Study investigates UD's impact on state

By LAURA SHULER and JANE SPARANGO

With over 6,000 employees, the university is the fifth largest employer in the state, according to a study con-ducted by university economics professors William Latham and David T. Black. The university ranks behind DuPont, Chrysler, General Motors and the Wilmington Medical Center.

"The Economic Impact of the University of Delaware in the state," released in October, 1981, investigated the university's expenditures on goods and services produced in Delaware during the 1980-81 fiscal year.

University expenditures ac-counted for 2.1 percent of Delaware's wages and salaries, 2.5 percent of the state's employment and 1.7 percent of the state's tax revenues, the report said.

The expenditures by the university itself, its employees, students and visitors totalled $106.7 million for 1980-81, the report stated.

According to the report, university expenditures totalled $28.1 million from Delaware firms, university employees' purchases amounted to $46.7 million, students spent $28.9 million in the state over and above their purchases from the university itself and visitors purchased an estimated $3 million in goods and services from Delaware businesses.

These expenditures are directly attributable to the university and would otherwise not have been made in the state, the report stated.

These direct expenditures generated additional indirect purchases, which brought the total expenditure impact of the university on the state to $156.1 million in 1980-81.

In broader terms, the presence of a university in Delaware creates "an atmosphere which is a valuable asset to the state economy," the report said.

The university also provides public service activities that may exceed their costs, the report said. A 1975 survey found the university averaged 8,000 requests for public service per year.

An example cited in the research involved the Delaware poultry industry which suffered losses resulting from a disease. While individual producers were unable to discover the cause of the disease, the report said the university was able to carry out the necessary research for the poultry industry at an incremental cost.

Individual faculty members also contribute to the state's economy. University faculty added an average of 2,750 hours per week to public service activity, according to the 1975 survey, which is equivalent to 70 fulltime employees.

"The Economic Impact of the University of Delaware on the State," was prepared for the University Office of the President.

ity debates war memorial move By CASEY GILMORE

A university official made a request at the Newark City Council's Monday night meeting to relocate the war memorial in front of the Newark Academy Building. Also, a bill further restricting consumption of alcohol in Newark was signed into law.

Dr. Robert W. Mayer, associate vice president for facilities management, told the council the site of the Academy Building was being relandscaped to "support and enhance the architectural features of this historic building which is very important to both the city and the university," he said. The building is owned by the trustees of the original school, and was leased to the city for use as a city hall until the Municipal Building on Elkton Road was built in 1975. At that time, the Academy Building was deeded to the university to restore and preserve, since the trustees couldn't afford the upkeep.

The building houses the Development Office, which directs the university's private fund raising efforts. "We want not just the building, which we recently refurbished and restored, but the site itself to carry the kind of image that the university wants to create for those who may be willing to make gifts and benefactions to the institution,"Mayer said.

Mayer argued that the present location of the memorial obscured the building and did not enhance the monument itself, "standing as it does rather starkly in the middle of the site." The architects hired by the university chose a spot on the building's east side, for the monument's relocation.

designated "high risk"

The relocation plan met with opposition from the council's two war veterans, Olan Thomas and William Coverdale, and from Eric Mayer, who represented the original committee which erected the 35-year-old monument.

Mayer expressed his opposition to the relocation: "We put it there with the idea that it was going to stay there forever. I think you'd have a hard time moving it and besides there are many names of boys on the monu-ment who gave their lives. As far as blocking the view of the building, it's not very big and if you can't see a four- story building behind it, you must be lying on the ground." Coverdale called the relocation a "kick in the pants" and feels the monument is being 'relegated to the scrap heap. '

Councilman John Suchanec also felt un-comfortable with the move. "There are some things you just don't do. Like a modern pop song says; 'you don't spit in the wind, you

Woo, WXDR hires professional manager I bought you a toaster.

By JANE SPARANGO

For the first time in its fiveand-a-half year history, university radio station WX-DR will have a full-time professional manager, beginning July 1, according to Paul McLane, the station's publicity director.

Cate Cowan, 28, of Willington, Conn., was selected over 36 others that applied for the position, which is funded and supervised by the Office of the Dean of Students, according to Dean of Students Raymond Eddy.

Cowan will be responsible for the daily administration of the station, preparing and administering the station's budget, training and supervising the students staff, and ensuring compliance with FCC regulations.

Eddy said Cowan is also required to teach one course each semester in the communication department.

'Cate met all our expectations for a full-time professional manager," Eddy said. "She was chosen because of her experience, ideas and en-thusiasm."

Cowan became involved in radio as an undergraduate at Clark University in Massachusetts where she produced and hosted two weekly programs aired on the campus radio station, WCUW.

"When I started working for WCUW it was in the process of going from AM to FM," she said. "Its expansion was similar to the expansion WXDR will go through when it increases its power to 1,000 watts."

After graduation, Cowan attended Boston University where she received a master's degree in broadcast journalism. "In all communication, television seems to take precedence," Cowan said. "People always ask me if I want to eventually 'move up to television'. But in television, the viewer is passive.'

"In radio, the listener is active. It's the creativity and the infinite possibilities of the use of sound that keeps me in-terested in radio," Cowan said.

After completing her master's degree, Cowan worked for Maine Public Broadcasting where she hosted the "Morning Magazine" program. Cowan said she would write and broadcast the morning news as well as public affairs programs. "In non-commercial radio

you get to do everything because you can't afford to hire others to do it for you," she said.

Cowan said her "biggest claim to fame" was a recent 12-hour live special that was aired coast to coast via satellite that she hosted, celebrating the birthday of John Cage, "one of the most influential composers of the twentieth century," she said.

Cowan is currently a library assistant at the University of Connecticut and an independent producer of radio programs.

"Public radio is always looking for work from independent producers," she said. "It's a great source of money and prestige for a sta-tion," Cowan said, "and I want to encourage the WXDR staff to produce and submit their own work to other stations."

Cowan, who visited WXDR last week, said, "It was the dedication and excitement of the WXDR staff that attracted me to the job." When asked what her plans for WXDR would be, Cowan replied, "Whatever plans I have will evolve with the WX-DR staff. Good radio happens when there are good pro-ducers with creative energies.

"I want to establish some kind of standards for operating the new equip-ment," Cowan said, "so "SO students can feel comfortable enough to experiment with it.'

According to City Secretary Betty Stiltz, the new law "makes it easier for the police to arrest people for carrying open containers of alcohol without having to see them drink from the container. It also prohibits drinking on private property, such as the Newark Shopping Center, without the owner's permission."

A final provision of the law is a clause prohibiting possession of an open container of alcohol outside any tavern or package store licensed for off-premise sales, such as the Deer Park and the Stone Balloon.

At the front of the class, the teacher shuffles through his notes, looks intently at his class to gain their attention and starts his lecture. During and starts his lecture. During the lecture he notices students sleeping, daydream-ing, or simply not paying at-tention. Disturbed he begins to wonder, "Is it me? The material? My presentation? What?"

Perhaps Marty Friedman, consultant for the university Instructional Resource Center can find the reason. Friedman, along with two graduate assistants meet with teachers who are having problems in the classroom, and through various techniques, tries to improve the in-dividual's classroom perdividual's classroom per-formance. "In almost every case there is improvement," Friedman said. "It's a very sensitive topic. It's hard for many people to even call us." Friedman also emphasized that "the procedure is totally voluntary. If it's not, or if voluntary. If it's not, or if they're just looking for ratings to get tenure, I won't work with them."

The scope of the problem varies with each faculty member, he explained. Sometimes the teacher may have never taught the material before, or he may have overestimated the ability of the class. Then there are others who already teach well, and want to improve. "Sometimes it's a skill

Initially, Friedman meets with the faculty member to find out some of his background, after which he uses various methods to define the nature of the problem. These methods include blem. These methods include in-class observations, video tapes of the class, and student interviews. After comprehen-sively analyzing this data, possible solutions are sought and discussed with the teacher. Friedman notes that discurre will occur disagreements will occur. School offers semester at sea

Each semester Woods Hole In-stitute in Massaschusetts offers its students a chance to participate in an oceanographic expedition of the Carribean which fills an entire semester's credits, according to the Philadelphia Inquirer. Sea Semester was created 11 years ago by the Sea Education Association (SEA) at the Woods Hole Institute and has taken more than 1,200 students on its expeditions since then.

