This school year has been one of the most profitable and successful periods for the "Ape Men" at the University in recent years. The spirit of brotherhood and cooperation that reigns at Alpha Epsilon Pi has produced many enjoyable moments for the brothers as they worked toward the betterment of their school and fraternity. As usual, the "Apes" can be found leading and working for every campus club, organization, and activity at Delaware. In addition, fraternity activities and functions such as the social and intramural programs have undergone a most successful season when analyzed in terms of enjoyment and brotherhood. But the best measure of success is continued success, and Alpha Epsilon Pi seems destined to enjoy progressively greater years as it proceeds from the greatest year in its history.

This year the Delaware Epsilon Rho chapter of Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity is celebrating its ninth anniversary on campus. During this short span the fraternity has grown and made a name for itself in all fields of interest in fraternity and campus activities.

Among the activities included during the past year were Alpha Chi Sigma, Alpha Zeta, American Institute of Chemical Engineers, American Institute of Civil Engineers, Band, Concert Choir, Men's Chorus, Student Government Association, Slipstick, University Religious Council, Westminster Fellowship, Delaware Christian Fellowship, Math Club, Engineering Council, Rifle Team, Soccer, Track, Basketball, and Tennis.

During the past year Alpha Tau Omega has continued to keep astride in its scholastic achievements, being the second highest in fraternity indices. In the line of fraternity spirit, Alpha Tau Omega captured, for the third consecutive year, the Homecoming Float Trophy.

Delta Tau Delta Fraternity was founded at Bethany College, Virginia, in 1859. Since that time it has grown to include 87 undergraduate chapters and 97 alumni chapters. Delta Tau Delta now includes more than 50,000 initiates.

Delta Upsilon chapter was founded at the University of Delaware in October, 1948. Originally a local fraternity, Delta Sigma, Delta Upsilon became the 79th chapter of Delta Tau Delta. The present Delt Shelter at 158 South College Avenue was occupied in 1953 when our original Shelter at 230 East Main Street gave way to the present Newark Shopping Center.

The Delts are very active on campus and brothers can be found in the Student Senate, Scabbard and Blade, University Religious Council, Engineering Council, Tau Beta Pi, Omicron Delta Kappa, and Junior Counselors, to name just a few. In addition, Delts are on the staffs of The Review, Blue Hen, Slipstick, Needle and Haystack, and Venture; all student publications. Sportswise, Delts may be found on the wrestling, cross country, golf, track, tennis and swimming teams.

Social activities play an important part in the life of a Delt. Traditional activities include a South Sea Island party, Apache Party, Christmas party, and of course, Delt Week End.

The brothers of Kappa Alpha, in winding up another memorable year of college life, look back at the past several months with much pride and many pleasant memories. The social season was a great success, consisting of many house parties, Homecoming Week End, IFC Week End, and topped off by the Old South Ball in April. In athletics, KA showed outstanding ability in retiring the basketball trophy and in taking second place in football. The Kastle also contributed many men to important campus positions, including Sophomore Class President, SGA Corresponding Secretary, REVIEW news editor, Alpha Zeta President, IFC, intramural athletics, and several honorary fraternities. As our seniors go on their various ways, we look forward with pride to another great year with our newly initiated brothers.

Alpha Gamma of Phi Kappa Tau was established on the Delaware campus in 1924, the twenty-seventh chapter of a national now numbering seventy-five chapters and over twenty-one thousand members. There are now twenty-nine active brothers who call 186 South College Ave. "home."

Phi Tau's were well represented in campus activities, and in intramural and varsity sports. The house placed well scholastically, with several men on the Dean's List. Socially, this year was one of the best, highlighted of course by Phi Tau Week End.

As a result of doing things together, the unity, companionship, and brotherhood of Phi Kappa Tau are outstanding characteristics of the house.

This year the PIKE house at 27 North College Avenue was host to 26 active brothers of Pi Kappa Alpha. A most successful year was experienced, with Pi K.A.'s active in many campus activities and in the intramural program.

Pi Kappa Alpha had its usual excellent social program, highlighted by the opening of a new party room, and topped off with a successful PIKE Week End. Scholastically, the house showed improvement, and is looking forward to even better achievements next year.

