The student chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers is an organization with the purpose of acquainting students with the various fields in their chosen profession. While being informative, the meetings are a pleasant social event for students and professors. Meetings are usually the last Thursday of every month and consist of a guest speaker followed by a social period with refreshments. All civil engineering students are eligible for membership.

EQUESTRIAN  CLUB

The Equestrian Club was organized to encourage and develop equestrian abilities in the students of the University of Delaware and to promote participation and appreciation of all types of activities with horses and riding. The club's extra activities have included field trips to the Harrisburg and Madison Square Garden Horse Shows, the Maryland Hunt Cup, the Olympic Equestrian Team Headquarters in Gladstone, and to polo matches. The advanced members demonstrate their skill in a combined demonstration and lecture given during Farm and Home Week. Regular business meetings are held, and members receive instruction each Sunday afternoon. They welcome those who are interested and will participate in club activities.

SOCIETY FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF ## MANAGEMENT

The objectives of the University Program of S.A.M. are to bring together students interested in going into business and executives already in business so that practical applications of the theories learned in classes can be seen. It is hoped that S.A.M. will serve as an effective medium for businessmen to relate to students important information on the problems, policies, and methods of industry and management. Finally S.A.M. provides students with the opportunity to participate in organizing, planning, and directing the activities of an organization.

Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship strives to present our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ as relevant to college students, to promote Christian spiritual maturity, and to give students a vision for world evangelism. Programs include lectures by competent and qualified speakers, dorm Bible studies and prayer sessions, discussions, conferences, and social events both on and off campus. Since IVCF is interdenominational, the emphasis is on topics of interest to those of all faiths, and of none: theology, world problems, problems of personal daily life. Each local IVCF chapter plans, conducts, and finances its own program.

WESLEY FOUNDATION

The Wesley Foundation is the campus ministry of the Methodist Church. Its goal is to provide a living Christian experience for college students and faculty; to train its members for responsible Christian leadership, and to assist them in becoming dedicated Christians. The regularly scheduled activities of the Wesley Foundation include: Tuesday night forums, Sunday night fellowship supper and non-credit Bible film series; Holy Communion; service projects; counseling by the director; and periodic area and regional conferences. In addition, there is a loan fund for any needy Methodist student, and various student publications.

Scene from E-52's Production of O'Neill's Long Day's Journey

Being an activity which appeals primarily to the aesthetic need of an individual, it is E 52 's purpose to supply those in the university with one of the finest cultural activities available. Further, since those persons associated with E 52 realize the necessity to increment the popularity of great drama, comedy, and musicals to enable people to develop a sense of aesthetic appreciation, it is the aim of the organization to promote the intriguing art of theatre in a way which appeals to nearly everyone. Through the University Theatre, persons in any and every phase of theatre have an opportunity to partake directly in a live dramatic production. Positions are available in nearly every aspect of theatre, for there are three major productions and two laboratory shows annually to assure everyone an opportunity to be a part of the magic of the stage.
