeting will

The Newark area meeting will take place next Monday, April 28, at the Greater Newark Boys and Girls Club in Bear, from 5 to 8 p.m. Dinner and childcare will be provided. All residents are invited to hear more about the issue and share their thoughts.

Schooley said, so far, more than 100 people have attended meetings held elsewhere in the state – a number that has "absolutely amazed" her. Forums open with a panel discussion involving people who are of low-income or who work with low-income families. After dinner, participants break into smaller groups to discuss the topic.

"We're asking them questions like, 'what do you think some of the solutions might be,' 'what can the state do better,' 'what is the state doing well,' and, 'what do you want for your children,'" said Schooley.

Participants have been surprisingly open in their responses, she said. "One person last week said, 'this is the first time somebody asked me about it," said Schooley.

She hopes information gathered from the public will help the task force in crafting policy to help reduce child poverty in the state. Though the problem itself can be discouraging, Schooley said the public's interest in finding solutions has been hopeful. "Those of us that are working on it are really encouraged by the enthusiasm of the people that have come out," she said. "What is hard is to make sure everyone realizes this is everyone's problem. It will benefit the entire state, it will benefit all of us, if we can have fewer children growing up in poverty."

The Newark area meeting is one of seven being held across the state. Dinner and childcare will be provided to attendees. To register, call Crystal Ross at 831-6780 or e-mail, cross@udel.edu.

NPD secretary reflects on 23-year career

Over the years, Thornton has reported to work for five chiefs - Bill Brierley, William Hogan, Gerald Conway, William Nefosky and, now, Paul Tiernan - and several interim chiefs. Though her duties remained mostly the same under their leadership, she witnessed or took part in changes that occurred in the department.

She noted the changes made in Chief Hogan's tenure, including the building of the new police facility – a project she helped oversee – and the process of applying for and receiving national accreditation.

"That whole process was a tremendous under taking, and a lot of work for everyone in the department," she said. "(Chief Hogan) really prepared the police department for the 21st century, as far as technology."

Though Thornton said she was "devastated" when Hogan left Newark, her greatest challenge at the workplace was still to come. It occurred when Chief Nefosky died of pancreatic cancer in January 2007, just 11 months after being named chief of the Newark Police.

"Bill was not only a coworker and, then, my supervisor, but he was also a very good friend, and I felt a tremendous loss," she said.

From her start at the department, she had heard good things about Nefosky, then a young officer. "Everyone in the department, even at that point in time, seemed to respect his work ethic. He was very professional as a police officer, and just a wonderful, wonderful person, too," she said.

His death deeply affected the department as a whole, and, Thornton, his secretary and friend, called it "one of the hardest things I've gone through."

est things I've gone through."

But she got through it with the help and support of coworkers who, she said, she has grown very close to through the years. That support system will

That support system will be missed in retirement, said Thornton. "I will definitely miss the camaraderie, the every day interaction with the people I've worked with for 23 years. That's going to be a difficult adjustment for me," she said. "But, on the other hand, I'm certainly looking forward to relaxing a little bit and just taking one day at a time."

Thornton's plans for retirement include spending warm days at the beach at Cape Henlopen and seeing her children and grandchildren. "I just plan to take one day at a time for a while and see what the future holds," she said.

But she will look back fondly on her career and the work that she did for the department and Newark community. "I'm very proud to be associated with the members of this department," she said. "I think it's an outstanding organization."

Volunteers needed for 'U don't need it?' campaign

Program seeks to reduce amount of reusable items students throw away

By CHRISTINE NEFF

CNEFF@CHESPUB.COM

After a successful event in 2007, the city of Newark and University of Delaware will once again team up for the "UDon't Need It?" student move-out campaign.

student move-out campaign.

The goal of the program, launched last year, is to reduce the amount of reusable items added to the landfill each May when UD students leave campus for the summer. Instead of trashing these items, students and their landlords are encouraged to bring them to the "UDon't Need It" site where the goods will be made available, free of charge, to charitable organizations.

In 2007, the program helped 50 families, many of them aided by the Wilmington organization, Ministry of Caring. In addition, the campaign diverted about 50 tons of materials from the landfill.

This year, items will be collected from Thursday, May 22, to Thursday, June 5, during the hours of 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The drop-off site will again be at the former Curtis Paper Mill along Paper Mill Road. The university has donated tents to keep items under cover since the paper mill buildings were demolished earlier this year.

Any items remaining after charitable organizations take their share will be put up for sale to the public. The sale will take place Saturday, June 7, from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Volunteers are needed to work full-day shifts during the event, said Carol Houck, assistant to the city manager. A recruitment effort is under way now, and organizations or individuals interested in volunteering should call the city of Newark at 366-7020 or complete an application available at www.cityofnewarkde.us.

The city hopes to recruit a total of 85 volunteers - five per day – to man the site throughout the week. Volunteers will sort home goods brought to the site, load and unload furniture, direct and assist in the placement of items in preparation for pickups by charitable organizations and help with the public sale.

YMCA's Youth in Government Model Legislature

Students in charge of Delaware for a weekend

In Legislative Hall on Sunday, March 30, the 40th annual Youth in Government Model Legislature recessed. It was an incredible weekend full of opportunities for leadership development, to strengthen the resolve of the very important YMCA core values and to form memories and friendships that will last a lifetime.