In addition to promoting the development of character and companionship the fifty-three Brothers at the Delta Kappa Chapter of Sigma Nu have also been active in campus affairs. Due to our unity of purpose, we were able to secure several intramural trophies as a material display of our leadership abilities. In getting off to a favorable start we won the championships in the first five sports, which included football; cross country; handball; ping pong; and wrestling. Particularly impressive was the undefeated record of our men on the gridiron. To add to our laurels of achievement we were privileged to have our candidate, Miss Barbara Kille, elected as the Homecoming Queen. There were also many enjoyable parties and social functions that gave us a well balanced fraternity life. While many individuals were prominent in different activities, it was the inspirational backing and outstanding leadership that gave Delta Kappa one of the best years in its history.

Sigma Phi Epsilon at the University of Delaware stands for many things, but it can best be described by the word, brotherhood, for this is the basis and goal of every facet of our chapter program. Ranking at or near the top among the campus fraternities, as well as in the national organization, Sig Ep is devoted to a well integrated program of scholarship, athletics, social events and fraternity life. The advantages of location, in-house dining facilities and a permanent housemother have contributed immensely to the present position of prestige and respect that Sigma Phi Epsilon holds.

Sig Eps can be found as members or officers of every important campus organization, every varsity team and every honorary fraternity or society. We consider this participation in campus activities an essential part of our college life and encourage it as a part of our fraternity program.

Top men, excellent facilities and impressive results are important ingredients contributing to the success of a fraternity, but the most vital ingredient and one that Sig Ep exemplifies to the utmost, is brotherhood. Our record speaks for itself.

During this past school year, the "Thet Estate" took on a new look indoors. The brothers teamed together and after a few days and a lot of paint splashing the house looked better than new. Thanks to the alumni, new furniture and lamps were purchased to finish the redecoration.

The year also showed a marked improvement in the scholarship of many of the brothers. Perhaps it was due to the strict "Bolshevik" quiet hours.

Theta Chi was again well represented in the S.G.A. offices and provided a good share of the campus and sports leaders.

Socially, the year was quite a success with numerous parties, a hay ride, and, of course, the Bowery Ball. It also seemed quite a year for pinnings and engagements as many brothers bit the dust.

The dorm had its normal amount of fire alarms, loud-playing Rock 'n Roll records, and late hour cramming, but above all this Sharp Hall contributed an above average amount to campus activities.

Socially, a "scheduled" snowball engagement with Cannon Hall and most of South Campus turned out to be not only a victorious one, but one of the outstanding accomplishments of the winter season. Cannon and Sussex Halls joined the dorm in a party to top off the winter schedule.

The intramural circle was bolstered by fine teams from Sharp that displayed the dorm spirit very well on both fields and courts.

