Hispanic population soars

What does Delaware offer?

Sharon R. Cole

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

According to the Delaware Economic Development Office, the state of Delaware has experienced a tremendous increase in its Hispanic population over the past eight years. In fact, the population has rocketed 82 percent since 1990.

One reason for this increase may have a lot to do with Delaware's low (four percent) unemployment rate. Carlos De Los Ramos, Director of the A Better Chance program at the Latin American Community Center (LACC) in Wilmington, said that in addition to the high employment of Hispanics on poultry farms in southern Delaware, there are companies in New Castle County such as The Wood Company, Nixon Uniforms, Sears and Sheraton Suites who hire the minorities through the ABC program that works to take people off of welfare and into permanent employment.

"Latino's are very loyal to companies and they adapt well, once they find a job they stay," he said.

In fact, De Los Ramos reported the Department of Labor ranked the LACC's "A Better Chance" program number one for the past two years for the highest percentage of clients keeping the same job for over one year.

Monica Gonzalez-Gillespie, executive director of the Governor's council of Hispanic affairs agrees that Delaware offers good employment opportunities.

"There are a lot of service jobs here like restaurant work, housekeeping and cleaning," she noted. "Unfortunately, these are jobs that do not require Hispanics to learn English."

Gonzalez-Gillespie said that it is possible for an Hispanic to live here for a very long time with-

The impending drought officially arrived this week in Delaware, and the word from city of Newark officials is, turn off unnecessary water flow as soon as possible after reading this news story.

"Effective Friday, July 23, we are asking Newark's water customers to avoid all unnecessary water use in order to conserve supplies," said city water director Joseph Dombrowski. "Newark goes to voluntary restrictions as of Friday this week."

According to Dombrowski, under voluntary restrictions the city is asking customers to stop watering lawns, washing cars or washing down sidewalks and outside surfaces. "Inside, we ask people reduce the length of showers, avoid excess toilet flushing, only wash with full

Although legislators succeeded in making plans for student accountability by the end of the legislative session, they were unable to compromise enough to come up with a plan for holding teachers accountable.

"We have been fighting this battle for a couple of years and I am not very optimistic about a resolution," said state senator Steven Amick (R-Newark West).

Amick said a special legislative session will take place for lawmakers during September or October to try and develop a way to hold teachers accountable for student achievement.

In the meantime, Amick said that there is a committee working to negotiate a solution to this situation.

Charges pending in fatal train accident

By Mary E. Petzak

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Newark Police Chief Gerald Conway Jr. said this week charges are pending against the driver of a vehicle which stopped and was later struck by a train on the railroad tracks near the Deer Park Tavern.

The Newark Police are working on two investigations concerning the fatal accident on July 15. "We're currently waiting for the results of the blood alcohol tests," said Conway. "We called the medical examiners' office and asked them to speed it up but they have a lot of tests ahead of us."

Although Conway said tests were done on all four occupants, only the driver faces any charges in the incident. "Alcohol and driving violations are pending against the operator of the vehicle while we wait for the test results," he said.

The driver, Cenobio Molina Gonzalez, 19, of Newark, was injured when a CSX train hit the vehicle he had stopped on the railroad tracks. Gonzalez was standing alongside the tracks at the time. He was released from Christiana Hospital this week.

The police initially reported Gonzalez had been fatally injured but later corrected their information. One passenger, Guerra Pedro Martiniz, 33, recently arrived from Mexico, was still in the vehicle when it was hit by the train at 12:01 a.m. on July 15. He died later that morning at Christiana Hospital.

The other two passengers, who are not being charged with any violation, were not injured.

According to Conway, the patrol officer first saw the Gonzalez' vehicle going the wrong way on New London Road at 11:44 p.m. on July 14. "The officer activated his overhead lights as he was proceeding westbound on Main Street at the intersection," said Conway. "As he was doing that, the suspect vehicle turned around in the Deer Park intersection and came to a stop with about five feet of the car over the tracks."

Conway said police dispatchers routinely sent a backup officer after the first officer reported the stop with multiple occupants. "The driver got out while the first officer was still in his patrol car and approached him," said Conway. "The officer got out and ordered him back in his car but he did not obey."

Conway said once the officer detected a strong odor of alcohol, he did not want the driver behind the wheel again. "The officer also found that apparently none of the car's occupants spoke English and called for a translator (who spoke Spanish)," said Conway. "He took the driver off to the side of the car to keep him out of traffic."

Shortly before midnight, the two officers on the scene first heard a train coming. Conway said one officer tried to alert the train with his flashlight while the other officer and the driver tried to push the stalled car off the tracks. "The car was moving but they ran out of time before the train got there," said Conway. "One passenger was unconscious and still in the car when it was hit by the train."

A spokesman for CSX said the 109-car train en route from North Carolina to Trenton, N.J., was traveling at around 40 miles per hour at the time of the accident and was not a factor in the incident.

Conway said there are still a lot of questions surrounding the incident and his department is continuing to investigate.

The department is also conducting an internal investigation of the actions of the two patrol officers who responded to the scene. "They are on administrative leave which means they not working but being paid," said Conway. "The translator was on the scene for one minute or less before the train arrived and is not under investigation."

Conway said the two officers will probably be brought back soon and put on administrative duty but not on the street until the internal investigation is complete.

"We hoped we would be done in about two weeks, but it's taking longer than expected to talk to all the possible witnesses," said Conway on Tuesday.

According to Conway, the initial patrol officer on the scene graduated from the Police Academy in March 1999 and the second officer graduated in February 1998. Both received eight weeks of field training.

"The Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies only requires four weeks of field training," said Conway. "Newark has had eight weeks since I came here 21 years ago."

Conway said new officers are evaluated daily during field training and may be "held over" for additional training if necessary.

"Officers are on probation for 18 months after they graduate and evaluated every two months by their supervisor after completing field training," Conway said.

Conway said the department would issue a report of their findings when the internal investigation loads in the washer and avoid any other practice that would waste water," Dombrowski said. "Restaurants are asked to only serve water on request."

The last time Newark took this step was in 1995, a year in which the city went to mandatory restrictions at the end of August. "We're facing the likelihood of an extended drought," said Dombrowski. "We almost certainly will have to go mandatory at some point."

Dombrowski said the city would do everything possible to avoid mandatory restrictions as long as possible. "We will try, as we have in the past, to put off mandatory until late August when the students come back," he said, "but it doesn't look good."

Newark's water supplies are running to the maximum and actually dropped this past weekend when the supply normally would replenish. "We picked up a little bit over the weekend, but did not refill," said Dombrowski. "We're just living from cloudburst to cloudburst and weekend to weekend."

A brief round of showers in the area raised the level of White Clay Creek enough that the water plant could be turned on Tuesday for a few hours for the first time since July 7, but it was off again on Wednesday.

"The Drought Committee met (on July 16) and we voted to go to voluntary restrictions on July 23 if there was no change in the supply," said Dombrowski. "If the supplies continue to go down, we will have to go mandatory — hopefully statewide at a minimum."

As of presstime, the Governor's office was planning to discuss a statewide drought emergency asking for voluntary restrictions in Delaware as of today.

Officials in Maryland issued a statewide drought warning asking for voluntary water restrictions on July 7. On Tuesday of this week, the Governor of Pennsylvania announced a drought emergency which requires some restrictions on water use in 55 of the state's 67 counties.

In New Jersey, the Governor has appealed to residents to voluntarily conserve all water use.

Rainfall is well below average this year in New Castle County. Since April 1, the county has had 8.9 inches of rain which is 3.2 inches less than normal.

Mullin is president of Christina Board

The Christina School Board elected Charles M. Mullin as their new president for 1999-2000 during the July 13 board meeting.

Mullin, who has served on the board since 1993, replaces Teresa Schooley who was president for one year.

The district will have to wait until next month before a vice-president is named. George Evans and Michael Guilfoyle, who were nominated to the position, both received three votes from the board which was short one member.

Newly-elected member Christopher Reed, who was to be sworn in during the meeting, was absent due to the rupturing of his appendix. Reed is expected to be present for the next regular board meeting on Aug. 10 at Newark High School.

The board chose Schooley to serve on the board of directors of the Delaware State Boards Association and Spring Davidson will be her alternate.

Representative to the Legislative Committee is George Evans with Brenda Phillips acting as alternate.

Legislators hope for resolution

► TEACHERS, from 1

Education Association in addition to other education officials.

Although no compromises or decisions were made at that meeting, Sorenson is hopeful that the committee will find some resolution before the fall.