Each six-week sea voyage is preceeded by a six-week training period in which the students learn basic seamanship, oceanography, and maritime literature and history.

Many students have said they learned not only seamanship and oceanography, but also new ways of getting along with people and handlg certain situations. One student said that being there is far better than trying to derive an image of something in a classroom.

Students who embark on this adventure get occasional breaks, shore leave, and chances to swim, but are quick to point out that it is no pleasure cruise

The latest expedition recently made a stop in Philadelphia on its way home to help celebrate the city's 300th an-niversary. The ship, the Westward, with 24 students and three instructors, was the first of the Tall Ships to make it way down the Delaware in the celebration program.

Breathalyzers found defective

Flaws have been found on a certain del breathalyzer that may allow for retrials of people who have been convicted of drunken driving, ac-cording to the Philadelphia Inquirer. The Breathalyzer Model 1000, built by the Smith and Wesson firearms company, has been found to cause erratic readings when used near police radio equipment. This could cause suspects to appear more intoxicated than they actually are.

The Breathalyzer 1000 has been on the market since 1972 and is used by police in nearly every state.

Airlines reduce fares for children

In an attempt to fill empty seats with summer vacationers, the nation's airlines are cutting or eliminating fares for children, according to the Associated Press.

A "school's out sale," offering 50 percent discounts for children between 2 and 11, accompanied by an adult, and a 25 percent discount for young people between 8 and 21, escorted or not, was announced by Braniff International.

Other Airlines immediately said they would match the discounts. Pan American World Airways announced a "free kids" promotion when ac-companied by adults on certain routes. Eastern and Delta have been promoting a round-trip youth fare of $49, slashed from a standard roundtrip youth fare of $262.

All of the promotions had strings attached but they all agreed that keeping up with rapidly changing fares and conditions was harrowing.

Goodrich hopes to settle account

B.F. Goodrich Company announced on Tuesday, that it is hoping to be the first company to settle accounts with Iran, the Philadelphia Inquirer reported.

A tribunal was set up by Iran and the United States as part of the hostage release agreement to take care of frozen accounts between Iranian and American companies.

According to the Inquirer, Goodrich has said that two Iranian companies, Kian Tire Manufacturing Co. and Abadan Petrochemical Co. owe them in excess of a half million dollars.

A State Department Official told the Inquirer that the first payment from the tribunal's trust fund will be paid shortly, though they would not identify the recipient as B.F. Goodrich Company.

Wildlife fund markets panda logo

The World Wildlife Fund - U.S. is offering its name and giant panda bear logo to private business for 15 percent of their gross revenues, according to the Philadelphia Inquirer.

This is an attempt by the non-profit Wildlife Fund, which provides scien-tific and technical help to conservation programs, to obtain a new source of income.

The Fund hopes businesses will use its logo as a new kind of marketing edge, to put on products as a symbol of their international conservation efforts.

This concept of helping out nonprofit organizations was used recently by Procter and Gamble to help the Special Olympics, by General Foods to help the Muscular Dystrophy Association, and by American Ex-press to help a Florida school-concert. The panda logo is expected to bring $200,000 in revenues to the Wildlife Fund this year.

A&P to reopen area stores

An undisclosed number of the 79 recently closed A&P stores in the Philadelphia area will be re-opened under an agreement between the company and union leaders, according to the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Some of the stores will be owned and operated by union members who worked in them before they were closed, a union spokesman said.

The company also announced that it would close it's administrative headquartes in King of Prussia along with two of the three Philadelphia area warehouses.

Serious financial difficulties forced A&P, which has its corporate headquarters in Montvale, N.J., to close two-thirds of its stores around the country over the last seven years.

Company officials blamed high energy and interest costs as well as fierce competition from other supermarket chains for the closings.

A special problem in the Philadelphia area was the high average wage and seniority levels of the A&P workforce, which made its labor costs higher than those of other supermarket chains.

The re-openings are a victory for many of the 2,400 workers left unemployed by the A&P store closings.

Young women sold in China

Hundreds of women in Chinese provinces are being bought or abducted in an effort to offer them for sale as wives, an old practice that has recently been revived according to the Los Angeles Times.

Chinese sources say the root of the problem is economic. Recent rural reforms have been made which tie the income of the farm family to its output, which makes some families unable to pay the "bride price" other peasants want.

An official report from a Yunnan Province newspaper states more than 750 women, many under 20, the minimum marriage age, were taken in the past year from a region in China's southern Yunnan Province.

Budget battling

Rejecting the fiscal 1983 budget proposal endorsed by President Reagan and the Senate Budget Committee Wednesday, House Republican Leaders have shown themselves willing to challenge party policy when threatened about the one issue which they are most passionate about -- their own reelection this fall. Citing social security benefit cuts totaling 40 percent over the next three years as their primary objection, the Republicans want to wait until the presidential study commission report on the social security system arrives in December before taking a stance on the issue. Waiting until December would postpone action that could otherwise prove constituently unpopular and politically suicidal in November.

The Democrats, on the other hand, have already come out in favor of not cutting the social security benefits, choosing instead to support a tax hike 50 percent higher than the ³95 billion increase proposed in the White House-Senate Committee budget.

Both party plans are irresponsible. The social security system is indeed in a state of financial chaos, but this chaos cannot be solved with the sweeping 40 percent cuts proposed by the GOP nor by the hands-off policy chosen by the Democrats. What becomes clearly evident is that neither party is acting out of dedication to its constituents, but rather simply politicking in an attempt to alienate the smallest groups of voters possible.

As in the partisan in-fighting over previous budget issues such as military spending, educational funding and social welfare program, our national political leaders seem to spend a minimum of time considering the impact on the people affected directly by their actions.

At present the outlook for thoughtful budget negotiating is grim because it has been reduced to a mere political dog fight between the two parties involved. The only solution to this can come through the voices of the people the issues directly concern -- the voters.

The only option open to the constituents is to increase political activity on a large scale. Involvement in special interest lobbying groups like Common Cause, the National Organization of Women and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has already proven somewhat effective in influencing the decisions of legislators. The formation of more groups of this kind, concerned specifically with individual issues and interest groups, would provide a viable method to make congressman and senators aware of public opinion.

Individuals must also take part in this process. Letterwriting on a large scale, as in the recent campaign undertaken on this campus to stop cutbacks in educational financial aid, can also apply enough pressure to make legislators take notice of those whom they had previously ignored.

Politicians traditionally pay attention to only those who have something to offer them. Ironically, the constituents who they are usually least mindful of have the most to offer those in public office -- votes.

Point of Honor

"It's all so....so..." The young woman squeezed her eyes shut to search for a word that would properly express her anger and disgust. "Stupid!" she exploded. "Stupid! Stupid!"

In a strange way, her reaction heartened me. For, after all, it was only a small war. A British destroyer had been sunk. Argentina had lost an aged cruiser, a couple of patrol boats and a submarine. Several aircraft had been shot down. But casualties had been less than 500 - a small war as wars go.

Yet the anger and disgust of most reasonable people I know – and my own, too – has seemed out of all proportion to the events down there in the forlorn reaches of the South Atlantic Ocean.

Part of it, I suppose, was that many of us had secretly enjoyed the preparations for this war. The news that a British fleet had embarked on a two-week voyage across the seas to face down an uppity South American dictator made us smile in this age of instant nuclear destruction. How nostalgic! What a lovely, old-fashioned way of going off to war.

Then, when men began drowning and burning and exploding and bleeding to death, we felt betrayed. We had bought tickets to a comic opera and we were being shown a live horror show. I don't know what else we expected. But we wanted our money back.

I like to think though, that there is another cause. It is that this old-fashioned war is being fought for an old-fashioned reason: national honor.

In the beginning, there was cynical talk of oil deposits. We don't hear that any more. In the beginning, there was cynical talk that the Argentine junta invaded the worthless islands to take their citizens' minds off their economic troubles and that Mrs. Thatcher overresponded for similar reasons. Maybe so. But now they fight for national honor and for national honor alone. The Argentines cannot withdraw their troops from those treeless, stormswept rocks 250 miles from anywhere. Their national honor would be impugned. Nor can the British recall their mighty fleet that so nobly set sail with Union Jacks flying and bands playing "God Save the Queen." Their national honor would be besmirched.