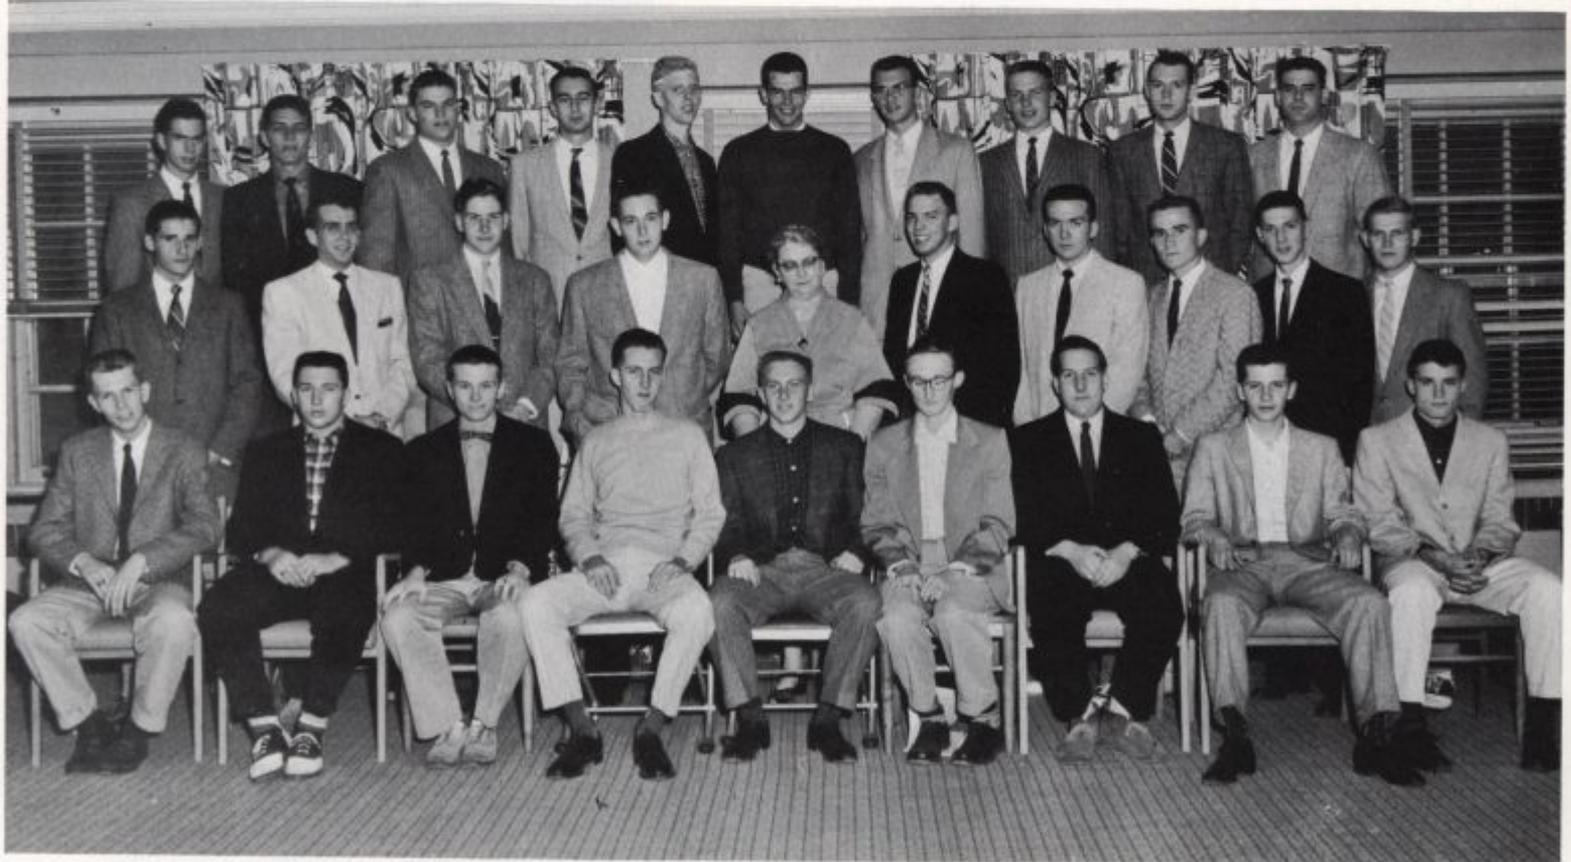

Memories of this year should include the basement flood, weekend decorations, and the long lines waiting for the old washing and drying machines to work.

Harter Hall, the oldest dormitory on the Delaware campus, was well represented in all phases of the university's social, athletic, and academic programs this year.

Pervading the house was a friendly atmosphere which contributed greatly to a successful year for those of us living here. On the Athletic scene, our men participated on both a varsity and intramural scale. On the social side, we were represented at many fraternity parties and at almost all university functions. Most important of all was the fact that during the semester, studies were not forgotten and good indices were obtained by a good many men through diligent study.

Working together, in an atmosphere of friendship, life at Harter Hall was both enjoyable and successful for its residents, and many of us are looking forward to returning to Harter in September for another year of life at the university.

Brown Hall would like to thank our new Head Resident Advisor, Mr. Jim Robinson, for a job well done. Under his leadership Brown, along with Sharp, and Harter Halls, had house decorations for a home football game. This is the first time the dorms have ever had such decorations.

Athletically and scholastically, Brown Hall did not stand out in particular. We did keep most of our men in school and those who participated in intramural sports enjoyed themselves to the fullest.

Our one party in the fall semester was a tremendous success. The music was furnished by the top name bands in the country — on records, of course.

Evans House, smallest of the men's dorms, is located in the old A.T.O. house on Main Street, facing Old College. Housing only twelve men, its location near the dining hall and athletic facilities, yet separated from the main campus, provides excellent conditions for studying. All in all, Evans House provides a friendly, home-like atmosphere for the men living there.

THE KNOLL

The Knoll was the home of seventeen students this past year, eight freshmen and nine upperclassmen. One of the most active men's resident halls despite its size, the Knoll participated in intramural sports, as well as football decoration and pep fests. In November, the residents of the Knoll gave a party for Bonham, Johnston, and Tiffany girls' dorms which proved to be a tremendous success. The Knoll was also active in other campus activities.