"The key sticking point is how you hold teachers accountable for student performance," Sorenson said. "We need a broader, more comprehensive assessment of teachers than just test scores."

David Sokola (D-Newark) who was also at the meeting, said that the committee will probably confer weekly, but discussions may be stalled by inconsistent attendance.

"We need a critical percentage of the group present to make any progress and with vacations that might be hard to do," he said.

Sokola said that any major decisions are still a few meetings away and the first meeting served as a review where groups identified the issues separating them.

According to Amick, if a compromise comes before the fall special session, the chances are better that a teacher accountability bill could pass before the end of the year, but disagreements could still stall a resolution.

"Whether or not anything will pass (in the special session), we don't know. It is entirely possible that the General Assembly will not agree and the teacher accountability issue will have to be brought to the regular session in January," Amick said.

Governor Tom Carper's proposed system for teacher accountability includes using student achievement as a major factor along with district evaluations.

In order to compensate for higher expectations, Carper's plan offers pay raises and incentives, but he also wants districts to dismiss teachers who receive three poor evaluations within a five-year period.

Although the issue of teacher accountability remains to be settled, a plan for student accountability is in place. Beginning in the spring, students will be taking new state tests that, if failed, will result in mandatory summer school and retesting.

Christiana native receives prestigious MacArthur Award

Daughter of former school official earns national honor

A $350,000 grant was an unexpected gift for Christiana native Dr. Jacqueline Jones as well as her family.

"She called me up one day and said, 'Mom, you have to get the New York Times tomorrow, I'm going to be in it,'" said her mother Sylvia Jones.

On Wednesday, June 23, the New York paper listed the recipients of the MacArthur Awards which included 32 people from the United States.

The MacArthur Grants, popularly known as "genius" awards, have been in existence since 1981 and are awarded to individuals based on their achievements, and their originality, insight and potential to make a positive change in society.

Jones, a 51-year-old professor of American civilization at Brandeis University, resides in Wellesley, Mass. She is a social historian whose scholarship examines the experience of workers through the lens of economic transformations throughout United States history.

Jones interest in education came partly from her deceased father, Albert Jones.

The Jones Elementary School (formerly Christiana-Salem Elementary) was renamed to honor Jones' service and dedication to the Christina School District. Jacqueline Jones is a graduate of that elementary school and Christiana High School.

MacArthur fellowships currently range from $160,000 to $375,000 depending on the age of the recipients.

All those receiving awards are selected anonymously by nominators who are invited by the foundation to identify exceptional creativity.

Manuel Paredes runs his Mexican food market on North Chapel Street.

out learning English because of jobs like these. "It is imperative that in order for these minorities to advance, that they need to learn English," she said.

According to De Los Ramos, this is already taking place.

"The face of Latinos in changing," he said. "We have Latinos who are bilingual and are employable at banks."

In fact, Hector Gomez, director of public relations at the LACC, said that for educated Hispanics, the job market is prime. "There are more opportunities here with a less competitive market (than in surrounding states)."

For Manuel Paredes, owner of Mi Ranchito Mexican Food Market on North Chapel Street, moving to Newark was a business decision. Paredes came to Delaware about two years ago after first moving to Salt Lake City, Utah, from Mexico. Paredes said he ran a restaurant in Utah, where he has other relatives, but decided to move to Newark to open a grocery store.

Paredes said that most of his customers are Mexican, but Americans, Latinos and many other people visit his store.

Another contributing factor to an increased population of Hispanics in our area is their close connection to family, reports De Los Ramos. "Latinos typically live in an extended family, so if one person finds a job here they will eventually bring their wife and kids, parents and aunt and uncles," he said.

In addition, he stated that Hispanics have larger families in general. Whereas American families produce one or two children, the average Hispanic family may have three or four, according to De Los Ramos.

The University of Delaware also has seen an increase in Hispanic students, although the numbers are small. In 1998, approximately 378 full-time undergraduate and 42 graduate Hispanic students were enrolled in a total student population of more than 21,000 (including resident and non-resident students). According to director of admissions Larry Griffith, this report indicates only Hispanics born in the United States.

The University has a very small percentage of international Hispanic or Latino students, Griffith said.

"We want to have (more) diversity at the University and have those voices represented here," stated Griffith.

The community is breaking through the language barrier

By SHARON R. COLE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

A growth in the Hispanic population throughout Delaware in recent years has presented challenges for all concerned. More than 2,300 of the over 17,000 Hispanics in New Castle County lived in the Newark area as of 1998, a jump from less than 1,000 a few years ago, according to Ed Ratledge, director of applied demography at the University of Delaware.

Old and new residents here are trying to break down some cultural barriers in the most obvious way — they are learning each other's language. Residents said they recognized a need to meet their Hispanic neighbors half way and are learning to speak Spanish to do just that.

"It's a language that is spoken on this continent and throughout the Lease is learning Spanish through a course taught by Stacey Milkovics, a Newark resident and University of Delaware professor. Milkovics offers special courses and consultation services outside the University in order to meet an increasing demand to learn the language here.

Other students in Milkovics' class include two teenagers, Troy Dennis and Justin Wiggins, who want to be better prepared for high school Spanish, and Barbara Bateman, a surgical nurse at A.I. DuPont Children's Hospital.

"When I (visit my Hispanic patients), if I can say a few words in Spanish, then it makes them and their parents feel more comfortable," said Bateman.

This type of compassion can make a world of difference to Hispanics who are trying to adjust to a new country and a new culture, as well as a new language.

Paola Gamboa recently moved from Venezuela to Newark with her 4-year-old son, Manuel, and husband, Orlando Ayala.

Language barriers prevent her from obtaining pertinent information and services. "People speak English so fast and I can't understand them — people here don't separate their words," explained Gamboa, who said one of the most difficult things to deal with is setting up doctor appointments.

Finding someone who speaks Spanish can offer welcome relief. When Milkovics entered the room to introduce herself, Gamboa was surprised. "She spoke Spanish very well!" she said.

Although Gamboa is determined to learn to communicate in English, she said the process is not easy. In fact, she discovered that some Hispanics have been here 10 years and haven't learned the language. "They speak only with other Spanish people," she said.

One problem, Gamboa found, is that Hispanics attempting to learn English on a limited budget have to rely on volunteers to teach them who can only dedicate one-and-a-half hours once or twice a week.

For the past nine months, Gamboa has been learning English through the University of Delaware English Language Institute and the Literacy Volunteers of Wilmington.

"I think that this program needs more time," Gamboa said, explaining that longer and more frequent meeting times would be better.

Paola Gamboa and her son, who moved to Newark from Venezuela, are learning English.

She also had a difficult time finding language services within Newark that could meet her needs. She sends her son to a bilingual program in Wilmington that is offered free of charge.

"I could find nothing like that here," she said. "Here I would have to pay over $100 a week for the same thing."

According to Melanie Rehberg, admissions counselor of the English Language Institute, their eight-week intensive session costs $575 for residents and $1,680 for non-residents.

Currently the Literacy Volunteers of Wilmington program has 40 volunteers servicing the Newark area. According to program coordinator Carmen Knox, 40 is "definitely not enough."

Knox said 16 percent of their clientele are Hispanics and currently 100 students in New Castle County are on the waiting list for this free service.

Those interested in learning a language can call Literacy Volunteers at 658-5624, or the English Language Institute at 831-2674. For information about Milkovics services call 731-7757 or e-mail, smilkovics@earthlink.net.

University of Delaware professor Stacey Milkovics gives lessons in Spanish.

U.S.," said James Lease, a graduate student with the University's department of engineering. "Doors open up if you know Spanish, not only in employment, but in friendships and cultural experiences."

Newark's small businesses prepare

By MEGHAN AFTOSMIS

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

The Y2K bug has been keeping small business owners in Newark busy: busy talking to their regular vendors, their bookkeepers, accountants and computer consultants; and busy checking, updating and testing their computer systems.

But storeowners on Newark's Main Street are counting on being prepared.

"We're all business people and want to continue to be in business," said Delaware Book Exchange book manager Nelson Frost. "We'll solve our way around it if there are any problems."

Frost said he is "not terribly worried." Still, the book exchange already has begun preparing for the New Year by replacing both hardware and software in its computer system.

Rafael Delgado, music store manager of Rainbow Books and Music, also has been busy preparing the store's computer system. He said he already has received the Y2K compatible updated version of the program they use to keep inventory of all the stores' tapes, compact discs and books. His first step will be to test the new software, he said.

"We'll see if there are any glitches and take it from there," he said. "We want to be ready for any problem that might arise."

