Company E Preparing for Camp Perry.
Twenty-two men representing the pick of the organized militia of Delaware at the last encampment, are now at the State range New Castle, getting in trim to compete in the national match to be held at Camp Perry, O., beginning August 22nd.

The men reached the range on Monday, being able to do very little on that day, due to the inclement weather. Some little shooting was done at the 200 yard range.

Twenty-two men are selected. One by one is eliminated until only fifteen remain, twelve comprising the regular team and three being substitutes.

Company E has lived up to her usual reputation—its men out of the twenty-two being members of that company. Their names follow:
Lieutenant W. S. Corkran.
Sergeant Sargent.
Corporal Clark.
Corporal Taylor.
Private Powell.
Private Heister.

The boys will remain at the State range up to the time for leaving for Ohio.

New Castle County Farmers' Institute.
The annual election of officers at the Farmers' Institute of New Castle county will be held at Stanton, Monday, August 15th, at 2 o'clock, in the Grange Hall.

Around Town

Editor:—Could anyone answer this question:—Why are so many Newark people buying tickets to Sharon Hill?

Our friend who wrote the bit of Indian lore appearing in another column, suggests that when we get our plant that we call it "The Wawayanda Press", also that because the editor has been camping on this former Indian reservation may in some wise account for his fighting tendencies.

The Sewer Committee has been appointed and there is little chance of the man-around-town saying it is a partisan affair. About all the interests in town are represented. Here is a chance for a clean-cut business proposition, with great opportunities for good.

The final count in the Every Evening European Tour contest is not far distant. Each contestant is making the grand, final effort for the prize. Newark's representative, Miss Lottie Baker, headed the district on Monday night, and again held first place on Tuesday night. The high figures indicate a spirited contest in that district. Do not let your negligence concerning that coupon withhold one vote.

Congratulations to Newell Reed for making Newark the winner in the Curtis Publishing Company bicycle contest.

The boys of Company E came in on Saturday evening, bronzed like true soldiers and marched with the step of a regular. They did themselves proud—received plaudits from the people, making themselves loved wherever they went, reflecting credit on themselves, their officers, and the town of Newark.

Well, they came home Saturday night. Newark received them with "Ain't you glad you're home," "never again, eh," little realizing that an army officer said of them—"the best body of men I ever saw in militia service—where are they from?" and a State official who said, "The town of Newark should be very proud of those boys." Newark just forgot, that's all. She is proud of you.

Go hear the Cow Boy Band tonight. Music and singing good.

Newark—What Others Think Of Us.
"In my visits to Newark during the past ten years, the greatest impression I had received was the steady growth of the town from a business standpoint, and a complete standstill in the matter of public improvements."

"My criticism of Newark—more fact than a town of this size can stand."

"With more advantages for good, more facilities for progress than any town in the State—it is far behind in the progressive spirit."

"I said several years ago, when the Board of Trade was organized—'We're off—now something will be done.' I know the name of one officer. From what I can learn he has done all that has been done. As an organization I don't recognize its existence."

"Newark leads in more ways than any town in the State—no one tells it—that's all."

"More money is paid out by our manufacturers than any town of its size in the State."

"The moral tone is the best of any town I know of. I visit every town of any size in the State. There is less confusion and confusion here than any place I know. This is remarkable considering it is a College town. It is the quietest College town I was ever in. Just think, one policeman to 2500 people, and he has a snap."

"The State of Delaware has never appreciated the management of Delaware College. I have never seen any disorderly conduct by any students here. Let me congratulate you."

"The best town—the most hospitable people that I ever saw—no trills nor fancies."

"More red blood and less blue blood, is what Newark needs."

"Newark reminds me of a quiet old English town."

"Your town will be just what your New Century Club, your Board of Trade and your churches want it to be."

"A thousand dollars spent in booming Newark would return ten-fold."

"I understand the sewer question is being agitated. That is your greatest drawback. The typhoid fever scare has done you lots of harm—and nothing short of perfect sanitation will bring you back into favor."

Mrs. Huber Entertains.
The Ladies' Aid Society of St. Stephen's Lutheran Church of Wilmington, were entertained by Mrs. George Huber at her summer home east of the town last Thursday.

About sixty members enjoyed the day and the hospitality of their hostess at this pleasant spot. Entertainment of an unusual kind made the time fly and the hour for their return arrived all too soon.

Delaware Exhibit At Maryland Fair.
A carload of live stock left the College Farm on Monday to be exhibited at the fair held in Pocomoke City, Md., and Salisbury, Md. The exhibit was in charge of Mr. Teller, the farm manager at the farm.

They will return in time for the New Castle County Fair to be held in Wilmington, August 30 to 31st and September 1st to 2nd.

Company E Returns Home

Written for THE POST.
Company "E", Organized Militia of Delaware, returned to Newark from a two weeks' tour of duty on Saturday, August 6, at 6 p. m.

From July 23 to 28, the Company was encamped at Rehoboth, Del., as a part of the First Delaware Infantry.

On July 30, Company E, with detachments from Companies A, C, D and F, of Wilmington, G, of Dover and H, of New Castle, with a total of 193 enlisted men and three officers proceeded by special train to Fort Dupont, Delaware City, arriving at 12 o'clock noon, for a week's tour of duty, acting as Coast Artillery Reserves. Camp was made in short order. By the time mess call sounded at 5 o'clock p. m., the company street had the appearance of a permanent camp.

Routine work began on Sunday morning, with a list of calls similar to army regulations.

On Monday the militiamen received their first instructions in artillery practice, the regulars manning the positions in the pits and in the tower, plotting and observation towers, while the militiamen looked on. Monday at 7:45 p. m. there was a night drill for about an hour. In this drill the target, the steamer "General Howe", a government tug, was "picked up" on the river by the four search lights—one at Fort Mott, N. J., one at Fort Delaware and two at Fort Dupont.

By aid of the lights the steamer was readily "tracked" by means of the powerful telescopes in the primary and secondary stations.

On Tuesday the militiamen took the positions assigned them in the pits and in the tower, and proceeded to work out their own salvation.

Sub-calibre practice began on Wednesday and continued on Thursday and Friday. On account of the recent accident at Fort Monroe in which ten artillerymen lost their lives, no service charges are permitted to be fired from either mortars or rifles, in any artillery posts until the pieces have been inspected by the Ordnance Department of War.

The target shot at by the militiamen was a moving target, towed by the General Howe.

The record for the three days' practice was slightly over 50 per cent of hits, the shots fired and "lost" being counted as "missed." This is a very creditable showing. Owing to the fact that the river was very rough, the "splash" of quite a few shots fired were not gotten. These were counted as "missed."

Friday evening at about 10:30, the call to arms sounded. In two minutes the guns and tower positions were manned and ready for action. This was excellent time, and the officers and men were commended very highly for the showing. One can well appreciate what this means when one considers that on the first note of the call it is every man's express duty to "beat it" for his position, in extra double-quick time.

On Wednesday morning Capt. Barry of the 36th Company C. A. C., detailed for instruction to the "Coast Artillery Reserve" had the militiamen mount a separate guard at the same time as the regular mount. First Lieutenant McKee was Officer of the Day; Second Lieutenant Corkran was acting as Adjutant; Sergeant Tamworth was acting as Sergeant Major; Sergeant Manion was acting as Officer of the Guard. The guard was mounted so well that Capt. Barry commended all concerned for the splendid showing, and the militiamen didn't mount guard again during the tour of duty.

Everyone seemed to think Saturday about 6 a. m. that though it was good to do duty for a week or so, really there was no place like home.

Dr. Cook and Family Visit Old Home.
Dr. Cook has gone on a western trip which will take in the points of Vincennes, Indiana, Flat Rock, Illinois and Coffee, Illinois, the latter place being his headquarters.

