Dear Dannie:

I dictated a long letter to you on Saturday morning which is being typed today and which I hope to send you this evening. In it, I mentioned that I had had a letter from Peron, written in his own hand, and that I had written a long reply and would send you copies.

I am enclosing herewith the Spanish text of Peron's letter to me and my reply. This is for your personal information only and I would appreciate your not making any mention of this in any correspondence that you may have with Brosens for, as you know, most of the mail of certain types going in and out of the Argentine may be subject to censorship. information

For your further very personal and confidential/I want to tell you that this letter from Peron was delivered to me by a special messenger from the Argentine who, I happen to know, is a good friend and associate of the President. The bearer of the letter gave me some further messages which the President had asked him to convey to me and the President, I am sure, was rather anxious to get some observations of mine based on these oral messages he sent me. This is the reason for my long letter to him and for some of the things which are in the letter.

All this is very confidential and I have not mentioned this exchange of letters to anyone else for obvious reasons and I would appreciate your keeping Peron's letter and my reply for your background.

I really think things are developing in a satisfactory way and I hope that in another two months at the maximum the way will be open to take up the matter of CADE's financing. One cannot tell, these very uncertain times, what is going to happen but things are clearing up and I think the Argentine situation is pretty satisfactory both down there and up here. Theoring more

Dresel came in to see Marion this morning and seemed well satisfied. Her pulse rate instead of being in the fairly high 90's is now in the middle 80's and she is feeling in every way better. All the examinations that Dresel has made have turned out satisfactorily. He tells me that there is nothing wrong with her organically and that this functional situation which reflects itself in the high pulse rate is very largely due to nervousness which also affects her stomach and intestinal tract. She is as much relieved as I am and this already affects her tenseness. He told her that he had another examination he wanted to make next week of the intestinal tract although he does not really consider it essential. She left this morning for Boston to visit her brother and her sister from Wilmington came up to make the trip with her. She will be returning Sunday morning and we will be here all of next week. We want to leave here around June 25th for Mexico.

Just as I was dictating this cable, I got your cable asking me to wire you about Marion and I am sending you a few words by cable this afternoon. Marion will appreciate your interest as I do.

There are some other matters that I want to cover briefly, which I was not able to cover in my letter on Saturday, and it will reach you in a few days.

With love and good wishes to you and Hettie and to Edna and Yvonne, and with best wishes to Yvonne's family and all our associates in Sofina, believe me

Cordially and faithfully yours,