Life in a small dormitory such as 42E. and 46E. Delaware Avenue develops a closer living relationship between the occupants. No one loses identity such as in a large living unit, but instead each resident plays an important role in the functioning of the dormitory.

This year the Delaware Avenue Dorms have competed in the intramural athletic program, decorated for football games, and were active at pep-fests. Nearly every athletic team that represents the university has at least one resident from Delaware Avenue Dorms participating. So, it can be seen that small dormitories must have something to attract leaders and participants in such varied fields.

We all hate to see the dorms being closed at the end of this year, but the boys from "Delaware Avenue" will make their presence felt in the larger dormitories as leaders and workers.

As soon as the girls of Smyth A returned to school, we plunged right into the "swing of things." Early in the fall we worked industriously on football decorations, pep fest chants, and the annual Home Coming Tea.

A large majority of the residents worked hard to make Women's Playbill a success. Of course our Christmas Party will be long remembered as will be Women's Weekend.

Those long nights which were spent in the lounge studying resulted in our share of Dean's List students. Both the educational and social aspects of dormitory living helped to make our school year remembered.

Throughout the year, our unit has enthusiastically shared in many dorm experiences long to be remembered. These include Play Bill, various dorm parties, May Day, and Women's Weekend.

Often we saw girls joined in birthday parties and the most fascinating gab sessions. Great excitement was aroused by pep fests, pinnings, serenades, and early morning fire alarms.

We share our lives with those of everyone else. Together we live, work, and have fun. We are proud to say that this constitutes our "way of life."

The freshmen of Smyth C enjoyed a week of new experiences as college students before the sophomores stormed into the dorm with shouts of "Hey, Frosh, where's your dink?" and "Inspection in five minutes!" This seemed to be a hectic time, but when it was all over, we realized that we had made many new friends and we began to work together to make dormitory life a success. Between the hours of studying, we made football decorations, cheered at the pep fests, held lengthy gab sessions, and planned our activities. We will never forget the fun we had with our Playbill presentations, the Parents' Tea, The Christmas Party, and Women's Weekend. When June rolled around, we all went our separate ways with happy memories of the past year spent living together.

Honors came to Kent this year during football season with our Homecoming Float placing second and our playbill, "The Lost Chord," capturing first place. After returning to school in September, we barely had time to review the summer's events before we were caught up in our many studies and dorm activities. "Small and friendly" could very well be used to describe Tiffany House and the girls who live there. Many nights the "midnight oils" burned as we consumed quantities of coffee while studying for exams and also for gab fests and bridge games.

In the fall we elected Jane Errett to serve as our Head of House. During football season we helped with football decorations, attended the pep fests, and had a joint picnic with two other dorms. We will also remember the fun we had together at our Halloween and Christmas parties. On the whole the girls considered this to be a most successful and enlightening year.

LOOKING BACK

"Perched"

LOOKING BACK
By Nancy J. Stewart, '58

With the arrival of September 14, 1957, all the 'eager' students and incoming frosh made their way back to the hallowed walls of ivy of the University of Delaware. All arrived amidst the usual confusion and pleasure of seeing friends again after a three month respite from the world of the mind. We noticed that the University was expanding rapidly as we saw the beginnings of the new Student Union and four dorms as well as the disappearance of the Barracks. The new infirmary was running smoothly and girls lauded its convenient location although the male portion of the campus was less enthusiastic on this particular matter. All agreed, however, that Delaware was a growing campus and was growing gracefully. Summer tans quickly faded as well as much of the reacquaintance conversation as we knuckled down to the books. Before we knew it were were back in the old grind and falling back into the routine of student life.

Football and enthusiasm for it contribute much towards school spirit and making both the new and old students feel a definite part of college. The frosh particularly have an important role to play in relation to football. Wearing their bright blue and gold "dinks" (which they all love!) they ran onto the field and formed a line to cheer the team as they came on the field. In accordance with another important tradition connected with football, the dorms and fraternities were decorated with spirited signs and displays such as, "Rest in Pieces" and "Knock the L out of Bowling Green." The dorms and fraternities opened their doors on football weekends and welcomed both students and friends of the University to attend teas or coffee get-togethers. Many an enthusiastic rooter spilled his coffee as he rehashed the game. Charming and vital as are the traditions mentioned above, but just as much a tradition (although considerably less charming) is that search for one's seat in the stands full of gum-chewing, horn-tooting, bell-ringing, and secretly-sipping student body. Those less inured to the difficulties of seat-searching stood, shifting from foot to foot, insisting mildly that this was his seat (see?—look at my stub) confronted by students oblivious to worldly matters cheering "Hoo Ray Ray, Delaware!"