Youth Governor Anna Galati, Western Family YMCA, weaved a subtle, but always present thread throughout the weekend: fulfilling the responsibility of Servant Leadership is necessary on every level. It is not the sole responsibility of those in obvious leadership positions, but it is a task that every one has before them.

Galati first put her message into action during the officer's training, which was held in advance at Hall House, the Governor's guesthouse on the grounds of Woodburn in Dover. She set the tone for the training by inspiring the other officers to create an environment in which each delegate will be able to take on the role of leader in his or her unique way:

VFW honors teachers

arjorie Sierra, a teacher at West Park Place Elementary School in Christina District, and Kevin Conley, a teacher at Appoquinimink High School in Appoquinimink District, were honored as Delaware Teachers of the Year by the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

VFW Post#475 Commander John Morrow presented each teacher with a district-level Teacher of the Year Award. Sierra received an additional award as the Delaware VFW Teacher of the Year for the state of Delaware.

"It was emotional to say the least just listening to the teachers express their thanks and gratitude to the Veterans," stated West Park parent Jayne Mitchell-Werbrich, "and to hear the veterans reciprocate their appreciation to the teachers for teaching the children to love their country."

Sierra was also given a check that she immediately handed back to the VFW Commander and stated, "I want this to go to

Get checked out - no matter how great you feel

made a promise to myself about seven years ago. I promised that if my father didn't recover from colon cancer, I'd go on a crusade in his honor to make sure that others had their colonoscopies when they should - before it was too late.

Several weeks ago Dad returned from an overseas trip. His fear of fly-ing, which limited his vacation travels to the automobile, was overcome after he beat cancer two years

He is a retired dentist, a medical professional. He swore he'd never have that routine and painless, but often avoided, precautionary procedure called a known better! I can only assume many of you reading this should have had one done by now, but (that's but, not butt) have not.

My father was turned away three times for a low iron count trying to donate at the blood bank. They suggested he get it looked into which led to a colonoscopy. One month later he was in surgery having a malignant tumor removed from his colon and subsequently benign tumor from his liver. Nine months of chemotherapy followed. For the first time in my life, I feared losing a parent.

Since his diagnosis my father has encouraged, enticed and even bribed others to get their routine colonoscopy. He stopped counting after the 60th friend he convinced. He stopped keeping track after the tenth person called and thanked him because something significant was found during the procedure. These were all people like him procrastinating that pain in the butt (pun intended) procedure.

The morning after Dad returned from his cruise I went for my annual physical and found out my cholesterol was normal, only to learn my blood work showed positive results in other areas (so to speak). So, instead of going into my second colonoscopy thinking it's just a day off from work, I went into it hoping and praying I'd still be working in 10 years. The good news is

But now I'm back on my crusade, actually just starting it, but also enhancing it. My crusade is to convince friends and family and readers to have a routine annual physical exam done complete with blood work. As my wife said, if I had not gone for a routine physical and had blood work done to check how my cholesterol medication is working (I found out I had high cholesterol during last year's annual physical), I'd never have known there could be this other issue as well. I'm young in my book (41), I feel just fine, look fine, act fine (according to me) and all my bodily functions are working just fine. My blood work said differently.

Whether you are 20 or 40 or 80 it makes no difference - you need to see your doctor regularly no matter how great you feel. It doesn't matter if you are a man or woman, there are routine preventative tests and exams you can have done, should have done, must have done - in order to detect and hopefully prevent more serious health

Don't base your decision to get an annual physical exam and common preventative procedures on how you feel or whether you have the time. Base it on how you want to feel in the future and how much time you want that future to have.

Some of these procedures are painless; some are not. Some are simple; many are not. Some are completely covered by insurance; few are not. All should be mandatory, but unfortunately they're not.

We all have choices in life, including what medical advice to take. Unlike my father and many other people you hear from on TV or in print or in your doctor's office, I'm not a medical professional giving out free medical advice here or some famous athlete or actor preaching to you. Rather, I'm just like you. I'm a son, a husband and a

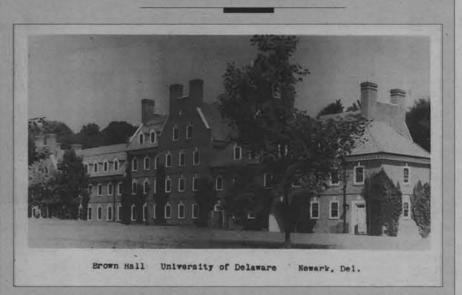

I get up in the morning and feel great reading the newspaper with a cup of coffee - just like you're doing now. I go to work, exercise, watch what I eat (most of the time) and think I'm in great shape for my age. Without the blood tests as proof, my doctor would probably tell me the same thing after weighing me, taking my blood pressure and listening to my heart. My blood work told him differently.

I went into my colonoscopy pro-cedure hoping to come out of it and see my wife smiling at me telling me everything is A-Okay. I also went into it this second time a little leery, knowing it might not be.

But either way I'm once again glad I went for my annual physical exam and took the time to get the blood work done. It's something I've done annually since my father started traveling by air, but something I probably would not be doing if he had not been diagnosed with colon cancer. After all, I feel and look fine, and certainly have better

State Sen. Steve Amick addresses his constituents

To: the Editor From: State Sen. Steve Amick, R-10

The time has come to let my constituents know of my plans in regard to this fall's election. My eighth legislative term encompassing a total service of 22 years will end on Election Day, Nov. 4, and on that day, the Delaware State Senator representing the 10th Senate District, stretching from the south end of Newark to the north end of Middletown and including large parts of Bear and Glasgow, will be elected.