But, Rainbow's accounting and bookkeeping programs are old Lotus programs that might have to be replaced, Delgado said.

"I would have liked to have been ready by now, but we have had little cooperation with our vendors," said Owen Thorne, general manager of the chain.

Thorne said, as a consumer, the responsibility has been placed more on him to make preparations and changes than on the vendors with which he is in contact. Still, Thorne said he is ready to spend tens of thousands of dollars on those preparations.

"I wish I had a crystal ball to see what is going to happen, but we'll do the best we can to minimize any inconveniences for our customers," he said.

Company manager Kristin Short said after upgrading the computer system at Grassroots, it will be ready too.

The software used by Grassroots keeps track of its inventory, how well its inventory is doing and its sales. Short said that back in the fall of 1998, they began talking with their regular dealer who said all of the store's computer hardware would have to be upgraded.

"It just couldn't handle the new program and he wasn't sure it was Y2K compatible," she said. "In February, we bought all new computer hardware, software and a new server."

In March 1999, they upgraded to the latest

"Some record keeping systems could be affected by the Y2K bug, but government agencies and private sector companies are working to ensure that these systems will be ready for the new year. If Y2K failures do occur in these systems, it is unlikely that customer records will be erased. Many institutions are required to keep backup copies of critical books and records that are stored in electronic form. It is a good idea to keep copies of bank statements, bills and other records to check for any discrepancies or unusual charges."

version of software, which they were assured is Y2K ready.

"The only other issue is whether the banks will be ready and we are trusting them," Short said. "I don't anticipate some big problem, not at least for us."

And if a problem did arise, Short said, the store's computer dealer is located in Hockessin so they are nearby and always offer good technical help.

"Our dealer said, 'don't wait until fall of 1999, we might be too booked by then,'" Short said. "They really encouraged people to do it all early on, so it wasn't a crunch."

Iron Hill Brewery and Restaurant also had outside help in preparing for year 2000. "We have a service that takes care of all of our computer systems," said general manager Dorris Resurreccion.

But, because the restaurant is only 2-years-old, she said their systems already were prepared for the most part.

"Fortunately we have a system that we rely on, but that we are not completely codependent on," Resurreccion said. "Still, we are going to be able to function as a restaurant, but our record systems might be a little messed up."

The restaurant plans to be open on New Year's Eve and open later in the day for dinner on New Year's Day, she said.

"The worst case scenario for us would be that our computer systems crashed and we'd have to do our orders by hand," she said.

Celeste Kemple, co-owner of Campus Surf, said they also were relying on someone coming in to fix their computer systems.

"Our bookkeeper is coming in, and she'll be able to tell us what we need to do," Kemple said. "We have to find out if our computer is compatible."

She said they would be talking with their bookkeeper, their computer service and the credit card companies to make sure the store was prepared for the New Year.

But Kemple said, "I think it's more of a big hype, and people are making a lot of money

Staff at Rainbow Books & Music held their collective breath and turned the clocks on the company's computers to Jan. 1, 2000, on July 8 to verify their system was ready for the Y2K bug.

off it."

Editor's Note: This is the second part of a five part series which on the effects the Y2K computer bug will have on Newark and on the preparations being made to exterminate that bug. The Y2K computer problem was created by programmers who took a shortcut many years ago. To conserve memory space, they used a two-digit date system to record the year instead of a four-digit system. On Jan. 1, 2000, computers still using the two-digit system will recognize "00" not as the Year 2000, but as the Year 1900 instead. This could cause computer system to shut down completely or generate incorrect data.

Recent rain not enough

The sound of rain on two mornings this week was almost unrecognizable. Although the National Weather Service claims this area has had 8.9 inches since April, that's only at certain locations where the rainfall is measured. On one of the recent mornings, it rained on Kirkwood Highway, but was bone dry at Route 896.

What this means is that, as we approach another drought emergency, all water consumers need to help conserve a commodity that cannot be increased merely by adding workers, work hours or more technology. Water is an almost unique utility in this respect.

States contiguous to Delaware, some sharing the same water sources, have already asked their residents to follow voluntary restrictions on water use. Mandatory restrictions have been imposed in 55 of the 67 counties in Pennsylvania.

News this week that the state of Delaware might follow their neighbors lead has had talk shows and water coolers buzzing with opinions. Most disturbing are the people who say they have no intention of conserving no matter what the state or local governments tell them. These people claim that it's not their fault the water companies can't produce enough of the stuff or haven't taken steps to increase the supply for extended dry periods.

To those people, we say, please see above. The only way to have water available when the wells and streams run dry, is to have stored and saved some previously in a reservoir.

In Newark, if not the rest of the state, they have been working on that for at least 10 years: first with the county and state and now, alone. But that help is still years away for Newark water customers, not all of whom live in Newark.

Some also address the "unfairness" of exempting businesses, like golf courses, from some restrictions imposed in past dry years.

Businesses that supply jobs, services, entertainment, or products need water in many capacities and have to be given some consideration. They are here because residents want them and the market has provided them.

We face the likelihood of mandatory restrictions within a month although government officials are reluctant to make any predictions.

Every resident - and business - must examine their water use and needs carefully as the situation worsens. Nothing except an extended rainfall is going to provide more water in the next two months. We all have to share what is available - and in some cases even that dwindling amount will be decided by people and businesses outside our communities and state.

And maybe this will help: when was the last time you heard of water customers facing rolling dryouts or shut-offs for non-payment of water bills, or choosing between buying food or water usage?

Talking with five friends on a Saturday night

By MEGHAN AFTOSMIS

NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

Like many others, my mom drove to Ohio University for a weekend during the Spring. Like many others, we went shopping during the afternoon. Unlike many others, we did not go uptown that night.

It's not that she didn't want to go. We were going to go. But we sat in my living room with my roommates and their moms instead.

The hours flew by and before we knew it, the bar scene had slipped our minds completely.

The six of us spent that entire night talking and sharing stories. We talked about current events and news. We told drunk stories. We gossiped. We talked about guys. It was probably one of my favorite parts of the entire weekend.

For that night, we weren't moms and daughters. We were six friends. Actually, it is probably my most favorite part about growing up - seeing adults, especially parents, as real people and not as authority figures.

Starting when we are born, parents and other adults teach us everything, from right and wrong to how to distinguish our left hand from our right. We have to see them as the authority. It is ingrained in our heads from day one.

As we got a little older, we could go to our parents with our problems and they would solve them for us, teaching us the answers at the same time. Sometimes they taught by example, other times by lecturing over and over, and still other times by punishing us.

But then, all of a sudden, there comes a time when they start to say, "It's your problem, figure it out yourself," or, "it's your decision."

Funny thing, but it's just about that time we begin to see adults as real people. We can see they have their own problems to solve and their own fears to face.

It almost turns scary, though, when we can start to identify with those problems and fears, or when we can talk to someone we've once looked up to as an authority figure and realize we're really on an equal level.

When we can sit down with our parents or other adults and see them as real people, talk to them on an equal level, that's when those shared experiences come out.

And those experiences, those stories, can teach us more about life and more about people than we might ever learn on our own and usually faster than we would have learned it independently.

Big Guernsey shipment

J. Irvin Dayett, of Cooch's Bridge, and John K. Johnston, of Newark, returned home last Thursday from a trip through the stock country of Wisconsin. While in the western state they bought 51 pure bred and grade Guernsey cows and heifers.

The cattle were unloaded at the Dayett farm Monday afternoon in good shape, and will be pastured there temporarily. Dayett and Johnston are offering them for sale to dairymen of the community.

Curtis Mill closed down

The Nonantum Mills of Curtis Bros., Inc. paper manufacturers of this place were closed down all of last week, while extensive repairs were being made.

A complete battery of new boilers are reported to have been installed to replace the old ones, which were condemned. It is understood that the Curtis Mill is still working on a part-time basis, owing to lack of orders.

Will worms ease county landfill woes?

A subject that's slowly inching its way into the minds of New Castle County officials may be the solution to ongoing problems at the old Llangollen landfill.

That subject is a little known process called "annelidic consumption" and its secret lies in one word - worms.

Problems at Llangollen stem from county public works efforts to keep rain-mixed leachate from decaying biodegradable garbage deposited before the landfill closed its operations, from seeping into a nearby Artesian Water Company aquifer.

Year's "weird" weather confuses watchers...

During the harsh cold months of the past winter, one of the most common daydreams shared by Newark residents was images of tropical beaches, palm trees and sunshine, a respite from the snow, sleet and freezing temperatures which plagued most of the East coast.

