Many Farmers Will Be Here Tomorrow

Farmers' Day Attendance Expected to Surpass Former Years—Cattle Judging Contest

By this time tomorrow there will be hundreds of visitors in Newark. The reason—it will be Farmers' Day. This is the biggest day of the year in the opinion of many of the Peninsula farmers, and inasmuch as this year has been a banner one in most crops there is no doubt that an unusual large gathering will be on hand tomorrow to see the conditions of the crops and fruits on the Experimental Farm.

There will be demonstrations of various methods of up-to-the-minute farming given on the farm. There are crops and live stock on the farm to interest every farmer, no matter what his leading crop may be.

One of the big features of the celebration this year will be a cattle judging contest held by the members of the Boys' Club of New Castle County. The work of these lads is of great interest to the farmers of today, for they will be the farmers of tomorrow. Each boy who will take part in the contest will realize that his "daddy" is watching with a critical eye and he will, of course, do his best.

Another item that will stand out foremost in attracting the interest of the thousands of farmers that are expected to be on hand will be the fertility work that is conducted on the Experimental Farm. This work is carried on in both the grain and fruit sections and that the local method is successful and interesting is attested to by the praise bestowed on the local farm by the members of the country's foremost fertilizer organizations who inspected the local farm a couple of weeks ago.

Dean C. A. McCue is in charge of the arrangements for tomorrow and has arranged an excellent program. He has obtained as the speaker of the day Dr. Jacob G. Lipman, Director of the New Jersey Agriculture Experiment Station and a national authority on farming problems.

Another interesting feature of the program will be a demonstration in hat making by the girls of the Sharp and Welsh Tract Girls' Clubs.

There will be a poultry culling and roup treatment demonstration by Mr. Mumford and Dr. Palmer, at the poultry plant.

The program as arranged by Dean McCue follows:

10 a. m. to 1 p. m.—Inspection of field work in corn, wheat, soy beans, and other crops—Prof. Schuster, Prof. Runk and Mr. Pence.

10 a. m. to 1 p. m.—Inspection of orchards—Prof. Detjen, Mr. Clark and Dr. Adams.

10 a. m. to 12 m.—Inspection of livestock—cattle, Dr. Palmer and Prof. Baker; hogs, Mr. Stretch.

11 a. m.—Boys' and girls' cattle judging contest. In pasture lot north of horse barn.

12 m. to 1 p. m.—Poultry culling demonstration. Roup treatment demonstration—Mr. Mumford and Dr. Palmer, at poultry plant.

1 p. m. to 2 p. m.—Basket picnic lunch.

2 p. m.—Speaking from mansion porch—Dean C. A. McCue and Dr. J. G. Lipman.

REGULAR MEETING

Town Council will hold its regular monthly session in the Aetna Hose Hook and Ladder Co. house, on next Monday night.

GOING CAMPING

The Girls' Reserve, of the Y. W. C. A., is making arrangements to go camping at Reynolds's wharf.

CONNECTION MADE

Automobilists of Newark will be glad to learn that the connection of Main street and the new highway has been completed. This makes the road a lot better than it has been for several months past.

At a recent meeting of Town Council the matter of having this connecting link between the two highways was taken up and the matter was discussed with Levy Court and the result was the completion of this small stretch of paving.

REHABS' OUTING

Ex-Service Men Having Big Time at Augustine

This is a big day for the Rehabs. The members of the school left early this morning for an outing at Augustine Beach.

Many people of Newark were unaware why several automobiles were being driven around the streets gaily decorated. The former soldiers were making a regular day of it and several of them decorated their machines from bow to stern with American and service flags.

Jack Williams who has charge of the athletics at the Dugout has arranged a program for the Rehabs which will include field sports, a baseball game and swimming stunts.

AUTO ACCIDENT

A large touring car turned turtle on the Elkton-Newark Road some time early yesterday morning, just south of this town.

What the cause of the accident was could not be learned nor the owner of the machine.

It is said that there were two people in the car at the time of the accident, but they both escaped injuries.

Lecture Series Was The Best Ever

Programs This Year Attracted State-Wide Attention—Resolution of Appreciation

Last Sunday night came as one of regret to many persons of Newark. The reason was, the fact that at that time the last 1922 Evening Lecture Series in connection with the University of Delaware Summer School was given.

This was the third year for these lectures and from those who have always been in attendance it was acclaimed the best. For the past six weeks there have been a couple of these lectures held each week. The foremost speakers, musical and dancing entertainers of the country have been on the programs and the people have shown their appreciation by packing Wolf Hall to capacity on many of the occasions.

It is doubtful if the people of any other town the size of Newark have ever had the opportunity to hear such performers as were on the programs in this series. And very few of the biggest cities have ever had such a galaxy of speakers, singers and musicians in such a short stretch of time.

Too much credit for the success of the series cannot be given to the Service Citizens of Delaware, who arranged the program. Miss Etta J. Wilson, of Newark, connected with the above body, was in direct charge of the programs.

William Silvano Thunder arranged the musical programs that were presented, and some of the leading musicians and singers of these parts gave recitals.

There were orators of the first degree who delivered wonderful lectures and some of the foremost ministers of the country preached here on Sunday evenings.

That these programs attracted state-wide attention is a known fact for many automobile parties from all parts of the State were in attendance at several of the lectures. Wilmingtonians by the score attended the affairs.

At the lecture last week, Director W. A. Wilkinson was authorized by the audience to submit a resolution of appreciation and congratulation to Dr. Odell and his assistants, Dr. Copper and Miss Wilson, for the excellency of the programs arranged by the Service Citizens for the Summer School Lecture Series.

TYSON SET DOWN

According to newspaper clippings received here recently, Herman Tyson, at a recent racing meeting in one of the New England States, was set down by the judges. The cause is not given, but it is a very unusual occurrence, for Tyson is known on the tracks in this section of the country as a clean driver and has never been known to have any trouble with the judges.

Boundary of School District Being Fixed

Necessary Before Local School Bonds Can Be Issued—Hope to Start Work Soon

Newark's Board of Education is at the present time tracing the boundary for the special school district in which this town is located. This work must be accomplished before the Board can go ahead and issue the $165,000 worth of bonds as authorized by the special referendum vote taken in June.

The boundary of the district must be known so that the proper taxation can be made. There will be, as already stated, a slight increase in the tax rate to meet this bond issue. It is to fix this tax rate that the work now being done is necessary.

The intention of the Board is to have the work on the new school started just as soon as possible and although it is thought it is too late now to have the new building completed before the start of next term, the Board will probably move classes into the new school just as soon as it is completed after the school work has gotten underway.

It will be impossible to erect the entire building at this time inasmuch as the amount of the bond issue is not sufficient to cover the cost of the erection of all the building. The plans are to build as much of the new school as possible with the money realized. It is thought that this will take care of the High School classes and possibly one or two grades of the grammar school.

The remainder of the school will be completed when the local Board receives the $225,000 promised by the Delaware School Auxiliary. Just when this amount will be available is not known but it is probable that it will not be long now. When the school is completed Newark will have a school building equal to any on the Peninsula.

Presbyterian Church Work Is Started

Congregation is Raising $6,000 to Carry On—No Sessions Until September 9th

There will be no further services in the Presbyterian Church until Sunday, September 9th. This announcement was made this week by Rev. H. Everett Hallman, pastor of the church.

This is due to the various repairs that are being made to the church at the present time. It was the hope of the pastor to be able to continue the Sunday School services in the basement of the church, but when the work on the repairs was started on Monday it was evident that it would be impossible to continue the Sunday School, therefore all departments will be closed until the above date.

The work being carried on at the edifice will cost about $6,000. One feature of the work is the fact that the church will not go in debt in view of the extensive repairs being made. The money to cover the cost of this work is being raised by a special campaign and it is thought that the pledges of the congregation will amount to enough to pay for all the work now underway.

The contractors on the repair work are: Electrical, T. R. Jacobs, of Newark; plumbing and heating, Daniel Stoll, Newark; roofing, Fulmer & Roberts, of Wilmington; carpets, John Wanamaker, Philadelphia; and wall decorating, Seaburg & Blackwell, Wilmington.

The lighting system of the church will be greatly improved on. For some time past the former system has been unsatisfactory. There will be hot-water heat installed; another big improvement. The carpet will be of colonial velvet and will add much to the interior of the church. The redecorating of the walls of the church will also add much to the appearance of the building.

STILL ILL

C. A. Bryan, who has been ill for some time, is showing a slight improvement.

Firemen's Carnival Bigger and Better

Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Members Getting Ready for Yearly Event

There will be no bill board posters, advertising it as the "Biggest Show on Earth," but it will be bigger and better than ever, this is the way E. C. Wilson terms the carnival that will be staged by Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Co. this year.

The firemen's carnival is always a gala week here in Newark, and the various committees in charge of the affair this year claim that the people of this vicinity "ain't seen nothing yet." If this is the case there must be some real surprises in store, for years past the local carnival has held the reputation of being one of the best of its kind in the State and hundreds of out-of-town visitors are always in attendance.

August 26th to September 2nd, inclusive, are the dates set for this year's carnival, which will be held at the usual site on Academy street. The site is next to the new firehouse of the company and it was the hope of the firemen some time ago that the carnival could be held this year in connection with the official opening of the new home, but this will be impossible.

"Cliff" Wilson has had charge of the local carnival for a great number of years and he has not left a stone unturned to make this year's affair surpass any of former years.

With excellent roads leading from Wilmington and other points north this year it is expected that many more persons from that vicinity will attend the local carnival.

Mr. Wilson announced this morning that the various committees that have been appointed will be announced next week.

Large Audience Hears Glenn Frank Speak

Editor of Century Magazine Makes Big Hit in Final of Lecture Series

The most thoroughly representative audience of the entire session, including prominent Delawareans from a radius of many miles, greeted Glenn Frank, editor of the Century Magazine, last Thursday evening, the last of a series of brilliant speakers at the University of Delaware Summer School. Preceding the lecture a motion expressing the appreciation of the community for the 1922 Lecture Series which is universally pronounced the most popular yet given, was adopted, and the Director requested to express the sentiment of the meeting to the Service Citizens of Delaware.