I have been consulting with my family about whether or not to run for re-election. Public office puts a great strain on a family. An office holder is rarely home for dinner in the evening and misses a great many ball games, school plays and family events and has little leisure time to spend with family and old friends. I've always promised my family we'd make re-election decisions in full consultation and in the best interest of the family as a whole and not simply assume we would run. We've always done that. This time my family thinks I should step aside and let fresher, younger blood participate in public life. Fresh thinking comes begrudgingly as one ages, I find, and health concerns come to the fore. Yet the blood rises when faced with the excitement, color and personal challenge of an election campaign. The old fire dog jumps onto the fire truck when the bell rings, and the veteran politician reacts similarly.

I have been sure whichever decisions we make we will have occasion to regret. In any case, my family and I have arrived at a decision that I will not seek re-election to the Delaware Senate.

In the meantime, I owe you an apology. We had already made this decision when an opponent announced the intention to run against me. The press then asked me for a reaction to the announcement. I thought it important to first notify my party, my campaign volunteers and some close friends and supporters, and so I responded to this question by insinuating that we would have a strenuous campaign knowing all along that we would not be running. I have tried to avoid this kind of half-truth answers throughout my political life and I should have tried harder to find a way to be truthful in this case. So I "come clean" to you now.

I have accomplished some of the goals toward which I have worked these many years and I am proud of my efforts. At the same time, I've come to realize some of my goals will not be reached. While they are worthy goals and still worth the fight, that fight will have to await another champion, perhaps the newly elected Senator from the 10th Senate District.

Let me assure you, I have enjoyed representing you in Dover. It has been my great pleasure to know so many of you and to share your hopes and dreams for your families, your communities and our state. I look forward to continuing to work together on these things, but my role will be different as I move into this new stage in life.

Paper Mill Partners to meet Thursday

The next meeting of the Paper Mill Partners, a resident/volunteer group formed to discuss the future of the Curtis Paper Mill property, will be held Thursday, May 1, from 7 to 8:30 p.m., at the Newark Senior Center.

Organizer Paul Bauernschmidt said last month's meeting attracted nearly 30 people. The group discussed ideas for using the city-owned land along Paper Mill Road and ways to make the site "unique to Newark," he said.

Ideas for the site ranged from building an art garden to an amphitheater, a botanical garden to a skate park. Other proposals included making a trail head, market space or picnic area at the location.

At next week's meeting, the group will further discuss these options and determine which ones to pursue. Bauernschmidt said he expects to present Newark City Council with a proposal for the property by July.

Managing finances after the death of a relative

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

"What do I do? How can I help my mother be sure she is protected when all she wants to do is grieve?" This was the call I received at the New Castle County Extension office last week. A stricken daughter needed a place to start in helping her mother manage the family finance and insurances. It is not an easy time and, often, family members need to step in and help. Newark poet named one of 'best'

JoAnn Balingit will give reading this Saturday at Lieberman's Bookstore took time for JoAnn Balingit to come to terms with the term "poet."

Since her high school days, the Florida native said she has written poetry. She studied literature in college and graduate school, traveled to Morocco and Portugal finding new subjects for her writing and even had her first published poem appear in a Rolling Stone magazine that featured Sean Connery on the cover.

Still, said this Newark resident and mother of four, she wouldn't use that word: "I've always loved poetry, but I didn't always have the bravado to say 'I'm a poet.'

That, however, has changed. In 2007, Balingit was named a "Best New Poet" and included in an annual anthology edited by Pulitzer Prize-winning poet, Natasha Trethewey. The book, "Best New Poets 2007," includes poems by 50 "emerging" writers, and Balingit was honored to be among them.

She became serious about her poetry several years ago, she said, after attending a conference in Delaware and receiving encouragement from the state's community of writers.

Redefining Newark - Don't be a 'lacker;' be a doer!

By NIC DECAIRE

NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

ast week while attending a fitness conference, /I learned an abundance of exciting information. I also heard an alarming fact: only three out of 10 Americans - or 30 percent - exercise on a regular basis. As someone who has worked in the fitness industry for 14 years, I was particularly unsettled by this piece of information. The question is why? Doctors, the media, the food and weight loss industry, and of course, my industry, fitness and health, constantly promote the message that regular exercise is good for you. Even our significant others offer gentle hints about losing a few pounds. The message is everywhere.

After the conference I started to think about all the excuses

I hear on a daily basis as to why people do not exercise. The top three are the "lacks" lack of time, lack of money to join a gym and lack of motivation. Here is another "lack" DeCaire fact: lack of physical activity contributes to some 300,000 deaths each year in the United States caused by heart disease, stroke, diabetes and other serious conditions. If you don't exercise, you are in serious danger of becoming one of those statistics.

If you are among the 30 percent who has chosen to exercise, you are reaping important health benefits. Congratulations! What keeps these doers motivated? The reasons are numerous and very personal. As I look around the fitness center I see many different faces, shapes and ages.
All of these people have their own motivations and reasons for exercising.

There's the young mother who just had a baby and wants to fit back into her jeans. There's the middle-aged man working to build strength after knee surgery. There are people who combine the social aspect by working out with their friends a great motivator. There are college students, senior citizens, professionals and retirees. They cover the spectrum. Regardless of their motivation, they have made the commitment to exercise. It's very simple - they just do it!

