Dover Del aug 28 1862 My Dearest Lon you must really pardon me for not writing earlier. I should have written on Tereoday last, but I thought I was going down on Wednesday to see you & Tuesday night an order from Head Quarters Summoned me to Wilmington and since then I have not even had time to write you until this morning. Low our visit to the Beach was a very pleasant one in many respects. But I ampully year that it is the last one for months that we will enjoy together. It is strongly removed in Wilmington that our Regiment will leave within ten days, & it does I gear I shall fail to get down to see you e'er I go. I had a presentment to that affect when last I left you but hope, truly hope it will be otherwise. I think it will be hard, thus to be snatched away; but if the Soverment needs our services I shall go without a muriner, I know you would not have me stay. The darkest period of my life is, I feel, near at hand. yet I do not properly appreciate the fact, and will only do so, when store necessity compets me to, my learning accounts and very much entangled and it will require sometime for me to straighting them out, so that my time is too much taken up for me to reflect on butun events. I will not ask you to answer this note, as I will write again as soon as I know my desting. I will still fondly hope

dover Del Aug 30 1862 My Dearest Lou

You must really pardon me for not writing earlier. I should have written on Tuesday last, but I thought I was going down on Wednesday to see you + Tuesday night an order from Head Quarters summoned me to Wilmington and since then I have not even had time to write you until this morning. Lou our [underline] visit [end underline] to the Beach was a very pleasant one in many respects. But I awfully fear that it is the last one for months that we will enjoy together. It is strongly rumored in Wilmington that our Regiment will leave within [underline] ten [end underline] days. If it does I fear I shall fail to get down to see you e'er I go. I had a presentment to that effect when [underline] last I left you [end underline]. but [underline] hope, truly hope [end underline] it will be otherwise.

I think it will be hard, thus to be snatched away; but if the Government needs our services I shall go without a murmur. I know you would not have me stay. The darkest period of my life is, I feel, near at hand. yet I do not properly appreciate the fact and will only do so, when stern necessity compels me to. My Company accounts are very much entangled and it will require sometime for me to straighten them out, so that my time is too much taken up for me to reflect on future events. I will not ask you to answer this note, as I will write again as soon as I know my destiny. I will still fondly hope