Mr. Frank, in one of the strongest lectures ever delivered from a local platform, said:

"There is one idea that dominates my entire thought and thrusts itself into the foreground at all times; it is the idea of the possibility and probability of a vast spiritual renaissance of Western civilization, the roots of which I believe are even now set deep in the soil; a renaissance which by courageous leadership may be brought to fruition. I want this evening to trace the genesis of that idea in my own mind.

"For three or four years," Mr. Frank continued, "I have been increasingly impressed with the literature of despair that has appeared from our presses. I have investigated the mass of material that is crowding our bookshelves very thoroughly, and boiled down, my conclusions amount to this: this literature of despair is written by men under the inspiration of one or all of five distinct fears. I shall call them the five fears of western civilization which have been leering over the shoulder of the writer and turning him into a prophet of doom.

"First there is the biological fear, the basic assertion of which is that the best blood of the Western World is turning to water. Lothrop Stoddard's 'Rising Tide of Color,' is an illustration of this sort. We find these books coming from men in whom the scholastic tendency and the sense of

NEW CHAIRMAN

County Republican Committee Elects Harry H. Billany

Following the death of Charles Patterson, chairman of the New Castle County Republican Committee, the body met on Saturday afternoon at the Young Men's Republican Club, 810 King street, Wilmington, to elect his successor.

Harry H. Billany, fourth assistant postmaster general, was elected to fill the office.

There was a contest for the post, Mr. Billany being opposed by Thomas W. Miller, Alien Property Custodian. The former won out by virtue of the rural vote, the city of Wilmington being about equally divided on its voting.

This Year's Crops Better Than Last

Reports Show Some Bumper Productions—Apples and Potatoes Unusually Good

County Agent Bausman has compiled the present status of the crops of Delaware and this report shows that the crops this year are exceptionally good with few exceptions. It is claimed by many fruit growers that this is the best year they have ever experienced and a neat profit is finding its way into the pockets of those having orchards.

The apple crop this year is unusually large, larger in fact than for many years. Both the quality and yield of the harvest apple crop is excessively large, is the manner in which Mr. Bausman terms the crop. He points out that the late frosts killed enough blossoms to have a thinning effect, thus improving the quality of the fruit. It was feared at first that the heavy frosts that prevailed in this district for several nights would do excessive damage to the apple crop but when the trees started to bear this fear was eliminated. At the present time, according to the County Agent, hundreds of cars of Delaware apples are now going into the markets.

Just the opposite from last year, the early potato crop both in yield and quality seems to be good. This condition is due to the abundance of spring and summer rainfall. There was quite some complaint of the amount of rain that fell for several days this summer but its good effect can be seen in this year's potato crop. Last year the early potato crop was practically negligible due to the drought.

According to Mr. Bausman it is too early yet to predict what the yield of corn will be, but present indications are that it will come near that of last year which was a bumper crop. There is yet time for the elements to cut the crop short.

Various parts of the State report differences in the yield of the peach crop. In Kent county the peach growers are anticipating a heavy harvest. In other parts of the State the crop was materially reduced as a result of the heavy frosts. The yield and quality where the orchards were not affected by the frosts is reported as very good.

Although the quality of the wheat crop for the year 1922 was in most cases only fair, yet the yield is good, materially exceeding the yield of last year. A yield of thirty bushels to the acre for an entire crop has not been an unusual report this year.

Due to the heavy rainfall the pastures have been exceptionally good, which has been an important factor in keeping up the production of dairy herds.

With few exceptions, like the failure of the pea crop in the southern part of the State, and the rather late start of one or two other crops, it has been an unusually good growing year to date. This is welcomed when one thinks back to last year and of the poor crops that were produced due to the elements.

WORK PROGRESSING

The foundation and the laying of the ground floor and basement of the new firehouse of the Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Co., have been completed.

Co. E Encamped With State Troops

Left on Special Car Early Monday Morning—Among First in Camp

About fifty members of Co. E, Newark's finest, left early Monday morning for Camp George W. Sparks, where they will be encamped for the next two weeks. The marching of the local company from the Armory to the Pennsylvania Railroad Station brought back memories of '17. But the memories were not near so grim for it was known that the khaki clad boys were not marching off to battle.

The local company is a member of 198th Artillery (C. A. C.) Delaware National Guards.

Co. E had a special car on the train that leaves here at 8.37 (daylight saving time). The company was transferred at Wilmington and went to New Castle from which point the soldiers were carried by trolley cars to the camp.

In all there are about 500 men of the Delaware regiment encamped at the rifle range and everything was was hustle and bustle on Monday as the members of each company arrived. Early Monday morning before the arrival of any of the soldiers the rifle range resembled just a vacant field but before sunset it was transformed into a tented city with its many streets and avenues and took on the grim like appearance of the many army camps that existed throughout the country during the world war. Colonel Harry W. Stark had charge of the laying out of the camp. Assistant Colonel Stark in the training work are Captain Hodgins, Captain Ruddle and Sergeant Walter J. Waters.

The Newark unit was among the first to arrive at camp, reaching there shortly after nine o'clock. As each unit arrived it was repaired to the sector of the camp designated for its use.

The hospital unit of the regiment was established at the head of the regimental thoroughfare. The regiment band of twenty-four pieces also accompanies the soldiers. Major George J. Schultz is in command of the first battalion and Harry B. Van-Seiver is in charge of the second battalion.

ROAD WORK

With work progressing rapidly on the new Baltimore and Ohio railroad bridge near Lumbrook, it will not be long now until the road contractor can lay the concrete under the structure and in a short time the new road into Wilmington will be opened in its entirety.

DEMOCRATIC WOMEN

Miss Elizabeth E. Wilson, county committee woman, has called a meeting of the Democratic women of the western district of White Clay Creek Hundred for Thursday evening, August 3rd. The meeting will start at 8 o'clock daylight saving time, at the home of Mayor E. B. Frazer, on Main Street, Newark.

ANNUAL SHORT COURSE

AUGUST 8TH TO 12TH

The annual short course for members of boys' and girls' clubs will be held at the University of Delaware from August 8th to 12th inclusive. State Club Leader A. D. Cobb, who is arranging the plans for the State club week expects at least 50 boys and girls from all parts of the State who will remain here during the entire course. They will have sleeping quarters in the University dormitories and meals will be served in the Commons. There will be special programs for both the boys and girls. The boys will be kept busy with field work and inspecting the plots at the experiment farm. During the week a fruit preservation expert from Washington will give canning demonstrations and also a talk to the girls.

IMPROVEMENTS

Improvements are being made to the front of Ira Kilman's restaurant on Elkton road.

Story of a Delaware Artist

Review of the Life and Work of Stanley M. Arthurs

Written by VIRGINIA FIFER and delivered at the Commencement Exercises at Caesar Rodney School

Among the citizens of Delaware whose good works have won for them a lasting fame, we find that Stanley M. Arthurs deserves a place in the front ranks. The little town of Kenton is the birthplace of this painter whom nature has endowed with rare artistic genius. It is perhaps from his father, Joshua Arthurs, that the son partly inherited his talent. Joshua Arthurs came from a Delaware family, and was a merchant and grain dealer in Kenton. His store became quite famous for its artistic signs and the unique arrangement of the boxes, done by Mr. Arthurs himself. When a boy, the father made a drawing of the "Great Atlantic" in the act of laying the Atlantic Cable. This drawing is rendered more interesting by the fact that it was made as a result of ideas obtained simply through reading the history. The mother of the painter was Nancy Wright, a descendant of famous New England and New Jersey families. There is also an artistic strain on the mother's side, although none of the family became famous. It is not surprising, therefore, that the son should possess such creative genius, which really seems to be a family trait, for we find that Susan Arthurs, his sister, has proved to be quite a successful artist in making magazine covers and advertisements.

Thus it was, endowed with worthy ancestors and a singular talent, that Mr. Arthurs began the development of his natural gift. He began to show his passion for making pictures at an early age, and was sometimes found decorating the out-door buildings with painted pictures of his favorite horses and pets. Today, a colored image of a rooster may be seen on the barn-door at his old home in Kenton. Although his talent was so plainly seen, his father, knowing the difficulties of an artistic career, advised him to take a course in Goldsey College, in order to obtain some training along business lines. Accordingly, after completing the work at the public school at Kenton, the son took up his studies at Wilmington. Soon realizing the mistake, however, Mr. Arthurs went with his father to make arrangements with Mr. Pyle to take up the study of art at Drexel Institute.

After studying for two years at the Institute, Mr. Arthurs received a scholarship for two years at a Summer School established by Drexel Institute and conducted by Mr. Pyle in order to keep some students under his supervision during the summer months. This school was situated at Chadds Ford, a beautiful, hilly country—the scene of the Battle of Brandywine. This place, abounding with historic interest and beautiful scenery was a most suitable spot for the study of art, which was carried on in the open by the students of the school. After leaving this school, the artist continued his study in a smaller class in Wilmington under the instruction of his chosen teacher.

Mr. Arthurs is now, a comparatively young man, living in Wilmington. He is quiet, of medium height, and has engaging dark hair and eyes. The strong, masterful expression of his face soon convinces one that he is a man of great character.

The quantity and quality of this Delawarean's works are truly surprising. He really began his career when a boy, by furnishing drawings for a farmer's Almanac which is widely known in Delaware. His first important work, however, was a Thanksgiving Cover for Harper's Weekly, showing the town crier reading the Thanksgiving Proclamation just outside the Village Inn. Since then his works have appeared in all the leading magazines of the country. A great number of Mr. Arthurs' works have been illustrations for historical and other articles by different American Authors. He illustrated the "History of the War of 1812," by A. T. Mahan, as well as General Gordon's "Memoirs of the Civil War," and many other important historical works which were published in Scribner's.