My job as a fitness professional is to educate people on the benefits of exercise. I am committed to significantly raising that 30 percent. It is a fact: regular exercise will make you look better, feel better, live a longer life, have a better sex life and just be healthier. Isn't that the best motivation? I encourage you to just give it a try. Take that first step away from being a "lacker" and towards being a doer. I promise you will feel better, prouder and healthier.

Stay healthy!

g Day has become one of the most beloved rites of spring in Delaware, and this year's event, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday, April 26, promises to be bigger and better than ever. UD's annual celebration of agriculture and natural resources — now in its 33rd year — will feature educational exhibits, hayride tours, children's activities and, of course, plenty of good food.

But what's really special this year is the record number of exhibitors and array of entertainment options, said Karen Aniunas, assistant dean for student services in the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources. "Ag Day 2008 will offer more than 90 educational and interactive exhibits presented by such organizations as the Delaware Native Plant Society, The Nature Conservancy, Delaware Humane Society and the UD Equestrian Team," she said. "And on our two stages, visitors will be able to enjoy the best in local bands, including Chapel Street Junction, Tater Patch and Dodging Cupid." Held on the grounds of Townsend Hall, Ag Day is a great outing for young and old. More than 3,000 people attend Ag Day each year.

Those with a green thumb – or those hoping to cultivate one – will want to visit the Fischer Greenhouse, located behind Townsend Hall, for the 16th annual UD Botanic Gardens Plant Sale, 9 a.m. - 4 p.m. The sale offers out-of-the-ordinary perennial flowers, shrubs and trees that are sure to add interest to any lawn or garden. This year's featured plant is the redbud and a special selection of varieties will be available.

Most Ag Day exhibits and activities will take place under large canvas tents to shelter event-goers from the sun, or, in the event of inclement weather, rain. Organized by students and staff from UD's College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, Ag Day raises funds for student clubs, Cooperative Extension Master Gardener and 4-H clubs and other university and community organizations.

Ag Day is free and open to public and will be held rain or shine. Free parking is available in the UD Athletic Complex lots. For more information, go to http://ag.udel.edu/events/agday2008.htm or call 302-831-2508.

Retitle a deceased person's assets or jointly held assets (such as bank accounts, credit cards, auto titles, and the deed to the family house) into the survivor's name. Expect minor hassles such as the need for a death certificate and a signature guarantee from a bank officer for some documents.

Don't pay any large debts that a deceased person incurred until you check with a lawyer. Debts owed by the deceased are generally the responsibility of the estate and should be forwarded to the executor for payment. Many creditors will simply need to wait until the estate is settled. If the survivor pays bills out-of-pocket or with savings, they could leave themselves short of cash for their living expenses or a financial emergency.

Identify and secure resources. Some examples include life insurance policy proceeds (both individual and employerprovided coverage), employee benefits such as a deceased spouse's 401(k) plan, and veteran's benefits, including burial in a national cemetery. If the deceased person was employed, contact his or her employer regarding benefits due to survivors. For example, the estate may be due a final paycheck or payment for vacation and sick leave.

Seek professional advice when needed, such as an attorney to help with estate tax returns or a financial planner for investment decisions. Ask questions about anything that you don't understand or feel comfortable with. There are no "dumb" questions when your future financial security is at stake.

It can take some time, but supportive family members can really assist widows in identifying resources and managing the paperwork necessary to help them sustain a solid financial future.

Poetry is about 'being wide awake'

▶ POET, from 8

Now, in the midst of every-day tasks – homeschooling her youngest son, finishing her dissertation, helping her oldest son decide on which college to attend – she finds that poetic inspiration comes to her in the form of interesting phrases, images or experiences from her life.

She writes about family, heritage and self-discovery. A big part of her writing life has been spent trying to answer a question she got all the time growing up the daughter of a Filipino-American in a conservative, white community, she said. "I just got very used to people coming up to me going, 'Where are you from?,'" she said.

Poetry has allowed her to work through her thoughts on the subject, and to, eventually, share them with an audience. "Writing has to be some kind of conversation," she said. "That's why I love poetry – because it's a conversation with another person's head."

For Balingit, writing also brings a level of personal awareness not found in routine life. "It might seem as if you're shut away from the world when you're sitting, totally absorbed in your notebook or your computer screen. But I think it gives you a real clarity on what's going on in your present mind," she said. "Poetry is really about just being wide awake."

Balingit and another contributor to "Best New Poets 2007," Natalie Lyalin of Philadelphia, Pa., will read from the collection and their recent works at Lieberman's Bookstore on Main Street, this Saturday, April 26, at 3 p.m. The reading is free and open to the public. Light refreshments will be served.

Tri-State Bird and Rescue holding open house

ri-State Bird and Rescue is inviting the community to tour its Newark facilities and learn about the work done there to rehabilitate injured, orphaned and oiled native wild birds on Sunday, April, 27, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., rain or shine.