The dream has come true, at least as far as the sunshine goes, the winter's ideal is rapidly becoming the summer's nightmare. Although the heat and humidity presently baking the area have not reached the extremes of the sweltering, record-breaking summer of 1955, officials at the National Weather Service have described the scorching temperatures as a "Continental Heat Wave."

Farm to follow Daugherty in demolition derby

The wrecking ball will most surely follow Newark City Council's decision to rezone 48 West Park Place, where the Old Deer Park farmhouse sits.

The fate of the farm house, which is registered as a historic building, and surrounding 1.2 acres of land, owned by Ed Sobolewski, has been debated in Newark for months.

In April neighbors spoke against Sobolewski's first plan for five luxury townhouses. Most argued the plan was not appropriate for the surrounding community, which is predominantly comprised of single family homes.

City buys 34 acres

Newark is 34.11 acres richer in open space, but $1 million poorer in its Open Space and Parkland Acquisition Program.

The city bought 20.22 acres of cleared vacant farmland on the north side of Welsh Tract Road.

The remaining 13.89 wooded acres are located south of I-95 on Welsh Tract Road adjacent to Iron Hill Park.

According to Parks Director, Jim Hall, the northern 20.22 acres is slated for active

We might learn an important life lesson, we might learn a little bit about that person's past and where they are coming from, or we might learn a little bit about what is going on in that person's life right now.

We might be able to relate and tell a few stories of our own, we might be able to listen, or we might find some good advice or someone with a sympathetic ear. And with each conversation, that authority figure becomes more of a person, becomes more real to us.

So unlike some professor's lecture I might have forgotten by the next day, I can picture clearly in my mind the stories and the thoughts exchanged while sitting in my grandfather's living room, in the passenger seat of my dad's car, on the couch with my mom — and in my apartment living room with my mom, my roommates and their moms.

I might have enjoyed going out to the bars with my Mom on a Saturday night.

But I know sitting in my living room and talking with five friends is something I will remember for a long time.

I would like to comment on the process by which Newark's city council reached a decision to allow the Ambling Corporation of Atlanta, Ga., to build a private dormitory complex with over 880 parking places on the old Budd site.

The Ambling Corporation repeatedly insisted that its experience has revealed the necessity of providing a parking place for each bed. The Corporation admitted, however, that this project is the first urban development it has done, that all its other successful private dormitories are in more rural areas. How could the council so readily accept Ambling's demand when the corporation clearly has had no experience with this type of development? Why are so many cars necessary when this complex is so close to the university campus?

The impact of so many cars on an already incredibly congested traffic area was another major concern. The Ambling Corporation and DelDOT stated that over 880 cars will have a negligible effect on traffic. Yet the research backing this statement was neither shared nor requested at the meeting. One citizen spoke about his observations that students do not simply leave their cars parked day and night but in fact are "in and out all day."

It was requested that much of the original wooded area remain. The Ambling Corporation repeatedly responded to this request by saying that the trees in this area are not very pretty and that it would provide attractive landscaping. Yes, the little bushes looked nice on the architectural drawings, but a visit to some apartment complexes with dried up, low lying bushes struggling to survive in cigarette strewn, dusty, pine bark mulch proves that there is a discrepancy between architectural drawings and reality.

After so many people expressed these and many more issues, it was as if all their concerns and questions were completely forgotten. As the mayor introduced an alternative plan mysteriously referred to all evening that would increase the height of the dormitory type apartments to allow parking places for the town, the meeting became a rather confused discussion about which motion was on the table and which plan was being discussed.

The most plaintive moment of the meeting occurred when architect Gunter Schaffer, who has worked harder than anyone else thinking about, planning, and designing a more enlightened development in this last open area of Newark, walked up to speak. He reminded the council of the Hyett-Palma report recommending this area be developed for a wide variety of housing, and said the dormitory complex is not going to prevent students from wanting to rent in single home neighborhoods. It was sad to me to see someone who has spent so much of his own time and energy to help Newark speak with such resignation.

In the end the town voted the project through instead of voting to allow two more weeks for intelligent discussion with the company. It was as if the decision had already been made. And now, no one other than students will ever want to or be able to live in this place, and the last open area in downtown Newark has been given up to university use.

It may be too late now to work for improvements on this project.

But it is not too late to request more objective reporting to occur in Newark's town paper, to ask citizens to stay involved in town issues, to hope the university board of trustees will become more interested in maintaining Newark's integrity as a town rather than obliterating it, to obtain and use intelligent research about Newark's future, and to ask the council to respond to the community's concerns.

From: Gunter Schaffer

If the redevelopment of the Del Chapel site is certain, we must prepare for the impact of the Ambling project.

Primarily, the adjacent neighborhoods must prepare for thousands of extra daily auto and pedestrian trips. Well-designed traffic-calming devices may ameliorate the traffic problem. Hopefully we can also devise schemes for protecting these neighborhoods as students stream through them at 2 a.m. on their way home every Thursday, Friday, and Saturday night.

Next, now that we have decided to encourage developers to provide one parking space for every student, we must redouble and concentrate our efforts to integrate and efficiently use our existing parking spaces. Otherwise, current Main Street landlords may have to begin seriously enlarging their parking lots. If not well-designed, this expansion could leave us with a Main Street surrounded by a featureless, asphalt wasteland. This could easily destroy Main Street's unique small town character, which is the very essence of its appeal and potential.

Then, if the Ambling project is to be a blessing in disguise, it must be actively used as part of an effective strategy for encouraging students and absentee landlords to leave the owner-occupied neighborhoods. Simultaneously, we must prevent the 600 apartments (enough to house 2400 students) now approved for construction from causing deleterious disruptions in the apartment market. Before it is too late, how will we know what is needed to avoid large vacancy rates, deferred maintenance, developer bankruptcies, and significant increases in Section 8 housing? Then, how do we convince students to leave the privacy & freedom of single family rental homes for high rise apartments where management security is more severe than a freshman dorm & parking is 60 yards away.

Finally and most crucially, we must not allow the University of Delaware to use this onslaught of apartments as an excuse to grow. Because if it does, the owner-occupied neighborhoods adjacent to the Ambling project will be engulfed and abused by many more students than they are now. Also, Main Street will no longer be a place in which the community as a whole can shop and enjoy. It will have to cater mostly to students, at the expense of everyone else.

Unquestionably, the decision by Council to approve the Ambling proposal was made with the best interests of the community at heart. But if we do not act immediately to face the challenges posed by any rapid large-scale change (such as the random relocation of thousands of students), we may regret that decision for many years to come.

A 700 Year-Old Tradition Right Here in Delaware!

About 700 years ago a group of farmers in England got together and began bragging over who had the best livestock. The only way to settle the whole affair was to bring all the livestock together in one place and let everyone have a look to decide for themselves. Pretty soon, livestock were bought and sold at these events. They became an important way for farmers to upgrade their herds. Gradually, this summer event became a ritual. Today these gatherings are called state and county fairs. Things have changed a lot in the last 700 years, but people still like to come together to see what's new and meet old friends.

MARK MANNO

Our state fair is just 620 years shy of being as old as that first fair in merry old England, but you'll find plenty to see and do through July 31.

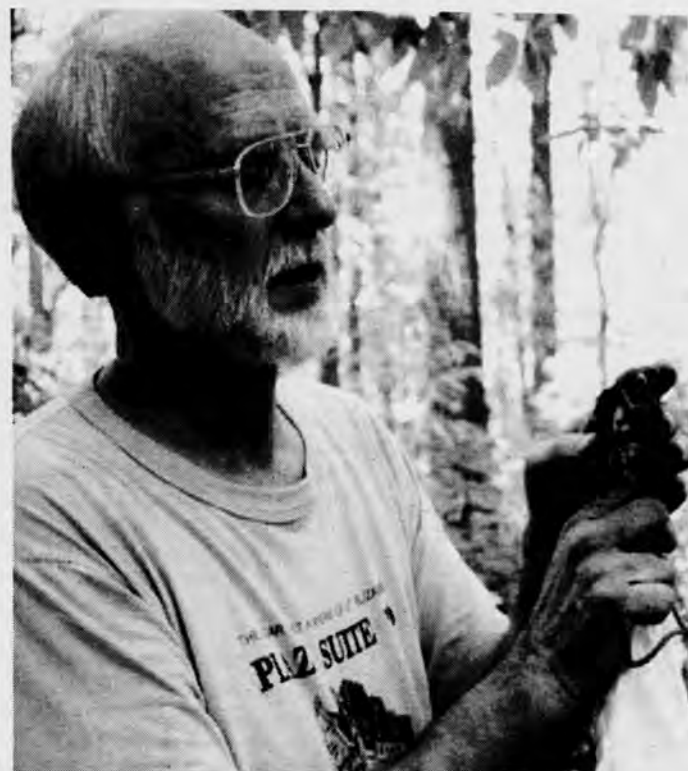

Of course there will be agricultural exhibits. That's the core and lifeblood of the fair. Organizations like 4-H and FFA will be spotlighted as kids show animals and exhibit projects they've been working on at home and in school. Where else can you watch kids compete in a Lego contest or adults show off their best recipes using that wonderful American concoction, Spam? Of course, the fair has a lot more than the old fashioned activities. A computer web-design contest that promotes the fair is new for 1999. People don't exhibit at the fair for the money or even the prestige. They participate because it's the Fair! There's just something about this mid-summer extravaganza that a quarter million visitors find irresistible.

