This was the scene last Friday on Main Street after the driver of this BMW ended his wild ride. Traffic on Main Street stopped completely as rescue crews pulled the driver from the crumpled wreck. The driver was charged with reckless endangering and driving under the influence.

MAIN STREET ACCIDENT

'Loudest crash ever'

It's not something that you usually see on Main Street on a Friday afternoon.

But last Friday, a red BMW 325i was driving north on Academy Street at a high rate of speed when it struck a red 1994 Subaru Impreza on E. Main Street and then struck a small retaining wall located on 96 E. Main Street, Newark police said.

Keeli Bohner, a clerk at Great Impressions, said it "was the loudest crash I ever heard."

When she went outside she saw a car had gone "up on the embankment of the doctor's office and on to the stone wall" at the corner of Academy and Main Streets.

The driver of the BMW was Brian Bulicki, a Cherry Hill, N.J. resident. Bulicki was flown by State Police helicopter to the Christiana Emergency Room. He was released into police custody Wednesday and charged with reckless endangering in the first degree, a class E felony, and driving under the influence.

He was released on $2250 bond.

Newark police state they received a complaint about 1:45 p.m. of a red car driving erratically in the area of W. Main Street and Hillside Road. A description of the vehicle was then broadcast via police radio and a short time later the vehicle was observed by a Newark parking enforcement officer speeding on Amstel Avenue and onto South College Avenue.

The BMW was then located by a Newark police officer at South College and Park Place. The officer did not pursue the vehicle but

Schedule amended for more public input

At the last meeting of the Wilmington Area Planning Council (WILMAPCO), plans for a month-long public review of the recently released 2020 Metropolitan Transportation Plan (MTP) were significantly amended.

At the request of council members and the council's Public Advisory Committee (PAC), council voted to have the public comment period on the draft of the 25-year plan from Oct. 19 to Nov. 20. Members of committees and other council staff will submit reports with recommended modifications, if any, to council by Dec. 7.

WILMAPCO will meet and consider adoption of the final MTP at their regular meeting on Jan. 4, 1996. Copies of the MTP together with additional supporting documents will be available starting Oct. 19 at community

Future of 'Ogle' house uncertain

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The so-called Thomas Ogle house, a focus of community concern in the past, apparently has more lives than a cat. The three-story white building at the corner of Route 273 and Eagle Run Road across from University Plaza stands empty. But its future appears as uncertain as its past.

On Sept. 16 the New Castle County Council approved the plan of Bob Evans Restaurant to build two restaurants on that site. "I never heard about a historic house," said council member Karen Venezky who voted to approve the restaurants. "That wasn't mentioned."

Newarkers retreat on warship

WHEN THE Reverends Thom Jensen and Kempton Baldridge say they are close to their parishioners, believe them. In fact, last weekend they were within 180 feet of them at all times, since that is the size of the square-rigged sailing ship, the HMS Rose, on which they embarked.

Jensen and Baldridge, rector and associate respectively of St. Thomas's Episcopal Church in Newark, led the church's second annual sail training event and retreat aboard the tallship, that left from Atlantic City, N.J. on last Thursday and arrived at the Port of Wilmington Sunday afternoon. Thirty members of St. Thomas's were aboard, ranging in age from 7 to 77, including a sizable contingent from the church's youth group and from Episcopal Campus Ministry at

ACE assembly moves Hodgson Vo-Tech students

By RON PORTER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

ON MONDAY MORNING something happened at the Hodgson Vo-Tech High School.

As students filed in to another assembly, they all sat and chatted with classmates until Principal Steven Godowsky asked for attention.

Godowsky explained how this assembly was the kick off for the schools induction of the Adopting Communities for Excellence (ACE) program, and how the students and the school were the first in the state to adopt such a program.

The ACE program is a unique collection of motivational events, leadership training retreats, teacher inservice workshops and community action projects which are meant to help students become better individuals and leaders in their community.

The multi-media presentation began with loud music as large words showed up on the screen.

The presentation dealt with problems that teens face every day: alcohol, school, peer pressure and struggling in a world that is so fast some people feel swallowed up by it.

It dealt with how adversity can either make or break you, and how with a little hard work one can accomplish anything.

Motivational was the only word to describe the 55-minute slide show that featured famous musicians like Hootie and the Blowfish and Melissa Etheridge, and showed excerpts from such films as Batman and highlights from various sporting events.

"In essays that the students had to write after the assembly, many of them wrote about the motivational factor of the video," said student activities coordinator Anne Mack.

The presentation was a tool to help the students get a better idea what the program was about and help them decide whether they wanted to take the next step and attend the leadership camp held in Maryland.

According to Mack, 140 students replied and said they were interested in being invited to the retreat.

Relying on the essays written by the students after the assembly, and taking into account race, age and class, Mack and other faculty members sent out invitations Tuesday morning to 75 students, the maximum allowed to attend.

The aim of Mack and the staff was to develop a diverse group that would best represent the school.

Many students, according to Mack, were strongly affected by one of the stories about a youth who had been seriously injured in a drinking and driving accident.

The young man has struggled to come back from an accident that almost left him paralyzed and now he speaks with other youths on the dangers of drinking and driving.

"I think they realized how much they have to live for," said Mack.

The students who are chosen based on their essays, will leave on Oct. 19 for a 24 hour leadership retreat.

WILMAPCO plans change

libraries, chambers of commerce, and planning departments in Delaware and Maryland.

The public comment period was originally scheduled for Sept. 29 through Nov. 1. However, according to executive director Alexander Taft, he has received a number of inquiries about specifics of the plan. "I have just received the documents needed to back up the plan from the consultants and they will be available in about three weeks," he said.

WILMAPCO voted at the meeting to accept the draft MTP without an amendment requested by the Cecil County Commissioners. The commissioners wanted any reference to "country roads" in Cecil County removed from the draft plan before the vote.

Council members said the issue could be "ironed out" in discussion later and voted against the requested amendment. However, they did approve an amendment accepting 'country roads' as a concept in the draft MTP without any designation of certain roads.

The 'country roads' classification refers to roadways that have been identified to maintain their rural and scenic character by restricting expansion. Cecil County Commissioners will not agree to any limitations on their possible plans for county roadways in Maryland.

Crash stills Main Street

was able to catch up to the vehicle on Academy Street in front of the student center where the BMW was stopped behind other traffic that had stopped for pedestrian traffic.

The officer, who was on a police motorcycle pulled alongside of the stopped vehicle and told the operator to pull over, at which time the BMW pulled away from the officer and accelerated northbound on Academy Street through a green light at Delaware Avenue. The BMW then reached Main Street where it struck the Subaru.

The driver of the Subaru, Deborah Bauman, 44, from Glen Rock, Pa. was attempting to make a left turn from northbound Academy to westbound Main Street. A passenger in the vehicle was slightly injured, and transported to Christiana Emergency by ambulance, and later released.

Papal visit broadcast by locals

The Papal Broadcasting Network, which was formed for the event, will broadcast the parade, choir performances, mass, sermon and closing ceremonies on Sunday, Oct. 8 from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Carper to hold town meeting in Christiana

Governor Thomas Carper will hold a Town Meeting at Christiana High School from 7 to 9 p.m. on Oct. 10. According to Carper, he will lead a meeting in each county in the state, to discuss the following educational issues:

- Expanding the school year
- Graduation requirements
- Requiring more credits and eliminating mandated non-academic courses
- Giving teachers and principals more control over the school's budget

- Allowing parent/staff councils to make key decisions within schools
- Providing school profiles
- Holding faculties accountable for improved student performance
- Planning for New Castle county schools after the desegregation case

Carper said he found the town meetings he held last spring on discipline issues to be informative and productive and he plans to use information gathered in these meetings to determine his legislative program for the coming year.

Tough new drinking and driving law passed

In an effort to deal with the considerable problem of underage drinking and driving in Delaware, the Zero Tolerance Law, signed by Governor Thomas Carper, went into effect on July 18, 1995.

Designed to complement existing laws prohibiting alcohol sales or service to persons under age 21, the Zero Tolerance Law imposes penalties and/or fines for underage persons who drink and drive.

Persons under age 21 who operate or have physical control of a vehicle, and are found to have a blood alcohol content (BAC) of 0.02% or higher, shall have his or her driving license and/or privileges revoked for a period of two months for the first offense and six to 12 months for a second offense.

Persons without driver's license and/or privileges shall be fined $200 for the first offense and $400 to $1,000 for each subsequent offense.

A fee of $143.75 and proof of liability insurance are also required when a revoked license is reinstated.

Penalties for driving under the influence with a 0.10 percent BAC and for underage possession or consumption of alcoholic beverages are also still in effect.

Russo named president of charter school

The Charter School Business Consortium announced that Ronald R. Russo will become the school's President and Chief Educational Officer effective October 3. Russo is the former principal of St. Mark's High School, located near Newark.

The consortium includes a number of the state's largest businesses including DuPont, Hercules, Zeneca, Bell Atlantic-Delaware, Delmarva Power and the Medical Center of Delaware.

It was formed last summer by DuPont Chairman Edgar S. Woolard, Jr. at the request of Governor Thomas R. Carper for the purpose of establishing Delaware's first charter school. The school will have a curriculum emphasizing math and science.

"Ron Russo brings an exceptional range of talents to the charter school," said Vernon R. Rice, a DuPont attorney and spokesman for the consortium.

"Of particular significance is his considerable background in helping set up superior math and science programs while at St. Mark's."

Rice also said that Russo's marketing capabilities would be an asset in attracting students to the school and that his experience in helping start St. Mark's from scratch in 1969 also appealed to the consortium.

"We have full confidence in Ron," said Rice, "and know that he will fully succeed in creating a school with an exceptional math/science education."

Russo, 50, spent 26 years at St. Mark's, first as assistant principal and then principal from 1977 to June of this year. Prior to St. Mark's, he was a math/science teacher at St. Elizabeth's High School and served one year as Dean of Students. Russo received a B.S. in Physics from St. Joseph's University in 1967, an MBA from the University of Delaware in 1973 and J.D. in law from the Widener University School of Law in 1980.

The consortium plans to open the charter school in September 1996 under enabling legislation passed by the General Assembly. It must file a charter application with the Red Clay School Board by October 31. Once approved, however, the school will have a board of directors made up of parents, teachers and business executives, and operate independently from school district control.