Tri-State Bird Rescue & Research is an internationally recognized, licensed, nonprofit wildlife rehabilitation organization that cares for nearly 3,000 injured, orphaned, and oiled native wild birds each year ranging from hummingbirds to

The open house will feature educational and family-focused activities. Volunteers will lead tours, and staff will make hourly presentations about the work Tri-State does to help care for and rehabilitate groups of birds affected by a variety of environmental and human-related disasters. Other bird and nature organizations also will be on hand

Children's activities, including arts and crafts, face painting, bird bingo and sunflower seed planting, will take place. And, children are invited to bring their treasured stuffed animals to the Teddy Bear Clinic for a check-up and repair by one of Tri-State's veterinarians.

Admission is free, but the center accepts cash and inkind donations of white tissues and toilet paper used as nest-ing material for baby birds. For more information, visit the Web site, www.tristatebird.org or call 737-9543, ext. 108.

The facility is at 110 Possum Hollow Road in Newark.

McDonalds marks 53rd year with free sundaes

t was a 53rd birthday to remember as the residents of The Gardens at White Chapel enjoyed caramel and fudge sundaes co-sponsored by Newark McDonalds in celebration of the first McDonalds opening in the area in 1955.

Draper, Donna McDonalds community rela-tions representative, "We have been a family dining tradition throughout the years for people of all ages.

As residents enjoyed their free sundaes, they reflected on times when a hamburger cost just 15 cents. "McDonald's is as much a part of American culture as apple pie," said William Skelton,70, who remembers being a sophomore in high school when he indulged in his first order of fries.

Flacco gets help from former Hen

By TOM TOMASHEK

TTOMASHEK@COMCAST.NET

If Joe Flacco becomes a first-round NFL draft pick, the former University of Delaware quarterback can credit another former Blue Hen standout for his assistance.

Scott Brunner, a former Blue Hen All-American and NFL quarterback, has been a Wall Street stockbroker for the last 12 years, but he has remained involved with football. The son of a former NFL coach and brother of an NFL scout does media game-day analysis and is a part-time instructor with TEST Sports Performance

Tomashek

Center in Martinsville, New Jersey, a group of former athletes who work with high school prospects preparing for the college recruiting season and college players getting ready for professional draft.

Brunner worked with Flacco before last winter's NFL Combine in Indianapolis and although he isn't predict-ing Flacco will be a first-round selection in Saturday's NFL draft, he. expects the strongarmed 6-foot-6 ex-Blue Hen to go earlier than any previous Blue Hen quarterback in the NFL draft. Rich Gannon was the highest draft pick of any Blue Hen, selected in the fourth round in 1987 by the New England Patriots who traded him immediately to the Vikings. Brunner was drafted in the sixth round by the New York Giants in 1980, and Jeff Komlo was selected in the ninth round by the Detroit Lions in 1979 after Delaware finished second in the NCAA Division

II Tournament.
"[Matt] Ryan will probably be the number one quarterback selected," Brunner said of the Boston College senior who was a strong Heisman candidate through the first half of the 2007 college season. "But Flacco is one of the top two

Sherry scored her seventh of the season in the 13th minute to give the Force an early advantage.

Newark finally scored the equalizer on a goal by Ali Bechard in the 31st minute, but Charter struck back to take a 3-1 lead before halftime on goals by Hilary Hanus in the 35th minute and Sarah Gray in the 38th minute.

The two teams played tenacious defense throughout the second half. Force keeper Kristi Jackson was especially sharp, keeping the Jackets at bay, and more importantly, off the scoreboard.

"We beat a good team today," said Charter's second year coach Jon Gillespie. "Our defense did a great job keeping their offense under control during the game.

Prior to the Charter game, Newark's high-powered offense was averaging 6.6 goals per game. Senior Amanda Pearl is the team leader with ten goals, while junior Melissa Rubick has seven goals so far this Bechard's goal against Charter was her seventh. The team has also been credited with two own goals.

or three quarterbacks available. He and [Michigan's Chad] Henne are probably the next best...possibly [Louisville's] Brian Bohm."

Ryan, by most accounts heard on talk shows or read on the internet or newspapers, appears to be the logical pick to be the first quarterback selected, anywhere from first to the middle of the 32-team first round – Atlanta, Miami, Baltimore, Carolina among the first most frequent franchise's mentioned. Atlanta is floundering without imprisoned Michael Vick, Baltimore is feeling the sting of Steve McNair's retirement, Miami is revamping its franchise under the leadership of Bill Parcells, and Carolina might not be pleased with Michael Moore's ability to step up when starter Jake Delhomme steps down.

Beyond Ryan, Flacco, Brohm, and Henne are the quarterbacks receiving the most attention, but only rarely as a potential first-round selection. Flacco has the distinction of being the highest-ranked I-AA candidate, prompting one NFL analyst to describe Flacco as "one of the most intriguing quarterbacks in the draft. He's even ranked far above Ricky Santos, the former New Hampshire star and Peyton Trophy winner [I-AA's version of the Heisman trophy]. The distinction, however, might also be a hindrance. Henne and Flacco might have worn strikingly similar helmets the last couple years, but Henne played against I-A powers such as Ohio State, Illinois, and Wisconsin while Flacco's major competition was against I-A Navy and I-AA powers James Madison and Richmond.

and Richmond.

"He has skills, but he needs to refine them," Brunner said.

"The footwork between taking the snap and getting back into the pocket is so much different in the pros and college ball. We're talking about the importance of a split second from taking the snap and making the drop."

Brunner, however, considers Flacco an intelligent athlete capable of doing what it takes to make the transition from college ball to the pros. And Brunner's younger brother, Todd, an NFL scout, said in one of his regular NFL blogs that "Wherever Joe ends up, he'll be a great asset."