Just checking.

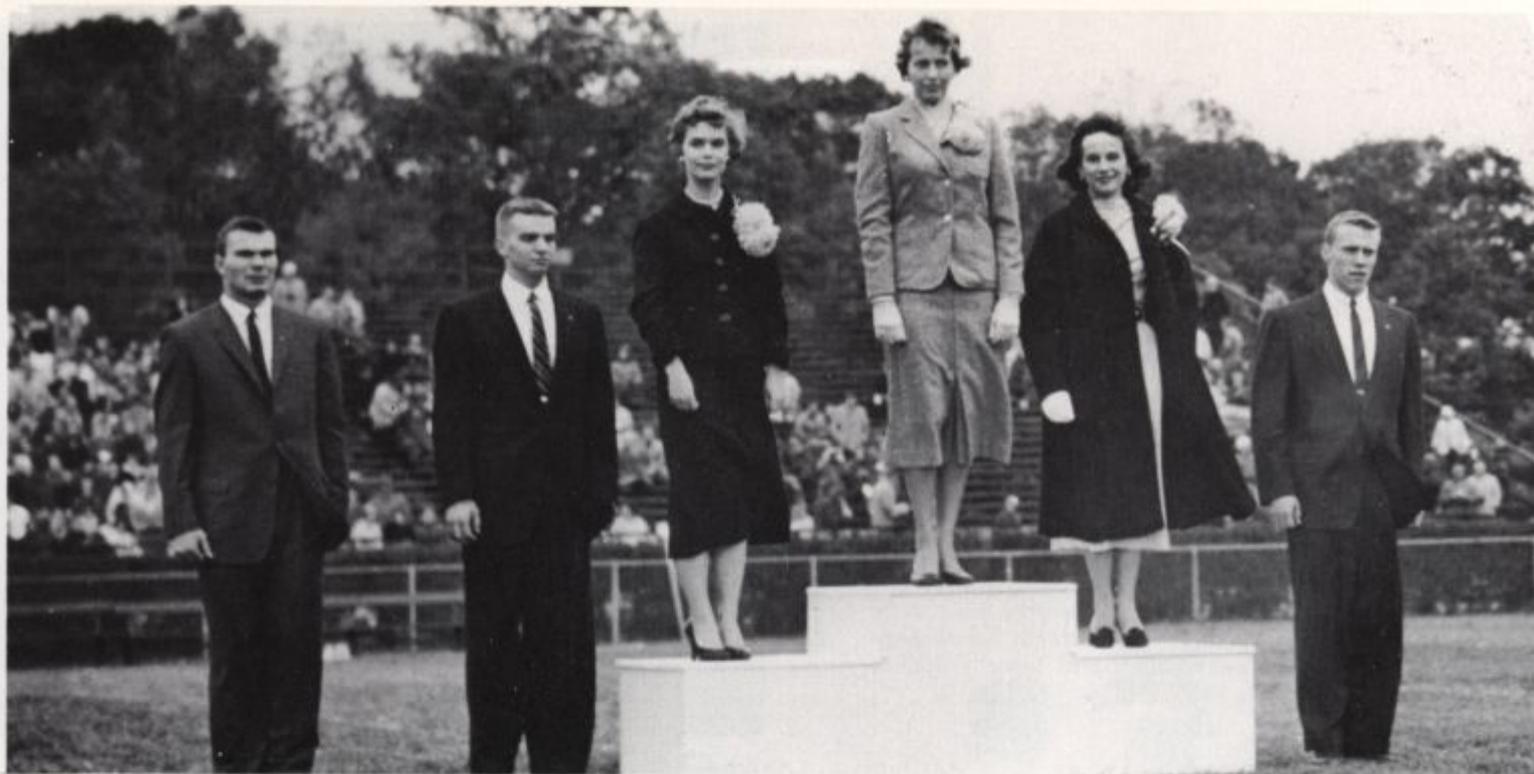

Your towels, madam.