Russo will be paid $70,000 per year, a salary typical of high school principals in New Castle County, Delaware. The Red Clay School District will allocate funds to pay half of Russo's salary for the remainder of this school year. The consortium will pay the balance. Effective July 1, 1996 Russo's compensation will be paid fully by the school's operating budget.

Simpson verdict stirs local opinion

ON TUESDAY MORNING total strangers greeted each other with "what do you think?" and everyone knew what that meant.

The O.J. Simpson trial mesmerized the world for over a year and the verdict was as anxiously awaited as who shot J.R. on "Dallas."

At the Pancake Cottage in Newark, the decision was the topic of the moment at 1 p.m.

Staff, customers and diners all crowded into the bar to watch and react and then wonder what it all meant.

Sherry Medgebow of Pike Creek said "I thought he was guilty, but I'm not shocked that he's walking."

Fran Smith also of Pike Creek thought he was guilty also but "was surprised at the verdict."

H. R. Cramer of Wilmington and Don Miller of Flourtown, Pa., both employed at Bayshore Transportation, agreed they thought Simpson was guilty. Cramer stoically said "I'm shocked, shocked at the verdict. That's all I can say."

Miller said he was "completely shocked." He added, "It was a bad decision for our judicial system."

Bill and Rose Hudson of Newark differed in their views. "I thought he was innocent," said Mr. Hudson, "and I'm satisfied with the verdict."

Mrs. Hudson said she thought there might have been reasonable doubt Simpson was guilty, but didn't think it had been proved either way.

"One thing though," she said, "we've all gotten a better look at the court system. Now we know what really goes on and how things get manipulated."

Fran and Dwayne, a couple from Delaware City, both thought Simpson was innocent. Dwayne said he "was a little surprised at the short time the verdict took, though."

Dana Byrd of Newark probably summed up the feelings of a lot of people. "I couldn't decide but in the beginning I thought he wasn't guilty," she said. "I don't know how I feel now about the verdict. I'm very confused."

Byrd added, "I think it's mostly interesting how it touched everyone, black and white. I mean, look how they all came together here to watch the verdict on T.V."

Whatever the feelings or opinions, very little was demonstrated. Those present looked, listened, said little, and went quietly away.

City Council cancels scheduled meeting

IN A RARE MOVE, the Newark City Council has canceled its meeting scheduled for Monday, Oct. 9. City offices will still be open on Monday, however despite the Columbus Day holiday.

According to Patricia Bodley, secretary to the mayor and city council, "there was nothing to put on the agenda." In addition, several council members were not going to be present, so there would be a risk of not having a quorum.

"The mayor said he had no problem in canceling the meeting under the circumstances," Bodley reported.

At the second October meeting, council will hear a petition for an administrative subdivision of 11 Orchard Avenue in the Lumbrook section of Newark.

This matter was scheduled for a vote on Sept.

25, but the petitioner did not appear.

According to the application submitted by Young-Murray Realtors on behalf of the estate of J. Reese Sheats, the current owners want to reorient the site so that a single-family home can be built on a new lot behind the present lot.

Council member Irene Zych said that the owner of an adjoining property, John Wertman, was concerned that subdivision of this lot "would not be in keeping with the neighborhood." Wertman also objected, said Zych, because neighbors were not notified of the petition.

"The lot is not the right square-footage for the zoning district without a 'little jog' in it," said Zych. "Any house built on it will have to be right up against the garage (of the house on the original lot)."

According to the application, 11 Orchard Avenue is in an RS area (for single-family, detached homes) which requires a minimum lot area of 9000 square feet and a width of 75 feet.

Because of the positioning of the garage on the existing lot, the new lot can not have sufficient footage unless it is realigned in a modified L-shape.

Since both the petitioner and Wertman were unable to attend the meeting, council members decided to table the matter for the second meeting in October.

At Zych's request, Newark planning director Roy Lopata also agreed to stipulate and put on the record that adjoining landowners on both sides, across the street and within 100 feet of a property be notified in the future when a matter affecting them comes before the planning commission.

Group offers innovative care for children at night

The Chesapeake Bay Girl Scout Council is offering an innovative child care program called Campus Kids at their office on South College Avenue in the evening.

According to Nancy

Nelson, communications director for the council, the program was developed to meet the needs of parents who work late, attend classes at night, or have other evening commitments.

Boys and girls in grades K-8 can participate in supervised educational and fun activities, tutoring, homework time and scout programs on Monday through Thursday from 3:30 to 10:30 p.m. and Fridays from 3:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Parents may sign up for specific times or on an occasional basis. Fees are on a sliding scale based on income. For information, call the council at 456-7150.

Parking rates in Wilmington are on the rise

WILMINGTON -- Just as office workers are starting to crowd back into downtown, it's getting more expensive to park at some of the most popular commuter garages.

Ogle house's future uncertain

► OGLE HOUSE, from 1A

Ronson of Delaware Inc. owned the house site for a while and used it as a residence for one of their employees. The property was purchased by Delmarva Power and Light (DP&L) in 1977 and apparently was used as offices until recently.

According to Richard Cooch, a judge in the Delaware Superior Court and formerly a director of the Christiana Historical Society, the house was believed to have been an Ogle residence when Route 273 was built through Ogletown in the late 1970s.

"Most people thought it was safe after DP&L purchased it," he said. "DP&L assured us that they would not tear it down."

However, according to Robin Bodo at the Historic Preservation Office in Dover, the house was identified as the Thomas Montgomery House in the 1980s. Although it was determined to be eligible for listing on the National Register of Historic Places, DP&L apparently objected to its listing.

Nicole Porter, spokesperson for Bob Evans Farms, said that although the plan approved by the county council did call for two restaurants, the company has now changed their plans.

"We found out there is a historic site there, so we will only build one restaurant and it will be a traditional Bob Evans," said Porter. "There are no plans to take down the house but I don't know anything else about it."

Porter said Evans scrapped plans for a Mexican restaurant named Cantina del Rio, a chain owned by the company with locations mostly in the Midwest.

Cleo Foose, current president of the Christiana Historical Society, said a pamphlet compiled for the society in the 1970s described land near where the house sits as being owned by "the widow Ogle" in the eighteenth century.

According to Charles Crompton, an attorney and Ogle descendant, his family believed the house at Eagle Run Road was built by Thomas Ogle, grandson of John Ogle whose residence and gravesite were at the intersection of Route 273 and Route 4.

Whatever its designation, the house still stands for now.

Arts Alliance sets lofty goals

A little over three years ago the Newark Arts Alliance (NAA) was born. Cracking out of its shell with such ongoing events as art loops, poetry readings and dance recitals, the fledgling group has contributed much to the local community. But now this bird wants to stretch its tail feathers and soar.

"Our long term goal is to have an arts center or community center in Newark," said Sally March, local painter and co-Fundraising Chair for the NAA, who has been involved with the organization since its conception.

But the art center idea for now is a far-off goal for the small group, which has made a remarkable impact in the community in a short amount of time.

"The Arts Alliance is a real clearinghouse for artists, a really good resource for them to network with other artists," March said. The alliance brings a "real vital vivid arts presence in Newark," she added.

"We're starting out very small, but we have an awful lot of talent in this community," said Tony Felicia, a member of the city council as well as on NAA's Board of Directors. "We have an awful lot to tap into."

"Our role now is to get the funds so that we can continue to grow," he said.

The NAA's in search of a nest egg for their future. Calling on local businesses and community members, the Alliance has been requesting donations and grant moneys to help support their projects for the future.

"Being an organization that's only a couple of years old, we've been able to get by on a little money," Felicia said, "but if we want to continue..."

Money. Everyone needs it and the NAA is no exception.

Felicia said the NAA's future plans are to have "more normalized plans for each of the seasons... We'll have the money to do it and we'll have the talent."

The community has already started to help give back to the Alliance. So far this year the NAA has month and include coffeehouses with poetry readings, an art loop and bands and other performers showcasing their various talents.

According to March, the art community before NAA's creation was "disjointed." Now that they've been around the block a few years, the community has gained "a real sense of life," she said.

Hopefully, the Newark Arts Alliance will soon be able to soar.

A little respect?

THE DELAWARE DEPARTMENT of Transportation is the Rodney Dangerfield of state government.

The agency gets no respect, even when it is caught doing its job.

DelDOT bashing has become popular as more roads are torn up for repaving, widening and improvement projects. Actually, the paving equipment and bulldozers are out in force in the Newark area to make up for a decade's worth of neglect in keeping up with highway needs.

Best of all, a substantial part of the work is being done at night, thereby minimizing traffic snarls. To those of us who suffered through the interminable delays in redoing a small portion of Route 896 in Newark, this is nothing short of a miracle.

Mass transit has also made impressive strides, with newly launched bus service in the Bear area showing an impressive growth rate in ridership.

These achievements have rarely been noted for a number of reasons. DelDOT has not fared very well on the public relations front in handling complaints related to the current widening a large chunk of Route 896. It has also done little to explain that soaring highway costs and past development rule out major bypass projects that many still view as the solution to congestion.

Like other state transportation agencies, DelDOT tends to assume a defensive posture when confronted with criticism, if it reacts at all. The agency is also reluctant to toot its own horn.

The low-key stance has masked some of the achievements of the department under the leadership of Secretary Anne Canby. Canby inherited an agency that had been devastated by the felony conviction of a former director and an ill-advised state retirement program that left it with a shortage of experienced engineers.

It's an uphill battle, but if improvements can continue at the current rate, who knows? Someone might, one day, have something good to say about the agency.

WILMAPCO must get act together

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

IF THE WILMINGTON Area Planning Council (WILMAPCO) expects to be taken seriously, they need to get their act together.

At their general meeting last Thursday it was evident that the draft Metropolitan Transportation Plan, revealed with much ballyhoo and words like "revolutionary" and "visionary" a week prior to the meeting, was poorly organized or scrutinized before its release, by anyone, least of all the council members themselves. They just now noticed a few little problems.

Newark Mayor Ronald Gardner, chairman of the council, stated that he had objected, and was objecting again, to the glossy presentation brochure because it made the draft plan appear too final and definite. He also said that he could not vote for the plan, as listed on the agenda, but could only vote for a draft plan.

Anne Canby, council member for the Delaware Department of Transportation (DelDOT) said she would like to see the public comment period, scheduled by council to begin immediately after the draft plan was presented, pushed back at least three weeks so she could review it and DelDOT could be sure they could come through on any proposals in it.

After all, she said, they wouldn't want to raise expectations of actual projects unnecessarily.