The fact that Flacco does not come from the major college ranks might alter his draft situation, but once a player is drafted the coaches aren't necessarily partial to those from the upper division. Brunner, who started only one varsity season at Division II Delaware and led the 13-1 Blue Hens to a national championship, went from a sixth-round draft pick in 1980 to a starting quarterback in 1981, when he replaced the injured Phil Simms, and led the Giants from a 5-6 record into the playoffs for the first time since 1963. One can only wonder what the 1982 strike that shortened the season to nine games did to Brunner's momentum. He started much of the 1983 season under first-in 1984.

Blue Hens get even with Hornets on season

Trailing by three early, the University of Delaware baseball team came alive in the middle innings and used a grand slam by Jared Olson to take a commanding lead and eventually cruise to a 13-4 victory over Delaware State at Soldier Field on Tuesday afternoon.

Six Blue Hens posted multihit efforts, including Scott Shockley, Alex Buchholz, Ryan Cuneo, and Chris Nehl who all finished with three hits apiece. Olson added a 2-for-5 performance, while senior tricaptain Adam Tsakonas rounded out the potent Blue Hen offense, finishing with two hits and a pair of runs scored for Delaware (14-24).

oriense, finishing with two fits and a pair of runs scored for Delaware (14-24).

The victory avenged the Hens' 10-6 setback to Delaware State (14-23) at Bob Hannah Stadium earlier this month.

After the Hornets posted three unearned runs in the third inning to take an early lead, Delaware immediately answered with three of its own in the fourth. During the rally, Buchholz ripped a lead-off double and came around on a single by Shockley. Following a single by Ryan Reed, the two Blue Hen runners moved into scoring position on a wild pitch before Nehl chased them home with a two-run single to right center.

With the score knotted at three, Delaware took control of the game in the fifth. After Tsakonas and Buchholz were both hit by pitches, Cuneo ripped a two-out single to right that brought home the first run. Following a walk to Reed that loaded the bases, Olson crushed a grand slam to right that put the Hens up by five at 8-3.

the Hens up by five at 8-3.

Although Jarrett Bibb responded with a solo shot to lead off the next inning which cut Delaware State's deficit to four, the Blue Hens came back with another five-run inning in the seventh to grab a commanding lead. After capping off the Hens' earlier rally, Olson returned to start Delaware's next one with a double down the right field line.

With Olson on second, Nehl brought him in with a single to right center. Tsakonas, Buchholz, and Shockley followed with RBI singles of their own before Cuneo slammed a double to left center that brought in the last run of the have one.

Fans that complain about these policies are clearly only thinking of themselves and not the overall health of the program. If you want to continue to see a winner, the facilities are going to need to be upgraded. That money needs to come from somewhere.

If Delaware football fans want to help make sure the Blue Hens stay among the nation's best when it comes to I-AA football, then this is a step that is necessary.

And before anybody says that I don't know what I'm talking about because it won't affect me, let me say that I've donated money for over 20 straight years to the Nittany Lion Club in order to have the right to buy season tickets to Penn State football games for the past 18 years.

One thing that Delaware fans do have over Penn State fans, though, is a little leverage. At Penn State, if you don't have a season ticket – you really don't have an opportunity to buy tickets to games. At Delaware, only about half the stadium's capacity goes to season tickets, the rest are up for grabs.

Theoretically, Blue Hen football fans could not donate and then still buy single game tickets. But if you're a fan that wants what's best for the program, it's time to ante up.

Division I-A programs across the country have been doing this forever. Now, schools like Appalachian State, James Madison, UMass and Northern Iowa – all at the same level as Delaware – are doing it as well.

It's time for Delaware to enact something similar.

If they don't and continue to let other schools bypass them in terms of facilities and recruiting, that would be the true outrage.

Amick attributed his decision to health, family

► AMICK, from 1

Newark Post on Monday, Amick attributed his decision to "health concerns" and family commitments, saying he consulted his family before deciding not to run again.

"I've always promised my family we'd make re-election decisions in full consulta-tion and in the best interest of the family as a whole and not simply assume we would run. We've always done that. This time my family thinks I should step aside and let fresher, younger blood participate in public life," he stated. (For full letter, see page 7.)

Amick, a Newark native and former real estate lawyer, was first elected to the State House of Representatives from the 25th District in 1986. He served four terms in the House before being elected to the State Senate from the 10th District in 1994. He has served on the Senate Joint Finance Committee and as Minority Whip and Leader, in addition to other roles.

of News Amick's decision came as some-thing of a surprise colleagues who have worked alongside him in the state legislature. They spoke Amick highly of his work on behalf of his Newark constituents.

"He's a terrific legislator and a good friend," said State Senator Liane Sorenson, R-6, who served alongside Amick in the House of Representatives and Senate. "We're definitely going to miss him."

Sorenson said, when a redistricting moved some of Amick's | constituents into her district, she saw what an impression he had made on them. "The people here just love him," she said.

State Representative Terry Schooley, D-23, called Amick "an incredibly responsible legislator." "Not only has he served Newark well, but he's served the whole state is so many capacities. He has always been a friend of education, children and families, and I will miss working with him," she said.

First-term State Representative John Kowalko, D-25, said Amick helped ease him into the role by providing guidance. "I can't say enough for what Steve has done for his constituents and me, per-sonally. He has been a public servant of the first stripe.