The "Special Edition of Bigelow Papers," by James Russell Lowell, and the works of Turgeneff, appearing in Scribner's, were illustrated by the artist. The subject of this sketch also wrote and illustrated two articles—one on the "Old Boston Post Road" and the other one a series depicting "Early Steamboat Days." Both of these interesting sketches were published in Scribner's. Along with his other work, Mr. Arthurs helped Mr. Pyle in several historical mural paintings for the Hudson County Court House, Jersey City. He then began to make mural paintings of his own, in which line of work he has been so successful that he now has pictures in the Dover State House, in the State Capitol at St. Paul, Minnesota, and in other well-known buildings. Among his more important works, are—a painting in Delaware College, called the "Landing of De Vries at Zwaaendael"—the pictures showing the soldiers leaving the Dover Green which is in the Senate Chamber—and the mural in the library of the Dover State House, called "The Crusaders." The latter is a scene portraying the American soldiers in France. It is taken from the late war, during which period the artist spent several months in France securing the necessary data for the illustrations. His most recent production is a picture depicting the meeting between General Grant and General Lee outside of Appomattox on the day after Lee's surrender. The Delaware troops, which were part of the Army of the Potomac, were there at the time, and are pictured lined up in the background, eye-witnesses to this great conference. It is to be hung in the House of Representatives at Dover.

There are certain characteristics of the painter which are evident from his works. One of these is his originality which was notable even in his earlier attempts. The Thanksgiving cover and his numerous illustrations are good proofs of this characteristic. Then too, Mr. Arthurs seems to have a passion for truth-telling, being always very careful to learn all there is to be known about a subject before he undertakes to put it on canvas. Once, when painting a picture, called "The Meeting of the Ways" (showing automobiles and stagecoaches meeting, with the autos about to crash into the stagecoaches) the artist, in order to be as accurate in detail as possible, went to Old Inn Warwick, New York, to get a piece of an old stagecoach which was held by Mr. Ben Sayer, a relic collector. In his late picture, "The Crusaders," as was said before, Mr. Arthurs went over seas to see our boys for himself in order to get the truth of the situation. Again, in his last picture for the State House—a scene from the Civil War—the painter began his work, only after making a close survey and study of the scene around Appomattox, Virginia, where the surrender took place. While there, Mr. Arthurs also compiled much data, which was secured from residents of the district.

Thus, we find that accuracy is another of his characteristics. His works show him to be careful to have every small detail true to life, and in its right place. Each object is brought in so as to add more to the reality of the scene. The picture of the soldiers leaving the Dover Green is a good example of this. The uniform of the soldiers, the women's dresses, the old-fashioned shoes, the hardy, determined-looking men, the cut of the men's hair—all these are vivid suggestions of Revolutionary times.

Also, Mr. Arthurs has chosen realistic scenes—scenes which appeal to the truth-loving people of today because they portray things which have actually happened and are practical rather than fanciful. Moreover, his pictures are usually war scenes; pictures that are full of action, and which, with their vivid colorings and correctness of detail, accord to Mr. Arthurs the honor of being a historical painter. Furthermore, one might add that the artist is a distinctly American painter since his scenes are taken from American history, and are of such a nature as to make them of vital interest to all American citizens. For example, his picture in the Senate Chamber is one that holds a certain interest for every citizen of Delaware, while the one in the Library, "The Crusaders," is one of which every American citizen should be proud. It brings before us the reality of the Great War as nothing else can do, while the beauty and artistic finish of the picture make one feel that its author is indeed a genius. In addition, the fact that Mr. Arthurs has received all of his training in American schools and under American instructors gives us another reason to feel that he belongs entirely to us, and to be proud that such a man is a son of Delaware.

Eradication Work Proving Successful

State and Federal Governments
Helping Cattle Owners—10,000
Animals Under Supervision

Tuberculosis eradication work was authorized in Delaware in co-operation with the Federal Government by the extra session of the Legislature in 1920, when an appropriation of $50,000 per year was made to pay the veterinarians and to pay indemnities for cattle destroyed. The State Board of Agriculture has two men employed in the field cleaning up tuberculosis, and the Federal Government has also two men, the latter being employed largely in the upper part of Kent County and New Castle.

The work has become very popular among all classes of cattle owners. It is especially approved by the man with one cow and those who supply the public with milk and take pride in selling only clean, pure milk. So popular has the work become that the Kelly-Lester people at Clayton have recently taken an active interest in the matter and have induced all the patrons of the shipping station at that point to have their cattle tested in order that they may sell milk from tuberculosis-free cattle. This is a good sign of public sentiment when they require not only sterilized milk, but milk from cows that are perfectly healthy. While there is no doubt but that the process of sterilization kills the germs of tuberculosis, at the same time, it is of some injury to the milk, and when all the shipping stations as well as private dairymen have their herds clean, it will mean much to the health of the people.

The State Board of Health requires that all raw milk must be from tuberculin-tested cows and depends upon the State Board of Agriculture to see that all cows from which milk is sold are properly tested. No man wants to buy the milk of a tubercular cow and much less does the wise farmer want his family to use it.

Dr. Gallagher and Dr. Birmingham are now retesting the herds in Sussex County, and occasionally find an untested herd that was missed when the first test was made. In a short time, they will have covered the entire county. Most of the herds are now free from reactors and when the work is done, it is believed that there will hardly be one left in the county. This is a permanent condition of affairs, farmers having to have their cows tested only once a year and being careful not to introduce any untested animals.

In the state up to the present time, there are nearly two thousand herds and over ten thousand animals under supervision. One hundred and twenty-five herds are fully accredited. From any of these accredited herds, animals may be shipped to any part of the United States or Canada without retesting. Breeders can buy of men who have accredited herds with full assurance that they will not get tubercular animals. The entire herd must pass two annual tests in order to be accredited.

"NANOOK OF THE NORTH"

Was First Shown in Frozen Arctic to Eskimos Seen in Pathe Play

When you will see "Nanook of the North" creep upon the mighty and dangerous walrus, spear him, slay him, and Nanook, his wife and tiny children eat him raw, you will be surrounded by the comfort and luxury of the Opera House, where this marvelous, true life story of the barren snowlands will be shown Friday and Saturday.

But the first time this thrilling episode in the story of "Nanook of the North" was ever projected on a screen and witnessed by an audience was 800 miles north of civilization, on the east coast of Hudson Bay. The theatre was a shed belonging to a fur post. It was about forty feet long. On the walls and rafters hung bear and fox skins to dry; deer horns and dog harness. The odor would nauseate the unaccustomed.

On the rough wooden floor squatted Eskimos—men, women and children. The projection machine was not in a fireproof booth—it was a portable machine set upon a table. It was run by a gasoline engine. The noise was ear-splitting.

It was the first time the Eskimos had ever seen a motion picture. But it was not the fact that they were witnessing anything so novel as a reproduction of themselves in action that interested them most, as it was the walrus hunt itself. They forgot it wasn't real, and shouted directions and warnings to their pictured selves.

"Nanook of the North" is a Pathe feature, photographed in the frozen land of Hudson Bay by Robert J. Flaherty, mining engineer and explorer. It is a real and true drama of the life and love of the Eskimo.

Farmers' Day Speaker Tells Of Europe

Dr. Lipman Who Will Be Here
Tomorrow Relates His Experiences

Dr. Jacob Lipman, who will be the speaker at Farmers' Day, tomorrow, director of the New Jersey Experimental Station, located at New Brunswick, N. J., who represented this country at a farm conference in Italy a short time ago, visited several European countries while abroad and he reports conditions there as follows: "The mere sending of food is not going to suffice for the starving people of Russia. Nor will it be sufficient to send seed for them to sow, because they will eat the seed. What Russian peasantry needs is the resources to provide tools, livestock, seed, fertilizer and, above all, competent men to supervise the planting and culture. The question is whether or not the bolsheviks are going to stand for such interference from outside. It is said that more people are going to starve this year than did last."

This is the interpretation of Russia's agricultural problems which Doctor Lipman gave on his return June 2 from a two months' visit to European countries, during which time he acted as United States delegate to two international conventions, as a delegate from Rutgers College to the 700th anniversary of the University of Padua, studied agricultural conditions in six countries, delivered seven or eight lectures in French and English, visited several experiment stations, was elected on a number of important committees, was chosen editor of the Internationale Mitteilungen fur Bodenkunde, was awarded a medal by the French Academy of Agriculture, before whom he spoke, and found moments between times to go down into a potash mine, see some Swiss scenery, ride in a gondola and visit the castle of Padua where Napoleon once lived.

"Although I did not visit Russia," Doctor Lipman said, "I talked with Professor Floroff, who is teaching in a university in the black soil belt, one of the richest agricultural sections of Russia. Conditions there, he said, are in a bad way, because of the fact that the big estates have been turned over to the small farmers, who have no equipment and no knowledge.

"As for French agriculture, the peasants are coming back very slowly, but are unwilling and unable to spend the necessary amount of money for fertilizers that will give them a good crop. The most promising sign in French farming is the co-operation between small farmers—syndicates, they call them—whereby the men are getting together and buying co-operatively. This will bring back prosperity in time, but it will take time."

Upon landing Doctor Lipman went to Paris, where he looked into the subject of air nitrates, and from thence to Berlin, where he found that the nitrogen situation had made great progress since 1919, when he last visited that country.

"Germany needs about 500,000 tons of nitrogen each year for fertilizing purposes. One of the large plants has a capacity of about 300,000 tons and by August will have increased its capacity to 350,000 tons. From by-products about 60,000 tons are being manufactured and 60,000 more are made as cyanides. Of course, none of this is supposed to be exported, but many manufacturers have yielded to temptation and some of the nitrogen is going across into Holland."

Get Registered on Saturday

Next Saturday, August 5th, is Registration Day. Any one qualified to vote at the November election is eligible. This is not merely a political privilege but a serious civic responsibility. No citizen, who truly senses this duty, will fail to fulfill the obligation of expressing, by ballot, his desire and opinion.

There is unrest, social, economic and political. Many of us are disheartened, tired, even disgusted with political practices. Recognizing the odds, we are sickened often with the whole system. But after all, conditions existing are of our making or by our consent. In the final analysis, we voters of the rank and file are responsible. And this is serious when the remedy is so easily attained.

The procedure is simple. Let every man and woman get registered on Saturday next. This qualifies for voting at the primary election for delegates to the State Convention. It is in the power of the voter to select the men or women to represent the district and to further understand for whom and for what they will vote. Isn't that worth while? Isn't that all the power needed? The men who are placed on the ticket can be those of the voter's choice or those selected by some back-room conference. Which do the voters want? The men or women who will represent us in Congress, in the State or in the County depend on our interest and action. If we neglect the duty and opportunity, existing conditions will prevail. We can have the kind of government we want. Here is the wonderful chance of the women. Not associated with feuds and factions, they can, if they only sense their power, bring into the political life of this State—the ideals and practical honest common sense so necessary in a Government such as ours.