Mrs. Cook's old home at Flat Rock, is a spot of much historical interest. She owns a farm which has been in the possession of that family since the first time it was entered by the government.

The first representative of this old French family, of Reavill, built his cabin along the Indian trail leading from old Vincennes (well known in history and fiction) to Chicago. The land has since been divided so that the site of the cabin is on the property of Mr. Reavill, but the trail crosses Mrs. Cook's land.

Dr. Cook's parents live at Coffee, Ill., where his father is a well-known physician.

Pomona Grange Picnic.
The Grange picnic will be held in the upper part of Brandywine Springs Park on Thursday, August 25th.

There will be speaking by prominent men, vocal and instrumental music and outdoor sports. The committee in charge on entertainment follows:
W. H. McCoy, Benjamin A. Groves, R. T. Dilworth.

Typoid Fever At Georgetown.
Another case of typhoid fever developed at Georgetown, when Professor E. C. Hurdley, Superintendent of Public Schools for Sussex county was taken ill. Professor Hurdley is confined in his bed and has been compelled to call on Superintendent Carey, of Dover, to look after his work.

NEWS

Here and There

The new building of the Continental Fibre Company is assuming interesting proportions. The windows are now being placed. It is an interesting sight. Reinforced concrete—home contractor and home labor.

Jacob Thomas and Joseph Thomas of the Jacob Thomas Company, left today to attend the two weeks' Wall Paper Convention at Hotel Breslin, New York City. The building operations, along with the repairing of the old mill, are in charge of Mr. Ad. Thomas. The company contemplates starting their new mill on September 1st, then employing over 125 hands.

Concrete walks on Delaware avenue are adding much to the appearance of that street.

The residents around Cooch's feel happy over the improvement of that station on the Delaware City road. The old building is being turned around and remodelled and a new platform being built.

The Republican meeting which was to have been held on Monday evening at Glasgow, was postponed on account of the rain. The meeting will be held tonight.

Local peaches are coming in market now. One of the largest crops will be that of E. R. Milburn, of Barksdale, Md. He will begin to harvest his crop next Monday. Mr. Milburn is one of the most successful fruit growers of Cecil county.

The demand for houses seems to be greater than at any time this season. No less than twenty inquiries have come to us during the last week.

Walter Beaton, of Middletown, candidate for Register of Wills on the Republican ticket, was in town Tuesday looking over the ground.

The Democrats of White Clay Hundred will hold a meeting at the Deer Park Hotel on August 11th. Candidates for coming election will be discussed.

Walter R. Powell, one of Company E's crack shots at the coming shoot at Camp Perry, was in town this week.

The truckers who go to Wilmington are discussing the low price of produce. Everybody has plenty of work, but money seems scarce and prices are low.

Note the list of orators at the next Harvest Home at Whiteman's Grove: Prof. C. A. Short returned this week from a 17 day down in Sussex county. He is now ready for his year's work.

Charles Burns, of the Burns' Carriage Shops at Havre de Grace, was in town Tuesday.

The downpour of rain on Monday evening showed need of street improvements. The gutters on South Chapel street are not large enough to carry away the water. The water was running across the street below the Fibre Mill.

Mrs. H. F. Roberts, who has been quite ill at her home with typhoid fever, is slowly improving.

1750 people took the trip over the Pennsylvania railroad to Perryville, thence by boat, down the Susquehanna and Chesapeake to Pocomoke, last Wednesday. One hundred twenty-one of the excursionists bought their tickets at Newark.

Fairview Lodge, No. 8, L. O. G. T. will hold an open meeting on Saturday evening, August 13, in Fairview Hall. A program representing true talent will be rendered.

The Board of Health reports two answers from 147 requests sent out to close up surface wells. One is from a tenant, while the other is disputing the right of the Board to go out of town limits—and so the world progresses.

The announcement by Abbott's Dairy of the increase in price of milk was received with good grace by our farmers. $1.80 per hundred will begin the 15th of the month.

Many Newark people went to the Harvest Home to hear Hobson with the same feeling 25 many did a few years ago when Carrie Nation was the star. A great surprise was in store. Those who heard him are loud in praise of the Southern orator. The speech lacked that appeal to sentimentalism heard on many such occasions, but was filled with scientific information served without a touch of humor—and oratory served on the side—showing a man of greater daring than the hero of the Merrimack, displaying more feeling than a bearded naval officer, giving more facts than an Alabama Congressman, and portraying more solid manhood than was anticipated. His presence and speech was greater than his advertisement.

All day woods services were held in Pennock's Grove, Sunday, August 7th, by Union Sunday School of Pike Creek. The Rev. C. D. Sharpless spoke morning and evening and the Rev. Howard Emms in the afternoon.

W. H. Hilton and family have moved into the house formerly occupied by Professor Short. Mr. Hilton has recently purchased this property from the John E. Lewis estate.

Between fifty and sixty young women and three men took the teachers' examinations last Saturday. The results will be sent out by Superintendent Spind by August 15th.

Professor Hayward has been invited to speak at the southern Sussex Grange picnic to be held at Rehoboth Beach on August 18th.

The "Broken Arrow" Company arrived this morning. The Cow-Boy band gave some very good music. Staid Newark will no doubt turn out to the drama tonight.

The Improved Order of Red Men are making active preparations for the three days' celebration which will be held at Shellpot Park on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. On Thursday evening the Haymakers, under the leadership of William Springer will initiate a paleface on the bandstand, and a good laugh is promised those who witness the event. On Friday night the degree of Pocahontass will occupy the stage of the theatre and presenting some fine tableaux. Field sports will be held Saturday afternoon and many prizes awarded the winners. Saturday the Red Men, under the charge of Past Sachem William Morris, will present the massacre of Montana Bill and his band of cowboys. Several Newark braves will attend.

According to the Wilmington Registry Bureau, two inches of rain fell on Monday. The rain came in time to prevent considerable damage to growing vegetation.

Thursday, August 11th, is Christian Endeavor Day at Rehoboth. Excursion train is run by the Pennsylvania railroad, which allows seven hours at the seashore, leaving Wilmington at 6:25 a. m. and returning 5:40 p. m.

THE FLY AT HOME AND ABROAD

The story told of the result of the investigation made in New York City several years ago, concerned the American thinking public that the fly was not a "harmless nuisance", but one of the great dangers which threaten us. Considering the unsanitary statistics, the way the matter is kept before us by the magazines of the country, etc., can our complacent indifference be excusable?

Let me repeat the story of New York, to which I have just referred. One of the city's bacteriologists determined to put his conjectures to the proof. He believed that, since the city's water supply was carefully watched, the milk supply guarded with equal care and the Pure Food laws enforced just as rigidly in one part of the city as another, the cause of the increase of disease in certain sections must be due to flies and flies.

Provision was made to test this theory and as the flies became more numerous the death rate increased.

"During June 72 flies were caught in a week and 65 deaths were recorded. During July the weekly catch of flies was 3,377, the weekly number of deaths was 324. August saw a catch of 2,810 flies and 408 deaths a week. The last two weeks in July and the first two in August, the period of greatest fly activity, produced 5,510 flies and 509 deaths a week. The rate dropped in September to 500 flies a week and 274 deaths. October saw only 48 flies and 150 deaths recorded weekly. And in November the catch of flies was only 6 a week and the deaths numbered 62."

The typhoid fever was correlated with those of the new flies and the above.

The entire tale of deaths caused by flies can be traced back to 1891. We have, however, the record of deaths from diarrhoeal diseases and typhoid that we have been examining. The figures are not pleasant to contemplate. Mr. Jackson says subtracting the number of deaths reasonably supposed from other causes, we have 4,616 in 1907, and 4,012 during 1908, chargeable to that source in one city alone.