And so men are killing and dying down there in the forlorn reaches of the South Atlantic Ocean for such an ephemeral and oldfashioned concept as national honor. I like to think that is partly, at least, what so angers and disgusts us. We don't talk much about honor these days.

We don't talk much about honor these days. I happen to believe it's an old-fashioned virtue to be cherished. But not to kill or die for. Not any more.

I think this was an advance in human relationships, a small step toward reverence for life. If individuals can take this step so can nations. Yet here are two civilized countries, Great Britain and Argentina, killing and dying for no other reason but honor.

I like to think that this is what the young woman meant when she cried, "Stupid!" I like to think this is the cause of our anger and disgust.

C Non

I know we wil probably go on fighting wars for political, economic and religious reasons. But I would hope that we will see from this current war that sending young men to kill and die for honor is a patently dishonorable act. And I would hope that world opinion will relegate wars for national honor to the dustbin of history.

It would be another small step. And if we can only take enough small steps, we will get there yet. At least, I like to think so. (Copyright Chronicle Publishing Co. 1982)

This is the second production I've seen of the Harrington players (I'm sorry I missed Godspell) and find that I am again impressed with the initiative, energy, and quality of the work.

One of the items that often surfaces in talking about the defects of education is the fact that students are passive, cannot think for themselves, and are generally apathetic and dependent. The ongoing commitment of Harrington happily disproves the generalization.

"Pippin" demonstrated a high degree of energy, practice, and creativity, all qualities that I hold to be im-

ZDZISLAW RURARZ

"The younger generation in Poland could not accept the fact that they would have to work forever while their standard of living continued to decrease. They continued to get bolder and bolder until finally, in July 1980, they began to strike," said Zdzisław Rurarz, former economic advisor to the Polish govern-ment in a lecture Monday in Purnell Hall.

Rurarz explained the Polish economic crisis to about 200 people in a lecture spon-sored by the economics department.

Rurarz attributed the country's problems to the lack of economic growth in Poland since World War II.

As a result of the war, Rurarz said, "Poland's territory was reduced by one fourth; 40 percent of the country's economic industry was destroyed; and Poland's war debt amounted to more than the country could possibly pay back."

The war devastated Poland, Rurarz continued , and the country was forced to sell the Soviet Union 100-million tons of coal at oneseventh the world price.

"Moreover, Poland was restricted from the Marshall Plan and did not benefit from the In-ternational Monetary fund," he said. "These restrictions helped ruin the Polish economy and prevented Poland from rebuilding and paying its war debts."

Since the war, the Gross National Product (GNP) in Poland has fallen 25 percent and it is expected to fall another 25 percent this year, Rurarz explained.

The unstable economy led to the first Polish riot in 1956. "One hundred people were killed, but the bloodshed did bring about some liberalization," he added.

The events of the 1960's, however, created an even weaker economy." The standard of living began to drop and in 1970 the governliving began to drop and in 1970 the govern-ment raised food prices, which again, caused rioting in Polish cities and more bloodshed," Rurarz said. "Again, there was some liberalization, and again there were ambitious plans of making Poland's economy stronger." Despite the riots in the 1950's and 1960's, the GNP continued to decline in Poland throughout the 1970s. Rurarz said, "In 1979 Poland's GNP came to an absolute low and the Polish population came to the conclusion the Polish population came to the conclusion that the socialistic economy did not function. "At this point I decided to resign from my advisorship because I was 100-percent sure that without profound reforms the economic situation in Poland would sooner or later bring about a disaster," he explained.

"In July, 1980 the Polish workers began to strike," he said. "This time the workers were better organized. They were not taking to the streets or seeking violence because of the threat of bloodshed."

The high risk group in-cludes the ice hockey, lacrosse, men's rugby and women's rugby clubs, and the council is now considering the boxing club for high risk status. A high risk club must make its members have physicals in addition to following the prescribed guidelines.

Johnson thinks his club has been treated unfairly, explaining the club has had no injuries and had broken no rules. "No one has ever come down to witness our workouts or a tournament," he said. "The administration is just blindly saying 'Oh boxing – somebody is going to get hurt.' I think the administration is ignorant of our program and of boxing in general," he said.

Johnson explained that the club boxes on a different level than professional boxing. "The college sport is more controlled and safer than on T.V. Our emphasis is on style, not the power of the blow," he

The problem with boxing, according to Harper, is that it is not an NCAA sport and so has no qualifying guidelines. The NCAA dropped the sport in 1961 because of difficulties in campus recruiting and were fighting "profes-sionals," Harper explained. "We've gotten guidelines from the boxing club, who have been very helpful, and from a national boxing association," Harper said. "We're trying to establish certain safety standards, such as wearing headgear and gloves of a certain weight.

Harper sent the boxing guidelines to the insurance company and is awaiting a reply. "Right now, it looks like the club will be reinstated in September but we have to make sure the council agrees," she said.

Johnson said he doesn't mind if his club is included in the high risk category because he feels the boxers. should have physicals. This sentiment adds to Johnson's frustration with the way his club has been handled. "I think they've done the whole thing backwards," he said. "They should have gone to the insurance people first, instead of throwing a wrench into our works and then consulting the insurance company.

'Reagan out to destroy EPA'

Sierra Club lobbyist opposes cuts

By JOANNE SULLIVAN

Environmentalists are fighting a fierce battle in Washington to prevent Congress from passing the dangerous cuts in environmental spending proposed by the Reagan Administration, said Larry Williams lobbyist for the environmental group, the Sierra Club, and former member of the Council on Environmental Quality during a lecture in Kirkbride on Tuesday.

"The reason the Sierra Club has suddenly gotten fire built under it," Williams said, "is right in front of us. It's Ronald Reagan. He's out to destroy the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA)."

When Reagan was first elected, Williams explained, the environmental agencies concentrated their attacks on Secretary of the Interior James Watt, because they felt Reagan was too politically popular. Now that Reagan's popularity has fallen they are applying pressure to him and his supporters in Congress, Williams added.

One key to the attack on Reagan's administration Williams said, is that "polls have shown that the ecology is one of the big issues people care about." While crime and the federal budget are more important considerations to the general public, the environment is at an advantage because it is something that can be pinned to a particular candidate, according to Williams.

Another major cornerstone in the attack on the ad-ministration is a recent publication titled, "The Indict-ment on the Reagan Ad-ministration." Williams explained that to write the book, We went over each agency in the Federal government that deals with the environment; whether it was proposing regulations, suggesting changes, or actually taking action, and we built a case saying it isn't just Watt, it's Reagan."

Williams stressed the need for grass roots support if there is to be any increase in the 1983 environmental funding. He suggested: letter writing, calling represen-tatives, and working on campaigns of pro-environmental candidates as ways of in-creasing Washington's awareness of the people's support for environmental funding.

Williams admitted that balancing the budget poses a problem because, "We are running up against a very difficult problem: 'How do you increase the EPA's budget without saying the hell with the federal budget?' We're interested in how we might do it using issues that are environmentally oriented."

Some changes he proposed to increase revenue for environmental funding were:

improving oil and gas royalty collection; implementing royalties for hard-rock minerals; and eliminating income tax deductions for second homes.

The hardest problem to overcome in increasing funding, Williams said, is the officials who testify before Congress that their agencies can work more efficiently with the budget cuts. "That's a tough thing to argue against. People say 'why give them the money if they don't want it'

Some of the programs the budget proposes include: closing field sites for studying the effects of pollution on aquatic environments; reducing research in the effects of hazardous air pollutants; a 42 percent reduction in water quality research; and elimination of the Offices of Transportation and Land Use

Policy. "The EPA really isn't doing a more efficient job," Williams said, "They're do-ing what we all thought they were doing; that is, gutting the agency."