In addition to his accomplishments in the legislature, Amick has been an active member of the Newark community. He regularly attends city events and council meetings and par-ticipates in several organizations, including the Jaycees, Newark Morning Rotary Club and Pencader Heritage Area Association

Bill Conley, vice president of the Pencader Association, expressed the group's appreciation for Amick's support. "He's been so supportive of us and also very encouraging,' he said, noting that Amick had been active in local preservation issues since the group's founding in 2001.

Former City Councilman Frank Osborne, who has known Amick since teaching him at Newark High School, said, "I think Steve's been a very dedicated public servant for many, many years. He's done a lot for the people in his constituency and also for the city of Newark.

Amick has also been a strong leader in the Delaware Republican Party. "We will miss him," said Steve Engebretsen, Newark region chair of the Delaware Republican Party. "He is one terrific human being. The citizens of the state probably don't recognize how much he's done on both sides of the aisle...It will be a loss for the state of Delaware.'

While the party will be looking for a candidate to put forth in this year's election, the Democrats already have one candidate who has filed to run in the 10th Senate District. Bethany A. Hall-Long, now a state representative for the 8th District and associate professor at the University of Delaware School of Nursing, entered the race earlier this month.

Exceptional Care to open to public

Public invited to tour Newark area facility

Exceptional Care for Children, a home-away-from-home for technology-dependent, chronically and terminally ill children, is preparing to celebrate a grand opening of its newly expanded patient building on Saturday, April 26, from 2 to 5:30 p.m.

Refreshments will be provided by Pat's Pizzeria and Family Restaurant. The Cab Calloway Chorus will perform and the public is welcome to attend. Tours of the facility will be available with some restrictions.

Having first opened for services in 2006, Exceptional Care for Children provides health-care for technology-dependent, chronically and terminally ill children. New developments can be seen from just about every angle, both inside and out, of the facility. Renovations have enabled the organization to double the number of children it may serve.

The artistry of muralist Dan Gotel has turned the children's rooms into a virtual tour of many of the world's most amazing sights, including the Grand Canyon, the Great Wall of China, the rain forest, the beaches of Hawaii, the plains of Africa, and the Australian outback.

Exceptional Care is located at a former head trauma center on Independence Way in Newark. For more information, call 894-1001 or visit www. exceptionalcare.org.

tional program until the 1950s.

The building eventually became the headquarters for the Newark Special School District and then the Christina School District, housing administra-tion offices until 2004. As the "Old Newark Comprehensive School," 83 E. Main St. was added to the National Register of Historic Places in 1982

Since 2004, Christina District has considered various uses for the site, including establishing academic and vocational facilities for its NETworks NETworks program there. combine career and academic experiences through hands-on training in a real-world work environment. While attending the NETworks program for all or part of the school day, students earn credits towards completion of a high school diploma or certificate of atten-

This project was discontinued in May 2006 upon discovery of a multimillion-dollar budget shortfall in the District and has remained empty since that time.

As part of Christina's 2007-2010 Strategic Plan, District administrators advised the school board in early 2007 to investigate "sale, lease or part-nership options" for 83 East Main in Newark and the Eden Center in Bear, also a former school building and now housing overflow administrative District finance direc-tor Patrick O'Rourke told the school board this month that the state had not included District construction funds needed to complete the Porter Road Elementary School in Bear in the 2009 bond bill.

Christina reportedly needs $6.5 million in state and local bond sales to complete the construction project. If the state would allow the district to sell local bonds amounting to $2.6 million, Christina would only need $3.9 million to finish the construction project, O'Rourke

The porter Road School would alleviate space short-ages in the Bear-Glasgow area. According to the District, out of a total student population of 18,495 students, 72 percent or 13,317 K-12 students live in the greater Newark, Bear/ Glasgow and Christiana areas.

The District got approval from voters in November 2007 to finish the Porter Road school by 2009, allowing all District students to attend schools closest to home. The District also needs space to put full-day kindergarten in all elementary schools in 2009.

Any formal recommenda-tion about the future of 83 E. Main would have to be approved by the school board at a future meeting.

The District is also considering excessing the former AstroPower plant on Route 40 that was purchased previously for a never completed fourth District middle school. Instead, the District is renovating Bayard School in Wilmington for a middle school location.

The District invites interested members of the public to join the Property Planning Committee, a new committee formed to develop a long-range master plan for property and facility use in the District.

The next meeting is scheduled for Monday, April 28, at 5:30 p.m. at Brader Elementary School, 107 Four Seasons Parkway, Newark. For more information, please contact the Public Information Office at 552-2610.

Other incidents

A 35-year-old Newark woman was charged with third degree assault after allegedly throwing hot salsa in the face and eyes of a woman at a restaurant in the 100 block of Creekview Road on Sunday, April 20, at 10:39 p.m., said police. Police said Anna Garcia of the unit block of Tana Court was released pending a court appearance.

Fifteen cans of baby formula and two packs of diapers were stolen from a supermarket in the 400 block of New London Road by two unknown women in their 20s, police were told on Sunday, April 20, at 2:48 p.m.

A red, five-gallon gas can was stolen from a trailer parked in a driveway in the 900 block of Barksdale Road, police were told on Saturday, April 19, at 10:24 p.m.