Get registered on Saturday and see that others do. Let us be real citizens of our State.

Summer School in the Movies

Last evening witnessed the last public event of the Summer School in the presentation of the Motion Picture, showing the development of Public Schools in Delaware. And an interesting event it was, too. Those responsible for the production of the picture are deserving of more than ordinary praise. The spirit of the occasion was truly Delawarean. Views from Sussex brought cheers and rounds of applause; Kent scenes brought songs and quickly composed yells, and New Castle screamed delight when Newark Parade and Field Day on Frazier Field came into view.

Too bad that every citizen of the State couldn't see it. We were happy to see Ex-Governor Townsend walking in the Flower Gardens along duPont Highway and mingling with the School children at their annual Field Day Play. He should feel happy, indeed, for after all the stress and strain, after all the misunderstanding and criticisms, his dream and life's ambition is coming into realization. Education in Delaware is on the march.

Altogether the work of the School officials and teachers in producing this picture will have its effect for advance. With Will White as Song Leader, the spirit of Delaware found itself last night—and those who were absent missed something truly worth while.

A New Day in Newark

Glenn Frank in his wonderful lecture on Thursday evening expressed the hope and belief that we are now living in the morning hours of a New Day. What an inspiration such a man would be, living in our community! Then Newark would come into a realization of her opportunities and her citizens would begin to sense her obligations. There would be new pavements on Main Street, planting of trees, making of playgrounds. There would be a park for picnic and recreation, community bands and singing. Social influence and prestige would be judged by back yard conditions as well as automobile display. Citizenship would be standardized by public opinion and the man would be judged by the "weed condition" of the real estate holdings as well as by his card playing ability. Oh, if we who live here, could just once appreciate fully the wonderful setting that Nature has given our town and do individually and co-operatively, just such a little work—what a wonderful place we would have! It would be a Renaissance indeed. And all so delightfully easy of realization.

Where God's Country Is

When a man is far away from the place that he has lived in for years, and his heart yearns for home, he says: "Some day I am going back to God's country."

Whether it is some little country town where the only lights that glitter down the lane, come from the windows and the only noises are the lowing of the cattle in the fields and the sighing of the winds through the trees, it is God's country for the man who knows that there are faces there which will light up at sight of him and hands that will grasp his own in open friendliness and affection.

Or, if it is some great city where countless, thoughtless thousands squirm and twist in their endless rushings to and fro, it is past all speaking dear to the man who calls it home.

All over the nation men say that they live in God's country or that they used to live there and are looking forward to their return.

God's country is America, throughout its length and breadth. But, to the individual, God's country is where the home is and where the friends are. In all his wanderings he believes it. There, he knows, are the sweetest girls, the bravest men, the bluest skies, the reddest roses. There he finds the peace that passeth understanding near the things that live.

Horse Sold

Newark's tax collector has been joked with many times about his "steed." Thirty-three, but his friends must stop now for the horse has been sold. Old Thirty-three it is alleged was a "race horse" but its racing days evidently ended before Mr. Colmery acquired it.

It may be that the tax collector will purchase a speedier "nag" this time.

LARGE ATTENDANCE HEARS FRANK SPEAK

news predominate. Second, there is the psychological fear which fills many with a dread that that saving insurgency of the individual will be lost in the hurly-burly of group endeavor. Third, the economic fear, with which we are all most familiar. Fourth, the administrative fear which possesses those who feel that the very magnitude and complexity of modern civilization have outstripped the administrative power of mankind; and fifth, the moral fear, which includes all this flab-dub about the younger generation that is all around us.

"It is but natural," Mr. Frank declared, "that all this literature should result in a mood of despair. The public is mobbing the bookstores to buy these books.

"But side by side with this literature of despair there exists a literature of hope. Unfortunately, however, the literature of despair has received more advertising and we know about it. This is true because it was consciously written and plainly labeled as a literature of despair. Our real literature of hope has not been consciously written, for we may be sure we are not to find it in the spirit of Polyanna or in a dance around the world with Peter Pan. The real literature of hope is being written by the men hidden away in laboratories, by men with the itch to know; it will be more or less a by-product of this type of men. Certainly the work of such as these is filled with spiritual concepts which are unrecognized by the great mass of people. It is these creative and as yet unused thoughts which will make up the literature of hope of our Western civilization.

"The literature of hope," Mr. Frank continued, "is a literature of raw materials upon which the world should be drawing conclusions. One of the important offices of the journalist is to go around and ferret out the ideas that the Deweys have produced and to translate them into the words of the street. The men who can do this are going to be the engineers of the new Renaissance, which will make it possible for the world to avoid a new Dark Ages of the future. If the creative scholar attempts to do it he will squander his power; this job is the part of the journalist. Today we stand in desperate need of the evangelism of the scholar but the evangelist must be the servant of the scholar.

"Personally I believe," the speaker declared, "that the next twenty-five years are going to be very important and very challenging years, years that will mark a very definite turning point in human history; years that will be either the beginning of a new Dark Ages or the morning hours of a new Renaissance. Before the war the world was undergoing a slow process of paganization. Germany caused the war we say, but Germany caused the war I believe the historians will tell us, not because of any last minute capricious prank of a mad Kaiser, but because in Germany the process of paganizing the world came to a head first. Germany was the Samson that pulled down the temple but the whole temple was rotten. For a time at least during the war the world caught a glimpse of great principles of right: the application of the moral law to public affairs; the necessity for a guarantee that the weak might stand with the strong. For a moment at least we stood wrapped in chivalry. Because America adventured after those ideals the moral leadership of the world centered for a time in Washington, and whatever we may say about Woodrow Wilson's mistakes in the technique of statesmanship—and we might write volumes about them—for a moment at least he converted the sinister ways of diplomacy into an honest search for the Holy Grail. After Versailles the spectacle degenerated into a naked barbaric struggle for existence. Since the Peace Conference we have been witnessing a moral slump that has led incisive intelligence everywhere to speculate on the downfall of the Western World. Nothing, we are forced to conclude, can prevent the Dark Ages except a vast spiritual Renaissance, something that is a

According to the Sunday Star recently in its column "40 years ago," L. Heisler Ball graduating from Delaware College spoke on "Facilities of Nature," which today he would probably interpret as "Luck in Politics."

Then, too, John Hering spoke on "Delaware's Place in History," meaning today "Luck's Place in Delaware."

THE NEWSPAPER VISITOR

"And so you work in the composing room! Isn't that fine!"
"I've been here ten years."
"Won't you sing something you've composed?"

One thing that Democrat spellbinders avoid—that a year ago, we were holding unemployment conferences and today any man who really wants a job can get it.

vastly more fundamental movement than the Reformation.

"Personally," Mr. Frank repeated, "I believe we are in the morning hours of such a Renaissance. Rather I mean that all the necessary raw materials of such a Renaissance are around us. We are merely waiting for some truly great spiritual leader to bring them together and touch them into life. I do not know whence such a leader will come or how such a thing will be done. Rather let me give you," Mr. Frank said, "some of the things which are not grounds of hope. First let us not attempt to revive the notion that the war stimulated in the soldiers the basis of a spiritual revival. War never ministers to spirituality. Most of the alleged spirituality in wartime is a mere scurrying to cover under fear. Second, our hope of a New Renaissance does not rest upon the wave of mysticism or more concretely post-war spiritualism which we hear so much about; nor third, it seems to me, upon any movement which is imminent in the churches. The church should furnish the leadership but I do not believe," Mr. Frank declared, "that it will ever give the dominant leadership which we seek until it has the courage to substitute the religion of Jesus Christ for present accepted Christianity; until its preachers scrap their ancient vocabulary and substitute intellectual daring and adventure for dogmatism. When the church brings to the redemption of institutions the same passion that it brings to the redemption of the individual; when it adds a continued moral analysis of the processes of modern life, so that its members can recognize the new form of the ancient sin; when it becomes its own critic, then we shall turn to it hopefully for leadership in the future. Intimations of such things are not wanting," Mr. Frank said. "I could name six books, whose trails, if consistently followed, would usher in a new Renaissance. Fourth, our hope of a new Renaissance is not based upon a revival of blind credulity that will fly in the face of modern thought, but rather upon that which will be the ripest flower of modern thought and give modern thought its finest expression. There are four streams of intellectual tendency, we may say, which make up the modern man. These may be referred to as philosophical criticism, historical criticism, the doctrine of evolution and the wave of social enthusiasm. We can't turn back the great thinking process; we can't stake out any dead line of doctrine and cause the modern man to throw away his intellectual birthright. Personally I don't fear," Mr. Frank said, "any wholesale backsliding of intelligence. There are some in every generation, we must remember, who are always untouched by the very thing which from the historian's point of view made the time. Of course we have with us some whose bodies live in the twentieth but whose minds dwell in the sixteenth century.

"I believe that the biologists, the psychologists, the political scientists constitute the bases of our hopes. The great Renaissance will come when we have the sense to see and the intelligence to bring the spiritual values of secular intelligence into a new synthesis, a fresher correlation. I have a feeling that within the next twenty-five years somewhere the leadership adequate to give the Western World the imaginative push it needs to use these values, will be discovered. By the great Renaissance I do not mean solely a revival of religion. Many of the most thrilling episodes will not take place in cathedrals but wherever men are delivering the real stuff of existence. It is going to be the recovering of the lost values of human affairs. We have been making a distinction that has hand-cuffed the spiritual vision of the world. At heart there is no line by which one may distinguish the secular and the sacred."