Too many residents of New Castle County have never even been to Harrington. It's a short drive south of Dover. Admission is low, and almost everything on display is free. There are plenty of giveaways and more places to eat than you could ever imagine. The midway will also be there for the kids. Make it a day trip or even a two-day trip, and if you're down there make sure to stop by the 4-H building and say hello. You won't regret it.

One word of advice though. The speed limits on Route 13 are strictly enforced! Don't let your enthusiasm to get to the fair distract you.

Working for a song

Although the songbirds caught in a net for research are startled, University of Delaware professor Roland Ross said they are not harmed in any way.

Ross and University of Delaware senior Liz Salter record his findings on the woodthrush, a neotropical songbird that migrates from Central America and nests in a woodlot in Newark.

By SHARON R. COLE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Who knew that in the peaceful woodlot behind the University of Delaware football stadium, a special songbird has been the focus of a lifetime of research?

Every summer since 1973, Dr. Roland Ross, a professor of entomology and applied ecology at the University, has diligently recorded his findings there on the woodthrush, a neo-tropical songbird that migrates from Central America to nest in forest areas up north.

"I like discovering things about birds," said Ross, sitting at a folding table in the middle of the 35-acre micro-forest off Chestnut Hill Road.

Hidden just a few yards inside the fenced area of the natural classroom is an office-like shed which has become a home-away-from-home for Ross in the summer.

Beginning at 5:20 a.m., Ross, together with graduate student Jason Johnston and University of Delaware senior Liz Salter, prepares and organizes songbird data every morning during the summer months.

Data, which includes the height, weight, wing span and blood type of the birds which are banded for identification, is collected for a national study titled "Monitoring Avian Productivity and Survival."

Ross said the oldest birds returning to his lot were 8-years-old. "Once birds are marked, you can look at them in terms of how many come back (for mating), when they come back and who their mates are," he said.

Ross and his assistants set up special nets throughout the lot which are checked each hour for six hours and then removed until the next day.

Special techniques are used to attract the birds toward the nets, including a recording of the songbirds to attract males who engage in "song battles" for their own area.

"We've had some birds stay up in the trees looking for a bird and others will stand on top of the tape recorder," Ross said with a laugh.

Females do not sing and are typically caught by nets placed near their nests.

Demonstrating how to remove a bird carefully from a net, Ross explained, "First you get the feet out, then the tail, the wings and then the head."

Although the birds are startled, Ross said they are not harmed in any way.

Ross' team also spends time searching for nests, listening for the bird's distinct song, and keeping an eye on woodthrush eggs.

Ross' interest in wildlife began in Arkansas where he grew up on a farm.

"I liked to hunt and fish, but I didn't know anything about birds."

It wasn't until his grandmother gave him a huge book called "Birds of America" that Ross became intrigued. After obtaining a degree in wildlife management at the University of Arkansas, he went on to Illinois to obtain a graduate degree before landing a job at the University of Delaware in 1971.

Today, Ross is continuing this project which was inherited from his predecessor at the University. "Most of the time I like being out here in the peace and quiet and I love unraveling the puzzles of nature," he said. "All summer, the family knows that dad is probably at the woodlot."

Ross said that he is very thankful that the University continues to preserve the wooded area for wildlife studies and he hopes that more people become involved in protecting forest areas.

"As the number of birds returning declines, one thing we know is happening is a decrease in the amount of forest that is productive," he said.

Outdoor concerts echo summers of the past

Are outdoor summer concerts part of your memories of yesteryear? They are of mine. Something happened to bring them to the fore recently and I want to share the information with you.

Of all my fond, youthful memories of outdoor music in the summer, including Longwood Gardens, Robin Hood Dell, Tidal Basin and the like, none is more happy than concerts with the Boston Pops at Tanglewood in Lenox or at the Esplanade on the banks of the Charles River. I am not sure exactly why this is true, but I do know that it is. Of course, the fact that Arthur Fiedler had the baton in his hand may have had something to do with my selection, but certainly not everything. "The Pops" was always very special — and it still is!

There is a new man at the helm now, only the third conductor in the history of the Boston Pops since Arthur Fiedler founded it in 1930. By the way, Fiedler was 35 at the time and the newest conductor, Keith Lockhart, is also 35. His picture appears with my column today and a very special photo it is. It is from the back cover the album booklet in the latest Boston Pops release, "A Splash of Pops." The album couldn't have come out at a better time than July!

If you are lucky enough to be headed for the Music Shed at Tanglewood or the great wooden bandshell in Boston, that's great. Congratulations! You are going to have a wonderful time. I always did. But, if you are not that lucky, the next best thing is this new album. Just be sure to play it outdoors with a cool drink and a burger or hot dog in your hand for the full effect. I am going to be using cuts from the new CD on my WNRK Sunday program so, if you would like a sample, tune in.

RCA Victor's Senior Director of Publicity Marilyn Ego almost waxed poetic as she told me about the new CD, "From Tchaikovsky's '1812 Overture' to 'Stars and Stripes Forever' to the world premiere of 'With Voices Raised,' 'A Splash of Pops' contains the music that has made the Boston Pops a summertime tradition." She is right as far as I am concerned. You should check it out for yourself.

Other music on the disc includes "The Star Spangled Banner," "Liberty Fanfare," "Doodletown Fifers," "Overture to 'State Fair,'" "America," "National Emblem March," "Boogie-Woogie Bugle Boy" and "America the Beautiful." The choral works include "Lift Every Voice and Sing" and the show-stopper, "With Voices Raised."

Keith Lockhart is a worthy successor to Arthur Fiedler. He has a tremendous personality, sense of humor and is an outstanding musician. Before assuming the Pops podium, the 35 year old had wielded batons with the New York Philharmonic, the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Chicago Symphony, the Los Angeles Philharmonic, the Toronto Symphony and the Montreal Symphony. That itinerary would be impressive for a conductor many

At 35, Keith Lockhart is the third conductor in the history of the Boston Pops. He is ready to entertain America this summer.

He certainly had "big shoes to fill" because of the 40 year relationship between Fiedler, the Pops and the American people. Some felt he couldn't do it. Truthfully, I wasn't sure he could either. But, he has filled them and gone on to carve his personal niche with the orchestra and the public. His radio and television concerts, as well as his RCA Victor albums have played a great role in his acceptance as well.

There is still time to get to hear the Pops in person this season. As far as Tanglewood goes, there is a beautiful, colorful brochure that is packed with information about the 1999 season at the Tanglewood Music Festival and it is free for the asking from the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Symphony Hall, Boston, MA 02115. Ticket prices are quite reasonable. Lawn tickets for children up to twelve are free. All of the concerts on the Esplanade are free and you can get a schedule from the

Beckett Healthcare signs with Crozer-Keystone

Beckett Healthcare, the leading national provider of home respiratory, home medical and rehabilitation equipment, entered into a contract with Crozer-Chester Medical Center and Delaware County Memorial Hospital, both part of Crozer-Keystone Health System of Pennsylvania.

Under the terms of this new contract, the Newark-based company will provide home care patients from the two institutions with services including respiratory therapy, pediatric therapy, and rehabilitation therapy. Crozer-Chester is in Upland, Pa., and Delaware County is in Drexel Hill, Pa.

"This is a great opportunity for all of us," said Beckett executive vice-president of sales and marketing Philip Leone. "Both Crozer-Chester and Delaware County Memorial Hospital are excellent health facilities that offer great quality of care, and we are glad to continue that care and service to their patients in the home setting."