Other council members chimed in saying they were glad they were pushing back the public comment period because they needed more time also.

Alexander Taft, executive director of WILMAPCO, said he had received some comments that the plan was not specific enough and the reason for that was that the plan, previewed, praised and recommended by state, local and federal officials at a Wilmington press reception, was actually not the plan but only an outline!

The details of the plan, which explain how it is to be implemented and how it works, were contained in backup documents which were not available yet to the general public but would be in a few weeks.

So he wanted to put off the public comment period also until those additional documents could be made available.

Members of the council's Public Advisory Committee (PAC) criticized the plan for not giving them a period to meet and review the public comments after comments came in. Furthermore, they wanted a public comment period after that before the council voted on the final plan.

Two persons attending the meeting complained that WILMAPCO meetings have not been held in a location accessible to mass transit.

To say the least, it looked insensitive. To say the most, it was poor public relations. One of these people said she had come on mass transit and had to cross a medial divider on a multi-lane highway to get there.

Furthermore, the same woman complained that the plan, supposed to be available at the meeting, was not. Since it was not available, members of the public in attendance had no idea what the council members were amending and voting on at the meeting.

Possibly the saddest moment of all came when Anita Puglisi, a PAC member, said she was disappointed that the news media was not giving them more coverage on this plan. Lady, I think you should count your blessings!

ON SUNDAY, I had an adventure. Now, adventure is a word used lightly, so I checked my American Heritage Dictionary to see exactly what I had had.

From the Harbor North Marina, Duncan piloted the boat cautiously and skillfully, as there were hundreds of boats on the canal that glorious Sunday. We got gas at Schaeffer's Canal House and proceeded down the canal.

Linda and Velda sat in the front of the powerboat talking and drinking coffee, while Duncan and Robey told me about the canal and the many bridges that span it.

As we neared the mouth of the canal where it enters the Delaware River, the water became a bit more choppy, but nothing violent.

I was struck by the imposing tower of the Salem nuclear power plant looming in the distance. In the foreground, fishermen cast their bait into the water from the long rock jetty. The juxtaposition was as stark as the day was beautiful.

Robey spotted the HMS Rose's two towering masts in the distance. We checked with binoculars and

OUT OF THE ATTIC

This week, our "Out of the Attic" photograph shows South College Avenue. Until just a few decades ago, the eastern portion of Newark consisted of residential neighborhoods with several tree-lined streets and homes with well maintained lawns and gardens. Through the years many of the homes were destroyed by fire or demolished due to expansion of businesses and the University of Delaware. The house at right in this photograph was located on the northwest corner of South College and Amstel Avenue. It was demolished around 1970 to make way for the construction of the University of Delaware's Smith Hall. The photograph is from the collection of Mr. James Everett with research provided by Bob Thomas for the Newark Historical Society. In an effort to provide more complete descriptions of our "Out of the Attic" photographs, volunteer historians of the society are identifying and researching the historic shots. Readers are encouraged to send old photos to the Newark Post. Special care will be taken. For more information, call 737-0724.

He told the officers of a plan to rob a local bank and asked if they were interested, von Koch said. From Bank of Delaware he expected to steal about $15,000, von Koch said.

Paying tribute to lost friend

■ Dr. Mark Hurm died on Friday, Sept. 22. No details concerning the death were released by state police. The longtime Newark resident and physician is survived by his wife Brenda Hurm, his sons, Mark S. Hurm Jr., Scott Hurm, Sean Hurm, Matthew Hurm and Morgan Hurm; his daughters Kimberly Combs and Heather Lusk; and his stepchildren Jeffrey Kingham, Bruce Kingham, and Curtis Kingham.

The following is eulogy was read at a memorial service on Wednesday, Sept. 27 at Holy Angels Church by Fr. Marvin Hummel.

CHURCHES RING their bells when the service is about to begin. Schools used to ring their bells to announce it was time. Now, I believe, many use buzzers.

Possum Park's Emergency Center's medical day officially started when a raspy throat-clearing echoed down the hall. First-time patients frequently hoped that the person with that terrible cold would not be in the next bed from them—only to discover the throat-clearer was the doctor!

The next step was to hear a deep, calm, unrushed very male voice say, "Mary, would you get me..." "Terry, would you call Dr. so and so..." "Holly, I'm going to need..."

Then—behind the first curtain, a very anxious patient would relay her symptoms to the doctor in an obviously terrified whisper. And, knowing and then using the patient's first name with the familiarity of old friends, the Doctor would say, "I can cure you!" The patient's voice—in obvious relief—came down an octave and a chat began. Professional medical instructions were mixed in with the chat about husbands and grandchildren, in whom the physician was obviously and genuinely interested.

Even before the curtain around your own little cot was pulled back, you knew it was your turn. Huge sandals could be seen looming under the curtains. In came their owner, who said your first name and gave the impression that he liked your name, and you. Before he left you, you knew the name of your ailment and what he had done about it, and what you should do about it. Sometimes, of course, there was pain and he talked you through it, then walked with you as far as his office where a phone call from a patient or about a patient required his attention.

Everything in Mark's office seemed slow—but it wasn't. It was thorough and far more than professional—but professional indeed. I have friends who attribute their being alive to Mark's being the first physician to know what was wrong with them and his getting them to the emergency room, pronto. He had an almost intuitive ability to diagnose a condition that was not yet obvious, even after sophisticated tests, spun out by complicated machinery, showed little or nothing. And, once he knew, Mark would not rest until you were on your way to a specialist or to the Emergency Ward to get your life saved.

The common wisdom is that a man is not his profession—it's what he does for a living and that a discussion of a person, particularly in a eulogy, must concentrate on the man. This adage does not work well with Mark Hurm—his personhood flowed into and through his medicine, and it is impossible to think of him without thinking of his gifts of expertise and himself to others. No one who knew him could imagine his being anything but a physician, and I remember sweating out with him and for him his acceptance in medical school at the University of Virginia. I thank God the University of Virginia accepted him and now his daughter Kim.

Everything he gave his patients and friends was genuine—Mark would not have known how to fake emotions he did not feel—his caring was part of his gift that medical insurance does not cover nor can demand. I stress the genuineness of his caring because there was also a "more" to him that friends and patients could never know. He felt comfortable loving people through and with his work, but beyond that was a wall, an aloneness those who loved him the most and knew him the best could not penetrate. Who knows what sorrows lurk in the heart of any man? Perhaps even Mark didn't know what sorrows lurked in his.

Mark's wife Brenda wanted me to tell you of my great love for the man—and I rejoice in two things: that others also love him deeply and that he knew it. My wife Peggy and Mark are the people I love the most—and I thank God I've told them both.

Mark found medicine to be his best and truest way of being Mark and his way to tell the world of his love for people. He had a passion for his vocation ("vocation" means "calling," and surely God called Mark to his vocation), and with that passion was a deep caring. These two words are significant: passion means to suffer and caring means to know sorrow. He knew both.

Dr. Mark Hurm survives not just through the blood and bone and DNA of his children nor merely in our memories. God in his infinite love and wisdom will see to that. As for Mark's being happy anywhere without being a doctor, I don't know. They'll have to work out the details. But I do anticipate hearing that throat-clearing again. As for now, I just hope and pray that at last all the walls will be down and that he dwells in the house of the Lord forever.

I had a pirate adventure at sea

verified that indeed, our adventure was about to begin.

With much jocularly, we donned our eye patches, bandanas and sashes. We brandished several nasty looking plastic swords and daggers, and Velda took out a whip in case the passengers aboard became unruly.

The Rose drew closer and we angled toward it. I raised my eyepatch with an interest in photojournalism, and Linda held up a sign that read, "Aho! Christians. Give us your gold and silver or we'll sink your ship. Signed the pirates of St. Thomas."

The crew members of the HMS Rose were neither intimidated nor amused. Duncan had been on the same trip the year before and reported that he was the only person not dreadfully ill. By the look of the crew, a similar scenario had taken place this year.

With malevolent spirits, the Rose fired her cannons at our plastic swords. We all flinched. Duncan decided to maneuver the boat to the non-cannon side.

We then yelled greetings to Kempton Baldrige, and watched the weary crew go about their chores. Some were dangling from the masts, some were tying useless sails, some were scuffling around as if about to plan a mutiny.

We decided to speed ahead toward Pea Patch Island, eat lunch, and wait to be fired upon again as the HMS Rose attacked Fort Delaware.

We worked our way north around Pea Patch Island as the HMS Rose faded in the distance on her journey to the Port of Wilmington. All that was left for us was to read a troubling diamond shaped sign. It said something like "Danger submerged dike!" And we hit it.

The boat scraped to a stop and Duncan couldn't get it off the rocks. Fortunately, our radio worked. Unfortunately, the boat had a hole and was taking on water. Within minutes, three rescue boats arrived on the scene to whisk us back to Delaware City. The rescue boat pilot skillfully avoided the submerged dike, and the volunteers told us stories about other boats and people who weren't so lucky.

We were lucky. I was lucky to have spent the day with such fine people. As the six of us crammed into the getaway Honda Civic, I noted that we had started the day as pirates and ended it as clowns.

I guess it could have been worse. But it was an adventure.

County dedicates new park in Bear/Christiana

New Castle County has dedicated a new million-dollar park on Aspen Drive off Old Baltimore Pike in the Bear/Christiana area.

The Martin J. Weiss Park, named for a deceased vice-president of Double S Companies, covers 27 acres and is expected to serve over 30,000 residents.

Weiss, vice-president in charge of sales, marketing and construction for Double S, was a driving force behind Salem Woods and the park, said company president Alvin Schwartz. Weiss died last year at age 59 of lung cancer.

The county spent $1.1 million dollars in developing the park on land jointly donated by Lewis Capanno & Sons, builders of Summer Hill I and II and Double S Companies, developers of Salem Woods I and II.

This is the largest park of its kind built this decade in New Castle County. Joining the dedicated lands of the four communities allowed for a larger park and more amenities, said Thomas Hubbard, public affairs manager for parks and recreation.

The park will have the second street hockey rink in the county as well as tennis and basketball courts, soccer and baseball fields, playground structures and picnic tables.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

No need for prayer in school

To: The editor

From: Andy Ercole, Wilmington

Demanding that we have prayer in our public schools is comparable to forcing an atheist to own a Bible. If prayer is allowed in our public schools, will our children want to pray? Will a moment of silence really be used for prayer by the children in the schools of our nation?