Football brought more than a display of spirit to the campus, it also brought a display of beauty in the form (pun) of the Homecoming Queen and her court. The girls were brought to the stadium via convertibles included in the annual Homecoming Day parade. The dorms and fraternities worked into the wee small hours creating things of beauty out of chicken wire, crepe paper and approximately five miles of string and one keg of nails. The general cry was, "thank Heaven for Scotch tape."

Field day — who cut the rope?

Queen Barbara and her court.

Time marches on.

Construction by the fairer sex.

The winners of the float competition were Alpha Tau Omega and Kappa Alpha. As usual, the band and their formations directed by Mr. King added that important extra pep to the games. On Homecoming Day the band played the official songs of all the fraternities on campus and won a round of applause for their performance. The Queen, Barbara Kille, was crowned at the Harvest Dance at Ye Olde Carpenter Field House by SGA president, Jean Ashe. We danced all night to the music of George Madden and could still have begged for more. At half-time, in spite of bitter cold, the candidates smiled bravely at the crowd as they were presented on the field escorted by campus men. The spirit trophies were awarded at half-time as well. Kappa Alpha and Delta Tau Delta were the recipients of the trophy this year.

This year's fall brought not only football, but also the flu. We were doubly grateful for our new infirmary as those bug bitten students traveled the last mile to rest up from the effects of the Asian virus. The virus, however, did not prevent the alumni from visiting the campus on Alumni Day. To the upper classmen who could remember them, it was an indication of old age as we saw grads return with spouses and families.

Continuing in the fine tradition of the past years, the University Religious Council again planned Religious Emphasis Week, featuring convocation, speeches, talks and friendly get-togethers. This year's was felt to be even more of a success than those in past years and it was definitely felt that the import of REW was growing steadily.

An already firmly established tradition of the University carried out again this year was that of the President's Reception where the freshman are officially welcomed in the University family.

Lloyd the Fatman 'rocked the joint' in a jazz session at Mitchell Hall. University students let their hair down and enjoyed the rockin' sounds.

Mixed in with the recreational side of campus life, was the ever present Library and its facilities for that term paper, class report or some other similar project specifically designed by professors for the mental torture of students—written to the tune of "Who Wears Short Shorts?" However, the library was not without its advantages for it provided an opportunity for those who made eyes at each other in the stacks or amidst 18th century literature to become better acquainted in the subterranean Scrounge. The perennial walk back to the dorm could then be sparked up by a goodnight kiss.

The Receiving Line.

Next morning brought with it the discouraging sound of an alarm clock ("it CAN'T be 7:30 already!") to wake the student up in time to sleep through that fascinating 8:00 class on the "Culture and Psychology of the Anthropoid Man as Reflected in 15th. Century Literature." After a semester of this, we begin to compare the 8:00 class unfavorably with the Chinese water torture. Before the 8:00 class, however, we must buck the Dining Hall line for breakfast, at 12:00, after class, one must buck the Dining Hall line for lunch, at 5:00 one must buck the Dining Hall line for supper, then at 7:00 the next morning . . . (well, you know the rest — ad nauseum)

Refreshments at Knoll mixer.

Folks feel fine at "Fatman's" fall frolic.

It seems as though the Dining Hall was not the only place that was overcrowded, for there were many cars that ran out of gas simply driving around the block looking for a parking place. Commuters, by rights, had first priority and woe be to any campus resident who kept a car in Newark — for unless one had a device to make the car disappear, it was rather difficult to prevent getting one of those cheerful yellow tickets asking you to please appear at the business office (with pen poised and checkbook in hand).

We saw the same smiling faces in the Dining Hall receiving line, threatening certain death or at least the amputation of an arm should we try to filch a second dessert or an additional helping of Mystery Meat.

The more doleful aspects of student life, however, were brightened at the prospect of Interfraternity weekend. The dance was a huge success with the double prospect of terrific entertainment and the crowning of the IFC Queen, Dorie Mueller. The evening's entertainment consisted of a trampoline act, a xylophonist, dancers, and a rendition of "Sioux City Sue" by the composer. A really outstanding dance. The dance was preceded by many fraternity parties, featuring various combos, and friendly visiting from house to house by all fraternity men. The women proved they could plan entertainment with the presentation of the annual Women's Playbill. As usual there was a lot of friendly competition and spirit and as usual the shows were of topnotch quality, showing a wide range in imagination and originality. The winner of the cup, presented by Dean of Women Bessie B. Collins, was Kent followed by Cannon and Warner. Kent's Playbill centered around the rather serious theme of world-wide brotherhood. Cannon featured a story about a two-headed boy, the hapless victim of atomic radiation. A poor lost note who finally found a place for herself was the general theme of Warner's presentation.