When we consider that it is literally true "the world over" we realize the meaning of it. One fly was examined and found to be carrying 550 bacteria.

Shall we not wage war on him? The American must approach the question of extermination of the fly by putting forward all the weight of his intelligence against it. He realizes he must act in that way toward the mosquito of the tropics, yet he is slow to awaken to the great danger that surrounds his home. Flies have been almost exterminated from Panama.

The enforcement of a system of military sanitation would be impracticable in America, and our people would refuse to tolerate it, but it still be applied to a degree at times confined us of the necessity.

AS THE AMERICAN TACKLES THE PROBLEM ABROAD.

The American abroad has acquired a reputation for protecting himself and others from the infectious influence of these insects which abound in our climate only during the summer months. The work which has been and is being done in the canal zone (of which we have read so much) is merely a repetition of what is going on in all the tropical sections.

A recent number of the World's Work tells us of a band of 600 Americans who are laboring to complete by the route of steel rails through a tropical forest, 10 or twelve thousand miles from home. They are succeeding because they realized the meaning of the proposition and prepared to cope with its difficulties intelligently.

Their first action, after choosing the site for the town, was to sewer it and furnish it with a filtered running water supply. All green hands were given a course of lectures in regard to conditions, conduct and the hygiene necessary in the tropics. For fifty years the climate of the district has been standing off the progress of Bolivia and Brazil. Three expeditions have been forced to disperse on account of the fevers. The success of the present effort is undoubtedly due to the wisdom and foresight manifested throughout the whole expedition.

Herbert M. Lome in writing of it calls it a marvelous record, for it is "the fact that the work of the expedition is being done under the most trying conditions does not seem to interfere with the general good health of the men."

Clearing virgin tropical forests, laboring in teeming swamps or by the side of malarial river bottoms, or encountering swarms of pestiferous insects and reptiles are tasks of a trying and even dangerous nature. Nevertheless, the total casualties of the force during the two years that it has been in the field amounts to only seven, three of which were from accidents. The percentage of cases from sickness is equally low, and recovery from attacks of fever have been almost invariably. Out of all the white force engaged only twenty-three cases of fever have been reported. This contrasted with the record of a former expedition, when there were at one time in less than a month, thirty-three cases of fever at its base of operations, is enough to fill those responsible with pride.

The story is told of an American who landed on a notorious and dangerous coast of Africa, with the idea that the fever came from mosquitoes and the determination to escape it. He backed his proposition by setting up his mosquito net and taking his daily five grains of quinine. To his surprise the him was less familiar than when on his march as he had a new reputation secured as an invulnerable. He carried this net, although he did not use it.

Before the first night all that he had hoped to avoid had happened to him. An army surgeon, well known as a tropical disease expert, a friend in time to save his situation was called. He pronounced an evening fever, a 100 per cent fever on a green hand, and went off to his quarters.

"The idea is parasites are eating up your red corpuscles," was the verdict that followed with advice to leave and the information that there are two kinds of malarial fever, of which one is killed by quinine and the other is not.

In such ways the American soldier has purchased the information that a resident in the tropics must live behind the mosquito net.

How alert one must ever be, and what a victory to come of such quarters as the information from the record of the band in Brazil proves them to be.

Successful Fruit Season in Delaware.

Reports show that Delaware's fruit crop for 1910 will in no way endanger her reputation as being of importance in this line.

The peach shipment is increasing all the time. The number reported on Saturday night for the day was 4715 baskets.

The fruit crop over last season is shown by last year's total to date, 1,839 baskets as compared with the 4,524 to August 1, 1910.

Apples are being shipped in the seven eighth bushel baskets from almost every large shipping station in Delaware. The daily total has now reached 6,274 of these baskets. The total shipment to date is 410,720 baskets.

hail compared with 29,887 baskets last year.

There are waiting to be shipped among the grocers. These are shipped by the pound because of the different styles of carriers for late fruit. The total number of pounds reported for the first day of July, is 7,434. The total shuck ton is 7,224, compared with 2135 for the day last year.

A Horse's Prayer

A square deal for the horse is the motto which the Western Pennsylvania Humane Society has put into a terse, eloquent prayer and has posted in stables in various cities. It reads in part as follows:

"To thee, my master, I offer my prayer. Feed me, water and care for me, and when the day's work is done provide me with shelter, a clean, dry bed and a stall wide enough for me to lie down in comfort. Talk to me. Your voice often means as much to me as the reins. Pet me sometimes, for I may serve you the more gladly and learn to love you. Do not jerk the reins and do not whip me when going up hill. Never strike, beat or kick me when I do not understand what you want, but give me a chance to understand you. Watch me, and if I fail to do your bidding see if something is not wrong with my harness or feet.

"Examine my teeth when I do not eat. I may have an ulcerated tooth, and first, you know, is very painful. Do not tie my head in an unnatural position or take away my best defense against flies and mosquitoes by cutting off my tail.

"And finally, oh my master, when my useful strength is gone, do not turn me out to starve or freeze, or sell me to some cruel owner to be slowly tortured and starved to death. But do thou, my master, take my life in the kindest way, and your God will reward you here and hereafter. You will not consider me irreverent if I ask this in the name of Him who was born in a stable. Amen."

Mayor Gaynor, of New York, sent this letter recently to Police Commissioner Baker.

"I have observed so much abuse of horses during the hot weather that I have concluded to request you to have all the police force instructed at the desk that they are to be vigilant to see whether horses are being mistreated by having loads which they are unable to carry or by being unduly urged by their drivers to carry excessive loads, or mistreated in any other way, and to interfere and stop it and if necessary have the drivers summoned before magistrates."

"W. J. GAYNOR, Mayor."

OVERLAND IS THE CAR

A 40 h. p. Overland with 112-inch wheel base. Price with single rumble seat, $1,250—double rumble seat, $1,275—with 5 passenger Touring or Close-Coupled body, $1,400

The Reason

The car is amazingly simple. Three of the models operate by pedal control. Push a pedal forward to go ahead, and backward to reverse. Push another pedal forward to get on high speed. It is as simple as walking. A 10-year-old child can master the car in ten minutes.

The Overland has less parts than any other highgrade car. One invention alone does away with 47 pieces. The car is at most trouble-proof.

OVERLAND "Model 38" is the first real car for $1,000. Built by the same expert mechanics who made famous the costly Pope-Toledo cars. It is the only car at the price that gives plenty of room everywhere; that is really comfortable either on long or short rides or country tours; it is the easiest car in the world to drive—barring none; and it will stand up and give absolutely perfect service under conditions which none except the most expensive and carefully constructed cars will endure.

Like all our Planetary Models, the well known Overland Motto applies—"Only pedals to push and no noise but the wind."

The Reason

The Overland's supremacy—wherever known—is due to the following reasons:

The Overland engine is a wonderful creation. It is so automatic, so silent and powerful, so free from the usual troubles, that it appeals to the average buyer.

The OVERLAND stands the test.

There may be stronger and more serviceable cars than this—but no one around here knows which one it is.

Look for the "Story of an Overland" in next week's issue.

Overland Model 38—Price $1,000. 25 h. p.—102-inch wheel base. With single rumble seat, $1,050—double rumble seat, $1,075—complete Toy Tonneau, $1,100

All prices include Magneto and Full Lamp Equipments.

UNDERWOOD STANDARD TYPEWRITER

A LEADER

The principle of construction in the Underwood was found first in the Underwood, and every typewriter seeking business in the same field with the Underwood which has been put on the market since the advent of the Underwood, has been an imitation of, and in general appearance like, the Underwood.