EXPECTING TO GRADUATE JUNE 1982 Any student who expects to graduate this June should have com-pleted the application for Associate or Baccalaureate Degree and sub-mitted the appropriate form with payment to the Cashiers Office, 012 Hullihen Hall by this date. If you have not filed your form and pay-ment, you should do so immediately. Failure to remit payment for the graduation fee may result in withholding of your transcripts and diploma.

STUDENTS INTERESTED IN THE COMMUNICATION MAJOR

Applications for the communication major, or an interdepartmental/double major with communication, must be submitted to the main departmental office by 4:00 p.m., Friday, May 20, 1982.

The Department of Communication welcomes applications from all qualified students and invites you to consider this challenging field of study. The number of spaces in each graduating class is limited. Only applications from students with at least a 2.4 cumulative grade index at the end of the Spring Semester will be considered by the undergraduate admission committee. Students with the highest cumulative grade index are considered first. (Students previously rejected must re-apply.)

Because the class of 1982, 1983, and 1984 are full, applications for those classes will be considered only as vacancies occur. Openings now exist for the class of 1985, or for University of Delaware students with first semester sophomore status beginning in September 1982.

Application forms and additional information about the department are available in Room 301 Ewing (formerly Kirkbride) Hall.

...economist speaks on Poland

Rurarz wanted to believe Solidarity would bring a bloodless revolution that would reform the devastated economy. Because Poland is so strategically important to the USSR, the Soviets would not allow Poland to "defect from the rigidity of the cen-tral planning which requires that the economy be subor-dinate to the political order," he explained.

Rurarz pointed out that if Poland was not so strictly run by the Soviet Union it would be able to orient its resources toward the Polish people in-stead of the Soviet Union. Presently, for example, 12 percent of Poland's GNP is in tank production. Poland could, instead, shift its capital so that more resources would be used to produce food and other needed goods, Rurarz said.

accepted Solidarity," Rurarz admits. "I wanted to believe that Poland would resist the Soviet Union, but I know the Soviets, and they don't joke."

"Solidarity was not saying Poland should defect from the USSR," he explained. "It was merely saying that Poland should have something to say about her own affairs."

unless Poland begins profound reforms, the country's economic situation will not improve. He urged other free countries to support Poland's quest for a better economy.

Rurarz is a former Polish Ambassador to Japan and the author of six books and several hundred articles. He is currently working at the United Nations.

Priest achieves diversity as Bible, Joyce scholar

SY BARBARA ROWLAND

"If you're totally honest, you're either a saint or a great literary artist."

According to Father Robert Boye, S.J., a Jesuit priest and visiting professor of English, Jesus Christ and James Joyce are two totally honest men.

Boyle, visiting from Marquette University in Milwaukee, has officially devoted his life to Jesus Christ, yet he has found latitude within the church to also become a Joyce scholar.

"Almost every artist or saint has some phoniness," Boyle explained, "but the really great ones are the simplest people in the world."

Joyce was a humble man and a remarkable artist, but his greatness, Boyle maintains, is a mystery. Joyce loved words for their own sake; they were his life. Boyle added that language comes alive to him as a reflector, whereas, Joyce saw them as a creative force.

a creative force. Joyce's mastery of many languages, including medieval Italian, is evident in his most mature work, "Finnegan's Wake."

his most mature work, "Finnegan's Wake," "I would tell an English major who told me he didn't enjoy 'Finnegan's Wake' that he was putting himself into hell." If he did enjoy it, however, Boyle says he would believe there was hope for the person.

People are in hell, Boyle suggested, when they have no language in them.

"Students know Shakespeare is a great artist because they read it in an anthology and the teacher says so." Boyle, conversely, feels only the individual can bring literature to life or experience it.

Since he has discovered the importance of the individual experience with literature, Boyle has given up grading students on a question/answer basis. "Teachers act as though there is something going on between students and them, but there is not. My teaching is personal."

The academic atmosphere in the university's English department, Boyle said allows "the essential human freedom to be operative."

Boyle, 66, has been involved in scholarly work since he entered The Society of Jesus in 1939. He was ordained in 1950.

Religion and the study of the sometimes erotic Joyce are not mutually exclusive. As Boyle points out, "Could I love Jesus Christ if I hated 'Finnegan's Wake?'...The love of something good is needed to be a human being."

FATHER ROBERT BOYLE, S.J.

"It is distressing that people say they hate Joyce or Shakespeare; they won't, they don't know him. If they hate Christ, they don't know him because there is nothing to hate."

Boyle rejects the presence of hate in the world. "I don't take anything too seriously expect love. Hate is selfishness - a deliberate choice of self against everything."

In the classroom, Boyle believes, his Roman collar sets up a presupposition, but he says he does not need it to show his students that "love is essential."

"My priestly dedication comes over in teaching because it is basic in me, as basic as love. Even when I cook or eat, my priestly dedication comes over in it."

Boyle, who came to Delaware for the semester at the urging of department Chairman Zack Bowen, is teaching an undergraduate seminar on Biblican themes in Eliot, Joyce, Hopkins and Beckett and a graduate seminar on "Finnegan's Wake."

Woman raped near apts.

An 18-year-old Newark woman was raped on Lehigh Rd. near Park Place Apartments, at about 9:20 p.m. on May 5, according to Detective Roy Clough of Newark Police.

Police have arrested a 22year-old man in connection with the assault. He was formally charged with rape and released on $25,000 bail. Police said the girl was approached from behind by the suspect who allegedly pulled off pieces of her clothing and sexually assaulted her. The incident was interrupted by an approaching car and the woman's screams. According to police the woman was not injured.

In Newark's pizza race, Margherita,'s wins by a slice

By ERIC GUTEKUNST

The "moon pizza" has landed in Newark, but can Newark handle another pizza restaurant?

With Space II Pizza, which opened April 1, and Domino's Pizza, 232 E. Cleveland Ave., due to open today, Newark will have 13 restaurants that oither specialize in pizza either specialize in pizza making or offer pizza on their menus all within a mile radius of central campus. Add to the already long list

Add to the already long list the Pizza Station, located near north campus; Shakey's Piz-za Parlor off Kirkwood Highway, and a number of restaurants off-campus that deliver like Casa Pizzeria, Newark could rival New York city as the "Pizza capital of the world." But with this wide selec-

But with this wide selec-tion, students can afford to be choosey about what pizza they eat.

So who really does have the best pizza?

A survey was conducted by a panel of four individuals in-cluding myself to find out. We rated each Pizza on its crust, cheese, sauce and overall taste.

Everyone has their own in-dividual tastes when it comes to pizza, but it can be agreed upon that a good pizza should have a blend of cheese, crust and sauce so that no one in-gredient dominates, or drowns out the others.

The survey was limited to Around Town the Newark area and only plain cheese pizza was rated in order to have a common ground to compare and also because it has the basic ingredients contained in all pizzas.

Every pizza tested was found to be largely favorable but some were better than others.

Those receiving five stars are the very best, four stars means well above average, and three stars means above average. An average pizza is rated two stars, one star means below average, and no star means it wasn't worth rating.

Here are the results: Margherita's Pizza 134 E. Main St.

THE NEW YORK STYLE PIZZA served at Margherita's Pizza on Main Street was rated "the best in Newark" and awarded five stars by a panel of four people. Margherita's was only one of thirteen Newark-area restaurants whose pizza was tested by the panel. Ratings were based on the quality of crust, cheese, sauce and overall taste.

Fri Day's Room hosts final performers

If you are like a lot of students on campus, the fact that we are about to enter the last week of school is finally sinking in.

Suddenly we are bombarded with books to read and papers to write before finals. All the dates that were made to play tennis, along with others diversions that we planned for the spring, will once again have to put off until the fall.

Because of the wide variety of entertainment activities available in and around town each weekend we may not have been able to attend them all.

This weekend is one of the last opportunities that many students will have to see and hear the diverse talents that have been performing in bars and restaurants in the Newark area.

FRI DAY'S ROOM: will have their final performance of the year tonight in the faculty dining room, at the Student Center. Tonight's featured entertainer will be Joanne and Jim Cobb, who play popular and contemporary hits. THE STONE BALLOON: presents the group Sinbad this weekend. Returning to the Newark area from Washington, the band will play tonight and tomorrow night beginning around 9 p.m. THE GLASS MUG: will flash some striking entertainment by their audience tonight when they present the group White Lightning. THE DOWN UNDER: will reveal the group Phantom as their entertainment both nights this weekend. The group will play their hits at the bar on North Col-Avenue beginning at 9 p.m. lege

THE GROUND ROUND: on South College Avenue will present the Kris and Ed Trio to their audience tonight and tomorrow night, as their featured group.