In the entertainment line, more on the serious side, however, was the fine concert series sponsored by the University and featuring such artists as Mr. Freccia, director and conductor of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra.

Although an integral part of college life, the parties, dances, and concerts must give way to the inevitable, inescapable reality of hour exams. Hour exams must lead us unhaltingly towards the traumatic experience of finals. We enjoyed ourselves at the Christmas Dance, but shortly after were awakened to the monotonous task before us to bomb that final. We trudged into the Book Store to purchase our beloved blue books and returned to our monk-like existence in the dorm or frat house to continue that constantly advised against but consistently employed device known desperately as "cramming." We got up promptly at the alarm's ring (if we went to bed at all), took our final with the proper scholarly sobriety and then spent the remainder of the day in melancholy meditation at the friendly D. P.

Exam time!!!

they begin a battle. The girls took it all in fun and didn't mind too much when their hair went straight from the snow or when their new skirt had the oppressive odor of wet wool.

Next on weather's agenda was a spell of pseudo-spring for which all were thankful as we had the Military Ball coming up. We danced to the music of George Madden and a good time was had by all. Scabbard and Blade gave their usual fine exhibition of marching and the presentation of the military sponsors added the necessary touch of glamour. We voted for the candidate of our choice as we entered the door and all held our breath until the winner, Mary Stephenson, was announced and crowned by John Pollack. Some people like to make jokes about ROTC boys, but when the time of the Military Ball rolled around, the girls all seemed to unanimously agree that "there's something about a uniform."

Another semester, another line.

DELAWARIANS ... THE CLASS

THAT NEVER GRADUATES

After the exhausting experience of finals, all of us went home to enjoy an all too brief rest from our studies. Again, vacation ended too soon and we made our way back to the University. It hardly seemed fair that we had to face another ordeal immediately following finals: registration. Even though finals had served to thin out the line somewhat, there was still the confusion of drop-adds, course credits and prerequisites with which to contend. An added pleasure to registration was the purchasing of books at the campus book store. The ancient punishment of running the gauntlet has nothing on this. (In fact, campus athletes might do well to realize this experience as a means of staying in "shape.")

Second semester, however, had rewards of beauty as Delaware was the scene of a few snowfalls. Old Mother Nature almost overdid it once with twelve inches of the white stuff but for the most part, it beautified the campus and lent an air of very real charm. With the snow, however, came the sunglasses and the University went Hollywood as Delaware students did their small part to prevent snow blindness. Snow seems to bring out the lovable side of boys as girls walk down campus and are playfully bombed, bombarded and mutilated by snowballs. The boys seemed to know instinctively that girls are not renowned for their splendid aim and feel fairly safe when Mitchell Hall rocks with Armstrong!

Decisions, decisions, always decisions!

We sure needed the aggressiveness that a uniform implies when we tried to fight the mail line — especially in the 10:00 rush. That mail box is pretty much of a necessity in the life of the college student even though it consists mostly of ads for Time, Life, and specials on second rate recordings. However, the mail line at 10:00 is kid stuff compared to the Scrounge at 12:00. Commuters eat lunch to the rhythm of "Be-Bop a Lula" as those behind the counter struggle to remember whether that was an order for two hamburgers and a hot dog or two hot dogs and a cheeseburger or . . . ?

Second semester brought Louis Armstrong, the Junior's terrific musical and the heretofore largely ignored freshmen came into their own as fraternity rushing began.

Lunch — commuter's special.

"Westward, Ha!"

Immediately they were catered to in the form of smokers, parties and free cigarettes. Fraternity histories and traditions were fed to the freshmen men until they weren't quite sure what history went with what fraternity. After the round of parties and get-togethers were over, they had to face making the big decision as to their first preference of a fraternity. Aided in part by the special issue of the "Review" featuring pros and cons of fraternities, it nonetheless was a difficult decision to make. Finally, the weeks of rushing for the freshmen and staying up late for the fraternity men were over. The pledge lists came out and all fraternities agreed that it was the "best pledge class yet."