The last "Blind" advocates of importance have now fallen into line, and there is not today a single "blindwriting" typewriter actively on this market. Recall all the arguments you have heard in past years by Underwood opposition, and you will realize what an advance agent to progress the Underwood has been; then bear in mind that the Underwood was the first fully "visible", has had time to develop and improve, and is to-day the most perfect typewriter made.

Sunday School Lesson

By R. S. Holmes

August 14, 1910.

THE LABORERS IN THE VINEYARD

(Matt. 20: 1-16)

Golden Text: "But many that are first shall be last, and the last shall be first." Matt. 19: 30

The gospel story as told by Matthew has great emphasis on the idea of the Kingdom. Jesus made it so plain that all should have understood. If his hearers did comprehend, the leaders among them chose not to see. No man was ever more misrepresented than was Jesus. Our lesson to-day is about the Kingdom. The Golden Text, which immediately precedes this parable of "The Laborers in the Vineyard," was apparently given in illustration of how first could be last and last first.

THE VERSES.

Vs. 1. The husbandman or vineyard owner starts early to hire men to work that day.

Vs. 2. He found some, agreed with them for the day's pay, and set them to work.

Vs. 3. He walked to the market-place about nine o'clock and saw idle men there.

Vs. 4. He spoke with them, promised to pay fair wages and started them working.

Vs. 5. At noon he repeated this last act, and again at three in the afternoon, each time making the same promise.

Vs. 6. An hour before close of labor for the day he found more idle men. He asked them why they were not working.

Vs. 7. They answered the fault was not theirs. It shall not be mine, was his reply, and he hired them, making a fair promise.

Vs. 8. The day closed in an hour. The men came for their pay. He ordered his steward to pay the men. "Begin with those hired last," he said.

Vs. 9. Each of this last company received a coin called here "a penny."

Vs. 10. After the noonday men and the nine o'clock men had been paid, the very early men, the six o'clock men, received their pay.

Vs. 11. They received their pay and began to grumble against their employer.

Vs. 12. The complaint was natural enough, but it was not fair, for they agreed to work for a fixed sum and they received it.

Vs. 13. The owner of the vineyard answered the men who openly made the complaint.

Vs. 14. "I am keeping my agreement. You did agree to work for a penny. I agreed to give it."

Vs. 15. "Second, Here it is. Take it. It is yours. Keep your agreement even as I do. I pay these last because I think it right."

Vs. 16. "I am breaking no law. I am giving what I have a right to give. Mine it is my own. I am trying to do good. Do not be evil for such a reason."

Vs. 17. This is the revelation of the parable to show "last can be first and first last."

The story is a very brief telling of a story. Would it not be well to go over these very easy verses in some way with the pupils, and then read it back to them?

When you have read this story in your own mind ask yourself how this story represents the Kingdom of Heaven. This will be fruitful work.

The husbandman is God. He has a work after which he is himself looking all the time. His search for laborers begins early. God would have his working day filled with workmen doing the work which his world demands. Service and reward is the law of the Kingdom. God does not expect men to toil for human good without reward.

His call seems to be going out all day long. He seems to have places for every one. His power to pay seems inexhaustible. His readiness to employ or to accept service never ceases.

God is fair to all. He said to the man at the beginning, there is one definite reward for human obedience. That is eternal life. That was a big penny. When the offer went out to some who did not believe in him, he was not disappointed. But I will reward him who has been his word down all the ages. When he found those who said we have had no knowledge of a service, or of a Kingdom, or of a reward, he said I offer it then, even now, to you, and I will reward. Here is one of the signs. The offer of salvation has been in every age. All God could offer to the first saved soul was salvation. He can offer to the last saved soul will be the same wonderful gift.

Here is another length of time in service is not the measure for God's reward, but the willingness with which the obedience to his call is made.

If God had many kinds of rewards to give, then there might be basis of comparison. For giving to a one-hour servant as much as he gives to a twelve-hour one. But there is only one reward.

A saved soul is a saved soul. Human nature is well pictured here. We are never satisfied. A penny seemed enough for the day's work until the laborer measured it up against another coin. If it was enough, it was enough. That is all there is to it.

"No man has hired us," appealed to the owner of this place. There are multitudes who have had no chance. Shall our Japanese servant, who has only had heard of Christ, be saved a little less than I shall be?

Remember, it is not to be judged by jealousy. There are no degrees in heaven. Christ said that "There is one life, one Kingdom. That is God." There is one life, one Kingdom, and "eternity." The man who is angry because he has agreed to work for, on the ground that some other man has received as much, Christ calls a man with an evil eye.

The Kingdom of God is absolute fairness to all. Every soul is of equal value to God. Christ was given for all, equally.

Six o'clock in the morning until six at night makes a long day. Five o'clock in the afternoon until six makes a short day. But what can a man do who has only one kind of pay to offer?

You say give twice as much or three times as much of the same kind? That seems a right. But remember, the penny of the parable was as a matter of fact, salvation.

Can a man receive two salvations or three? A saved man is saved; that is all there is of it.

Every man of the parable took what was offered at his first chance. He could not have done better.

The only men hired who found fault with their wages were those who were told in the early morning exactly what they would get. None of the rest knew. They simply trusted the man who hired them. "I will do what is right," said he.

Never be jealous of another's good fortune.

Waverly Club Picnic

The Waverly Club held its annual picnic on the lawn of Oliver W. Eastburn at Union on Tuesday afternoon of last week. The Waverly Club is composed of about twenty ladies living on both sides of the line in New Castle and Chester counties, about evenly divided in number between Pennsylvania and Delaware. To name the members is not necessary, as for anyone in the vicinity not to know who the members are is to admit one's self unknown.

The Club meets every two weeks on Wednesday afternoons, presiding to wade in the depths of scientific and literary subjects though as no men are ever allowed to be present, some of them are inclined to be skeptical, and it has been whispered that on at least one occasion the club indulged in a game of bridge, but pavers of that game will doubtless conduct it as a very deep scientific study.

As may be, however, on picnic days all weighty matters are laid aside, members can not be distinguished from the guests except by their devoted efforts to give the latter a good time.

That their efforts are a delightful success is sufficiently proved by the continued presence of the latter at each succeeding picnic no invitation ever being declined except on account of sickness.

One guest even proposed that the picnic be held four times a year. This was amended to read six, and then was carried unanimously.

2:30 was named as the hour to arrive and for the next hour the reception committee, Mrs. Alfred W. Walker, Mrs. William C. Passmore and Miss Sarah Eastburn had a very busy time welcoming the guests who came from the surrounding country. West Grove, Kemblesville and Philadelphia. The afternoon was spent by part of them in a good old-fashioned game of croquet.

At this to previous records were broken, others played progressive five hundred, some enjoyed the hammock, and still others of the smaller visitors made merry at the see-saw.

About six o'clock a call was made to another part of the lawn, where all were to take part in the same game at one time. When one looked at the bountiful table spread under the trees it is very apparent that the ladies of the club are as efficient in supplying the physical needs of mankind as they are in attending to the mental wants.

If any attention had been given by the club to the question of either the high cost of living or the cost of high living there was surely no visible evidence of the fact.

Forty-eight persons enjoyed the feast at once and from the supply of good things carried away it seemed as if more guests still could be invited next year and then leave a wide margin of safety.

After supper more games were indulged in so that dusk came all too soon. The company seemed reluctant to leave and it was after nine before all had departed.

The writer ventures the assertion, without fear of contradiction that no more congenial body of people of equal number can be found in this or any other State.

Long may the Waverly Club flourish and continue to extend its hospitality to its friends.