Are moments of silence set aside in the home for prayer? Do our children insist on saying their prayers at home when they awaken in the morning, before each meal, or before going to bed at night?

Any person who desires to pray does not need a law to make it so. There is no law that can forbid prayer. Prayer will always flourish above man's law. Like the awesome power of the magnificent ocean that hurls its mighty waves towards the shore, the divine source of the power of prayer is forever abundant and cannot be contained.

Human beings should not be fighting over the existence of prayer in our schools. If prayer is in the heart and the mind of an individual, it is unstoppable. Its existence cannot be forbidden. No law is needed to try and contain it. Prayer flows freely from within the mind and spirit of an individual. Man cannot set up barriers against it. Man has no power over prayer.

Prayer is not a form of matter that can be harnessed, packaged, bottled, or produced as a product for mankind. Prayer exists within the inner depths of every single solitary human being.

Each individual can choose to use it, abuse it, or lose it. No one individual, or mass of individuals can destroy the existence or availability of prayer. Prayer is abundant. Prayer is free. Prayer will always be available for those who sincerely want to pray.

Those among us who are fighting over the right to pray are merely chasing their own shadows. They are swimming in quicksand, and shall be devoured by the weight of their own ignorance. Prayer is a gift from God. Prayer is Divine. Man has the freedom to use it and mankind has no power over it.

Students must learn responsibility

To: The editor

From: Howard Nielsen, Newark

I went to college fifty years ago! I thought that would get your attention. It has actually been longer than that since I attended the Cal Aggie Campus at Davis, California. We had all of the alcohol problems that are around today, but no drug stuff. We also had a student council.

In those days there existed a vigilante committee that was feared more than campus police or Hogan's heroes. Infractions on campus were brought before the student council. The university also made sure that someone with the authority of a dean was present. The rules were unbending. If someone was judged for wrongdoing, they were expelled. No arrest, no court, no police record and for sure, no lawyers.

The O.J. soap opera has made us all see how ridiculous present-day legal approaches to curbing society's wrongdoings have become. An unscrupulous lawyer backed by enough money can test the law, and twist testimony and truth to the point where there stands little chance for justice.

I don't care how stringent the rules are, young people have to learn by doing and sometimes that means learning the hard way. When they discipline themselves and the penalties are unbending, they get the message.

In Sweden, I'm told a drunk driver goes to jail! No trial, no court delays, no lawyers; they go to jail. The sooner everyone is responsible for their actions and suffer preordained consequences, the sooner we will have a compatible society.

Roseville Park builds on its rich past

STORY BY MARY E. PETZAK

Roseville Park is one of the many subdivisions that make up greater Newark, but its history includes much more than house plans and lawns. Located off Capitol Trail/Kirkwood Highway at Laurel Avenue, it was one of the first planned communities in New Castle County.

"We actually think it might have been the first," said Ruth Williams, a resident for 14 years and secretary of the Roseville Park and Woodrose Civic Association. "We also think we had the first organized civic association when it started in 1948."

Roseville Park was planned during the 1920s but abandoned because of the coming of the Depression. By 1929, now-gone, curved brick walls with pillars at either end were installed at the entrance and all the roads were laid out, but almost no houses had been built.

During and after World War II, many veterans built their own homes. Garages built first were sometimes enlarged into houses. Stella Wimmer moved to Roseville Park in 1943 when her husband, later the first president of the civic association, was working at Dravo Shipyard in Wilmington.

"We moved into a house that was two years old," she remembered. "There were only three houses on the street then." The Wimmers raised six children in their little house.

When Dorothy Raymond and her husband moved there in 1947, the entire block bounded by Laurel, Maple, Chestnut and Oak avenues contained a garage, a cow, a goat, and a pile of building materials.

Raymond and her husband built their own home over several years and recorded their progress in a series of photographs displayed at a recent community day celebration on the town green. Also remembered in pictures and stories was Lucky, the Raymonds' pony who died in 1989 at age 20.

'Conversations' enthralls audience at Chapel Street

By MARTIN DUNCAN
SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

THE COZY BARROOM set of the Chapel Street Players' current "Conversations with my Father" creates the tone throughout for this engaging play about the search for identity in a home away from homeland.

The "lifetimes set up for punchlines" in Herb Gardner's tragicomedy are those of Russian Jewish immigrants Eddie Goldberg, his family, and a colorful array of supporting characters who make up the regulars of Eddie's drinking establishment.

The story is told in flashbacks from 1976 to 1936 by Eddie's son Charlie, who turns back the pages of his family's life to reveal to the audience—and himself—how the search for the "Goliva Medina"—the land where the streets are paved with gold—became a pipe dream for so many early twentieth century immigrants to the United States.

Eddie Goldberg's Golden Door Tavern or Flamingo Lounge or Twin Forties Cafe (the name of the place keeps changing to suit the changes in Eddie's dissatisfied life) is the setting as Eddie attempts to erase his Jewishness in an effort to fit into U.S. society, usually to the chagrin of his wife Gusta and the actor who lives with them, the one-man Yiddish repertory, Mr. Zaretsky. While Eddie plays patriotic music from his jukebox and changes his name to Ross, Gusta continues serving blintzes and Zaretsky reads the ominous news coming from Europe about the persecution of Jews there.

Excellent comic relief provided by Gusta's jokes, Eddie's patented New York City sarcasm, Zaretsky's theatrics, and Nick's drunken antics balances dark scenes of painful remembrance and the angry clashes which arise out of Eddie's blind determination to negate all vestiges of an old religion, language, and life which has brought him so much anguish.

As Charlie looks on from the wings, occasionally commenting on his own past, a tale of hope and desire plays out its conflict with the soul-sapping power of a United States which often demands more than it is willing to give.

"This play could be about any kind of immigrant family that came here," says director Paula

Safety a must when using chainsaw

NEWARK OUTLOOK

FROM THE STAFF OF THE COOPERATIVE EXTENSION OFFICE AT UNIVERSITY OF DELAWARE

FALL HAS OFFICIALLY arrived—a good time to review chain saw safety tips. The information for this column is from a workshop conducted by Ron Jester, safety specialist at the University of Delaware Cooperative Extension.

Chain saw safety has three components: proper training in the operation of the saw, safe work practices and regular maintenance.

Safe Operation—Although it's just common sense, the first step in operating your chain saw safely is to read the manufacturer's manual. Each model has special features or adjustments that can affect the safety of operation.

When fueling your saw, federal law (OSHA) requires that fuel tanks are filled in safe areas where no hazards exist. Don't smoke (or permit anyone else to) in the immediate area and be mindful of hot engines.

Putting the saw on the ground before starting it is the safest way. Clear the area of any debris that may be ignited by muffler sparks. Place your right foot on the rear handle, and grasp the front handle firmly, making sure your thumb is underneath the bar. Check to see that the chain brake is engaged and your body is out of the plane of the saw. Your manual will give you detailed start-up instructions.

Chain saws should be held with both hands during operation. Grip the bar handle of the saw firmly, with the thumb under the bar (on the opposite side from the fingers) to prevent your hand from slipping off into the chain. Don't use the saw to make cuts directly overhead or above shoulder level. And don't cut small brush with a chain saw—it can whip or catch in the chain, causing you to lose control.

Chain saw kickback can occur when the chain is caught on an obstruction; the saw flies back toward the operator and can cause serious injury. Push-back can occur when using the topside of the bar: the chain hits a foreign object or is pinched or caught, and the saw is propelled back toward the operator. Pull-in occurs when cutting with the bottom of the bar. If the chain suddenly stops because of an obstruction or is pinched or caught, the saw is pulled forward.

To prevent or control kickback, always hold the saw firmly with two hands. Never cut with the tip of the saw. Begin cutting, and continue your work with the saw at full throttle. If you are reentering a previous cut, use extreme caution.

Safe Work Practices—Wear proper safety gear at all times. This includes eye protection, hearing protection and hard hats. Anyone within 25 feet of the cutting operation should wear ear protection as well. Hard hats can be equipped with ear muffs and face screens to provide a total safety package.

Gloves are typically recommended by manufacturers as an added safety precaution. In addition to protecting your hands from nicks, blisters, abrasions and oil, gloves also provide a measure of protection against vibration. This can reduce fatigue.

Chaps made of ballistic fabric can offer significant protection. The fabric is made of several layers that will slow and even stop the chain. Although this fabric is not chain saw-proof, it can help avert potential injury.

When transporting the saw, carry it with the blade to the rear of the muffler and away from your leg. Shut the saw off if you are carrying it for a distance greater than from tree to tree or where hazardous conditions, such as in dense underbrush or on slippery surfaces. If carried only a short distance, the saw can be left at idle speed.

At the end of the day, drain the fuel from the tank and carburetor. Secure the saw, or store it in such a way that it will not move during transport.

Regular Maintenance—Following your manual's directions and timetable for maintenance will increase the life of your saw and make it safer to operate. Inspect your saw before each use to ensure that all handles and guards are in place and tight, that all controls function properly and that the muffler is operative.

Keep your saw free of gas, oil and sawdust. This will avert fire hazards and provide you with a surer grip. Keep the chain sharp and properly adjusted on the bar. A dull chain is more prone to kicking back and can also cause operator fatigue, because the saw is not operating at maximum efficiency.

Keep the chain brake, the brake band and the clutch drum free of grease, dirt and debris. Take your saw to a service center regularly to have it inspected and the braking system adjusted.

Additional Considerations—Don't operate a saw when under the influence of medication, drugs or alcohol, or when fatigued; never work alone; and know safe felling, bucking and trimming techniques.

One Davis family safety rule is never to use a chain saw continuously for longer than the time required to run out one tankful of fuel. This helps us avoid fatigue and the carelessness that could result. It also gives us enough wood to split and stack at one time, as well as eliminates stale fuel in the tank during storage.

Chain saw safety begins with the operator. To avoid becoming an accident statistic, never take your saw for granted. If handled with care, your chain saw can be one of your most valuable tools and give you years of accident-free service.

Ferrari returns (again) to Kimball console

IT'S A HOMECOMING for the artist. It's a homecoming for the instrument. It's a homecoming for the thousands of fans of the Dickinson Theater Organ Society. What is all of these things? The concert Larry Ferrari will perform at the console of the great Kimball Theater Organ for the Dickinson Theater Organ Society on Saturday, October 21, at 8 p.m.

"That's a lot of 'hats to wear' for one concert," I said to my source for all things dealing with the DTOS, Bob Wilhelm. As always, Bob was ready with the answer.