REFLECTIONS: will have the group Fury tonight and tomorrow night at the bar in the Possum Park Mall. The band will play from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. both nights and they will hold a special "jam session" from 3 p.m. until 6 p.m. on Saturday afternoon for any interested musicians.

ing Center will send the group Roller to their audience this weekend. The music will begin at 9:20 p.m. and there is a small cover charge.

CALLAHAN'S: a remodeled bar located in Wilmington near Union Street and Lancaster Avenue will celebrate their reopening this weekend. There will be live entertainment tonight and tomorrow night for the occasion. Tonight Larry Roney will perform music rang-ing from Neil Young to Harry Chapin. Tomorrow night they will have a singalong with piano entertainment.

THE COMEDY CABARET: also located in Wilmington has three comedians to entertain this weekend. Beverly Mickins, Bill Thomas and J.J. Wall will be on hand to please the crowd. For reservations call 65-A-M-U-S-E.

Ex-Krishna members relate their own stories By ANN CLINE

This is an account of two people's lives as Hare Krishna devotees. John (not his real name) and Sharon Trinka became involved with the International Society for Krishna Consciousness (ISKON) in Newark, De. Part Two is the rest of John's story and Trinka's account.

John, who became involved with the Krishna Consciousness movement during the Spring of 1980, said a devotees' life is rigidly scheduled. After an early morning shower and a round of chanting, he attended an hour long class. During the first part of class the devotees were instructed in the Vedic scripture. According to Prohladananda, leader in the Newark temple, Krishna Consciousness is based on these scriptures.

John said that during the second part of class the day's activities were discussed and specific sales techniques were taught. He explained that the devotees were supposed to listen with "submissive oral reception," which he said was easy after excessively chanting the Hare Krishna mantra just before class

Prohladananda said a Hare Krishna devotee must live by four strict principles: no intoxification (this includes coffee, tea and cigarettes); no eating of meat, fish, eggs or poultry; no sex outside of marriage and in marriage only to procreate; and no gambling.

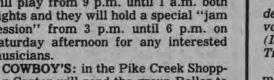

"Gambling is taken to mean mental speculation," explained John. "The idea of gambling is that you can die at any moment, and if you are thinking about something other than Krishna (God) at the time, it's probably something lustful, so you are going to hell." He added, "It's a gamble to think about anything other than Krishna. Therefore, never doubt what you are told."

John explained that the idea of "never doubt" is an important aspect of Krishna Consciousness. It is a vow taken at initiation which occurs after a year of living by the four principles and chanting 16 rounds a day.

John was kidnapped by his parents in January, 1981, a week before his initiation, while he was in the Krishna temple in Baltimore. It was the first time he had been on the East Coast in six months so his parents seized the opportunity and took him to professional deprogramers. "The process of Krishna Consciousness involves totally wiping

'Byron Shurtleff -- The Delaware Years' displays talent, expertise of local artist

By ANN LEMON

"Byron Shurtleff - The Delaware Years" is a retrospective exhibit of monumental proportions consting of nearly 150 otographs produced over S the last 15 years by one of Delaware's most important and respected artists. Professor Shurtleff is head of the photography department and has been making photographs for most of his life.

"The Delaware Years" represents Shurtleff's broad range of talent and expertise, and his admirable willingness to relinquish one subject in which he has proven himself to take up something new. Shurtleff is not one to grind a single theme into the dust, and the exhibit could almost be a collection of several artists, so varied is its style. Yet there is an underlying elegance, a continuity of aesthetic, that rings true aesthetic, that rin throughout the work.

The exhibit is arranged chronologically by period and subject. The long tour around Clayton hall, begins the first prints which are small, subtle black-and white landscapes. Shurtleff's quiet understan-ding of the Delaware marshes of and life along the coast, combined with his sparkling printing technique make these muted compositions glow. It is obvious that the artist reached a pinnacle of skill in black and white photography.

But after the first dozen or so prints, the walls explode with color. Shurtleff has mastered the process of handprinting color photographs. Not only are his prints totally luscious and color-correct many of them are printed as large as 16 inches by 20 inches which is quite an undertaking for a single individual. He shows an eye for brilliant color in some of his earlier photographs, like the striking pictures of chard, a garden vegetable that has the greens and yellows of lettuce and the fuschia of rhubarb. His abstractions, have colors resembling stained glass or theatre lights. And still, Shurtleff is not content to stay safe.

The next entire wall is from his series of Delaware women. Shurtleff received some criticism of the series, for he portrays the women with obvious admiration of their beauty, which some interpreted as sexual. Although it is undoubtedly a man's view of some very "together" women, few can blame Shurtleff for his interest in their skin tone, selfcomposition, bearing and mood. Particularly enjoyable is the oval portrait of the marvelous Merrill Hunt, with her flashing eyes and black hair in a cool white room.

Each woman is treated in a different way, and the photographs all project a particular personality. There is almost a sense of holiness and reverence for the photographic moment between subject and artist that pervades these and all his work.

A natural progression from his portraits is a small section of nudes. They are semi-abstract, and nearly become landscapes with their curves and hills and forests.

The audience's favorite area at the exhibit was Shurtleff's most recent work which drew many comments and giggles. He has begun snapping his camera at odd moments, in the tradition of Cartier-Bresson and other documentarians, and the result is kind of a resort-America Candid Camera.

'The Delaware Years'' will be on exhibit in Clayton Hall through May 29. Those who plan to see the show should be sure to allow enough time to absorb a lot of very im-pressive work. And they shouldn't be surprised if they are drawn back again and again.

Student-produced film to premiere Sheila – you're a great editor every deadline, or daily – P and M

By DAVE HAMILL

After months of preparation, eight weeks of filming, and long hours spent editing the final production, the cast and crew anxiously wait for the reviews to come in.

They shouldn't be long in coming, because "Changing Time," the university's first student-produced, full-length feature film, is scheduled to premiere at the Amber Lantern on Monday and Tuesday nights, according to writer/directon Garry Gaber (AS84).

Gaber said he, assistant director Karin LaMarche (AS84), and producer/camerman Steve Goldberg (AS84) will apply finishing touches to the film this weekend, in preparation for the initial showings, which are tentatively set for 10:30 p.m. both nights.

The one hour and 50 minute videotape, which was filmed almost entirely on campus, was described by Gaber as "an adventure film, a love story, science fiction with a twist and a bit of comedy."

The tale is set in the year 2100, where a man flees the totalitarian government of the evil ruler Darcram through an experimental time tunnel into the year 1982, where he is subsequently pursued by a trio of futuristic manhunters.

Starring in the film are Keith Hughes (AS84) as Derec, the man escaping the future, LaMarche as his present-day love interest Sandra Cannon, Chris Fisher (AS84) as Darcram, Ron Pryzwara (AS84) as the elite guard Roche, and Bill Clark (AS84) as Rick Roderford, Sandra's ex-boyfriend. Jim Catts (AS83) served as production assistant, and lighting was handled by Joanne Dugan (AS84).

According to Goldberg, a total of 80 people were involved in some facet of the production, and course credit will be given to the major cast members under the faculty advisement of Janet Staiger, a visiting assistant professor in the English department.

"The credit didn't really make any difference, though," Goldberg maintains. "The people that worked on the film did it because they wanted to. They're about as dedicated a bunch as I've seen."

The project received no funding from the university, Gaber said, necessitating the use of videotape rather than the more expensive movie film. Goldberg provided his own camera for filming, Pryzwara handled the special effects, and lights were supplied by Jim Cycyk of Cameras, Etc. in Newark.

The soundtrack contains all original music, LaMarche said. The title track, which is the only song to include vocals, was recorded in 16 track stereo by Frank Annunziata of the band Level, she explained, while additonal "futuristic" music was provided by local musician Steve Skopic.