Examinations For Oxford Scholarship

Dr. George R. Parkin has written Dr. Harter, Chairman of the Committee of Selection for Delaware of the Rhodes Scholarship Trust, to give the information that Tuesday the 25th and Wednesday the 26th of October have been fixed as the dates for holding the next Qualifying Examination for the Rhodes Scholarship in Delaware. From the candidates who pass the Qualifying Examination the Committee of Selection will name the appointee who will go into residence at Oxford University in the Autumn of 1911. The examination will be held in Delaware College.

THE SEWER COMMITTEE

[T] IS a pleasure to note the prompt response on the part of Council to the recommendation made by the Board of Health.

The members of the committee to investigate the question of sewerage for the town, represent the varied interests and should be able to give a fair idea of the wishes of the people in general.

We all want a sewer, realizing the benefits that would follow the adoption of such an improvement. The point where opinion differs is as to whether or not the town can afford it. May it not be one of those cases where expenditure means a saving in the end?—a saving of all those bills which follow serious illness—after which we are fortunate, indeed, if money can remedy the loss.

Let us all lay aside any factional feeling that may exist and consider the proposition fairly and well. Do not dismiss it with a wave of the hand and the remark "impossible," but wait for the facts, consider them and then give your honest, unprejudiced opinion.

Let the committee work harmoniously, encouraged by an honest interest in the result on the part of the people and the outcome of the plan so far will be good.

GET REGISTERED

The interest displayed in the registration last Saturday shows a more healthy condition than has been apparent. Instead of leaving the matter of nominations to the hands of a few politicians and office seekers, there appear signs of the voting public taking a hand in the naming of the candidates.

This is the one place where each individual voter has his share in politics. Instead of complaining of the men who are nominated, he should get registered and thereby have his say who that candidate shall be. The office seeker will see to it that he has enough of his friends registered to assure him that his name is on the ticket. And far too often the men so registered do not represent what one would call the best and most intelligent element of the party. The voters of this and adjoining hundreds can have as their candidates whoever they wish. It is instead of saying the matter is controlled by a few men, each one would feel that he had something to do with the result, a good candidate could be named.

The candidates on the ticket, to be voted for are just such men as you demand—or you have failed in your duty by not putting such men there. At no place does the candidate have more power for good than at the primary.

As a proof that this is the general impression note how the man who has interests to be favored or protected, gets his man and friends out to register. And he knows the practical side of the game—we may rest assured of that. He knows if he can get his man on the ticket, his cause is safe, as the independent voter is not to be as seriously feared as a good man on the straight ticket.

Again he oft-times cares little for party, but works to get men suited to his wants named on both tickets and thus assures the success of his individual cause, no matter which party wins.

The demands on Delaware's coming legislature are going to be greater than ever before. Delaware has work to be done which will call for the earnest efforts of men both good and strong, in order to carry it out successfully.

We want a few men as candidates who have not pledged themselves to any man or interest. There are some of both parties already pledged who will be placed on the ticket.

The coming general assembly will have to meet some problems which will tax the best. Let us determine to send men who have respect for that gift of judgment which God has given them; men who will not listen to the suggestions of selfish and private interests, but who will conscientiously stand, through thick and thin, for what they believe to be right.

There is a duty to be done. Get registered and send only men who are strong and true.

LOVE OF ONE'S WORK

GIVING is the key to the philosophy of the present life, as well as the means of attaining the life to come, one of the sacred writers tells us: "Whoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with all thy might." Emerson gives his readers pretty much the same advice when he says that the best type of man is the one who does well whatever he can do. But he hasn't pointed out the means that will enable men to do well and easily whatever they are able to do. That means was given centuries since by the great Augustine of Hippo in these pregnant words: "Where there is love there is no labor; or, if labor there be, the labor itself is loved." That is the genuine secret of success in any calling—love of one's work, whatever the work may be.

As a rule, we don't consider burdensome the service we render a friend; and even should the service prove difficult and wearisome, our affection makes the very difficulty and weariness something of a pleasure. The mother who stints and sacrifices herself for her children, spending anxious days and sleepless nights in their service, rarely stops to consider that she is doing something heroic, because her mother-heart is in love with her task, or rather with those for whom she undertakes the task. Few men ever worked harder than Napoleon. In the intervals of enforced cessation from military strife his active mind was ceaselessly engaged on his legal code, or in drawing up plans of attack and defense, planning civic improvements, etc. Yet we don't know that he ever grumbled at being overworked, and the reason—because he was in love with his work. Many professional and business men toil harder and longer than the common laborer without ever a word of complaint. On the contrary, they find their work a real pleasure, because they are thoroughly interested in it. And assuredly it is the part of wisdom for persons in any and every calling of life to adopt the same tactics—to take things as they find them and endeavor to make the best of them; to cultivate a lively interest in their life-work and try to become perfect in it, no matter how menial it may appear. We say no matter how menial it may appear, for in the words of the poet: "There is no great and no small to the soul that maketh all."

It is a huge mistake to buoy up children with the false hope of becoming one day President of the United States, or Congressman at the very least; or to encourage those who have not been sufficiently equipped by God and nature to enter the professions, which are already overcrowded with incompetents. Better far to urge them to seek their own level and stick to it. There is many a man in the medical and legal professions today neither happy nor wealthy, and with little chance of ever becoming so, who might have attained local fame and a reasonable competence as a first-rate cobler had he not missed his vocation through his ambitious strivings to land in the upper stratum of society.

That there is nothing degrading or odious in honest labor is a truth that needs to be more fully and deeply impressed on the youth of the present generation. If they take the lesson to heart and heed it, it will be the means of making many of them a great deal happier and more successful in their journey through life. This may sound very much like a truism—it is a truism—but none the less it is too often lost sight of by the over-ambitious, but not over-wise, young men and women of the modern era.—Ex.

A Bit Of Indian Color

A tale of the "early days" suggests the great forest primeval, the aisles of silent trees, the twitter of birds, and the babbling brooks bordered with an array of American wild flowers. Overhead we picture the gleaming stars, marshalled in such a wonderful array, and the moon in all her splendor, mounting the throne and ruling the sky. In such a setting, amid all these suggestions of infinitude, we see the little clearing and the plain and roughly built settler's cabin.

If perchance the red man takes his place in the story, we follow with a sort of creepy fascination and breathless interest to its close. This is not a tale of the struggle between the white man and the red, one that is only suggestive of strife, but rather one that recalls the Indian's wonderful physical endurance, his love of the freedom of the forest and his unerring sense of direction.

In his journeying to and fro, as he settles down to that distance-covering pace, straight over hill and valley to his desired goal, we perhaps admire him most. His every motion displays a physical perfection, a play of muscle and a reserve of power which shall ever be the envy of the white man.

The following is just one of those traditions:

"With the odors of the forest,
With the dew and damp of meadows,
With the curling smoke of wigwags,
With the rushing of great rivers"
about it, to which the local claim adds interest.

Among the various divisions in the times of Algonquin sway in the eastern part of the United States was one called "Wawa," whose members frequented all the trails between Southern New York and Northern Virginia. At intervals along the trails were the camp grounds, marking the relays of the journey.

One of these oft visited spots which must ever have been bright with promise was that in our immediate locality, the old camp ground called Wawa-yanda (Wa-wa-yun-da—the way beyond—on what is now the Crossways Farm, near Wilson's Shop. One of the favorite fishing grounds of the Indians was the Squamela, and as they lay down to rest at the foot of Iron Hill, it was with the knowledge that the "way beyond" just over the hill, in the freshness of the morning would lead them to their fishing ground.

"Every human heart is human."
"Even in savage bosoms."
There are longings, yearnings, strivings.Longfellow suggests:
Every phase of nature was interpreted by the red man—the moon, stars, flowers, winds, each with their story.