The Crozer-Keystone Health System is comprised of Crozer-Chester Medical Center, Community Hospital, Delaware County Memorial Hospital, Taylor Hospital and Springfield Hospital.

Incorporated in 1979, Beckett Healthcare began as a respiratory therapy provider, and is now one of the leading home care provider companies serving Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Dallas, Texas, and Fort Lauderdale, Fla. It is also a member of the country's largest home healthcare equipment networks, EquipNet Inc. Beckett Healthcare offers high-tech respiratory services, pediatric services, durable medical equipment (DME), rehabilitation equipment and infusion therapy services, including pain management and chemotherapy services. It also offers a wide range of wound care, diabetic, osto-

DuPont PMRI adding hours

DuPont PMRI adding hours

The Eugene du Pont Preventative Medicine & Rehabilitation Institute's (PMRI) Health Enhancement Program, based at Pelleport, 3506 Kennett Pike, Greenville, has extended its weekday schedule by one hour and will be open from 7 a.m. - 7:30 p.m., Monday - Friday, to accommodate the special needs of a growing population. In the past year, enrollment in the program has more than doubled.

Patients in the program must meet specific criteria. These include: 1) multiple risk factors for, or a diagnosis of, a chronic disease or illness; 2) orthopedic concerns, which must be addressed in the course of developing an exercise prescription; and, 3) temporary medical conditions, or physiologic states, for which exercise may prove beneficial (i.e. pregnancy). Written authorization from a physician is required.

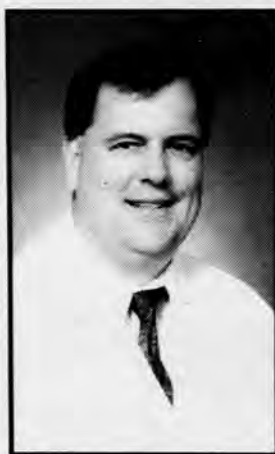

The program will maintain its regular Saturday hours of 9 a.m. to noon through May, and 8 to 11 a.m. June through August.

For more information about PMRI and its services, call 661-3000.

A.I. duPont Hospital growing

The Alfred I. duPont Hospital for Children has started its most significant expansion project in more than two decades.

The $19 million renovation and expansion of the hospital's surgical facilities is the largest since the million-square foot building opened in 1984. According to hospital officials, over the last decade, the duPont Hospital has experienced tremendous growth in the number of surgeries it performs. It has also witnessed a shift in the delivery of surgical care from the inpatient to the outpatient setting. In response to these changes, the expansion project will double the hospital's surgical capacity over two-and-one-half years, adding six operating rooms as well as new areas for preoperative and post-operative care and outpatient surgical visits. With these renovation, the duPont Hospital will be able to more efficiently serve surgical inpatients and an increasing number of surgical outpatients.

Crib safety information available

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission maintains a toll free number at 1-800-638-2772 with information on whether certain makes and models of baby cribs meet standards or have been recalled.

"The Safe Nursery," "Tips for Your Baby's Safety," and other brochures also are free from the CPSC, Washington, D.C., 20207.

*Buy a new crib; stay away from used cribs, even if they've been in the family for a long time. The Danny Foundation recommends that consumers avoid cribs made before 1990.

*Consumer Reports recommends that parents stay away from cribs that have corner posts that can snag clothing; ornamentation that can break and pose a choking hazard; decorative cutouts that can trap; and slats more than 2 3/8 inches apart, which can strangle. These features are common with older cribs.

*Stay away from cribs that have been hand painted because the paint may have a lead base.

*Drop sides must not be released by a child, should hold securely in the raised position and must require two distinct actions or a force of 10 pounds with one action to release the latch or lock.

*Mattresses should fit snugly so that a baby cannot get caught between the mattress and side of the crib.

In addition, The Danny Foundation, 1-800-833-2669, provides crib-safety guidance and the brochure "Is Your Crib Safe? And the Consumer Reports Books "Guide to Baby Products, Fourth Edition" is available at bookstores.

Canal pitcher Stacy Maloney unleashes a pitch toward the plate during Canal's 10-0 win over Stanton-Newport in a first-round game last Sunday. Maloney struck out seven and allowed three hits. At right, Ashley James slides home with Canal's second run of the game in the second inning. The game was ended in the top of the sixth on the 10-run mercy rule.

Newark Nationals edge Newark American 6-5

When they passed the hat at last Saturday's Little League District II Major Division All-Star Tournament game between Newark American-Newark National they raised just over $70.

The large and vocal crowd that gathered at Brandywine field to watch the action got much, much more than its money's worth.

In a game that featured just about everything baseball has to offer - long ball, seeing-eye singles, bang-bang plays at the plate, etc. - the National stars rallied with a pair of clutch hits in the final inning to edge American, 6-5.

And, the game ended with American's Will Sheppard stranded at third base after slugging a lead-off triple.

The win raised National's tournament record to 3-0 and advanced them to the District II winner's bracket final. American fell to 1-1 in the double-elimination tournament.

Leading 5-4 going into the sixth inning, American was just one out away from its second tournament win when National catcher, Butch Covey, with his second big blow of the game, singled to right scoring Ryan Pike. And, Covey's aggressive base-running that carried him to third as the throw to the plate was too late to catch Pike, paid off when Keith Jordan followed with what turned out to be a game-winning RBI infield single.

"We did a lot of little things real well," Tom Farley, National manager, told his stars as they celebrated their third consecutive tourney win. "We refused to lose."

Refuse they did.

Canal All-Stars open tournament with 10-0 victory

By CHRIS DONAHUE

Timely hitting, sound defense and the pitching of Stacy Maloney powered the Canal Majors (13-14) all-star team to a 10-0 victory over Stanton-Newport on Sunday in a first-round game of the state softball tournament at Suburban.

The victory, which was ended in the top of the sixth on the 10-run mercy rule, sent Canal into a winners bracket game of the double-elimination tournament on Tuesday against Suburban, which had a bye.

"Great. We had been practicing for a while and the kids were anxious to get going," summed up Canal Manager Tom Maloney, who is Stacy's father, about his team's play.

"We have a good, all-around team. We don't have a bunch of stars. But we play defense and pitching is probably one of our strong points."

Canal second baseman Jaclyn Temple highlighted the defensive effort in the field with two lunging catches of line drives.

"We tried her out at every position in the infield because she's so good," Maloney said. "(The coaches) decided to play her at second where she usually plays."

Canal also showed its prowess at the plate by striking out only five times.

"Put (the ball) in play and make (opponents) throw it around and make mistakes," Maloney said.

Canal used that philosophy and three hits to take a 3-0 lead in the second inning.

Amber Hicken led off with a single, stole second and went to third on a passed ball. Ashley James drove Hicken home with a single.

James reached third in the same manner, then scored on a wild pitch.

Jenna Billic then singled and later scored on a groundout to shortstop by Faye Mormando.

In the third, Maloney reached base on a fielder's choice. She later scored off a throwing error on Debbie Slifer's grounder to third to make it 4-0. Slifer would score from third on a grounder by Hicken that resulted in another throwing error. Hicken later scored on another RBI single by James to make it 6-0.

In the sixth, Hicken singled and scored on a wild pitch to make it 7-0.

In the seventh, walks, a single and a

Newark's Benjamin, team deals with second death

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

Newark High basketball coach Greg Benjamin said he couldn't believe what he was hearing and seeing on a television news broadcast as he shaved July 12.

But the words and images didn't lie - for the second consecutive year a member of his team had died. The latest victim was Lawrence "Lil' Larry" Hudson, who drowned July 10 while swimming in Hoopes Reservoir. He was buried July 15 in Gracelawn Memorial Park on what would have been his 19th birthday.

"Some coaches never go through it and here I go through it back to back," said Benjamin.

Last year, Newark forward Tyrell Hall, 15, died of a heart attack before a summer league game. He was buried July 11.

Hudson, the youngest son of a family of five children from Wilmington, was a two-year letter winner as a guard for the Yellowjackets. He averaged about seven points, five assists and five steals per game. Benjamin used him as the leader of pressing-type defenses.

When he played, Hudson, who would have been a senior, wore socks that had "whirling Tasmanian Devils" on them.

"At first I had a problem with (the socks). But with his hustling and great attitude, I said, 'You could wear them,' center, National loaded the bases on three straight singles by Ben Farley, Matt Smoot and Anthony Redfield. American pitcher, Mike Ingram, got opposing hurler Steve Spiese to chase a high fastball for the first out. But, Joe Fahey, after fouling off three full-count pitches, walked to end Ingram's shutout bid.