"It is all that and more," Bob began. "Larry was the last to perform on the great organ before it was removed from the Boyd Theater in Philadelphia for its trip to Dickinson on February 21, 1969. Larry was the first to perform on a concert on it here in Delaware after the move on February 28, 1970."

Bob then recounted the sad story of what was to have been the DTOS'

THE ARTS

By PHIL TOMAN

25th anniversary season. It came to a halt when an arsonist torched John Dickinson High School, home to the Kimball Theater Organ, and the long, difficult job of repairs and restoration began. "Now we are back, better than ever," the gleeful expression on his face reinforcing his words, "and who better to have for our October concert than Larry Ferrari?" I certainly was not about to argue!

The rest of the season looks great too. The concert after Larry Ferrari is on December 2, and features another DTOS favorite — as well as a personal favorite of mine — Hector Olivera. Hector is equally at home with the theater organ or classical music. He has the recordings to back up my claim! He has been back at Dickinson every season since his first performance in 1974. While he is exceptional on any of the manuals, his pedal work is absolutely dazzling. So is trying to understand him through his delightful accent!

A theater organist known of both sides of the Atlantic is the first offering of the society for 1996. On January 27, Simon Gledhill will be at the huge console as it rises from the pit to begin an evening of his specialty. He is truly a master of the theater organ genre.

Lyn Larson will be back with a varied program on March 9. An audience favorite has become his interpretations of "Salon Music" of the early 1900s. He also presents movie music, jazz and a number of highly stylistic orchestral transcriptions. Lyn brings a very lush sound from the soul of the mighty Kimball.

April 20 will find Clark Wilson in command of the Dickinson Theater Organ Society instrument. He is the "Homecoming Artist" for a weekend that will see a reunion of all those good people who have worked with the society since 1968. If that includes you, give the organization a call for all the other activities set before and after the public concert. Clark presents a very broad spectrum of music for the organ.

The final concert of the season is set for June 1. The evening is entitled "Trio Con Brio" and features keyboard artists Donna Parker, Jonas Nordwall and Tom Hazelton. Both organ keyboards will be in use as will two pianos and a variety of other keyboards. There will be solos, duets and, as you might image, trios. Sounds like a great way to wind up the season.

Dickinson Auditorium is located at 1801 Milltown Road between Limestone Road, Route 7, and the Kirkwood Highway, Route 2. That location is easily accessible from anywhere in the circulation area of your newspaper.

If you need directions you may call 302-995-2603. There is plenty of parking in a lighted lot and it's free — not much of that at performing arts events anymore.

Tickets for such an evening of organ entertainment are only $9 apiece.

You may order yours through the DTOS Ticket Office, 915 Wilson Road, Wilmington, DE 19803-4012 or you may call 302-995-5630.

Tickets not sold in advance are available after 7 p.m. the evening of each concert at the Dickinson box office. These concerts are frequently packed so, to avoid disappointment, order in advance.

Not to jump the season too much, Bob Wilhelm also told me the Dickinson Theater Organ will be part of radio station WNRC's Christmas programs in December.

The organ will be featured for an entire broadcast on one of the Sundays before Christmas and on a program called "The Organ Celebrates Christmas" on Christmas Larry Ferrari will be the soloist at the next concert of the Dickinson Theater Organ Society on Saturday, October 21 at 8 p.m.

Poet, librarian finds productive time

By DAVID G. W. SCOTT

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

IN THE BASEMENT of the Morris Library at the University of Delaware, poet and librarian Francis Poole goes quietly about his business. Poole, a recent recipient of a Delaware Arts Council individual artist grant for poetry, is a calm man. His story is told with slow, unassuming ease. He is a man who has traveled the world, and now calls Newark home.

With his wife, writer JoAnn Balingit, and their three children, he has settled here and finds this time in his life productive for his art. He likes the community as well as the geography.

"The location provides different kinds of experiences," Poole said. "We're close enough to the city, the country and the shore. The availability of different scenes is good for my writing."

One of the scenes he likes best is the ocean. Being an avid surfer, Poole sees a connection between surfing and everything.

"I don't want to compare surfing and poetry. I know which is more fun. They are equally challenging and there is always the possibility of a wipeout. But the analogy is going with something that is happening," Poole said.

So Poole goes with what is happening, whether it is an image, a language problem, or the sound a poem makes.

"There are many ways that a poem emerges. Sometimes it's a nagging problem of language, emotion or image," Poole said. "But there is always a sense of being dissatisfied with my work. I do a lot of revision. I think many poets make changes in their work even after publication.

"With revising, you follow your nose, eye and ear. With analysis, you follow your head. I've always tried not to analyze my work."

At the library, Poole works in the media services department with film and video. He says there is little or no connection between a poet's work and his writing. But he does shoot amateur videos with his children, and sometimes in his life the demands of work and family have come before poetry.

"If you have to put something aside, you put poetry aside. I've never felt a tremendous need to write. I never thought about it. I just did it," Poole said.

As a young man, Poole served in the Navy as an anti-submarine warfare technician. Because he was always stationed near the water, he and his buddies got involved in surfing. Poole is currently at work on a collection of essays about American writer and expatriate Paul Bowles. Poole and Bowles have known each other since Poole lived in Tangier in the early 1980s.

Poole claims that his whole life is made up of a variety of things and that all of us carry this baggage with us all day long.

His bags are full with family, work, surfing and poetry. He quotes Tom Morey, inventor of the Morey boogie-board: "You can relate surfing to everything you do."

With Poole's poetry, the subjects are as simple as waking on an October morning, and as sublime as an Eskimo's death.

These are his bags. But Francis Poole carries them with ease, and he carries them without banging them around. Each one is carefully packed, like his poems.

Poole

Rising early the last day of October

I am here to boil the water, make the tea. And when the hooded carpenters arrive next door absorb the first hammer blows.

Just offstage the sun tries on different masks: phoenix, mandrill, blood-red skull.

An owl shrieks. My empty coffin coated with dew collects its first ash.

■ The above poem is reprinted with the permission of the author, Francis Poole.

HUNGRY TO MARCH

Hunger walker Don March stopped in Newark recently during his 10,000-mile walk around the perimeter of the United States. March, who left Portland, Ore., on Feb. 23, is dedicating his walk to the plight of the hungry and Second Harvest, the nationwide network of 185 food banks which includes Food Bank of Delaware. "There is enough food in this country to feed everyone," he said. "We just need to work together and get involved with things like food banks by volunteering, donating, or finding out where to donate the food." March hopes to complete his circuit of the country by July 1996.

Side by side on a sentimental journey

By MARY E. PETZAK
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

THE THOMPSON OLDIES love singing, playing and dancing to big band music. They perform for the pure and simple joy of it.

Hayes Thompson started going to the Newark Senior Center in 1991 after retiring from M & G Convoy. "The first time I went there I thought 'there's nothing here but old people!'" he laughed. But, of course, there was also Ethel Banta.

The couple, both in their 70s, met at Valentine's Day party. It was a musical match made in heaven. "She played the piano and she liked to dance. I knew right away, I was gone!" said Hayes.

Ethel started playing the piano when she was ten. "It was mostly hymns, then," she said. Later she imitated the songs and style of movies and big band singers. Even though she never took lessons, she was widely sought to play for friends and for parties at DuPont where she worked for 23 years.

Hayes started to play the saxophone in high school and picked it up again while serving in the Navy on the U.S.S. Essex aircraft carrier. "It was a way to pass the time," he said.

About 12 years ago, he dug out his long-neglected sax and started playing with the church band at the Assembly of God Church on Old Baltimore Pike. Ever since, he has participated in two services there each Sunday and often at other churches in the area as well.

Hayes and Ethel married and began their late-life career as an entertainment duo. The piano and saxophone progressed to saxophone and electronic keyboard, complete with sound effects of applause and other musical instruments.

"At first, it wasn't much," said Hayes. "But we improved."

In the evenings, neighbors living near their home enjoy the sound of their singing and playing as they practice. They are in demand for parties, dances and socials at the senior center in Newark and the Modern Maturity Center in Dover. They have also performed in Ocala, Fla., at a nursing home and a senior center, and at the Silver Springs Resort there.

Their act includes Hayes on the sax and Ethel at the keyboard, singers from the community, and skits and jokes written by Hayes. During a pot luck dinner at the Newark Senior Center recently, they played while Myrtle Morea, an 83-year-old former blues singer, and Keith Vurgess, a retired writer for the Harrington Journal, sang alone and in duet.

When the time came for the skits, Ethel stood to one side while Hayes announced the program. Said Ethel, "He's going to act up now." When asked if she was in the skits also, she said delightedly, "Oh yes. I act up, too. I'm crazy."

It was easy to see why they made such a successful pair at music and life. While Hayes told jokes, to an appreciative and noisy audience, Ethel stood at the back of the stage wiping tears of laughter from her eyes.

"We like to have fun," said Hayes. "That's really all we do."

Music and laughter and each other—who could ask for anything more?

Hayes and Ethel Thompson, the Thompson Oldies, are filled with music and laughter as they play music in the area.

Enthralling 'Conversations' at Chapel Street

► CHAPEL STREET, from 8A

Shulak. "Irish, Italians, Spanish. "It's not just about Jews, but anyone who came here and lost their heritage. You can lose it trying to melt; you can lose yourself."

Mrs. Shulak's excellent direction keeps the play moving at a crisp pace which makes the three hours of drama seem like less. Her outstanding cast masterfully uses the whole stage and fills the theater with energy.

Carl Shulak as Nick (or Santa Claus, depending on the character's level of intoxication) teams beautifully with Barbara Higgins' Hannah to provide a one-two punch of humor and pathos. Bill Fellner as Zaretsky is uncanny in his ability to portray a character capable of outrageous flamboyance and worldly wisdom—not to mention profound faith—all in one, from one breath to the next. Liz Hutchinson's Gusta is sadly underutilized and Barry Bedwell is a delightful Irish bookie.

James Rubright is fine as the older (but not really wiser) narrator and Matthew Lovlie, Doug Davison, Curtis Myrick and Lee Breslouer are admirable in their roles as Eddie's young boys.

But it is Steve Gleich in the lead as Eddie whose performance infuses the production with its powerful ambiguity. A native New Yorker, Mr. Gleich "became the person," according to Mrs. Shulak. "He never missed a rehearsal and his dedication shows."

Mr. Gleich's characterization and mannerisms leave nothing to be desired, and he plays the role with all the energy necessary to show a man running away from himself in a lifelong fit of denial.

