Camden June 14th 1861

Dearest Lou

Being alone in my studio silently reviewing the past and contrasting it with the present, and also contemplating the future, that future in which perhaps I shall be called upon to act no little part
- I seize my pen almost convulsively, to pen a few lines in reply to your thrice welcome letter I was sorry to hear that you were scarcely able to pen those lines which I read so eagerly. Oh: I sincerely hope that you have recovered your health e'er this, and that your cheerful smile may spread its joyful influence around as it used to do, Oh that I could be permitted to join in the merry circles again, that I used to meet in your neighborhood But I cannot yet. You you said that if our company should be drafted you would like to see me before I go. Let me assure you that, if I go to fight for my country I shall not forget that while my country is dear to me in a national point of view that in the social you are dearer. I could not go until I had seen you - until I should give you the parting hand and receive your best wishes for my success, then and only then could I face the angry foe, and if necessary in the Providence of a just God, I could sacrifice my life upon the altar of my country.

Lou the company I now belong to will not go to war, but I expect I shall get up a company of volunteers to go into the U.S. service during the war. I have been advised by a great many and have considerable encouragement from the Head Quarters of the Del. Regiment: I shall publish my card next week if nothing happens. I may not succeed if I do I shall be down to see you before I go. before I close let me thank you for the interest you manifested in relation to my course morally. Would to Heaven I could follow your counsel and rid myself of the fires of ambition which prevad my soul, and which I fear will keep me too long in the course that tends only to worldly honors. I have not time to write longer. let me again hope you are well and happy if I am not. for it would pain me to know that you are unhappy. Would that I could make your life one endless I must close, write to me soon if you pleasd as I am very anxious about your health. I may be able to get down to see you in two or three weeks, but it is not positiv, Be sure to write soon.

I remain as ever

Yours till death