Total costs of the production, which amounted to over $300, were divided equally among the main crew, Gaber said, as will be any profits which might arise from its distribution.

According to Goldberg, contacts have been made with the cable television market regarding possible future showings, and LaMarche said the crew plans to enter the film in several video contests, at the urging of their faculty advisor.

In addition, Gaber and LaMarche plan to begin work on a novelization of the "Changing Time" script this summer, with a target date for completion and potential publication set for fall, 1983.

"We think we can expand a lot on some of the concepts which, because of filming limitations, we couldn't include in the finished product," Gaber explained. Since filming was completed on April 25, Gaber and LaMarche have been busy editing the final production.

"The film looks like it goes together really smoothly," Gaber said, "but the editing process has required an unbelievable amount of time. Neither Karin nor I had ever attempted to edit video before, and it's been quite an experience."

The students managed to survive the filming without any major catastrophies, LaMarche said, although some of the actors came out slightly worse for the wear.

some of the actors came out slightly worse for the wear. "All of our stunts were real," she explained. "If the cast looks a little beat up by the end of the film it's because they were. In the fight scenes, I think they hit each other more than they missed."

Gaber also recalled a close encounter with a Metroliner during the filming of an approaching train for the chase scene. When the locomotive turned out to be traveling on the same track upon which they had placed the camera and tripod, Gaber and Hughes were forced to leap from its path mere seconds before the imminent destruction of life, limb, and equipment.

""This film was special to us," Gaber said, "and we think it's going to be special to those who come to see it, too."

Artist displays creativity in contemporary wood reliefs

By JANET FORD

Henry Krysiak has been doing wood work for over 25 years. His recent exhibit at Christiana Commons Art Gallery, brings together his work of 24 pieces of "contem-porary wood reliefs," wood sculptures, and three-dimensional acrylic paintings.

Krysiak's textile experience as a chemist in the Dupont laboratory at Chestnut Run in Newark has influenced his style of matching wood with fabric for the past ten years.

Krysiak said he "combines wood reliefs using conventional carving from a piece of wood, usually walnut or cherry, and mounts them on fabric."

Although mostly self-taught, Krysiak studied design at the university. He said he also learns from reading books and by visiting art galleries, but admitted, "It's all a matter of getting into the sequences of doing."

"'Fragmented Man' is a combination of many carved pieces which fit together," he explained. He got the idea from a children's book about an ancient religious character.

This piece is of a man with the upper half of a male body done in walnut with its arms extended in a circular movement like a ballet dancer. Red paint fills the inside carving.

Krysiak said he carved the separate pieces, finished them with oil, carved out the center, and applied 10 coats of red lacquer.

He said he used the red paint to show the "life blood of the figure."

"Watchers" is a humorous piece of eight walnut carved figures mounted on cream colored fabric, which look like over grown clothes pins with hollow faces.

Krysiak said, "The faces look at you from different angles, the faceless impression is an enigmatic quality that I have found in African sculpture; they remind me of street characters, or dead end characters."

"Vibrations", one of the most colorful of the pieces, is a series of carved fence-like sticks mounted on fabric which range in color from bright yellow to dark orange. He said, "This kind of graphic design gives me more freedom of expression."

Titles of his work include "Mobius One," "Opus 1", "Chelea No. 1" (which is a Greek word for claw). He explained, "Sometimes I find an interesting word and design something around it; other times the word may be like the title of a jazz composition, which has no connection to the piece being played; it is just used to express an abstract idea."

Themes frequently used in his sculpture include, family motifs, dance figures, and animal figures.

In order to put together the groups of carved figures, he said he uses "joinery" and miters the wood together "much like making a corner of a box." Krysiak uses hand tools for carving and rarely uses machinery, such as a drill press.

His acrylic threedimensional paintings are not painted with a brush, he said, but rather with paint rollers, and if they are not small enough he cuts them in half. He also uses masking tape to cover painted areas, and an exacto knife to cut out these areas. The exhibit at the commons p.m. SUSIE Q: Let's take a look at the past few months...Talking about first impres-sions, talking about men - or rather boys (and they really are you know whats) -eating popcorn, playing video games ("Do you wanna play games?"), borrow-ing clothes and shoes, going to parties (Caught any toads lately?), NOT drink-ing - MUCH! Remember Bill the waiter ("We'll have some water to go, please!") How about Margherita's, Sam's, Space II, and Tainted Women? To say nothing of Joklahoma (where the wind comes sweeping down the plain). There's so much more - Thanks for everything! You're the best and next year's going to be even better! So in closing - Please hurry it up on the sundress! (Ha Ha - just kidding!) Seriously, you're a true friend With gratitude and love, Terry.

Dear Bruce and Pat - "Two are better than one" - Congratulations and goo luck - Love, the Carrot.

PRECISION PAINTERS -- Free Estimates, Interior or Exterior Work. Call 366-9120, ask for MARC

CONGRATULATIONS to kindy, Cathy Beth and Carol - the newly initiated Sisters of the Shield and Diamond of PiKA. Let's make next year great! Love, Terry and Georgiana.

Linda Richardson - Just a little note to wish you luck on your last two weeks! Hope everything's going well for you, and that finals week hasn't suddenly crept up on you (as it has with me, as usual)! It's some comfort to know that, no matter what, summer's coming up in just two weeks! You're in my thoughts - Love from the little-seen one.

To Cindy, Marsha, and Bobbie: Thanks for everything. For the rides, for the talks, for the laughs (a lot), and for the eeries. You three have been the best friends a girl could have. Never forget the binges, the popcorn, the new musical group The A-4's, the fire, the one frat (or two?), the poor Alpha Phi Jokes, and the ever worse Phi Sigma Sigma Jokes. Quagmeyer won't be back next year so let's get her smashed one last time and as for Lunch r nd Big Bert, next year will be even better. Love always, Head.

Pf - nearing the end of the year, I can honestly say that I have never once regretted staying up late to talk to you in-stead of doing the really "important" things (like studying, sleeping etc.) After all, what will I remember and cherish 10 years from now? I'm going to miss you this summer, and our talks, and I'm go-ing to be looking forward to the fall. I'd say don't forget me, but then, how ever could you? Your irrepressible roomie, Squashy.

Will trade Smyth double for Rodney dou-ble, Call 454-8787.

To the sexy blonde from 102 Russell C: Thanks for all the good times...we'll miss you next year. Yardstick, stud, Romeo, Ep, Danny, the Ten from Towne Court, Bill, pervert from Dewey Beach, the Greek from K.A., and the roseboy. Love, Lauren, Pam, and Trish. P.S. You finally you your personal!

Christofero - Us Italian best friends should stick together! Remember -you're never alone when I'm around (and wher I'm not)! Love, Mags

P.K. - Thanks again. I couldn't have passed without you! M.E.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY INGE! This is your weekend, enjoy it! Love, Craig

Deb, They say the really special ones on-ly come along once in a lifetime. Well, in this case I guess I've been given one more shot - I must be luckier than J realized. For the inspiration, the aggrava tion, the laughter and the tears...Happy birthday, Sunshine. Love, Dave (Cominued to page 20)

Ruth, Congratulations on finally making it out of here (well, almost). Graduation could never mean the end to the friend-ship we've shared. Although, through our busy semesters we haven't gotten together as much as we should have, you know I'll always be there for you. For Pm Fender Brender, right ruther and who else could I share being Queenie in A.C. with or being around the corner of the White House with and who else would I travel to Rehoboth to see for one day and not even get lost on the way-for Pm the one with the good sense of direction, right? Alpha Sig formals will never be the same without you, but I'll always remember to dance in the Haberdashery, as we stood out. Seriously, thanks for the talks and the crys. I'll never forget them, they mean everything to me. So, even though Elvis noticed you first, I'm soo happy for you and Rich. I hope your life is filled, with happiness and love - you deserve it.Con carino, (ask your Mom) y amistad para siempre, Brenda.

...batters streak to 15th in nation

Looking at the rankings, Delaware has the fourth best winning percentage (.840) of the top 15 teams and only topped-ranked Texas (46-4) has fewer losses.

"We've worked hard all year," said co-captain Jim Sherman, the team's eternal optimist. "I believed at the beginning of the year we could win the ECC, but I didn't expect the overall record we have.