"But tradition survives," Mrs. Shulak says, "and you can't get rid of what's inside." It is through looking at what's inside the hearts of these characters which makes "Conversations with my Father" an enthralling drama perfect for people still asking themselves what it means to melt away into the proverbial pot.

Lucky a neighborhood fixture in Roseville

my home at that time," said Raymond. "Every Tuesday I had a story hour and of course it was easier to get the kids to come if I promised pony rides, too."

Williams and Wimmer both fondly recall Lucky as a local fixture for their children and others. Mr. Able, a neighbor on Laurel Avenue, bought Lucky for his son at a horse sale. Following the spur-of-the-moment purchase, the pony had to be brought home to Roseville Park in the back of the Able's Cadillac. When it became apparent the son was too large for the pony, he sold Lucky to the Raymonds.

"We miss him," said Williams who together with her husband purchased the field from the Raymonds where the pony used to graze.

Wimmer's father-in-law also lived in the community and helped others build their houses. During the 1950s when he was almost 90, he directed the building of his last house, later purchased by the Williamses.

"My husband was a real estate appraiser," said Williams. "When we moved here in 1981, he said it was a

Indians first settlers in Roseville

ACCORDING to an 1868 map, the town of Roseville was centered near the site of the present day Windy Mills Park off Possum Park Road and Kirkwood Highway. Settled in the early 18th century, Roseville was probably home to Indians and settlers long before Newark itself was established.

According to Francis A. Cooch, in his Little Known History of Newark, Delaware and Its Environs, an early settlement and a mill site were situated only yards from present-day Roseville Park along Capitol Trail/Kirkwood Highway. As it did then, the Middle Run creek, formerly called Muddy Run, still flows through a valley containing an old Indian trail, past an abandoned site once called Roseville Mill, under the Roseville Bridge and past Capitol Trail/Kirkwood Highway to the White Clay Creek. The mill site, according to Cooch, was "about midway between Capitol Trail and the old coach road" (present day Possum Hollow Road).

During the 1930s, the Federal Writers' Project under the Works Progress Administration (W.P.A.), compiled histories of local areas. According to their guide to Delaware, the at-that-time "abandoned Roseville Mill" was a two-story stuccoed stone structure in the "busy industrial community of Roseville" for over 100 years.

A mill for grinding meal and flour owned by Captain James Black existed near there during pre-revolutionary times. Fifty years later it still sold flour to local farmers. In 1828, a cotton-manufacturing plant was operating there which burned down following the Civil War.

good sturdy house with plaster walls."

Wimmer finds this amusing because she recalls that while that house was being built, Hurricane Diane came through and knocked down the unfinished walls. "They had to redo them all," she said. "I remember that because my father-in-law died soon after the house was finished. He was 90 and still building houses."

In 1948, the Roseville Park Civic Association was formed to deal with the problem of roads. Cars had to be parked down at the old Capitol Trail entrance because the roads were unpaved and often too muddy to travel.

Wimmer recalls one of her children arriving home from the school bus stop on Kirkwood Highway with only one boot. "I asked him what happened and he told me, 'Mom, it got stuck in the mud!'"

Following that first meeting, the men in the community built a "back entrance," including a bridge of railroad ties, from Polly Drummond Hill Road in order to get the state highway department to come in and pave their roads. "You had to have two entrances for the state to takeover road care in a development," said Williams.

The association has existed ever since, working on road signs, sewers, the traffic light at Polly Drummond Hill, snow-plowing and other community activities.

"We used to have all our mailboxes lined up on the other side of Kirkwood Highway," said Williams. "In the 1940s it was only two lanes, but we finally got the mailboxes moved because the road was widened and the traffic made it too dangerous to cross." Along the way, the median strip was installed to prevent a hazardous left turn into the entrance of the community.

Roseville Park is a community of houses but remains very much by and for its people.

Raymond still plays the piano and serves on the civic association board as she has since 1948. Younger residents in the newer Woodrose of Roseville Park community now do a lot of the work, though, according to Raymond.

"I want you to mention them," she said "Duane Pontius and Naomi Logsdon organized our community day, and Ken Hilbeck who lives in Woodrose is the current president."

But Raymond's husband plowed the streets with a blade on his truck for years in the winter. Wimmer, at age 79 takes in stray animals and can still be seen on her morning walks through the community. Her daughter now lives next to her in the house where Wimmer's father-in-law the builder once lived.

At the community day celebration, children and grandchildren of the residents climbed in the trees near where muddy boots once languished in the mud. "We'd like to fix up the point," said Raymond, looking around the small triangle of land near the community entrance. "That's one of the reasons we organized community day."

Fifty years of life and building have passed, but they aren't finished yet.

Athletes refuse to grow old

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

IT'S NEVER TOO LATE and you're never too old to be a Senior Olympian according to Newark-area participants.

Dennis Wilcott, 79, competes in golf, bowling and horseshoes, and Margaret and Owen Owens, both 62, have competed in bowling and track.

"I watched a race where men in their 80s and 90s were going around the track," said Margaret Owens. "When they crossed the finish line, everyone of them was applauded."

Anyone 55 or older can compete and many do. This year 316 seniors, including 157 from New Castle County, will be meeting in Dover on Oct. 7 for the opening ceremonies of the Delaware Senior Olympics. "We usually have a bigger crowd from New Castle County than the rest of the state," said Margaret.

Competition lasts through the 15th and includes 34 events in basketball, bowling, cycling, golf, horseshoes, racquetball, shuffleboard, softball, swimming, table tennis, track and field, and volleyball.

Margaret Owens and her husband have been competing for four years in Olympic-level bowling. "We compete in both singles and doubles," she said.

In May, Margaret, Owen and about 200 others represented Delaware in the Nationals competition in San Antonio, Texas.

This month Owen is recovering from surgery which won't allow him to bowl, so Margaret's neighbor, Lee Bailey, will be her partner for doubles.

"My husband also competes in track and he could enter the 100 meter walk," Margaret said. "But he competes as a runner, and said he said he can't do a walk."

According to Margaret, the motto of the Senior Olympians is "everybody is a winner" and that's the way it feels. "We go to participate and have fun with a lot of other seniors," she said.

The Delaware Senior Olympics will take place at a several venues in or near Dover and Delaware State University.

For information please call (302)736-5698.

Dragons ready to roar

By RON PORTER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

If you were to say Glasgow High volleyball around the first state, the people around you might look at you a little crazy.

That was before the 1995-96 team took to the court, and before the Dragons were making noise in the volleyball community.

On Monday night Glasgow took one more step towards making a name for themselves as they defeated William Penn 2-0.

"We've been really close in a lot of games," said Dragons head coach Dan Rebilas whose team improved to 5-3. "We're playing with some of the better teams around. Glasgow hasn't been known for volleyball for the past couple of years, but now the girls are very close to taking that next step. We needed this game. It was a very important game in our process of moving up the ladder."

The Dragons moved up this step very quickly taking two games and really only being threatened in the second game when the Colonials took a 8-6 lead on tough net play by junior Jina Lewis.

Lewis sent three shots from Glasgow to the floor and gave the Colonials the lead.

Rebilas called a timeout and composed the Dragons, and they came out to score the next five points behind Glasgow senior Beth Olney.

Olney used her power to bring the Dragons within one and then a bad shot by the Colonials tied the game.

Then, with Olney serving, William Penn returned and Jill Biggs scored the next Dragon point to put them up 9-8.

Glasgow then worked as a team to build a 11-8 lead with points being scored by Kristin Nau, Biggs and co-captain Nicole Sentman.

The winning point was scored by Olney when she spiked the ball to back left corner.

Rebilas said the Dragons composure is something they have worked on in practices with drills and game-like circumstances.

"We're doing more pressure situation stuff in practices and it's working," said Rebilas. "They're catching on and this was one of those games that hopefully will make them feel like they can play against the better schools, the schools that for years have felt like they could beat up on Glasgow."

Olney agrees.

"We're starting to click now," the senior co-captain said. "It's not really a new team but we're not really used to winning. We're starting to want it really bad now."

"When we played Newark they would put in their j.v. team and we really didn't get any respect. After tonight's game I think we're gaining it back."

In the first game Glasgow moved out to a quick 10-5 lead, five of the points coming with Olney serving the ball.

Biggs and Nau combined at the net for blocks and Sentman also had a hand in scoring with a couple of serves that left the Colonials very familiar with Glasgow's gym floor.

Melissa Latta and Jamie Sassaman came alive with the score 12-7, and 13-7 respectively.

Latta sent a Colonial return back with authority to gain possession back, and then Sassaman served to allow Biggs and Olney to make the block at the net.

Jackie Lee's ace made the score 15-10 and sent Glasgow into the second game with a 1-0 lead.

"Every body stepped it up a notch," said Rebilas. "They have a good chance to make some noise this year."

Don't settle for rankings

I'LL ADMIT my bias toward soccer to begin with. I've played the game all my life, from elementary school to semi-professional, and the more I see it, the more I enjoy the game.

But looking back at my auspicious glory days with the state champion Keene High Blackbirds, I have to say that the American knowledge and ability has changed dramatically. In other words, this year's Glasgow soccer team would have creamed us.

Eleven years ago, my alma mater was mentioned several times in USA Today, but that was a different era. Watching an old Betamax tape of our championship game is like watching old black and white Olympic reels of Dick Buttons doing a jump spin. Today's teams are doing triple axles.

Glasgow has exciting offensive players in David Hudson, Matt Lantagne and Marc Iacono. They have excellent midfielders named Ivan Vidanovic and Matt Hasty, and their defense is as dangerous on offense as they are at defending their goal.

Brooks Buckingham, Ralph Belford, Josh Katz and Terry Dalton are skilled players, not just the old-fashioned style "boot it out" type that we had.

What I love about soccer, without being too esoteric, is that the game revolves around a shifting center. Because the ball is in almost in constant motion, the strategy and complexity of the game changes with each pass, each touch.

Glasgow makes it difficult for other teams because they always seem to have several people around the ball giving them numerous options to advance and attack.

Coach Bob Bussiere has done a great job of not letting the ranking disrupt his team's focus.

The Dragons were sky-high against Middletown, but came out flat against Dover. They managed to avoid giving up a goal, regrouped at half time and, as junior Josh Katz said, came out for the second half thinking they were No. 1 and playing like it.