Not to be overshadowed, the ladies entertained during Women's Weekend and proved that they could plan a really terrific time for the 'menfolk.' The weekend began with dorm parties on Friday night—some featuring theatre parties before going to Mitchell Hall to see "The Tender Trap" (coincidence?), others featuring dinners, combos and just plain socializing. Saturday was the night of the big dance to the tunes of Johnny Austin. Boutonnieres for the men were provided at the door and were worn proudly. The general theme for the dance was Mardi Gras and it was heartily agreed that the decorations were certainly appropriate and well-done. Sunday featured general collapse or picnics planned by groups of girls. The best thing about it (to the men) was that it was all at the expense of the girls.

Before and after Women's Weekend there was the constant concern of the distaff side of the campus with weight problems. Diets and exercises were constantly compared and the general thought was "if I could just lose about five pounds . . ."

Spring slowly but surely wrought its handywork on the campus, making it more obvious than ever that Delaware has about the prettiest campus anywhere. Spring, however, was not all sunshine and magnolia blossoms, for it brought with it the "monsoon season." Bad as it was to get up at all for those 8:00 classes, it was worse yet to wake up hearing the patter of rain. Everyone became more convinced than ever that there should definitely be a course offered in "Wading 101" (prerequisite to "Puddle-jumping 202"). In spite of rain, the Campus Chest Drive went on and we were asked to give to a cause worthy of our money — a fund that contributes to important individual charities.

Spring and rain helped to make the natural beauties of the campus grow and encouraged the building and nearing-completion of the new structures on campus, the student union and four new dorms. We also learned that the University is planning to build apartments for forty-eight married couples in the near future.

The Concert Series continued as well as our other activities and the second semester featured artists such as Raphael Mendez.

It seems that the effect of Spring is widespread for it not only affected the nature and building of the campus, it also affected the students. There was as usual, the to-be-expected Spring Fever as well as a new addition — Frisbee. Campus men and women were noticed throwing a plastic disk-like object around. No one was too certain just what the rules were, but it was fun, anyway.

We got a welcome change from the routine of classes when we were let out to view the ROTC parade (besides, the band played much too loud for the prof to be heard). The military sponsors reviewed it and outstanding CO's and leaders of ROTC were honored.

Although it appeared as though the academic year was wearing on, there was at least one big weekend left — the fraternity weekends. Friday night the houses gave their fraternity parties featuring combos and entertainment. Saturday night we journeyed to nearby country clubs or restaurants for dinner-dances and selections of sweethearts and dream girls. We all relaxed at picnics on Sunday — if one could call swimming in freezing water, baseball and just plain rough-housing relaxation. That 8:00 on Monday wasn't so well attended as we collapsed and just couldn't get out of bed after the weekends.

Right after fraternity weekends we were hit by the Spring Dance. We enjoyed it to the music of Buddy Williams. The girls had "Double-trouble" for after deciding what they would wear to the dance, they had to plan their costume and dances for May Day. The May Queen, Barbara Roser, and her court looked especially lovely and the program, as usual was a success.

Baseball, track, and lacrosse became "the thing" following football, basketball and wrestling. The girls were not to be left out of the athletic "swim" for the Aquatic Club showed their stuff at their annual water show and proved that while they are not as fast as the swimming team, they are a lot more graceful. Fraternity intramurals continued as usual.

Foul!

But the women won anyway.

With the rapid closing of the year, elections were held to select the leaders of next year's classes and SGA.

The year was beginning to turn 'full circle,' for finals time was again with us. There was a question, though, whether those sunbathers were studying their texts or comparing tans. After the long drag of finals, most of the campus breathed a sigh of relief and left for home — headed eventually for the shore or some summer job 'til next September. For seniors, however, there was still Senior Weekend to be enjoyed and the unbelievable reality of graduation. We went to the formal Thursday night, then to the dinner-dance at the Italian-American Club on Friday. Saturday we enjoyed ourselves at the picnic and Sunday (believe it or not!) we were graduated.

The end of an academic year always is associated with mixed emotions. We close our books with a sigh of relief and vow not to even think until September and yet we sigh because this year takes us that much closer to the time when we are active participants in that mysterious world beyond the University walls.

Some of us saw the year as another step in the climb towards graduation while others saw it as the final rung of undergraduate achievement. We remember this year as a time filled with fun and activities much as any other college year but we hope this year is an advancement towards the realization of the meaning and import of the motto on the University of Delaware seal — "Knowledge is the light of the mind."