"If you look at all the teams in the top 20, I would bet that they are all scholarship funded teams. It's a credit to Coaches Bob Hannah and Carlyle and to what they do for this program.

"The ranking is nice," added Sherman. "It will be even more nice down the road when we can look back and say 'we were ranked 15th in the nation'."

But how can a team with 13 freshmen compete so well on the National level?

According to Carlyle, the co-captains (Chuck Coker and Sherman) are a big factor.

tor. "They are the best leaders I can remember ever having at Delaware. Since the first day of fall, they have been great, especially in terms of dealing with the players. I can't overemphasize the importance of these two.

"Last year's team had a lot of talent," added Carlyle. "But it was a very sad day last May when we blew two games to Temple and lost the ECC. I'm sure Coke and Sherman remembered that and the experience has helped them this year."

Delaware only took two days off after winning the ECCs and are now setting their sights on the last week in May when they will play in the NCAA regionals.

"These guys will definitely be ready," said Carlyle. "During the season you are usually more geared to get up for the conference games on Saturday. But this team got up 20 straight times and did the job."

The Hens have not only put Delaware in the national spotlight with their tremendous season, but are only one of 32 college teams left that can still say , 'We have a shot at being No. 1.'

...football team prepares for Blue-White

The starting Blue team backs will be fullback Dan Reeder, who starred in last spring's game with 103 yards and two TDs, and Cliff Clement and John Cason at half back. John Merklinger will also see action at half back.

The offensive line will be anchored by returnees Doug Martin and Mark Melillo at guard and Peter Mill at center, while ex-defensive end Tom Pescherine and Randy Smith should be at tackle. Starter Mark Steimer will be the tight end.

Thus far, the Hens' key transplanted players, Gannon, Brown, Quigg and Phelan have all impressed Raymond.

"Our objective in spring practice is not only for inner speed but to give us depth by changing positions," Raymond said.

The White team offense might be Delaware's future backfield with Tim Slagle and Chris Heier at half back, Chris Brown at fullback and Spahr, who Raymond is very high on.

Delaware's key strength could well be the kicking area where punter/fullback Rick Titus and placekicker K.C. Knobloch return.

"I think that Titus is the best kicker we've ever had," Raymond admitted, grudgingly rating him over son David Raymond. "We also have a great deal of confidence in Knobloch."

Though the Hens have only lost five starters from last year's 9-3 club, Raymond is hesitant about getting over optimistic.

optimistic. "I'm happy, but I think there are still things we don't have," he said. "There never has been a year when we had everything we wanted."

cess. When you have a winning tradition and pride in your players, you have to maintain that.

"The players have made the commitment and they enjoy what they're doing. If you enjoy what you're doing, you go all out. The actual key to the success is the players and their commitment-- the desire to do well. They are so coachable.

"They were all individual stars in high school, but they put that aside and developed into a fine team," Smith added. "I haven't seen girls with head cases. If they are, they aren't going to have success and they aren't going to get what they want out of the program."

Athletic Director Dave Nelson concluded, "What has happened is probably the most important and refreshing thing in intercollegiate athletics. It's a real plus for the University in every way."

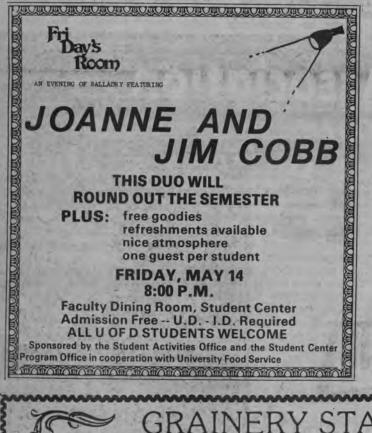

Next time: the athletes speak out.

Women's sports: coaches spark winning

By CHRIS GOLDBERG

This is the first of three parts analyzing the recent success of the Delaware women's sports program and next year's move from Division II to Division I.

Can the success story continue?

This is the question that clouds the women's varsity sports program at Delaware, which is culminating in by far the most prosperous season of its 10-year history.

Unless it wins its anti-trust suit with the powerful NCAA, women's sports' original collegiate governing board, the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) will fold this summer. In either case, next year, Delaware, now in Division II except for field hockey, will compete exclusively in Division I.

In a school where needbased athletic aid grants are only offered for field hockey and basketball, it is a move which at the least, will make post-season success much tougher.

This year (1981-82) women's sports have enjoyed amazing success. The combined record for the 10 Hen bined record for the 10 Hen sports teams is 120-54-3. Eight of the teams par-ticipated in Regionals and four in Nationals. A ninth, the tennis team, broke the school-record with 10 wins.

Only one, the basketball team, had less than a .640 winning percentage. The numbers speak for themselves.

"It's extremely gratifying. We're fortunate to have a quality coaching staff which is dedicated and knowledgeable," said Assistant Athletic Director Mary Ann Campbell, who has been the driving force in the women's program. "The dedication level is really high. When success comes, it's just icing on the cake."

Indeed, it begins with coaching. Campbell, who directs the field hockey team, and volleyball mentor Barb Viera have been the mainstays from the program's start. In three years, Edgar Johnson (swimming) and Janet Smith (lacrosse) and Mary Shull (track and cross country) have all built powers and Joyce Emory has shaped a solid basketball foundation in her four-year term.

The newest member of the staff, Bonnie Jill Ferguson, has been perhaps the least noticed, despite her fall 10-4 tennis squad and 16-9 softball team.

"I'm very pleased the way the program has gone," Ferguson said. "If I have a problem, I go to Miss Viera. The kids see that. We are always on display. Most of us

"I'm here for the competition. The social aspect is second. Now, all the coaches feel the same way. I think the women's sports coaches here are great from the technical standpoint. If you look at the restrictions - if we had financial aid, we'd go off the charts."

Added Viera, "Our philosophies are, one, education first, and, two sports are a team effort. No one person makes a team.

"Another thing is that our girls are first class in the area of sportsmanship. That's something we can be proud of.'

Hen women's sports at a glance

The success story of the 1981-82 season:

Field hockey - 11-4-3, Regional runnerup, ranked fifth in Coach's Nationals Division I poll.

Volleyball - 34-18, placed fourth in the EAIAW Regionals. Cross Country — 6-0 in its inaugural season of varsity com-petition. Sandy Gibney made all-American at Nationals with two others qualifying.

Tennis - 10-4, school record for wins.

Swimming - 12-0, Regional champions for second straight ear, competed in Nationals, record-tying 34 straight wins over three seasons.

Indoor track and field - 6-3, qualified numerous runners for Regionals.

Basketball - 9-14.

Lacrosse - 11-1, Regional champion, Currently the No. 1 seed in the National tourney which it won last year.

Outdoor track and field — 5-1, placed seventh in the Regionals, and qualified four events for Nationls. Softball — 16-9, most wins ever, third place in Regionals.

Johnson, whose swim quad has garnered two squad has garnered two straight Regional titles and 34 consecutive meets, has found a home as the only male on the staff.

Co-captain Pasquariello keeps lacrosse team on winning path

By ROB STONE

It is no surprise that the Delaware women's lacrosse team is favored to win its second National championship this weekend at West Chester with a co-captain like Ann Pasquariello.

Last weekend, Delaware's all-time leading scorer (147 goals, 40 assists) paced the Hens with eight goals against Towson State and Lehigh in their first Regional title.

But, Pasquariello has always been especially geared for the playoffs. "Playoffs are a whole different season," said Pasquariello who plays first home. "It's really important what we're playing for so we have to play at our best.

"You can't think of how big it really is when you're playing in a national championship game. If you do it is going to take away from your game. Last year was unbelievable, I hope we can repeat that."

One of the hardest shooters in women's lacrosse, Pasquariello shows no mercy to opposing goaltenders. Just ask Lehigh goalie Brenda Sirois, who was literally knocked down by a Pasquariello blast earlier this year.

"The way I shoot scares goalies," said Pasquariello who holds the record for most goals in a game with 11. "If you're having trouble with a goalie, it's good to shoot at them so when you shoot again, they will be a little intimidated."