How often, then, has an Indian have crept in his blanket and fallen to sleep on this spot, to the accompaniment of thoughts of a greater "Way Beyond!"

How many times has he been roused by the breezes of Wabon (East wind) as he brought the morning, just as he brings it today!

How often has he opened his eyes to let them first rest upon the Wabon-Annie (Star of morning) when its rays make the eastern sky resplendent as it announces the morn!

How many have opened their eyes to behold the sun in the same setting that we may now see each morning in the east, before resuming our journey to the great "Way Beyond."

Bad Judgment In Appropriations

Mr. Editor:—
To our educators in the school-room more than to our law makers in Congress, belongs the future of America.

One of Delaware's superintendents has recently found it necessary to come out in a newspaper and defend his action in teaching in the summer school at Dover.

He has been accused of coercion among the teachers of this county in order to increase the enrollment of the same and himself gain financially.

Those who are acquainted with the rates of tuition charged and the board paid, see little chance for enough gain to satisfy such an ambition, and feel it would be a stupid man, indeed, who would harbor such ideas.

The policy of the school has been to pay its way and it has merely done so in years gone by.

A large number of Delaware's teachers do not possess any special training for the work and until the State provides for this deficiency surely the honest effort to remedy the defect should not be a subject for criticism.

A consideration of Delaware's appropriations suggests distorted judgment or haphazard legislation. A $12,000 appropriation for the Organized Militia of the State—$3,000 for agriculture—not a cent outside of the regular public school for Delaware's girls—who make up the bulk of her teaching force!

Our legislators have deemed it of more importance to spend a sum for the drilling of a band of men who have never been called into active service, to provide for the meeting of a very remote need, rather than to equip the leaders of the children whose education in a republic is a certain necessity.

Delaware as a colony, proudly put in her claims to first in one line after another; as a State she has surrendered those places of honor, one by one, and her sons have stood by and viewed the performance with an indifference which permitted it.

Judging from the lack of such institutions at the present day, would one suppose Delaware had instituted the first girls' school within the bounds of the United States?

What a retrogression! Of all our States now, along this line, where is Delaware's place?

It is the intention of this paper to take up the subject of Education in this State. Your ideas are right—with, perhaps, just a touch of pessimism. Delaware has fallen behind in many movements toward progress but—she is still Delaware. What you and the rest of us must do, is to remedy these defects. You may play a large part and we, a small part, but with concerted action we can bring her back to her normal place. The State is becoming as never before, and her citizens must keep her institutions abreast with her progress.—Ed.

FAIR VIEW LODGE HALL

ORDER OF GOOD TEMPLARS—A SKETCH OF FAIR VIEW LODGE—ITS HARVEST HOME

(Written for THE POST.)

We present to our readers a view of Fairview Hall, where Fairview Lodge No. 8, I. O. G. T. has met during these many years. Here have been held some remarkable debates upon the temperance question. Some delightful entertainments have been given and the public has frequently been entertained by the many and various public meetings that have been held here. Probably the most noted of all the events of this historic Lodge has been the annual Harvest Home. Soon after the Lodge was organized, about twenty-five years ago, an effort was started to have an outing in the summer, to which the public was invited. Noted speakers and singers were obtained, and soon this annual Harvest Home became known far and wide. People came to it in teams from twenty to thirty miles. People who took but one day off in a year made it a point that one day should be the Good Templars day in the woods. Here were heard the greatest temperance orators of the day from the polished Col. Bain to the sensational Carrie Nation. Music also received the attention of the committee, and always some noted singers had a part in the day's program.

The International Order of Good Templars is a world-wide organization. It has a large constituency in every country on the globe. It is the largest temperance organization in the world. It is particularly strong in England and in Scotland, Norway and Sweden is one of its strongholds. Germany follows with a strong following. The next tri-annual International Convention will be held in Hamburg in 1911. Dr. Joel S. Gillfillin, who for four years has been the Grand Chief Templar of Pennsylvania and Delaware, has been elected to represent Pennsylvania and Delaware in that convention. The principles of the Good Templars have never changed since its organization in 1851. They are: 1—Total Abstinence for the Individual, 2—Total Prohibition for the State, 3—Total Reformation of the Drunkard. With these principles the order has gone forward with wonder-ful strides. It has pledged to total abstinence by all odds a greater number of young people than any organization in existence. It has been teaching Prohibition until the Nations are beginning to act upon its teaching. It is entirely non-partisan. Prohibition was a word and a fact long before there was a prohibition party. Democrat, Republican, Irregularist, Socialist—all work together for the abolition of the liquor traffic. It is entirely interdenominational. All creeds join in the work of teaching temperance and smothering the drunkard from his doom. It is Christian in that it recognizes the power of Christ to renew and save.

Harvest Home Fair View Lodge

The annual Harvest Home of Fairview Lodge, No. 8, Independent Order of Good Templars, was held in Pennock's woods all day Thursday. The crowd, although large, did not represent all who had planned to come, owing to early showers in the morning. Hundreds of carriages brought the people from the surrounding country and Strahorn's transfer, moving the trailers at station brought many Wilmington people to the place.

Food and supper were served by the Harvest Home committee and all that was necessary to satisfy an appetite was supplied. The fruits spent in the woods were at hand. A. A. Price, of New York, discovered that the crowd had no money for ice cream disposal of the ice.

The speakers platform was decorated with American flags and flowers. The program was devoted to the interests of temperance. W. E. Marks "Temperance Campaign Songs" were used by the assembly.

One of the specially pleasing features was the singing by the Bere Sisters of Camden, N. J. The audience enjoyed their appreciation by repeated encores.

Robert G. Houston, of Georgetown, who has come closely in touch with the movement by the active part he took in the last campaign in Sussex, spoke in the morning. He gave a practical talk, pointing out the good results, as he had seen them, following the adoption of local option around his home. People in general were more prosperous and farm laborers more reliable.

The greatest attraction of the day was Congressman Richmond P. Hobson, of Alabama. It is impossible to review his speech in detail. He presented an array of facts in such a way as to hold his hearers for one hour and fifty minutes. At the end of that time they had listened to a discussion of the temperance question in which there had been no exaggerated appeal to the feelings, but plain statements in accordance with the laws of science and common sense.

Rev. J. M. Arters, of the Anti-Saloon League addressed the meeting in the evening. He showed a paper of "Local Option Recommendations" from the farmers of Kent and Sussex counties which he promised would be distributed "deep" through the county before the campaign is over.

He answered the question "Why is the election confined to New Castle county?" by saying that Wilmington is a separate local option district. A majority of the representatives to the legislature from each district had to petition for the special voting upon the question; the rural delegates had done so, but the Wilmington delegates had refused.

FRAZER

At Newark, Delaware, on August 8th, 1910, Mary Catherine, daughter of Ernest and Evelyn S. Frazer, aged seven months.

Funeral from the residence of her parents on Wednesday, August 10th, at 2 o'clock. Interment at Head of Christiana Cemetery.

Prizes Offered Fruit Growers

In order to further encourage and spread the spirit of raising the best in orchard, vineyard or garden, prizes are announced today by the committee of the Peninsula Horticultural Society, and the committee will add about $200 in cash prizes to encourage competition and numerous exhibits for the Peninsula Horticultural Society show to be held here in January soon after the Legislature shall meet.

The Peninsula Horticultural Society, some time ago, put a committee to work selecting prizes to be awarded to exhibitors at the annual meeting of the society to be held this year.

Of Interest To Delawareans

The City Council of Wilmington has decided to purchase lots for additional playgrounds for the children. They will be similar to those already in existence. Many of the citizens have been working hard to bring about this result and are to be congratulated on its success.