Joe Schuster, the smallest National star, then battled Ingram, fouling off a number of third-strike pitches before sending a sacrifice fly to right scoring Smoot with National's second run.

"That was a huge at bat (by Schuster)," said manager Farley.

Ron Eckert - the No. 9 hitter - made it 3-3 with a cue-like fly that fell just inches inside the foul line in short rightfield. Covey, who effectively blocked the plate and snuffed out potential American runs in both the second and fifth innings, then delivered the first of his two key hits. The 12-year-old, who had homered three times in his team's first two wins, laced a single to left - National's fifth hit of the inning - scoring Fahey to put National up, 4-3.

Back-to-back doubles to start the American fourth, the second by Pat O'Donnell, brought American even at 4-4. It also brought out Farley to make a pitching change with Redfield moving from shortstop to the mound.

Redfield was able to get out of the inning without any further damage, ending the inning by fielding a come-backer, holding O'Donnell at third before throwing to first, then watched as Covey tagged out O'Donnell who made a delayed attempt to score.

American broke the tie the next inning - and could have had more had it not been for Covey's second block of the plate.

Dan Ryan, American's first baseman, singled with one out. Ryan advanced to second when Papanicolas reached on an error. When Eli Turkel bounced back to Redfield, Ryan never stopped running as Redfield threw to second to cut down Papanicolas and scored to put American back in front, 5-4.

Moments later, Turkel tried to score on Evan Walker shot to center but was tagged out by Covey at home much to the disbelief of the American rooters.

"It was a judgment call (at the plate)," said Mike Von Steuben, American manager. "These were two heavyweights slugging it out and it sure was a great game."

Benjamin recalled with a chuckle. "He's going to be truly missed by the team, staff members and children of the school. He had great character and never had anything negative to say about anything."

Benjamin said the loss of those two players will make next season even more difficult in highly-competitive Flight A.

"It's going to be tough," Benjamin said. "Truly (Hudson's) going to be missed. And now with Lawrence and Tyrell gone, it will be difficult to play without those two kids."

Benjamin said he saw Hudson two days before his death at the Burger King in Newark where Hudson worked.

"We went there quite often," Benjamin said. "My son called it 'Larry's Place.' The last thing I said to him was, 'Take care and be good,' he gave me that pretty smile and said, 'Alright Coach B.' He also called me coach Ben sometimes."

Benjamin said Hudson had planned to go to college.

Hudson, who was born in Philadelphia, is survived by his mother, Jacqueline; his brothers, Monte, Robert and Tyson; a sister, Jacqlyn, and other family members and friends.

Canal All-Stars earn berth in regionals

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The offensive might of Canal Little League's 11-12 year old softball all-star team finally came to life in a winners bracket game Monday night against Suburban.

Unfortunately for Canal, Suburban had begun its offensive display earlier in the game and was able to hang on for an 11-10 victory in the District II game.

The outcome set up the championship game the following night at Canal, where the host team battered Suburban 17-7 to advance to the regional tournament that begins Friday at Suburban in New Castle.

In the title game, which ended in the fourth inning on the 10-run mercy rule, winning pitcher Lara Krygier struck out seven.

Kirsten Swank aided the victory with three hits, including a double.

After Monday night's game, Canal Manager Cindy Szabo was confident her team would come back strong.

"We've got great teamwork here, but we started off a little slow here tonight," said Szabo, whose team had outscored its opponents 47-4 in the first two tournament games.

"They picked it up, but it just wasn't in time. But the other team, they played great."

On Monday, Canal fell behind 2-

0 in the top of the first inning. But in the bottom of the first, Swank reached base on an infield error and later scored on a wild pitch.

Suburban scored three more runs in the second. Canal came back with a run in the bottom of the inning when Kelly Russ singled home Jenna Ranauto, who had also singled.

Suburban scored two more runs in the fourth, but Canal responded with three runs in the bottom of the inning. Shannon Szabo singled and scored on a double by Russ. Back-to-back singles by Swank and Candace Wasson drove in two more runs.

Nepi escaped the inning by getting Krygier out on a line drive to second baseman Jessica Denney.

Nepi then helped herself by singling home two more runs in the sixth, then scored on a groundout.

Canal got another run in the fifth when Lauren Diefenderfer led off with a double and later scored on a passed ball.

Trailing 11-6, Russ led off the bottom of the sixth inning with a double and scored on a sacrifice fly by Swank.

An error and a walk put two more runners on, and they scored on a single by Diefenderfer and a throwing error.

An RBI-single by Lindsey Hopper ended the scoring.

► CANAL WINS, from 18

fielder's choice gave Canal a 9-0 lead. With two outs, Lindsey DiStefano drew a bases-loaded walk to end the game.

Maloney, who was a two-year all-star as an 11- and 12-year-old, was making her first appearance at majors level. She allowed three hits and struck out seven.

"Most of the time I start off and just give them a strike, and then if (batters) chase, like if I know they like high pitches, I'll just go up the ladder," Maloney said.

"I'm more anxious than anything because we had a month of practice and we just wanted to get the big first game behind us," she replied when asked if the past all-star experience helped.

"I think I (pitched) pretty good. There were some chances that I had where I should have struck them out. But I'm happy with what happened."

"She did a good job," said her father. "She didn't throw as fast as I thought she would. But with the (hot) weather, you can't blame her."

Maloney also agreed with her father about the team's depth.

"There's not anyone in particular on this team who really stands out," she said. "But everyone is pretty well-rounded and can do anything."

Canal pitcher Stacy Maloney (left) and first baseman Faye Mormando collided while trying to field a grounder, but one of them managed to flip the ball to teammate Jaclyn Temple to get the out at first.

NEW Map of Maryland / Delaware Rivers, Streams, Lakes, and Chesapeake Bay

of Maryland/Delaware

Why every fisherman and boater needs this map

Professor Higbee's® Stream Map of Maryland/Delaware is the first and only highly detailed map of its kind. This new 2 x 3 1/2' foot color map shows virtually all of the 12,000 miles of Maryland/Delaware streams, plus lakes. Now, overlooked streams and lakes are easy-to-locate on one map.

Rave Reviews

"It is amazingly detailed and names some creeks in the Mohawk Valley that can't even be found on topographic maps." --John Piarres, OBSERVER-DISPATCH-ULICA

"If you're looking for the most definitive maps ever created depicting every single creek, river, stream, pond and lake ... then 'Professor Higbee's Stream Maps' are without question the finest." --Howard Brant, THE NEWARK STAR-LEDGER

"Professor Higbee's Stream Map belongs on the den wall of every freshwater angler and paddler in the region." --Tom Meade, Providence Journal - Bulletin

Watershed Boundaries

Boundary lines for the 16 Maryland and Delaware watersheds, which drain into Chesapeake Bay, are shown on the Stream Map.

The entire Chesapeake Bay watershed covers 64,000 square miles in 6 states. Almost every drop of anything that falls on or spills in the watershed eventually ends up in the Bay.

Success in restoring the Bay begins with each individual protecting his or her own watershed. You can also help by becoming a member of the Chesapeake Bay Foundation, and supporting its efforts to reduce pollution, protect and restore habitat, restore fisheries, and educate and involve more citizens. The Bay belongs to each of us. Its survival depends on our actions today.

A portion of the purchase price helps the important efforts of the Chesapeake Bay Foundation.

InterApp Inc. relocates office

Web design company moves to Heritage Plaza

InterApp Inc., a full-service Internet marketing and web site design company, recently relocated its New Castle County office and opened a second location in Sussex County. The company's Newark-based operation is now at the Heritage Professional Plaza, 2601 Annand Drive, Wilmington. The new Rehoboth Beach office is on 111 Road 273C, next to the Penco Building on Route 1.

"We're experiencing growing pains. While attempting to increase the number of InterApp employees to maintain a high level of customer satisfaction and support our extensive business growth, we were forced to upgrade to a larger facility," said Rick Banning, President of InterApp, Inc. "With the onset of WebOsk, our operation has also bloomed in Sussex County. It was clear that we needed to expand our support network to Rehoboth Beach for the convenience of our WebOsk advertisers."

InterApp, Inc. was established in 1997 and currently employs professionals. The company provides a variety of Internet service including consulting, programming, graphic design, web site hosting and Internet marketing. Successful web projects such as the 1492 Hospitality Group, Buck Simpers Architect, Hardy Environmental Services, Rosecroft Raceway, J.A. Moore & Sons Construction Company, Inc., Screens And Themes and WebOsk were developed or reconstructed by InterApp, Inc.