A 22-year-old man was issued criminal summonses for resisting arrest and disorderly conduct after officers saw him cross E. Main Street in front of oncoming traffic and climb on top of an art sculpture on Saturday, April 19, at 1:39 a.m. Police said the man, Donald Romaniello, of Rowayton, Conn., was uncooperative during the investigation and arrest process. He was released pending court appearance.

An unknown suspect caused more than $700 worth of damage to a parking machine in the unit block of E. Delaware Avenue by moving the gate so a vehicle could exit without paying, police were told on Friday, April 18, at 8:08 a.m. Investigation will continue.

An unknown suspect broke into a gas station in the 1000 block of S. College Avenue and stole several hundred dollars from a cash register after hours, police were told on Friday, April 18, at 4:22 a.m.

A 23-year-old Bear man was arrested and charged with assault after he allegedly punched and kicked a 43year-old male acquaintance in the 1000 block of S. College Avenue on Wednesday, April 16, at 6:21 p.m., said police. Police said Gregory Smith was released on bond pending a court appearance.

The Slash Life

By Hannah Seligson CTW FEATURES

After Sept. 11, Angela Williams held an ecumenical service for her law firm. But wait, a lawyer holding a service? That sounds down right strange.

Williams, a lawyer for the general counsel of the YMCA and an ordained minister, is part of a growing demographic of slash workers – people that have multiple job titles.

The "slash effect" was coined by Marci Alboher, who writes the "Shifting Careers" column for The New York Times and whose own life of slashes – author/speaker/coach/blogger – inspired her recent book "One Person/Multiple Careers: How The Slash Effect Can Work for You" (Business Plus, 2007).

Alboher, a self-described career chameleon who left law to become a journalist, says multiple-identity careers are now ubiquitous.

"Just look at celebrity culture as one example," she says. "You have Bono, who is a rocker/activist and Angelina Jolie - actress/ Goodwill Ambassador. We've reached a tipping point where people have so many different dimensions to who they are and what they do."

Take Bob Alper, a rabbi/stand-up comic who is a poster child for slash workers.

"There was always a lot of comedy in my rabbinate, and there is also a lot of rabbi in my comedy," Alper says.

Melding the two professions, Alper performs all over the country as a stand-up comic, leaving less time to be a practicing rabbi, which highlights a staple of the slash life that there is rarely an even split between one's

When one job isn't enough, the multi-career worker creates opportunities that go beyond the desk

multiple careers

Williams says she spends about 70 percent of her time on the law and 30 percent in the ministry. But even though she spends more of her time drafting briefs, she says there is a lot of crossover.

"When you get a Master's of Divinity, they train you to deal with people," she says. "It's all about the holistic parts of humanity. So as a lawyer, manager and co-worker, I am constantly channeling who I am as a minister."

But as with anything that involves multiples comes the balance challenge. Williams says balance is something she has to be particularly cognizant of, since it's entirely possible to work 24/7 when you have one career, let alone two.

"I've learned that in order to lead a slash life you have to be very intentional about what you do," she says. "You have to actually set aside that time to call your friends, because it's not going to happen on its own."

While multiple careers might sound like a recipe for constant stress, Alboher says she found that slash workers feel less stress than their fellow singular careerists.

"Slashes might not be caught up on "American Idol," but they are very satisfied because who they are is being layered into their lives," she says. "They have understood how to blend and blur, which is a key element of the satisfaction equation in today's workplace."

So want to add a first or second slash to your career? Slashers, like Alper, say to be pa-

"I remember when I was just starting out in comedy, I would change out of my rabbi clothes and into my comedy clothes in the parking lot," he says. "I was always afraid someone would see me. Slowly, I started getting bookings and was able to make my comedy an actual career."

To that end, Alboher advises current slash workers and soon-to-be slash workers to think of their careers in terms of anchors and orbiters. Anchors are jobs that have the staples of stability, like health insurance and a steady paycheck. Orbiters are those things like writing that novel or starting that art gallery.

"The anchor/orbiter model will help you think about how to stay affoat financially but also how to expand," Alboher says.

The life of a slash worker can sound ideal. What could be better than running a restaurant and teaching yoga on the side? But what if you are job seeking? In this case, Alboher says discretion is critical. A job interview with that technology start-up, for example, is not the moment to share that you'd like to open a yarn store.

"I would reveal as little as possible without being misleading," Alboher says. "Of course, this is a case-by-case situation, because perhaps one of your slashes is a nice compliment to the position you are applying for."

PUBLIC NOTICE

In accordance with Title 7, Chapter 54, Section 5406(b) of the Delaware Code, the Director of the Division of Historical and Cultural Affairs, Department of State, hereby gives notice of the discovery of unmarked human skeletal remains on the former Simmons Farm site, tax parcel 10-033.00-040, northeast of the intersection of routes 40 and 7, in Bear, New Castle County. The property is now part of the Lincoln Center Development. The remains of 10 individuals, interred between 1787 and 1839, were uncovered. Archi-val research indicates the site is the location of the James Partridge family cemetery. The landowner proposes to rebury the recovered remains within the original cemetery lot.

Any persons who have reason to believe they may be next-of-kin to these individuals or have evidence that they have relatives buried in this location should contact the Director, Division of Historical and Cultural Affairs, 21 The Green, Dover, DE 19901-3611; telephone 302-736-7400; weekdays between the hours of 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; within thirty (30) days of this Notice.