Pasquariello first developed her sidearm delivery in high school with the help of her brother, Pat, who used to play for Drexel. "I lifted weights last year and it threw my shot off. Traditionally, girls have been taught to not shoot sidearm but I get the extra power with my weight. I put my whole body into it."

Under Coach Janet Smith's gudiance, Pasquariello has become a model competitor both on the field and in the classroom.

"When I came here she was a sophomore and she had outstanding credentials," said Smith, "but she wasn't moving real well. I'm not sure that enough conditioning was there last season. This year, though, she came out at the beginning of the season ready to play and she has since developed into a great team asset."

Pasquariello, who will attend Catholic University law school, added, "Miss Smith places academics first, it's good that a coach pushes academics and means it, she keeps on top of us and because of it I think we really have good students on this team.

"In fact I've always done Letter academically while playing lacrosse. It takes up alot of your day, but when you are not playing you really miss it."

As a team leader, Pasquariello was cut out for the role according to Smith, "Between her and Anne (Brooking) she is a little more vocal. They compliment each other and they're two excellent captains."

But being a captain is easy for Pasquariello, who mixes an aggressive style of play with a friendly attitude.

"She's great," said freshman Missy Meharg. "She is never down, always up. When things are not so good, she still has a positive attitude. She's a great player too, I have picked up some shooting techniques from her."

On her record 11-goal game against Hofstra in the 1979 season Pasquariello said, "Their team wasn't very good. It was our biggest win when I was a freshman (the Hens won 25-6). When I scored my 10th goal, my coach (Judy Clapp) yelled to me that I had just tied the school record.

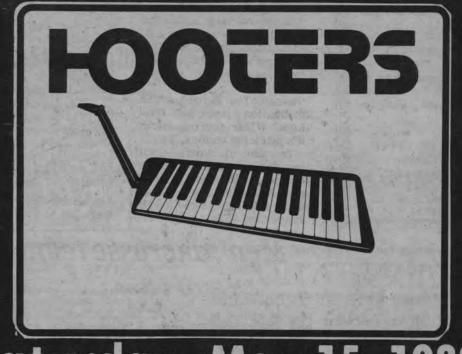

After that everybody kept passing to me to set me up, so when I finally did get the ball in front of the goal, their goalie just let me have it. But that record is not real important it's just kind of neat."

"The way I shoot scares goalies. If you're having trouble with a goalie it's good to shoot at them so when you shoot again, they will be a little intimidated."

Said senior Elaine Pomian of the past years with Pasquariello, "I've enjoyed playing with her. We know each other on the field really well and we're pretty good friends too. We've played for four years and if you play together day in and day out you get to know how the other plays."

The way Ann Pasquariello plays it's easy to see why the Hens keep winning.

Sherman named top male athlete

Baseball team co-captain Jim Sherman was named Delaware's outstanding senior male athlete for the 1981-82 year Tuesday at the Alumni Honors Day ceremony by Delaware Alumni Association President Paul Seitz.

Sherman was one of 13 Blue Hen athletes to receive awards in the annual ceremony and was the only double-winner, taking the Pape Lukk Memorial Award as the baseball team's outstanding player.

Among the numerous records the New Castle, Del., native has set are career home runs (46), career runs (207), career total bases (488), career extra base hits (120), RBI's in a season (68); besides his record-tying 15 homers this season.

Delaware Athletic Director Dave Nelson named Elaine Pomian, a starter on the field hockey and lacrosse teams, the ECAC Medal of Merit for being the senior athlete with the highest academic grade point index (3.81 in computer science).

Also named by Nelson was the Junior ' Athletic Scholarship from the Wilmington Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company to field hockey player Sharon Wilkie and track runner Pam Hohler.

Baseball coach Bob Hannah named the other academic award, giving Wilmington's Dickinson High School alumnus John Peoples the Richard R. Roberts Scholarship to the junior baseball player with the highest academic index.

The other individual sport winners were: •Ken Luck, who won the Col. C.B. Shaffer Award for the third consecutive year as the basketball team's most valuable player. Luck established a new all-time career scoring mark of 1,613 points and was named an Honorable Mention All-American and secondteam ECC both his junior and senior years.

•Jim Kania, who claimed the John J. DeLuca Award as the outstanding golfer. Kania was the team's overall low scorer with a season average of 77.3 strokes per match.

•Tim Owings, who won the Alumni Association Lacrosse Award as the team's MVP. The junior middie has career totals of 21 goals and 20 assists

*John Petito, who took the Alumni Associa-tion Soccer Award as the MVP. The junior forward led the Hens with five goals and seven assists this year.

•Chuck Ganci, who was awarded the Jack and Hugh Dougherty Memorial award as the outstanding men's swimmer. Ganci took a third in the 50-yard freestyle with a time of 21.56 in the ECC championship this winter.

•Ken Dill, who won the Alexander J. Taylor award as the tennis team's MVP. The senior captain went 14-1 this year as the third singles and claimed the ECC No. 3 singles title.

•Mike Precopio, who won the W.S. Red Tawes Memorial Trophy as the outstanding wrestler. Grappling at 134, the captain tallied a 25-10-1 overall slate.

•John Wehner, who was named the W. Fred Harmer Award as the outstanding track and cross country athlete. The three-sport captain (indoor and outdoor track and cross country) holds the ECC record for the two-mile in 8:567.

Delaware gridders ready for Blue-White scrimmage

By CHRIS GOLDBERG

The Delaware football team will finish spring practice tomorrow in the annual Blue-White scrimmage, which kicks off at 2 p.m. Offensive coordinator Ted Kempski will coach the Blue squad, which will feature the first-team offense led by twoyear starting quarterback Rick Scully. For the White team, defensive coordinator Ed Maley will guide the first-team defense and an offense with freshman signal caller John Spahr at the helm.

"We'll be looking for Spahr's offense versus Scully's, the two quarterbacks will be the leaders of the respective teams," said Head Coach Tubby Raymond. "From the defensive standpoint, we'll find out how much improved our defensive front four will be with the added out with Paul Brown, a converted end, and Jeff Haudenschield at tackle, and Ron Rossi and John Gannon, a converted linebacker, at the ends. Starting tackle Joe Valentino is out with a concussion.

The linebackers will be Greg Robertson, Shawn Riley and Ali Witherspoon, with converted safety Joe Quigg seeing time. The secondary will feature George Schmitt, Lou Reda, Bill Maley, Jim Newfrock, along with Owen Brand, B.J. Osevala and frosh Mike Harris.

Raymond is pointing, offen-sively, to the Blue team's spread end, Kevin Phelan, who has made the move from half back.

"Scully and Phelan have hooked up well together," he said. "Phelan is a natural at running patterns. He catches

Men's lacrosse team closes with loss

By CHRIS GOLDBERG

The Delaware men's lacrosse team ended its season with a 6-10 record, falling, 16-10, to host, 12th-ranked Princeton on Wednesday.

The Hens went out to a 3-1 lead, but were then blitzed, 9-1, for the rest of the first half. Pat O'Connor paced the Delaware offense with three goals and Tom Nuttle added a pair. "We played rather lackadasical out there," said Hen Coach Bob Shillinglaw. "They play an aggressive style of defense. I don't know if we got intimidated. They got more confidence as they went along."

This was to be the year when Delaware cracked the lacrosse elite, when they could be mentioned with the Towson States, Baltimores, Princtons. It was instead a disappointing year from the very start. "I think there were a number of different variables,"' Shillinglaw said. "We had early injuries and lost a couple tight games (six games by three goals or less) "It's tough to plug away when you end up losing. Of course, it didn't help having half of your opponents nationally ranked. "It is a tough schedule," he said. "Next year, we may move up a few of the easier games to help our confidence. It was disappointing, " he concluded. "We did win our conference. With the exception of three games, we were right in there. Hopefully, we'll be able to turn the corner next year."

STICK CHECKS - Shillinglaw had much praise for the six graduating Hens, captain Bob Waters, attackers Moses Marone and Mike Tankersley, middies Greg Rivers and Brian Mesinger and defenseman Gary Boyd...Marone finished as the team's leading scorer (26 goals), followed by Brian Haggarty (25), Nuttle (18) and Pat Charles (also 18).