In order to better serve their clients, InterApp, Inc. is also a full-service Internet advertising and media purchasing agent. Clients have the opportunity to promote their new web site through a complete and detailed Internet marketing plan. Specific Internet advertising mediums can be utilized without the development of a marketing plan such as ad banner campaigns, co-branding, email solicitations and Internet advertising site research.

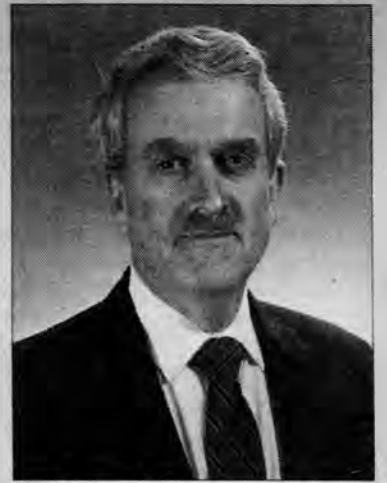

Banning is also the Vice President for SurfSites USA, Inc. which created a network consisting of five web sites that offer free desktop enhancements to the general consumer such as cursors, startup screens, screen savers, sound clips and desktop themes. The network includes www.screensandthemes.com, www.wallpapercentral.com, savers-r-us.interspeed.com, www.weeklystuff.com and www.top50themes.com. Together, these web sites welcome an astonishing 25,000 unique (an individual that browses a web site) each day and nearly four million impressions (a specific page in a web site that is viewed by a visitor) per month.

These extraordinary results recently grabbed the interests of a reporter for Entertainment Weekly magazine who composed an article highlighting Screens And Themes, which will be posted in an upcoming June issue.

InterApp, Inc. released WebOsk this Spring. WebOsk is a network of Internet-based kiosks (or electronic information systems) that conveniently display pertinent vacation information to visitors in high traffic, tourism areas such as hotels and transportation terminals. With the simple touch of a screen, visitors can find a place to feast on pizza, cruise a waterslide or shop for a new pair of shoes.

InterApp, Inc. is an active member of the Delaware, New Castle County and Rehoboth Chambers of Commerce and the Business Network International. InterApp, Inc. currently donates Internet-related services to the Boys & Girls Clubs of Delaware.

For more information, call InterApp, Inc. at (302) 996-4880, email Rick Banning at rbanning@interappinc.com or visit InterApp, Inc.'s web site at www.interappinc.com. For information regarding WebOsk, call (800) 569-4442.

Mass for the Homeless Inc. has new president

Robert J. Katzenstein was recently named president of Mass for the Homeless Inc. He was preceded by Bruce Beardwood, who was responsible for the success of the premier performance of the work in November 1997.

The Delaware native is a trial lawyer in Wilmington and also serves as secretary of the American Red Cross in Delaware.

Mass for the Homeless is a major composition for chorus, symphonic orchestra and solo voices written by Wilson G. Somers and librettist Joan W. Somers. The next performance is Sunday, Nov. 28, at the Grand Opera House in Wilmington.

Index tracks hiring of college grads

Index tracks hiring of college grads Jobtrak.com, the largest and most popular online job listing service for college students, MBAs and alumni, showed a 12.7 percent increase in total job openings posted in June 1999 in comparison to June 1998, with an average starting salary of $35,626.

The most popular job listing categories include sales and marketing, accounting and finance, computers and information science, business and management, and education. Education had the largest increase in job listings at 142 percent of last year due to the shortage of qualified teachers.

The Jobtrak.com Index, released monthly, monitors job posting data at a representative sample of colleges and universities across the nation and provides information about the job market for recent college graduates, details about the employment outlook, hot jobs, salaries, career planning and development.

Jobtrak.com is the nation's largest job listing and resume service targeting college students and alumni and can be accessed at www.jobtrak.com. Established in 1987, Jobtrak.com has formed partnerships with more than 900 college and university career centers, alumni associations and MBA programs nationwide. In 1998 over 440,000 job openings were posted on its site and there are over 35,000 job-seeking students, graduates and experienced professionals accessing the Jobtrak.com web site daily.

How to protect your home and property from insect pests

There are more than 86,000 identified species of insects in North America, but not all are pests. Only those insects that cause trouble can be classified as pests, and only about one percent fall into this category of insects that can hurt you and/or damage your belongings.

By practicing prevention, you can head off some pests without resorting to pesticides. The Better Business Bureau (BBB) of Delaware offers the following suggestions:

*Inspect plants or seeds to see if they are free from insects and disease. Don't bring insect problems home with you.

*To get rid of indoor ants, find and destroy their nests and remove their source of food by practicing vigilant housekeeping and storing food in tightly closed containers.

*Many varieties of spiders are helpful because they trap and eat other pests, however many of us still don't want them hanging around. To cut down on spiders, you need to cut down on the pest population inside your house, so the spiders will move on in search of another food supply.

*Because termites strike five times as many homes every year as do fires, the annual bill for termite damage is astonishing. It is virtually impossible for you to get rid of termites yourself.

Call in a reliable pest control company if you suspect termites in or near your house. Having an annual inspection to detect termite damage may also be a sound investment.

*Reduce the mosquito population by draining all places where stagnant water stands. Mosquitos can multiply in as small a spot as a discarded tin can filled with rain water.

If a job is too big for home remedies, you may need to call in a pest control company. Structural pest control operators are licensed and regulated by agencies in each state. Some reputable pest control companies sell their services door-to-door, however be wary of any uninvited and unidentified person who offers to give your house a free inspection for pests. He or she may try to scare you into buying immediate and costly treatments.

Check around for a reliable company, check prospective choices with the BBB, and always deal with a licensed exterminator, otherwise you may wind up with exterminators who are pests themselves.

Additional insights into many common household pests and what to do about them can be found in the BBB's Tips on Pest Control brochure, available for $1 each.

For a copy of the brochure, include a note specifying the brochure requested, along with your payment in the form of a check, and a self-addressed stamped standard (A#10) envelope to: Better Business Bureau of Delaware, Inc., 1010 Concord Avenue, Suite 101, Wilmington, DE 19802. Bulk orders are available at a discount price.

The brochure is also available through the resource library on the BBB website (<http://www.bbb.org>).

Help available to buy homes

Centers for Homeownership recently celebrated the success of 1,000 New Castle County families who succeeded in borrowing $87.56 million to buy homes with help from the YWCA program since the agency opened its doors in 1992.

Many of those families would have had a difficult time obtaining mortgages on their own because of credit problems or inadequate savings. Others were qualified homebuyers who benefited from Centers' support services as they maneuvered the complex process of buying a home for the first time.

Centers for Homeownership provides one-on-one counseling covering everything from budgeting and credit repair to the "ins and outs" of buying a home. In addition, Centers for Homeownership has also worked with city, county and state government to develop innovative programs to meet the credit needs of first-time homebuyers.

Centers for Homeownership is the only program in New Castle County with bilingual counselors for Spanish-speaking clients. For more information call 888-7790.

Drive a new car home

Century 21 Town Centre is participating in the national "Drive It Home" Sweepstakes which will award a 2000 Pontiac Trans Am to one lucky winner.

Consumers can stop by the Century 21 offices located in Newark Shopping Center and Fox Run Shopping Center before Aug. 31, and enter to win, or visit the web site, www.c21tc.com and enter online.

Century 21 Towne Centre is a full service real estate brokerage with more than 55 sales associates and two offices in Delaware. Century 21 Real Estate Corporation has more than 6,300 independently owned and operated franchised broker offices in more than 25 countries and territories worldwide.

Century 21 selected as associate broker

Cendant Mobility Services Corporation based in Danbury, Conn., and Century 21 Towne Centre, headquartered in Newark, have entered into an agreement naming Century 21 an associate broker for Cendant. Under the agreement, Century 21 Towne Centre will manage Cendant Mobility's corporate properties within Newark and Bear with plans for future expansion in the North Wilmington market.

What's the Royal Welcome Lease?
For starters, the first month is free.

1999 DISCOVERY SERIES I

$495 a month lease/36 months

$ 0 first month payment
$1,695 down payment
$ 0 security deposit

$1,695 due at signing

EXCLUDES TAXES, TITLE AND LICENSE FEES

Short of rolling out a red carpet, we have no doubt you'll find our Royal Welcome Lease very accommodating. Not only is the first month free, but there's no security deposit. And following that first free month, the most technologically advanced Land Rover ever is just $495* a month. So stop by and inquire about our Royal Welcome. And drive away in a Discovery Series II. The vehicle fit for a king, queen, and their children.