The bridge under construction over White Clay creek, near Stanton, by J. E. McIlvaine and Co., of Chambersburg, Pa., is almost completed. All that remains unfinished is the concrete covering in the floor. The contract price is $3,688. All using the road have had to resort to the old time way of fording the creek, so that its nearness to completion is good news.

The automobilists cover enough country to know the roads pretty well. These people repeatedly complain of bad roads near the Delaware and Pennsylvania lines. They say the worst trouble is on the Pennsylvania side of the line, and it is on comparatively new roads or those which have been undergoing changes.

The interest and appreciation of the entertainment provided at Brandywine Springs Park continues. The orchestra of the Aeolian Opera Company in the summer theatre is now composed of eight pieces, which makes it the largest ever used in a local theatre. The weekly children's day—every Thursday—still proves popular. Free concerts are given on Sunday afternoons and evenings.

County Engineer James Wilson is sending a supply of sign-boards to the road supervisors throughout the county for the benefit of the travelling public. The marking of the cross-roads in this way will be appreciated.

The third member—a representative of Miona Tribe of Magnolia, has been admitted to the Red Men's Fraternal Home at Newark.

Smyrna's St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church has extended a call to Rev. Francis Arthurs, of New York City. The new rector is expected to take charge at once.

Messrs. H. E. and H. J. Ramsdell, publishers of the Peninsula Methodist, announced last week the issue of their last number. They have been unable to bring the receipts up to the expenditures, as a result of which the mentioned action has become necessary.

At a meeting of the Republican State Committee, held in Wilmington, Wednesday, August 3rd, was named as the date for the Republican State Convention at Dover. Candidates for Representative in Congress, State Treasurer and State Auditor will be selected. A new State Committee also will be named.

All the road supervisors have been asked to call upon the farmers in their neighborhood and ask their co-operation in keeping the roads clear of weeds and debris. Some men who are strong advocates have placed dock in the center of a new stone road or hedge trimmings from the gutters have been thrown in the roads. The debris, after a heavy rain, is found lodged in water pipes and the water being blocked, flows across the road, cutting gullies. The depositing of rubbish has become a nuisance. Such acts are punishable by a fine as high as $50.

The contractors at work on the construction of the new capitol buildings at Dover have asked for a sixty days extension of the time for the completion of the work. The contract limit expired July 28.

News From The Nearby Counties

A new pipe organ is about to be installed in the chapel at Lincoln University. Andrew Carnegie has contributed half the cost.

One of the largest fires recorded in Lower Chester County for years was the burning of the barn of Winfield Beyers, near Andrew's Bridge. The barn was known throughout that section as a model. The fire is thought to have originated from an old stove used for heating water. The loss, $8,000, is partially covered by insurance. The spirit of the owner is shown by the fact that before the week was out, work had been begun on a new building.

The date for the next meeting at the Kembleville Driving Track, has been fixed for Thursday, August 25th.

A committee of Friends are making arrangements for the celebration of the bicentenary of the Old Kennett Meeting House, Kennet Square, Pa., next September.

The Levy Court adjourned August 2nd for a two weeks' vacation.

The Retail Butchers' Association of Wilmington has made arrangements for entertaining the Chester Butchers' Association at Brandywine Springs Park, August 18th. Arrangements have been made for a base ball game between members of the two organizations—the winning team to be the recipient of the Millard S. Davis Cup. Other events will follow the ball game for which prizes will be given.

William S. Hiles appeared before the Levy Court last week and succeeded in getting the plan for the stone road, which is to be built on the old State road, changed. It is to be 14 feet wide and 8 inches deep instead of 12 feet wide and 6 inches deep, as originally intended. Mr. Hiles pointed out that this is one of the most traveled roads in the county and should be built accordingly.

H. M. Dager, of Dover, whose farm is near Moore's Mills, on August 9th picked a second crop of strawberries. Five quarts of prime berries were delivered to the Dover Pure Food Company for exhibition.

The position of general secretary Wilmington Y. M. C. A. formerly held by F. R. Tibbitt, resigned, has been filled by Philip M. Colbert, from Winston, Salem. It is probable that an entire new schedule of work will be arranged by the new secretary.

Plain Thoughts Of Plain Men

Wear a smile on your face,
Keep a laugh in your heart,
Let your lips bubble over with song,

As you travel life's road,
And help some other sinner along.

It is good to be a person, but not good that every person should think himself a personage. It is good to be ready for any duty, but not good to undertake any duty without making ready for it.

"Does the meddler-lark complain, as he swims high and dry

Does the buzzard's ooze around up there just like they've allus done?

Is there anything the matter with the rooster's lung or voice?

"The book is a document of life. It is the embodiment of a spiritual protest, perhaps; or it is the unconscious confession of an intellectual ambition; or it is an appeal to some popular sentiment, or it is the expression of the craving for some particular form of beauty or joy; or it is a tribute to some personal or social excellence; or it is the record of some vision of perfection seen in."

The honest-hearted German peasant does it. It is the magical sunlight all through that simple land, the perpetual greeting on the right hand, or the left between strangers."

ers as they pass each other, never without a smile. This, then, is the 'fine art of smiling,' like all fine art, true art, perfection of art, the simplest following of nature."

"Let us learn to be content with what we have. Let us get rid of false estimates, set up all the higher ideals—a quiet home; vines of our own planting; a few books full of the inspiration of genius; a few friends worthy of being loved and able to love us in return; a hundred innocent pleasures that bring no pain or sorrow; a devotion to the right that will never swerve; a simple religion empty of all bigotry, full of trust and hope and love—and to such a philosophy this world will give up all the empty joy it has."

Common Sense & Science

The men who handle cows are rarely scientific in their knowledge or judgment in regard to the animal or the conditions that surround her. Yet, if they are reasoning, observing men, they have a chance to learn a great deal. We hear a great deal among such men about "common sense," which, if you understand it, means the sense they have. What is common sense? We spent a week once in hard study to define it and yet it is a thing that is on the tongues of men continually. The best definition we could work out was the one following:

"Common sense is the widest understanding possible, of the relation of common things and our relation thereto."

The things to be judged of are the facts. In order to exercise common sense about common things we must know as widely as possible all the facts which affect these common things. Do we know them? If not, can we exercise the needful judgment called common sense?

What is science? Nothing but judgment based upon a knowledge of the facts. Does the scientist know all the facts? If so, he is the more completely a scientist. Wherein, then, does science differ from common sense? Nowhere, providing a knowledge of the facts and laws which govern their action is had. Some scientists excel others in strength and accuracy of judgment; they understand better the meaning and actions of the facts they know. It is just the same with common sense. The same knowledge does better with one man than with another. This difference lies in the power and force of judgment.

Now, the man of true common sense will never be heard sneering at science. His judgment tells him that scientists have had the opportunity to look further into all the facts. He respects knowledge wherever he finds it.

He knows that though the cow, for instance, is a common thing, yet she is surrounded by a vast number of facts that cannot be looked into and studied, except in the light of science. Take the action of bacteria in milk; in the food of the cow; in the diseases which affect her which are nearly all of bacterial origin; in her surroundings. These organisms, so minute that they cannot be seen or studied, except by the aid of the microscope, cause wonderful changes in all life. Indeed they change life to death. How shall common sense, unless aided by science, understand them and provide against their destructive action?

The farmer must cease sneering at science. Indeed, no really intelligent farmer does that. He must see that scientific knowledge is simply his knowledge carried further. Of course, mistakes will be made, yet the scientist makes less than the common man, because of his greater training in carefully weighing the facts. Science has done wonderful things for the dairy farmer and agriculture in general.