Mr. Frank discussed the probable leader of such a Renaissance, declaring his faith in one man's ability to master the knowledge necessary for such leadership. "I think we are unduly awed by the amount of the world's knowledge," he said. "I believe that in any given field the great ideas that are vital to the future of the race are very simple. I believe that one of those rare intuitive minds that the race produces every now and then can bring together into a fresh synthesis the important new social and spiritual values that have been thrown up by all sciences and the undertakings of mankind. The great leader will have back of him all the strength of science and religion; he will personify the strength of the two sources. He will probably be a man whose official position will give him a sounding board that will carry his utterances to the end of the earth. This leader will have to be something of a combination of Francis Bacon and Theodore Roosevelt. That is to say, he will have to be a catholic-minded person, an omnivorous reader, who has ranged over the whole field of knowledge, and made himself more or less at home with the great generalizations that have emerged from

Home-Coming At Red Men's Sixteen Orphans Also Have Time of Life Here on Saturday

With about three hundred persons in attendance, the majority of them from Wilmington, the annual home-coming at the Red Men's Fraternal Home, on Depot road, was held on Saturday. There was another phase to the affair, it being an outing for the orphans under the care of the Great Council of Delaware Improved Order of Red Men. James T. Semmerton, chairman, and H. H. Stiles, secretary of the Orphans' Board of the Order, arranged for the outing of the youngsters.

There are nineteen orphans under the jurisdiction of the Great Council of Delaware, and of this number sixteen attended the affair here on Saturday. These sixteen and the tribes that are caring for them were: Joe and George Ogle of Wawa Tribe No. 9; Evelyn Halter, Cherokee Tribe No. 4; Arthur, Helen, Elsie and Mary Gam, Manitou Tribe No. 18; Evan and Florence M. Gregg and Frederick Pater, Minnehaha Tribe No. 23; Amy E. Thomas and Margaret Sylvester, Osage Tribe No. 30; Frances and Florence May Fernandez, Hopalonghacking Tribe No. 17, and Edna and Emmett Carter, Alapacha Tribe No. 47.

The affair was arranged this year by the Degree of Pocahontas and Deputy Great Pocahontas Mrs. Elvora Ferrier, of Wilmington, was chairman of the committee in charge. Athletic events furnished much amusement for everyone early in the afternoon, prizes having been offered for the various events. The winners of the different events were: Boy's yard dash, won by Homer Chaffin, girls' (12 to 16 years) 50-yard dash, won by Elsie Linthicum with Mary Linthicum, second; girls' (18 years and over), 50-yard dash, won by Mousley, Miss Elizabeth Linthicum, second; wheel-barrow race, 50 yards, won by John Faulkner; sack race, won by Edward Phillips; wheelbarrow race, blind-folded, won by James Faulkner; Evelyn Halter, one of the orphans, was the star athlete of the day as she won three running races and the hop, skip and jump.

Ideal weather made the outing the more delightful for the children who spent the afternoon under the trees of the spacious lawn.

Among the officials of the order who were on the Newark outing were: Great Junior Sumner, James Faulkner; Great Keeper of Wampum, J. C. Barber and Great Sounding John C. Barber. The Rev. L. E. Wells was also on the outing. One of those who went on the trip were women and children. They had picnic lunch on the lawn at 2 o'clock.

FARM FOR SALE

Are you looking for a farm to really farm? If so carefully read the following and then come and see us.

We are offering a 100-acre farm, within thirty minutes ride of Wilmington, Delaware, situated on a good road and only one and a half miles from a railroad station. The location is healthful and you will find everything in readiness for money-making just as soon as you take hold. You will have near neighbors and good schools. It is but a short drive to High School and Delaware College. The soil is unsurpassed for trucking and is well adapted for almost all crops. The pastures are well watered. There is a fine orchard with 36 splendid peach trees and about 50 apple trees of different varieties. The house, which presents a very home-like appearance, is modern and this together with the outbuildings, is in splendid condition.

The present owner purchased and located on this farm over fifty years ago and during this time has never before put his property up for sale. But now having the feeling that it is time for him to retire from active farm duties, he is offering you his home and we feel that this man's success means more than mere words on paper can express. The farm will speak for itself when you see it.

We are going to sell this property within a very short time because the price is right.

Quitting a protest made by depositors of the Second National Bank of Elkton, now in the hands of a receiver, of the sale of Charles E. Warburton's home property to J. Wesley McAllister, for $8,000, which was made at private sale during the past week, the sale has been recalled and the property will now be put up at public auction. The wrecked bank holds numerous notes of Mr. Warburton's, which the proceeds of this sale will not liquidate.

Postmaster O. C. Giles, former Postmaster George M. Evans and city Mail Carrier Russell M. George were the only ones taking the Civil Service examination for the position of postmaster at Elkton, to succeed Mr. Giles, whose term expires September 5. As Messrs. Evans and George are Republicans, it is considered likely that one of them will get the plum.

Marriage licenses were issued Saturday to Harry N. Clark, of Newark, Del., and May E. Johnson, of Thompson Station, Del.; Doreen H. Draper, of Elkton, and Ella M. Williams, of Christiana, Del.

Ira A. Wells, son of Ira Wells, proprietor of the Howard House, Elkton, has been appointed rural mail carrier from the Elkton postoffice to Lewisville, Pa.

Misses Eleanor Brown and Gladys Tweele, recent graduates of Tome Institute, have been appointed teachers at the Belair High School.

William Cavender, of Earleville, reports to the county authorities that thieves entered his premises during the past few days and carried off his flock of spring chickens.

John Anderson, district deputy game warden, is having a consignment of pheasants liberated in various parts of Cecil county.

Miss Mary Terrell, who has been a patient at Union Hospital for several months, has improved and is now spending some time with her niece, Mrs. L. E. Barrett, at Chestertown.

Harvest Home Again Attracts Attention

Yearly Event Will Be Held at Whiteman's Grove—Hundreds

Harvest Home. It is a by-word and has been for years with families in this vicinity. It is the time for a real get-together celebration and a jolly good time.

This year the Harvest Home celebration will be held on Thursday, August 10th, at the usual site, Whiteman's Grove.

It is practically useless to write an explanation of what the Harvest Home celebration really is, for there is hardly anyone within a radius of many miles of this town who has not attended one of these celebrations. And once in attendance always on hand for these celebrations. Still there may be some new comers in our midst who have yet to learn of this affair. It is given yearly by the official board of Ebenezer Church and is in the form of a picnic. The scene of the affair is Whiteman's Grove, near Milford Cross Roads, just north of this town.

Every year at this celebration there are noted speakers, and this year is no exception to the rule. The speakers obtained for the affair being Rev. Dr. James M. Taylor and Dr. R. W. Cooper, who without a doubt are among the best speakers that could be obtained today.

Dr. Taylor is well up on all the important questions of the world and his travels have taken him to every corner of the globe, thereby he talks with first-hand information and does not have to relate from hearsay. His subject at the Harvest Home celebration will be "World Conditions That Make Democracy Impossible." The subject in itself is enough to draw many persons to Whiteman's Grove on the tenth of the month. This address will be in the afternoon.

Besides this address the speaker will also have a special talk for the younger people, but from the subject he is going to speak on it would not be at all surprising if the older folks would also be on hand to hear it. He will talk of his adventures with Mexican bandits; among the head hunters of Borneo and the cannibals in the jungles of Africa. When a man can tell of his personal experiences among people of this character it is a whole lot better than the best of fiction. This talk will be in the evening.

Dr. Cooper is connected with the Service Citizens of Delaware and has made many interesting addresses in Newark and vicinity. The subject of

Bold Hold-Up At Stanton

Mr. Pindle Struck Over Head with Baseball Bat by Two Highwaymen

The residents of Stanton were aroused late Saturday by screams of murder. Several men of the town left their beds, arming themselves and started an investigation. They had gone but a short time when they found Mr. Pindle, a local farmer, with a large gash in the side of his head.

The man has a stall in the Wilmington market and was on his way home from that place when he claims that two men held him up. He was struck over the head by a baseball bat and at first it was feared that his skull was fractured but investigation showed that there was no fracture. He was removed to a Wilmington hospital where it was found necessary to place several stitches in the wound.

The assailants were frightened off by the man's screams before they had taken anything from him. No arrests have yet been made in the case.

Misses Lavenia and Marian McCafferty, of Philadelphia, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Harvey Dickey on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Powell, of Kennett Square, Pa., were the guests of Mrs. Lewis Dickey over the past week-end.

Charles P. Dickey has announced he will be a candidate for Representative from the Eighth District.

The Stanton Carnival Committee has announced that about $450 was cleared at the carnival and extends thanks to the Continental Band, of Newark, for furnishing the music. All others who helped make the carnival a success are also thanked.

Christiana Firemen's Carnival To Be Big

Nearby Community All Set for Banner Event—Farmers
Have Big Crops

Over here at Christiana the biggest week of the year will be from August 12th to 19th inclusive. This is the week set aside for the firemen's carnival and it is to be the finest carnival that this section has ever known.

The fire company of Christiana is now a reality, having been in active service for some time past and the people around the village are more than pleased with the excellent service that the firemen have given and for this reason it is thought that the community will back the carnival this year to a man.

One of the big features of the carnival this year will be Firemen's Night, which will be on Thursday, August 17. At this time visiting firemen from Five Points, New Castle, Newark, Elsmere and several other nearby communities are expected to be on hand with their apparatus and a big time is assured.

There will be dancing on Saturday, Wednesday and Saturday evenings. A special pavilion will be built for the dancers and the committee in charge is now trying to obtain one of the best orchestras in Wilmington to furnish the music.

Each night many valuable articles will be chanced off and already the firemen are realizing quite a neat sum from the chances being sold.

The farmers of this district are reporting bumper crops this year. The growers of fruit are especially pleased with the large apple crop. It is claimed that it has been many years since such a crop of apples was raised here.

The storm of last night although very severe, did not do any material damage.

Roguing—Go through the potato fields and hand-pick plants that are affected with leaf roll mosaic and wilt. Truck Crops for Fall Use—Don't neglect the fall garden. Now is the time to sow turnips, endives, lettuce, beans, beets and carrots for fall consumption or for storage.

If you are a Holstein breeder and expect to do official testing it is well, in order to save expense, to have several cows freshen near the same time. This also holds true if the cows are to be run on yearly test.