Being ranked No. 1 in the state, or No. 25 in the country is nice. It feels good, and as coach Bussiere said, it's good recognition for the state and for the school. But being ranked is only being ranked. What matters in soccer is winning every time you possibly can. I speak from experience when I say eleven years later that we won it all, and I'll always be proud of that.

There is nothing like being able to say you love a game because you had great success playing it.

Don't settle for good rankings Dragons. Play well. Win.

Newark splits in week's action

By DAVID G.W. SCOTT

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

For Newark High, it was a fortunate bounce and redirection. For defending state champions Caesar Rodney, it was another in a string of unlucky bounces.

Newark High beat Caesar Rodney at Newark's Hoffman Stadium 1-0 on a goal from Jamie Niergarth on Saturday night.

The game was an even contest, but Newark's defense was equal to every test that Caesar Rodney could muster. Newark defenders Colin Carew and Tim Conley were solid in front of keeper Eric Suro. Carew headed away a ball headed for the far post with under two minutes to play. It was the last serious attack on goal for C. R.

Coach Hugh Mitchell saw the game as important for both teams. "This win gives us confidence and pride. They are defending champs and it means a lot to beat them," Mitchell said. "For them, we were the last measuring stick of upstate teams." The loss dropped C. R.'s record to 3-4.

On Monday night, the Yellowjackets traveled to Baynard Stadium to face the No. 2 Salesianum team. Fatigue may have played a factor in the 1-0 loss. Newark had several second half chances at tying the score and even had a goal erased after a foul was called on Salesianum but Newark wasn't given the advantage. Newark's record is 5-2.

Newark High's Tim Conley jumps over a Caesar Rodney defender in Newark's victory Saturday night. Jamie Niergarth scored just minutes into the second half to lead the Yellowjackets to victory. The 'Jackets dropped their game on Monday to second ranked Salesianum, 1-0.

Doody did more than just coach

By RON PORTER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

FOR SOME basketball coaches, winning is the answer to eternal happiness.

For Newark High basketball coach Jim Doody, it was merely another one of the perks that came with being a coach.

But the most substantial, and life-long perk was the relationships which he built with his players.

Relationships, he said, that have stood the tests of time.

Doody resigned from his coaching position last week in order to take advantage of a business opportunity he said will better financially prepare him and his family for the future.

As he steps down from his position as the Yellowjackets coach, Doody said the day-to-day interaction he had with players will be missed more than winning state titles.

"I think it was those things that kept me going," said Doody. "We had success, we won state titles, but it was the positive relationships that I had with people, it was the blending of the two that made it a good experience."

Doody, who is also a economics teacher at Newark High where he has taught for 28 years, said he will remain a teacher at the school, and that the teaching profession has yielded as many incredible experiences as coaching.

"I've been here a long time and have been very lucky," said Doody. "I've had the best academic experiences in the classroom that any teacher has had."

Hodgson suffers first loss to Dickinson

By ERIC FINE

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

Hodgson's football team is off to its best start in the school's history after back-to-back losing seasons.

Though the Silver Eagles (3-1) lost to Dickinson last Saturday, look for the team to be in the thick of things in the Blue Hen Conference Flight B.

Hodgson opened the season with wins over Caravel, Academy of the New Church and Northeast (Md.).

Against Dickinson, the Silver Eagles scored a touchdown and a PAT midway through the second quarter to go up 8-6. But Dickinson took a 15-8 lead into halftime on another touchdown, and it was all downhill for Hodgson in the second half.

One loss seldom makes or breaks a season, especially after a great start. The Silver Eagles face a winless McKean team this week, a game that presents an excellent opportunity to get back on the winning track.

"It's not time to cash it in," said Hodgson Coach Larry Cyle, who is entering his second year at the votech school after winning a pair of state championships at Caravel.

"We're three and one right now, and we have very winnable games during the next four (weeks)," Cyle said, which include McKean, Bohemia Manor (Md.), Howard and Wilmington.

His players agree. "It's getting better and better every year," said Jabarr Truitt, a junior halfback who ran for 97 yards on Saturday. "Teams in our conference think they can just run all over us. Hodgson is a better program now. ...It's going to be all right. We just got to be confident."

Linebacker Anthony Marsh said maturity will be the key down the stretch. "We make a lot of mistakes (but) we have the talent," said Marsh, a senior who played on the Silver Eagles team that compiled a dismal 1-9 record in '93 and on last year's 4-6 team.

Marsh said the team needs to keep its focus, especially in the face of adversity. The players can't let bad plays or a bad series distract them, he said.

"As a senior, I try to keep them hyped. Sometimes it's hard. In the heat of the game, the ref makes a

Spartans take next step to state title

By RON PORTER
NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

One good thing about this year's St. Mark's High soccer team is they have Tom Antonelli.

That's bad for other teams because they have the unfortunate responsibility of making sure Antonelli is accounted for.

On Tuesday night in Frawley Stadium, he often wasn't, and even though he didn't score, his work-horse style of play set up a number of goals and sent the Spartans to a 4-0 win over Wilmington Christian.

"I just give it my all. It's all down here. It's all heart," said Antonelli.

That's a typical response from a relatively soft-spoken player who lets his actions speak for him.

But even though Antonelli came out to a roaring start, the Spartans still had their problems getting motivated in the first half.

St. Mark's controlled the ball most of the first half, but in the first ten minutes only attempted two shots on Warrior goalie Kyle Baker. One of those shots came with 16:38 left in the half when senior Johan Hohman had a shot to the upper left hand corner denied by Baker as he dove to deflect the ball.

Hohman got his revenge with 6:31 left in the game as Brian Clark threw in from the corner and Hohman headed the ball into the net to make the score 1-0.

Less than two minutes later, the Spartans Chris Ricevuto scored the second goal of the game from a pass across the goal mouth by Hohman.

It was a slow start, but something the Spartans have been trying to get control of all season.

"We just had trouble getting ready to start games," said Antonelli. "Are heads weren't in it some times but now it seems we're all right."

The Spartan offense has scored 35 goals in seven games and their schedule hasn't been an easy one.

St. Mark's next contest is against a highly-touted Avon Grove team.

Avon Grove is ranked 19th out of 150 schools in the South East Pennsylvania Poll, and as Spartan head coach Tom DeMatteis said each game is another step to where they want to be — state champions.

"They've only lost one game and that was to Sallies. It was 3-0 but the game was way closer than the score indicated," said DeMatteis. "We want to make sure we're ready and not sitting on this game and then come out flat on Thursday."

"We're trying to get better each game. We wanted to improve our last game and that is something that we did. We've had a couple snags along the way, but hopefully this next game will be a step in the right direction."

Sophomore fullback Dan Keane earned his first goal of the season on Tuesday in the second half.

Keane was set up about 30 yards away from the cage and controlled a header with his chest.

As soon as the ball landed at his feet he blasted a shot to the upper right corner and put the Spartans up 3-0. Hohman scored his second goal of the game when Antonelli booted a corner kick in front of the goal and Hohman headed the kick to the back of the net.

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

BETH OLNEY has become a leader.

Olney, a senior on the Glasgow High volleyball team, has transformed from a regular high school volleyball player into the leader of the team.

Just ask Viking head coach Dan Rebilas.

"She's just stepped it up a notch or two this year," said Rebilas of Olney's performance. "Compared to last year as a junior, she played, but was just part of the team, and now this year it's give the ball to Beth."

Olney and Rebilas credit her improvement to her participation in winter leagues, and judging by her 26 kills and seven aces in two games so far this week, it has paid off.

Beth Olney

In Monday's 2-0 win over Wm. Penn, Olney skied to the net spiking left and right and always had a smile on her face even when the Dragons trailed in the second game.

Olney's performance and attitude have earned her the Newark Post's Athlete of the Week.

"I like to keep a positive attitude on the court, because when you get frustrated it's harder to come back in games," said Olney after Monday's game. "I just think positive and try to pick every body else up."

Olney hopes the 5-3 Dragons will improve to the point where they can be a contender for a state title, and said it means even more to her this year because next year she hopes to go to college.

Holy Angles wins, 22-0

The Holy Angels J.V. football team defeated Holy Rosary 22-0 Sunday as they improved their record to 2-0 in the Parish Youth Football League.

On Holy Angels first possession Steve Spiese drove in from the one to begin the scoring. Eric Spiese scored the 2-point conversion on a pass from quarterback Andrew Swarter. Later in the first quarter Brad Bell recovered a muffed punt deep in Holy Rosary's territory to set up a nine-yard touchdown run by Swarter. R.T. Plumsy ran in the conversion.

Just before the half, Holy Rosary was driving for a score when Greg Collins's big hit caused a fumble which was recovered by Holy Angels' Adam Poppiti. Mark Rash also recovered a fumble in the first half.

In the second half Eric Spiese scored the final touchdown on a nine-yard pass from Andrew Swarter to make the score 22-0. Holy Angels plays St. John the Beloved next Sunday at the Delcastle Recreation Center.

Second shutout Sunday

Holy Angels recorded their second straight shut out victory by defeating Holy Rosary 12-0 Sunday afternoon at Archmere Academy.

Both teams turned in strong defensive performances. It was the second quarter before Holy Angels scored on an 11-yard run by halfback Robbie Hines.

Both Duben Word and Steve Rogers recovered fumbles to stop Holy Rosary drives. In the fourth quarter John Brennan intercepted a pass at the Holy Rosary 20 and returned it for the touchdown. Steve O'Connor added two sacks to the effort and the game ended with the score 12-0.

Holy Angels takes on rival St. John the Beloved next Sunday at the Delcastle Recreational Center.

wrong call. anything like that, a fumble, it can just all of a sudden take the momentum away from the team," he said.

But Marsh is grateful to have the chance to play on a competitive team for the first time in his career at Hodgson.

"We got a chance to be at least .500," he said. "or may be even more than that. I could see us being seven and three. I could see them going all the way next year."

In the meantime, the coach has his eyes peeled on the McKean game. "We played McKean last year...and we gave them their first victory. I can assure you that that memory in itself is going to carry us over to next week," he said.

"It's no longer good enough to play good. We had some great defensive goal-line stands and the defense played inspired for most of the game," Cyle said.

"That effort I'm real happy with. It's the times we let up that hurt. Good football games take advantage of that."

Cyle said his team played well in the first half against the Golden Rams - who will likely challenge Middletown for the Flight B crown - recovering a fumble deep in Dickinson's territory soon after taking the lead.