It is Sun-Proof and Heat-Proof, because it contains Pure Asbestos. It will stand more severe summer and winter weather longer and show it less—because it is Sun-Proof and Heat-Proof. It surpasses other paints in Tone, Body and Spreading Qualities, because it is made of Purest Old-Process Linseed Oil, Pure Lead, Pure Zinc and Asbestos. We could use ordinary Linseed Oil and save money. But our paint would be ordinary paint.

Now, because our paint is Sun-Proof, Heat-Proof and Weather-Proof and because it does surpass other paints in Tone, Body and Spreading Qualities it is the most economical paint you can buy.

Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry

The late Commodore Perry rests upon his victory over a British squadron in Lake Erie. He was a very young man to hold such an important post, not quite 24 years of age, and both previous to and during the battle was suffering from late fever and overwork. But actual service in the Mediterranean as a midshipman fitted him for the responsible position, and an indomitable will compelled a weakened physical organism to do its bidding. What American does not recall with pride September 10th, 1813? Upon that day's battle hung the issues of our Western States, that were menaced by a force of British and Indians led by General Proctor and his Indian ally Tecumseh. Desiring of obtaining a sea command Perry applied for a position on the lakes. Having received authority to collect a squadron for offensive or defensive operations he set to work, laboring with all his might, until he had succeeded in getting together at Put in Bay nine vessels; the Niagara, and Caledonia; the Ariel, Scorpion, Somers, Porcupine and Tigress; and the sloop Trippie. The largest of the ships was the Lawrence, which measured 110 feet in length, and 29 feet in breadth. The squadron, with its complement carried 512 men, but sickness considerably reduced the number. The squadron mounted 54 guns, capable of throwing at one broadside 800 pounds of metal. Opposing the Americans were six British ships, the Detroit, Queen Charlotte, Lady Provoost, Hunter, Chippewa and the Little Belt, carrying 450 men and 64 guns, throwing 450 pounds of metal at a broadside. But the advantage in several particulars was with the British. Their commander was the redoubtable Captain Barclay, who had been trained under the eye of Admiral Nelson, and had won honors at Trafalgar; the long guns were better distributed on the British ships than they were on the American squadron; and the British ships were built originally as war vessels with their decks protected by heavy planks, that made them proof against grape-shot, while, with the exception of the Brigs, the American boats were converted merchantmen and hence the men on their decks were unprotected. The battle opened a few minutes after the noon hour, the three British ships, Detroit, Hunter and Queen Charlotte, concentrating the fire on the American flag ship, Lawrence. The fire of the Detroit was most damaging. Her long guns ripped the Lawrence in places and dismantled her, while the Americans' cannonades proved ineffective at the long range. The light wind prevented the rest of the squadron from coming to the support of the flag ship, which true to her famous namesake fought on with grim determination. For over two hours she sustained the tremendous cannonading, until she was riddled like a sieve, and every gun was disabled, while her decks ran with the blood of her crew. A little after 2 o'clock p. m. Perry left the Lawrence in an open boat, and with a little company rowed to the Niagara, which then became the flag ship of the squadron, the Lawrence in the meantime having lowered her colors to save needless loss of life. The wind at this point freshened, thus enabling the American ships to bear down on the British, who were exulting over their victory. In less than an hour the scene was changed, and the British ships foundered and raked, were compelled to surrender. The total number of killed and wounded on the American squadron was 27 and 96, of which the Lawrence alone lost 10 killed and 64 wounded. The importance of this naval victory can hardly be overestimated. The British, on learning the news, evacuated Detroit, and thus gave General Harrison a free footing to save Michigan and Ohio.

The midshipman Proctor made his exit from the United States never again to revisit his helpless women and children. To this day Perry was sent with a squadron to a diplomatic mission to South America. In the performance of this duty he contracted yellow fever, and died on his ship just as he was entering the Port of Spain, Trinidad, his remains were conveyed home and buried in Kingston, Rhode Island, the place of his birth. He was born August 23d, 1785, and died on the anniversary of his birth in 1819. We are not contented with another Perry, who was a brother of Oliver, and in 1852 persuaded James to open his ports to commerce with the United States. Matthew was also a young man, younger than Oliver, and James was a lad 10 years old on the day that Oliver won this battle of Lake Erie.

The Rose Mildew

The Rose Mildew is a disease caused by a fungus parasite (Sphaerotheca pannosa Walther Lev.) which lives on the surface of the plant. In most cases of parasite fungi, the organism penetrates the leaf, stem or fruit, and lives in the interior of the tissues of those parts affected. The Rose Mildew belongs to that class of parasite fungi (Oerisphaeraceae) which only lives on the surface of the plant. The fungus in this case, the exterior of the leaf, stem, or fruit to derive its nourishment, sends its suckers (haustoria) into the epidermis of the plant.

The Mildew causes a general deformity of the leaves and stems. Often branches are entirely covered by the fungus, thus giving it a white mealy appearance. The general effect of the mildew is to cause a premature falling of the leaves, a straggling of the stems and flower buds and the final result is that of premature death of the whole plant.

The fungus, when viewed microscopically, is seen to be made up of white hyaline filaments, the tip ends of which break up into small fragments and serve as spores to perpetuate the species. Late in the fall this same fungus forms pure sacs (perithecia). These sacs serve to protect the winter spores and to carry them over safely for the next spring. There are few of our garden roses which are immune to the mildew. The Crimson Rambler is especially susceptible to it.

In view of the fact that this fungus grows on the surface of plants it becomes a very easy matter to destroy the parasite. All we need is to apply a poison on the surface of the plant, which will directly come into contact with the fungus. Flower of Sulphur is one of these remedies. It should be applied early in the morning when the plants are still wet with dew, as this will make the sulphur stick better. Another remedy is Potassium sulphate. Dissolve one ounce of the salt in two gallons of water and then spray the affected parts with it. When once dissolved, it should not be left uncovered and it should be used immediately, for otherwise, when exposed long to the air it loses its germicidal function. Even the undissolved salt should always be kept in close jars, for the same reason as given above.

The Rose Mildew is given prevalent in this time of the year. It is necessary in order to destroy the parasite to take the necessary measures in due time.

Letter Of Appreciation

Phillipsburg, N. J., July 15, 1910
To Gordon's Newark Branch, care of Mr. L. B. Hill.
Dear Friend:—I am about catching up with my correspondence which was made very heavy on account of Gordon's sickness and death.
So I take this opportunity of writing to thank all of Gordon's Newark friends who so kindly remembered him at the time of his death with the beautiful floral pillow. My heart is almost broken, and I cannot write much at this time, but on behalf of the mother, sister and self we thank you from the depths of our broken hearts. It is so hard to part with such a noble son, such a manly man, but it is needful for me to say this to you, and to know him was to love him, and I am sure, dear friend, that you did love him. The fact of your having been here at so much expense to yourself testifies to this.

Gordon often spoke of you and your good wife and we thank you both for your kindness to him while in your city. I wish you would also thank the gentleman who keeps the livery stable for the use of cabs when he came home, and showed his love for my son. And all who contributed to the pillow, do not forget them; and our prayers are that God will bless you all for your kindness. I hope some day to meet you all. But if we should not meet again on earth, may we all live such lives that when we die we may meet in that better land where Gordon waits to bid us welcome.

We cannot understand why God should take him so young, so strong and so good and noble, but as the Lord gave he has also taken and we must say with humble and contrite hearts, "Thy will be done."

Enclosed a card of the grave taken soon after the funeral. On the day after the funeral the cemetery was filled with people all day to see the grave and pay the last respects. I do not think that any man ever lived who had more friends than Gordon. The card is for you and Mrs. Hill, and, dear friend, I would be pleased to have you write to me soon.

Very truly yours,
ALFRED D. HALEY.