Peach Borer Can Be Eliminated

Peninsula Horticultural Society Issues Interesting Method to Destroy Nuisance

At the present time the Peach Borer is killing more peach trees on the Delaware and Chesapeake Peninsula than all other causes combined. There is no need for much of this loss for there is a remedy. Dr. J. T. Headlee, of the New Jersey Experiment Station, told us all about it at the meeting in Berlin last winter, and he has stated that one-half of the peach trees in New Jersey over six years of age have been treated with the remedy and the results are very successful. He quoted at length from E. B. Blakeslee, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, who has been working on this remedy for several years and at last he discovered it and experimented with it until he is satisfied that it is entirely practicable. Paradi-chlorobenzene does the trick. One of the firms that is making this material has called it "Paracide," a shorter name and one easily remembered. Paracide is a substance specially crystallized for the purpose about like granulated sugar. It slowly is converted into a gas and the gas is poisonous to Peach Borers, but not to human beings. This material is placed in a circle around the trees about two inches from them, and about an inch or two in width. The best time in this latitude is about the tenth of September. It will not do to use it on trees less than six years of age.

When a peach orchard is set out great care should be taken that the trees contain no Peach Borers. They should be examined very carefully to see that the Borers are removed, and they should be wormed every year until they are at least five years old. They should then have the Paracide application every year thereafter. The whole work could be done for not much more than three cents per year per tree.

The New Jersey Bulletin gives the following method of procedure:

Prepare the trees for application of the material by removing with a hoe the weeds, leaves, stones, sticks, etc., from about the base of the trunk. In other words make a smooth, flat, clear space six to twelve inches wide about the tree at soil level. Do not dig into the surface soil any more than is necessary. In case a large amount of gum is present about the tree, remove it. It seems to be advisable to apply Paradi-chlorobenzene at a point level with or about the highest infestation on the tree if one wishes to kill all of the larvae. However, recent experiments show that this is not so important, provided a sufficient amount of dirt is piled high above the crystals and the larvae within the tree.

When the trees are ready for treatment, measure out the amount of Paradi-chlorobenzene to be used in some container which is graduated or holds when level full the amount required. A short, wide mouth bottle, or a tin or wooden pill box may answer the purpose. Some growers measure out one ounce in a closed fist. Take a hand full of the crystals and then close your hand tightly with the first joints of the fingers straight. The size of your hand will determine the amount you can hold in this way.

The crystals should be evenly distributed in a continuous, narrow, circular band two inches from the tree. Do not place crystals against the trunk, for serious injury may result. Material placed four to six inches from the tree has given fairly satisfactory results provided the soil is dry and plenty of dirt is placed above the crystals.

After the material is in a ring around the tree, place several shovels of dirt (four to six) free from weeds, grass, sticks, stones, etc., over the crystals and compact it with a shovel, a hoe or otherwise. The first shovel of dirt placed above the "death ring" should be fine and carefully placed on top of the crystals in order that the position of the poison be not disturbed.

The matured insects emerge from the tree and begin to lay their eggs about the middle of July and they hatch in ten days. The remedy should be applied about the tenth of September. The fall treatment is much better than spring because the worms are small and young and are easily killed. They have done little injury to the tree at this time while in the spring the injury has been mainly done and the worms are much harder to kill than in the previous fall.

Things to Be Remembered
Do not apply the Paracide to trees under five years of age. It may cause injury.
Use three-fourths of an ounce on small trees and not over an ounce on any tree.
Apply the material two inches from

Many Farm Problems Remain Unsolved

Many problems that come to the attention of specialists in the agricultural extension department at the Pennsylvania State College cannot be completely solved because of the lack of necessary experiments under Pennsylvania conditions. The school of agriculture at the college makes every effort to serve the farming interests of the state through residence and correspondence courses, research work and agricultural extension service. The forty extension specialists and the seventy-five representatives in the various counties, together with some thirty workers in the home economics division, make up the machinery through which experimental results are carried to the farmer and his family.

The extent to which these workers can be of help to the farming element is dependent entirely upon the nature and the scope of research work done by the school of agriculture and experimental station. The results of experiments made in the past have been of untold value to Pennsylvania farming, as will similar pieces of research work now under way. The necessity for an increased opportunity for research in the school of agriculture is very apparent in the host of questions that come to the attention of the extension representatives and that cannot be completely answered because the tree and in a band about two inches wide.

Pack the earth solidly over the crystals (four or six shovelfulls of dirt.) Do it about September tenth.

Remove in a month to avoid injury to the trees.

experimental data applying to Pennsylvania conditions is not available. Only by increasing the ability of the experiment station to study such problems thoroughly can the service of the college continue to increase in value to the farmer. The proposed plan for the expansion of State College as Pennsylvania State University, which is meeting with favor on every hand, will bring with it enlarged facilities for the investigation of practical agricultural problems.

SLAVES TO HOT CLOTHING

Men More Timid Than Women in Suing Garb to Summer Days

A man dresses in summer much more warmly than a woman dresses in winter. Men have colds in their heads; women apparently do not.

Men get pneumonia more often than women. Men get consumption very much more often than women.

What's the explanation?

Unquestionably men dress stupidly. What could be sadder than the man in a dark blue suit that attracts the heat, with a stiff, tight, starched collar around his neck, a tight belt around his waist, or harassing suspenders over his shoulders, an apoplectic face, feet squeezed into patent leather shoes? Besides your apoplectic, foolish man consider the perfectly cool woman.

She has short skirts and the air blows through them. Her arms are perfectly bare, or covered with something like mosquito netting, reaching about half way down.

Her neck is open, front and back, usually. Plenty of air circulation there.

A good old negro preacher, appalled one Sunday evening by the evil rampant in his flock, shouted out in a loud voice:

"Ah sees befo' me 10 chicken thieves, includin' Brother White." Now Brother White was very influentail in the church, and with a shocked moan he rose and rushed out. Afterwards he began to pull all sorts of strings to make the preacher eat his words. The old fellow promised to apologize the following Sunday.

So the following Sunday before the sermon he rose and said:

"Ah desires to retract mah last Sunday night remark dat Ah sees befo' me 10 chicken thieves, includin' Barber White. What Ah should have said, dear brethren and sistern, was dat Ah sees befo' me nine chicken thieves not includin' Barber White." —Los Angeles Times.

The Megary August Sale Has Started

And with those who are planning new homes or the refurnishing of their present homes there's been a lot of talking and planning.

They KNOW that now is the time to get their furnishings and at substantial savings.

And they KNOW that here in this big store is REAL furniture and at REAL savings, and that they can buy with the feeling that we are selling not only our merchandise but our reputation, our desire for their patronage in the years to come.

Here is a dining-room suite of ten pieces with a closed serving table and the chairs in genuine leather, a forty-eight-inch extension table and sixty-inch buffet, American Walnut finish as low as $157.50 for the ten pieces.

A four-piece Queen Ann suite in American Walnut is but $200.00.

A Sheraton suite in mahogany is marked for ten pieces, $250.00.

A William and Mary suite in Mahogany is marked $175.00 for the ten pieces.

There are dozens of other dining-room suites here and at a wide price range for some one who wants to spend but little for good (and it IS good) furniture there are some unusual values.

There's a bedroom suite, four pieces in grey oak, decorated, that you can buy for $107.00 the four pieces.

There is an American Walnut suite with chiffonette, at $190.00 for the four pieces.

An American Walnut suite with bow end bed and vanity dresser and dust proof construction and from a firm noted for good furniture, is $337.00 the four pieces.

There are other suites here, and lots of them that provide a price range suited to any purse, and they are all good suites, of the Megary standard and, of course, regardless of price, with the Megary guarantee.

There are living-room suites that are made the way we want them as low as $157.50, in tapestry.

There are others that come in a varied range of covers, mohairs and velours, and two-tone effects that are priced this month from $250.00 to $600.00.

And they're all good suites, good looking and made by good mechanics, and of good material.

For every room or any room in your home you'll undoubtedly find the suite or piece of extra furnishing you have wanted here and at decided savings.

And, now with all the various "Sales" confusing one, is the time to compare—

Not only price (for any one can sell CHEAP furniture), but the furniture and the store.

Your pocketbook and your pride and your temper may suffer if you don't see what we have to offer in this August Sale.

Last Social Event Of Summer School

About 250 Couples Danced and Played Games Last Week — Entertain at Dinner

The dance given in Old College on last Friday night was the closing social event of the University of Delaware Summer School and it proved a big success. The members of the rehabilitation division took part in the affair. There was dancing in the dining room and games were played in the lounge rooms under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Bennett, of the Wilmington Community Service.

Friday evenings have been feature evenings with the students this year, this night having been set aside for social events, which proved both recreational and educational. At the start of the session the first formal dance since the Summer School was started was held.

At the dance last week there were about 250 couples in attendance. Previous to the social event last week, Business Administrator and Mrs. A. G. Wilkinson and daughter Irene and Miss Bennett were the guests of the students at dinner.

Mrs. Annie E. Snyder, dean of women of the Summer School; Dean McCue; Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Wilkinson, R. M. Upton, Miss Ina Barnes, Miss Ruby Miller, Miss Blanche Pepple, Miss Elizabeth Jenkins, Miss Marion Skewis, Miss Mary Evans and Mr.

Roberts were in the receiving line at the affair last week.

Music for those who danced was furnished by the Texas Orchestra.

Francis J. Cummings, Blind Student, Makes Good At University

Report of Delaware Commission of the Blind Gives Interesting Account—Student Encourages Higher Education for Blind

Co-operation of More Fortunate Students Helped

Few persons here in Newark realize that there was a blind student enrolled at the University of Delaware last term.

This student who is making every effort to overcome one of life's biggest obstacles was Francis J. Cummings, of Wilmington.

In the Thirteenth Annual Report of the Delaware Commission for the Blind an interesting review of this young man's accomplishments is given.

The review in part follows: "Francis J. Cummings the Blind Student at the University of Delaware, has just finished his freshman year with perfect marks with one exception, which was next to perfect. He has the approbation of his preceptors. Francis Cummings is the first blind student to enter this seat of learning, it was therefore a great problem to know if he could manage his course. He has written an account of his experience which we print on the following page and should be found most interesting. The solution of these problems of the blind when thrown for the first time among their normal fellows and professors who have not had previous experience with this class, is quite remarkable and extremely pleasing.