Young Dragons 25th in nation

By DAVID G. W. SCOTT

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The Glasgow High men's soccer team is learning lessons.

Coach Bob Bussiere finds his young team ranked 25th in the nation among high school soccer teams, and adjusting to this new-found fame takes time.

Last Saturday, it took an entire half.

Glasgow and Dover played to a 0-0 halftime score at Newark High's Hoffman Stadium before exploding for three goals in the second half. The Dragons were led by the exceptional play of two underclassmen, David Hudson and Josh Katz.

In the first half, with the ball predominantly on the right side, the Glasgow attack was slow and out of sync. After a fiery halftime oration, the Dragons began to work the ball out of the back through Katz.

Katz is a tall, slender wing full-back. He does not impress with size or speed, but he is the most composed player on the field.

"We came out lazy. Coach told us we had to pick up our intensity in the second half," Katz said after the game. "We came out thinking we were No. 1."

Dover beat Glasgow last year 4-0, and many of the Dragons remembered.

Glasgow got on the board when Ivan Vidanovic sent a through ball to David Hudson. Hudson turned the corner on his defender and cut toward the net. The last Dover back sliced Hudson's legs out from under him, drawing a penalty kick. Katz calmly converted to the right post.

The next play was one for the history books. With Dover disoriented and trailing 1-0, a direct kick was called just outside the Dover box. The Glasgow players lined up confidently behind the ball, and then began what should be called "The screaming confusion" play. All the players yelled at Hudson, who ran about as if he had no idea what to do next.

Katz chipped a perfect pass to Hudson, whose defender had relaxed, and the talented sophomore drilled a shot past the keeper to the near post.

"We yelled like we had no idea what was going on and they looked at us like we were crazy," Crazy enough for a 2-0 lead.

Matt Hasty closed out the game finishing a beautiful feed from Hudson who had a clear shot on goal.

There was plenty of bad blood in this game, not all of it between the players.

Dover coach Dwayne Henry was incensed with the officiating. They were the worst referees in the history of the game," Henry said.

"Yeah, Glasgow scored goals but you can win playing against the team and the officials." Bussiere felt the game did turn nasty, but looked to the beginning to find Glasgow's first half problems.

"We had a bad warm-up. We came out flat. I told the kids that the longer they (Dover) stayed in the game the harder it would be," Coach Bussiere said. "Everyone is gunning for us now. We're not only ranked No. 1 in the state, but we have a national ranking. This is all new for us."

Bussiere and his team had a quiet week in preparation for Saturday night's match against Garnet Valley.

There is no doubt that this team should be ranked No. 1. But they are still a young team, and they are learning tough lessons about remaining focused and enjoying their success.

Last Thursday, Glasgow beat Middletown 6-0. Two first half goals by Marc Iacono, one by Luft Ghaleb and one by Brooks Buckingham had Middletown reeling. Buckingham's goal was on a corner kick. Josh Katz sent the ball toward Matt Hasty who let it roll between his legs. Buckingham ran onto the ball and fired a rocket from 30 yards out that hit the crossbar, bounced down into the goal, and then spun out. The referee was there and called it a goal.

Ghaleb's goal was a pretty scissors-kick that beat the overwhelmed Middletown keeper.

Newark ranked third after Brandywine win

By ERIC FINE

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

WILMINGTON - Newark may have turned the corner with a 26-14 upset of Brandywine in its Blue Hen Conference Flight A opener.

The win - which elevated the Yellowjackets to No. 3 in the state - also served to mellow Newark Coach Butch Simpson who had been critical of his team's inability to put together four quarters of football.

"I saw a consistency of effort," Simpson said after watching films of last Saturday's game. "I felt that overall we realized as a team the challenge that we faced. I feel comfortable that we were prepared emotionally and that our focus was there."

While falling short of unconditional praise, his comments reflect a degree of satisfaction that has been absent in recent weeks. After Newark posted a come-from-behind win over Milford last month, the coach criticized his players for their lack of effort and inability to take advantage of early leads.

Such was not the case after the 'Jackets stunned the Bulldogs. "They had a challenge and they responded," Simpson said.

Newark faces Delcastle Friday, a team that has learned a lesson about coping with adversity. After upsetting perennial Flight B power Middletown 20-19 on the road, a group of young men attacked several players - one of whom had to miss a couple of games because of injuries.

Obviously, Simpson and company have to guard against a letdown, especially because Delcastle's defense has given up no more than 19 points thus far.

The unit has "size up front and defensive instincts," Simpson said. "It doesn't really give you much. They make you earn it. We've been running the ball extremely well and that's what they've been playing best against."

Against Brandywine, fullback Butch Patrick ran for 171 yards, including a 79-yard run down that put the 'Jackets up 14-0 at halftime.

And Newark countered Brandywine's two third-quarter touchdowns with a touchdown in each of the final two quarters: quarterback Scott Hunt's six-yard pass to tight end Sean McCullough and linebacker Eddie Robinson's fumble recovery that he ran into the endzone.

McCullough put Newark on the scoreboard in the first quarter after Hunt hit him with a 35-yard pass that he carried another 42 yards for a touchdown.

As he did against Milford, Hunt credited the offensive line, saying its performance proved critical to the team's success.

"It's got to be the line again - I didn't get sacked for the fourth straight game," said Hunt (4-8, 2 TDs, 91 yards). "Just a good win, man. We wanted this one bad. We needed this one."

The senior also praised the defense, which shut out Brandywine's passing game for three quarters.

"They stopped them when we had to stop them. We let up a couple big plays, but that's going to happen against an offense like that," he said.

"I mean they're a good team. They're a very good team. And they got a high-powered offense. ...We're looking good now."

Patrick agreed. "We needed this win to get our steam for the (state) tournament," he said. "If we lost this game, it was going to be a dogfight (to qualify). The coach told us if we get them down, we got to keep them down. ...We had to step it up another level."

Though Delcastle may not carry the same reputation as Brandywine,

Newark linebacker Eddie Robinson grabbed a Brandywine fumble and ran it into the endzone. The fourth-quarter touchdown wrapped up Newark's upset of the Bulldogs and elevated the 'Jackets to a No. 3 ranking.

the vo-tech school is in the Blue Hen Conference Flight A alongside the other "name" schools.

Or to paraphrase literary giant Gertrude Stein, "A win is a win is a win."

"I'm scared to death of every game," Simpson said. "Everything is in place for us to relax. The problem is if you do relax, everything that you've accomplished gets away from you."

Hens face true test tomorrow

By RON PORTER

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The game that everyone has been waiting for since the 1995-96 Delaware football schedule was released is finally here.

Delaware versus Youngstown State blows into town tomorrow and for all of those who have been waiting to see the defending I-AA national champions in action, this is the time.

But when you sit to compare the two teams, the excitement may fade out.

The Hens are 4-0 and display and offense Hen opposing coaches all season have called the best they have seen from Delaware.

Youngstown State has gotten off to a unimpressive 1-3 start, losing last week to McNeese State 31-3.

The Penguins start is not a reflection of the team, but as Delaware head coach Tubby Raymond has said, it's the teams they've played.

"The biggest problem is the people they're playing," said Raymond at Monday's weekly media luncheon. "That McNeese operation is extremely fast and they have a great quarterback. The same thing is true with the Stephen F. Austin team. They are both very dynamic off-sive teams."

Youngstown State's only win came on Sept. 16 when they played Slippery Rock and came away with a 28-12 win.

This game has special meaning for the players of Delaware.

"This is a huge game for us as far as learning," said Hens linebacker Geoff Gardner. "We want to gain a lot of respect nationally and this is the way to get it."

Youngstown head coach Jim Tressel called this game a test his team hadn't faced in a long time.

The series between Delaware ended in 1981 when the Penguins defeated the Hens 24-21 at Newark.

Despite the loss in '81, Delaware owns a 4-1 advantage in the series and looks to get its fifth win Saturday with an offense that currently leads all NCAA I-AA teams in rushing offense, ranks second in total offense and seventh in scoring.

But don't let that fool you, because it hasn't fooled Raymond all season.

Each week he "knit-picked" at every aspect of the Hens game and this week was no different. "We're moving into the big leagues," said Raymond. "We've had a four game preseason to get us ready. We're moving into a real critical part of our schedule now. We're Delaware head coach Tubby Raymond and the rest of the Hens will play host to defending national champion Youngstown State on Saturday.

in right over our chins right now. When people asked me about being real critical about winning, this is what I've been talking about. We were critical as a coaching staff only about those things that would not be good enough to play against Youngstown, and the best teams on our schedule. That's why we've been picky about everything.

"This is the true test to see how far we've come along."

Kickoff is at 1 p.m. tomorrow at Delaware Stadium.

Doody more than a coach

agreed that Doody's classroom coaching was a benefit to the students of academics and basketball.

Hagen said Doody contributed to the young students at Newark in a way that can't be measured. He said that Doody was involved in their total life, personally and socially. Hagen said he believes if not for Doody, many students wouldn't have made it through high school or college, and he helped them on their way to becoming responsible citizens.

One of those young people, a former player of Doody's, is Terrence Stansbury.

Doody recently got the chance to meet with Stansbury when Stansbury was inducted into the Temple University Basketball Hall of Fame.

It wasn't the basketball accomplishments however that impressed Doody.

"It was a proud moment for my wife and I when Terrence stood up there and accepted his award and gave his speech. It was good to see how he had developed into a mature adult."

Doody had a hand in Stansbury's basketball development, but he also had a hand in the process of maturity.

"Jim made decisions putting those young men first," said Hagen.

"He had strong feelings for these young people and was a positive force in the lives of many of them."

But when Doody approached

Hagen last week and told the principal that he was going to resign, Doody told him that it was time for him to move to another stage of his life. A stage that Doody never thought would come.

"When I started at Newark I thought that I would be a career teacher and a career coach," said Doody. "Now something has come along that will help me and my family financially. I'm always preaching to my students about entrepreneurship."

As far as the position of basketball coach at Newark High is concerned, Hagen said the job will be advertised within the school district.

Likely candidates for the position are head football coach Butch Simpson, Doody's best friend and assistant on the basketball team, and assistant Doug Hunt.

Neither of the two have given Hagen any indication that they are interested. The selection committee will be made up of Hagen, athletic director John Holland and two parents from the basketball program.

As for Doody, he said he has received letters and calls from coaches and past students across the state.

"I didn't expect it but it's made me feel really good. It's showed me that maybe I did make a positive impact when I coached."

The impact he made on many will be life-long.