"That Francis Cummings is popular with his fellow students is shown that he has been nominated for election to the Students' Council, and initiated into the Blue Lantern Society. He has been invited to join a class in his Junior year to visit Paris and study in the great Universities there, for which he will receive credit at the University of Delaware. All interested in Francis are desirous in giving him this great opportunity to perfect and broaden his education. The kind consideration of the faculty and the touching helpfulness of fellow students which aided him in his brave struggle for success against great difficulty are a great satisfaction to the Commission for the Blind and others interested in the progress of our promising protégé.

Young Cummings writes for the report the following:

"Before I entered the University of Delaware, I could not determine what difficulties a blind person might encounter in acquiring higher education. I had resolved that whatever obstacles presented themselves I should obviate. Of course, I was concerned as to how this was to be done. The first and most important of these difficulties was the securing of a reader; that is, someone who could read to me all the textbooks that I could not procure in raised characters. Upon my arrival at the University of Delaware, I mentioned to some of the students that I should need a reader. On the following day, one of these students came into my room and offered to accept the responsibility of reading to me. I fully realized, however, that in order to do ample justice to the study of foreign languages, it would be necessary to have in Braille the required text-books. I immediately wrote to the Pennsylvania Institution for the Instruction of the Blind, and, giving the names of the text-books that I should need, asked if it was possible to obtain them in Braille. I learned that the Latin and Greek text-books were available, but that the French had not been embossed in raised characters. I found that the price of having this French book embossed in Braille was prohibitive, and the only alternative was to have it read to me. Of course, if I had had the text under my fingers, I could have studied it more satisfactorily, as I would have been able to give it greater concentration. I sincerely hope that some day a society may be formed for the purpose of embossing the books required for blind students taking higher education.

"The next problem to be solved was how I should manage in the classrooms. Before coming to the University of Delaware, I had secured a small portable typewriter, by means of which I had intended to do all written work. The professors agreed to accept typewritten work, and I was relieved of any worry in that respect. As far as recitations were concerned, of course, I did exactly the same as the sighted students.

"For the four years preceding my entrance into the University of Delaware, I had been a student at the Pennsylvania Institution for the Instruction of the Blind, in which school I was, of course, associated only with blind or partially blind students. I was greatly concerned, therefore, as to how I should get along with students with perfect sight. After I had stayed at the University a short time, this matter adjusted itself. The students were all very pleasant and willing to offer assistance. Since I have little athletic ability, I have never taken any active part in sports; but, with the assistance of a sighted companion, I have derived a great deal of pleasure from the football and basketball games. Of course, I have had to combat the obvious conviction of many of the students that a blind person must be handled carefully. At first, they could not seem to realize that I was not deprived of my humanity simultaneously with my sight, and that I still enjoyed the same things in which they took pleasure. Time has, however, greatly modified the opinion of the students, and they do not now seem to consider me different from themselves. As I become better acquainted with them, this relation will be strengthened, and I shall feel more and more as one of them.

"It had occurred to me that I might find it difficult to be punctual in my class attendance, and also to be at the Commons on time for my meals; but the students were very considerate of me until I became thoroughly familiar with the campus and the buildings. The University authorities were particularly that I get a room on the first floor of Harter Hall, which also facilitated matters.

"I believe that higher education for the blind should be encouraged, as it adds to their happiness and should place them in the front rank of citizenship."

SUMMER SCHOOL BOOKLET ISSUED

Interesting Item Came Off Press Last Week

The following committee, Miss Mary S. Wright, of Bridgeville; Mrs. A. Harrington, of Frederica; Miss Elizabeth Burris, of Houston, and Miss Annie Fredd, and Miss Kathleen Moore, of Wilmington, had charge of the printing of an interesting booklet for the University of Delaware Summer School. This booklet came off the press last week and contains the constitution and regulations of the Student Self Government Association and other information which will be of value to the Summer Schools in the future.

The group of students in each of the dormitories have composed their own songs and cheers and these are printed in the booklet also.

Local County League Team Shows Real Worth in Saturday's Victory

The followers of the Newark team of the New Castle County League are looking forward to a pennant for the town. This results from the local victory over Marshallton, one of the best teams of the league on Saturday. The game was played on Friday night and the score was 4 to 3.

The Newark team played an uphill battle and overcame a two-run lead at the Marshallton crowd rolled up in the early innings. It was the old story seventh when the town's pride took their turn at bat and scored three runs thereby putting the game on ice.

August and Kerr formed the Marshallton battery. Kerr played with the Wilmington Tri-State team when that club won the pennant in the league. Marshallton was confident that they would take the game before time and even up to the seventh inning, seemed under the impression that they were playing the same club that represented Newark in the first half of the league. But Newark today is a much stronger team and is playing a crooked-jack article of ball that the fans are supporting the club to the pleasure of the manager.

Ramsey and Watkins both worked the mound for the local team and held the clubbers from Marshallton to seven scattered hits. After the sixth inning the rubber was not in danger of the spikes of the Marshallton players.

Watkins helped things along a lot with a two-bagger. Bland also had a single base out, the only extra base of the game. Newark moved up several notches in the league race by the use of Saturday's victory. The club is now in third place.

It was a great fight, Benny Leonard, the champion, Lew Tindler, the challenger; Tex Rickards, the promoter, and "Somebody," owner of concession rights, can today buy enough Fords to give every man, woman and child in Newark one, but the American public wanted the fight and they paid for it.

It is a very encouraging fact to the followers of the Newark baseball team of the New Castle County League that the team is playing a much better article of ball than they did in the first half of the league race. Of course the locals have only won two games thus far, but the team has played excellent ball in its other games and has proven to the fans that every team in the league will know that it is in a battle before the Newark nine goes down in defeat.

In the first half of the league the local team played without much "pep" after losing a couple of games, but the players seemed to have lost this spirit and taken on the old fighting spirit, which will win a lot of ball games for the locals if they retain it all season.

Football Preparations

Local football players are already talking of organizing a team to represent Newark on the gridiron next season, and it is expected that a first-class team will be placed on the field.

Anglers Busy

The Newark Anglers' Association, which at the present time is making a drive to have a reservation on the Dayett property near Cooch, is meeting with success. Popular subscriptions are being taken as one means of raising sufficient money to dam in the stream and stock it with game fish.

Already many subscriptions have been received and those in back of the movement are confident that work on the project can be started in a short time. Every real sportsman is anxious to see the movement turn out a success, and from the present indications this is what will happen.

SPORTTUTORIAL

Leonard Retains Crown
Newark Going Strong

A visit to the huge pine bowl of Tex Rickard's at Boyle's Thirty Acres at Jersey City, N. J., last Thursday night, should have been enough evidence for anyone that boxing is one of the most popular sports of this country.

If your imagination can carry you that far, just figure half the population of Wilmington seated in an enclosure of pine. That is just about what the attendance at the Leonard-Tindler fight compared with. There were about 60,000 persons at the fight and these people pried themselves loose from $450,000 to see one of the battles of the age.

Leaving all personal feeling out of it there is no one who can say that the turnout for this fight was not a proof that the people of the country want boxing. Arrange a lecture on any up-to-the minute subject, have a prohibition meeting with the cause's best speakers on hand or have a gathering of any kind with the admission free and the bets are 100 to 1 that there will not be 80,000 people turn out for a dozen of them. But yet the men and women, and there was quite a number of the "weaker sex" on hand, paid anywhere from $5 to $15 to see the country's two foremost lightweights fight.

To get down to the fight. There has never been a lightweight fight that attracted so much attention and there has never been a fight among the 135 pounders in which there was much more excitement. The two battlers were in the roped circle to battle one another into dreamland, but the results are already too well known to tell the reader that in this both failed.

Who won the bout? It was a no-decision affair, all matches in New Jersey must be, to comply with the law. But the popular verdict went to the title-holder, Leonard.

At the start it looked very much as though the Philadelphia entry was going to knock the diadem from the brow of the champion. But when the final round was over the majority of people were of the opinion that Leonard had rallied sufficiently in the last rounds of the fight to wipe out the lead gained by Lew the Tindler.

There was only one semblance of a knockout, and that was in the eighth round, when Tindler got over one of his famous left-handed hooks and Benny's knees did a sagging stunt, but he clinched and held until he had recovered sufficiently to again hold his own and go one better against the Quaker City challenger.

It was a great fight, Benny Leonard, the champion, Lew Tindler, the challenger; Tex Rickards, the promoter, and "Somebody," owner of concession rights, can today buy enough Fords to give every man, woman and child in Newark one, but the American public wanted the fight and they paid for it.

MANY PRIZES FOR SKILLFUL WORKERS

State Fair Will Offer Over 800 Premiums for Housekeeping Features

Competition for prizes for needle work, crocheting, preserving and baking for the women and children of Delaware at the Delaware State Fair which opens at Elsmere on Labor Day, September 4, and continues five days, it is expected will be keener than ever this year. The committees in charge of this department of the Fair have made new classes to interest the competitors and enable them to show their skill more attractively than ever before.

With the women there are opportunities for 614 premiums, there being that many prizes for first and second winners offered. With the children there are 208 first and second prizes where the kiddies may show their proficiency as future housekeepers par excellence. Miss Denise duPont offers a gold medal to the child winning the largest number of blue ribbons in the sewing section, with no former winner eligible.

Miss duPont also offers a gold medal for the best loaf of bread. Women and children may compete but professional bakers are barred. No former winner may compete.

In addition to the plain sewing, knitting and crocheting, there are premiums for those women and children whose tastes run to fancy work in the way of china painting. There is also the opportunity for the professional needleworker and a special class for amateurs and professional raisers of flowers to demonstrate their skill. The children have the chance to show their talent in drawing and painting and the crafts as well as the essential arts of the work of a home maker.

PROVIDENCE WINS

Takes Two Games Last Week
Play New London Next

The Providence baseball team defeated the strong Wilmington All-Collegians, Friday evening, in a fast and interesting game by the score of 4-3. R. Reynolds pitching for the home team had thirteen strike-outs to his credit.

Saturday the Providence boys defeated the Cookman Church League team, of Wilmington, by the score of 6 to 4.

This Saturday the New London team will visit Providence for the third game of a four game series. This promises to be a good game as each club has won one game and both are anxious to get the jump by winning this one. Game called at 3.15 (standard time). Come out and see a good game.

CORN GROWERS' ASSOCIATION

Annual Show in Kent County; Many Worth While Prizes

The Executive Committee of the Delaware Corn Growers' Association met at the Harrington Fair last Thursday to arrange for the time and place of the next annual State Corn Show. It is Kent county's year for the show and it is expected that invitations from Kent county towns interested in the show will soon be received. The Association will issue a premium list in a short time to cover the $500 in cash prizes offered by the State for the best exhibits of corn and small grains.

In addition to the cash prizes offered the association will furnish three scholarships to the Junior Short Course at the University of Delaware as an award for the best work in corn growing by a corn club boy in each county, who has grown and cared for five acres or more of corn. At the next annual corn show the corn club boys from all over the State will compete for the challenge cup offered annually by the association to the best boy corn judge in the State. The cup was won last year by Stanley Short, of Cheswold, Kent county.

Those present at the meeting including the three County Agents were President Fred Trimble, Hockessin; Vice-President of Kent County, Dewey Sapp; John Ponder, Sussex county, and M. O. Pence, secretary-treasurer, Newark.

PENNANT FIGHTS

New York and St. Louis Clubs Look Like Winners

From present indications the world's baseball championship this season will be confined to one city. At the present time the teams of St. Louis and New York in both of the major leagues seem to have the edge and the clubs are seeing-sawing back and forth in the league leads.

The New York clubs are at their old tricks again of buying star players from tail-end clubs in mid-season to bolster up their teams. This is bringing a storm of protest from the other clubs that still have a chance in the pennant chase and it is thought that the National and American Leagues will, in the near future, pass a law that will break this practice up.

MAY BE REMATCHED

There was so much interest in the lightweight championship fight between Benny Leonard, title holder, and Lew Tindler, last week that Tex Rickards is already making overtures to rematch the men. It is thought that the next bout will be held where decisions can be rendered, probably on the Polo Grounds, New York.

SILOS COMING INTO MORE GENERAL USE ON ALL FARMS

To milk cows the silo is rapidly becoming as necessary as milking. Actually, the one depends upon the other, for to the flow of milk the silo is the substitute for green pastures, and green feed means increased milk flow.

Since the silo is the only method whereby green feed can be successfully kept for long periods, many months, and used as wanted and because milk flow can be materially increased, silos should have a place wherever stock is kept. That they pay for themselves quickly is the reason for the constant increase in numbers used—their popularity is due to their profitability. To be able to keep four cows on the price it formerly cost to keep and feed three is irresistible. An acre of corn is made to do additional duty when stored in a silo. Instead of four to five tons of husked corn to the acre the silo will raise the feed tonnage to fifteen tons to the acre and more milk will be returned.

It is well established that poor corn years do not seriously affect yields where silos are used, the siloing of corn prevents shrinkage, whereas a bad maturing year in husked corn systems means a shrinkage anywhere above 10 per cent. Silos and blower cutters are a money-making combination and rapidly are coming to be standard farm equipment.

Since the money-earning power of the farmer is more or less limited to favorableness of seasons the silo naturally follows. Usually one season's use will not only save a heavy loss from unfavorable conditions, but will pay back the cost of the silo.

HEARD IN A RESTAURANT

"Here's a queer announcement on this bill of fare: 'The proprietor will be glad to receive complaints of patrons.'"

"What's queer about it?"

"Why should the proprietor be 'glad' to receive complaints?"

"Because then he knows that his customers are not getting more than their money's worth."—Boston Transcript.

JOURNALISTIC ACCURACY

W. S. Gilbert once granted an interview to an American journalist who said he had heard that Gilbert was interested in stock, and inquired how much livestock he possessed. "Oh, I have about two thousand head—principally bees," was the rejoinder. The story was widely circulated in this country with the words "principally bees" omitted and replaced by the statement that Mr. Gilbert was going in for ranching.

Negro Summer

School at Dover

The first of a series of lectures and entertainments being arranged by the Service Citizens of Delaware for the students of the Colored Summer School for teachers being held at the State College at Dover, will be given on Friday evening of this week when Mrs. Alice Dunbar-Nelson will read the Dunbar poems. The purpose of the lecture series at the colored college, as at the University of Delaware, is to bring to the teachers of the State a broader acquaintance with the outside world and bring them in contact with men and women who have won distinction in their special field.

Although planned primarily for the benefit of the teachers, the course is open to the public and it is hoped by those in charge that colored folk from all parts of the State will attend these meetings.

The Friday evening reading will begin promptly at 8 o'clock (standard time) and will be held in the chapel at the State College.

On Sunday, August 6th, at 1.30 o'clock, a large meeting will be held in the grove adjoining the college. H. H. Proctor, pastor of the Nazarene Congregational Church, of Brooklyn, N. Y., will be the chief speaker. His theme will be "The Black Man's Burden." Special music under the direction of James M. Coulbourn, of New Castle, will be another feature of the meeting.

On Friday, August 11th, Miss

Marian Anderson, of Philadelphia, pronounced by critics one of the leading contraltos of the Negro race, will be heard in concert.

COACH NOT APPOINTED

Athletic Director for U. of D. Will Soon be Named

No one has yet been appointed as athletic coach for the University of Delaware. It is thought an appointment to this office will be made in a short time as it is nearly the season to start preliminary work with the football team.

Coaches Shipley and Derby will neither one return to the local institution this year.

Several names are mentioned for the position but no definite action has been taken.

Among the men mentioned are W. J. McAvoy, former coach here; "Nippie" Hartman, Lafayette star; Ben Cabbage, of V. P. I., and several other former college stars.

FOLK GAMES

Summer School Gives Demonstration on Frazer Field

Under the direction of Miss Sameth, physical director of the University of Delaware Summer School, a demonstration of folk games was given on Frazer Field Monday evening.

Miss Sameth was formerly physical director at the University of Newark and her work here has been very successful.

WE WILL PAY YOUR ROUND-TRIP FARE TO WILMINGTON

We make this offer to further induce you to visit our store during this Month of August—in order to acquaint you with the quality of merchandise that is here; to convince you that the prices found at Miller Brothers are actually UNDERSELLING ALL COMPETITION. We want you to know all about the Famous Miller Brothers' Deferred Payment Plan and our Liberal Credit Policy—in general, we want to acquaint you with our organization—when you see all this with your own eyes, it will be easy then for you to realize why we can offer quality furniture at such remarkably low prices—why we can render a service that is unsurpassed anywhere. During August we are sharing our profits of the six preceding months with our customers—we contemplate the biggest volume of business for any one month in our history and we are prepared to offer a selection of real quality Furniture, Carpets and House Furnishings that are incomparable at anything like the prices to be found elsewhere except in

MILLERS AUGUST PROFIT SHARING FURNITURE SALE

This sale has been in preparation for months. It has been carefully planned on the basis of DOING A VOLUME OF BUSINESS. The day for "long profits" is passed. Competition is keen and must be met and undersold. This we have successfully done. "Volume" is our Watch Word—"short profits" on a big turnover of merchandise is the policy which has made the tremendous expansion of Miller Brothers' business possible. This is the policy with which we hope to make August, 1922, the biggest month in the history of our business.

Our buyers have scoured the markets for the "Best Buys" in Furniture—they have done more—they have forced manufacturers to make large price concessions by paying spot cash for car load shipments. Thirty-two car loads of Merchandise have been coming to our warehouses just for this big sale.

We have made both price and quality comparisons with every announced sale in this vicinity. Our prices are considerably lower than local competition and as for Philadelphia furniture houses—a comparison will show you that the saving realized at Miller's will mean a saving of from $40 to $100 on individual suites of like quality and design. Don't take our word for it. MAKE YOUR OWN COMPARISONS—WE WELCOME THEM.

Miller's reputation for Fair Dealing and the Confidence that we have established during the past 22 years is back of this sale. We are destined to grow to greater heights and we plan this month to make 5000 new friends in the outlying territory to Wilmington. You people of this vicinity—you readers of this newspaper—this message is just for you. We are underselling all competition, we are granting very liberal credit terms and we are offering an unsurpassed assortment for your selection. We expect to see you at our store. We want to know your candid opinion of this stupendous Sale. Come in our store, tell us your needs. We will serve you faithfully and consider it a real privilege to open an account for you.

Whether You Come by Train or Motor—Millers Will Pay Your Way

We'll Do More Than That---We Will Give Away Furniture---Absolutely Free

We realize that you are 12 miles from Wilmington, so to induce you to come to Wilmington and to our store when in Wilmington, we make this startling offer. We know that one visit will convince you that Miller Brothers ACTUALLY SELL QUALITY FURNITURE AT A LOWER PRICE than that asked for the ordinary kind elsewhere. We know that once you acquaint yourself with this institution you will return again and again. We want your business and are willing to make almost any concession to gain it. Consequently we have arranged these FREE OFFERS. Don't be misled—they are FREE. We have no restricted your purchase. Select what you want—AT THE SALE PRICES—which are the lowest you will find anywhere and when your goods are shipped our FREE GIFT will be sent along. You do not pay a premium price to get this Gift and there is no mark up to let us break even on the sale. Every Gift costs US money—not you.

BE SURE TO BRING IT WITH YOU TO THE STORE. We will be frank with you why we want it—
We spend hundreds of dollars a year in advertising.
We have used The Newark Post repeatedly and have made sales from it. Now we want to see accurately how many people will respond to these offers direct from this newspaper. We can then determine at the end of August whether it will pay us to increase our appropriation for this paper—we will know then how many of our old customers we can carry our message to through these columns.

Our only restriction on the payment of car fare is that a reasonable purchase must be made. We leave what you would consider reasonable entirely with you. Make your purchase and then hand our salesman this coupon.

If you read The Newark Post it is only fair to the publisher that you advise the merchants you buy from where you saw this advertisement. The response the merchant receives from this paper governs the amount of money he spends with it and the more money spent with a paper tends to improve the service it renders to its readers.
Support the publisher of this newspaper by turning in this coupon and telling us every time you buy that you read it in The Newark Post. We hope that the results will lead us to offer a much larger contract to this paper after August—it will depend on the readers. The merchandise you will find is priced right and will tempt the most discriminate buyer to decide quickly. But—whether you buy or not—leave this coupon before you depart from our store.
