BOLD ATTEMPT AT BANK ROBBERY

Plan Frustrated by Town Officer—Horse Stolen and Culprit Escaped.

The vigilance of Egbert Shellen, the town policeman, prevented a bank robbery here Sunday night, and had he not been confronted by a high fence and other handicaps, the officer would most likely have captured at least one of those involved in the attempted robbery. An attempt was made to break into the bank building of the Farmers' Trust Co., on Main street, formerly the building of the Newark National Bank, but it was tipped in the bud by the officer.

As there is no regular mail carried out from the postoffice to the railroad stations after 8 o'clock at night, Officer Shellen, whose duties require him to be at the Baltimore & Ohio railroad station when trains arrive and depart, accommodates persons having mail ready after the postoffice closing hour by gathering it up at different points about town and taking it to the B. & O. station and placing it on the northbound train due to leave here at 10.17 o'clock. He did this Sunday night, but as the train was late he was late getting back to the heart of the town.

As is customary, on his return from the railroad station, the officer sat down to rest on the porch in front of C. B. Major's butcher shop, on Main street, which adjoins the trust company building. He happened to be sitting near the end of the porch which is next to a high fence enclosing the bank yard, and had not been there long when he heard what he supposed was a dog or cat moving about in the yard. The sound caused him to make an investigation, and when he peered over the fence he saw a small creature lying below, who saw him at about the same time and darted away. Shellen believes the man had heard him stop at the porch, and knowing he was still there, intended to surprise him and strike him over the head with a club or some other weapon. It was too dark to see whether the miscreant had anything in his hands or whether he was black or white.

Shellen made a grab for the thief, but the latter was too quick and darted away. He officer vaulted the fence, but by that time the other man had gotten out of the yard and disappeared in the darkness.

ness, going in the direction of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, running back of Delaware College and across some fields. The officer fired his revolver and the robber is thought to have fired back, though he was in such a position that this is not definitely known. So far as is known, he was not hit by a bullet from the officer's revolver.

HORSE STOLEN TO GET AWAY.

Sometime the same night a horse was stolen from the farm of John F. Richards, at Lumbrook, which is about a mile from the bank, and the horse and a carriage were found in Wilmington Monday, having been abandoned there. It is evident, therefore, that the man chased from the bank got away from Newark in that rig, and it is not improbable that he had an accomplice, although Policeman Shellen saw only one man.

At the conclusion of the chase, the officer returned and made an examination of the bank building. He found under a rear window, on the west side of the bank, a pair of gloves and a saw, and there was evidence where the sawing of two of the steel bars in front of the window had been started, and also where a crowbar or other bar had been used in an effort to pry the bars wider apart, for several were bent and the bricks at the side of the window were broken. The window had not been raised, as it could not be manipulated until after the barriers in front of it had been removed. As an entrance to the bank was not effected, nothing was stolen. The officer is holding the sawdust in the effort to run down the crook.

About a month ago the office at the coal yard of H. Warner McNeal was broken into by thieves, who robbed the safe, and it may be that the men who operated there returned Sunday night with the hope of getting into the bank.

RICHARDS' TEAM FOUND.

The rig belonging to Mr. Richards was found Monday morning on Second street in Wilmington. City authorities had been notified of the theft and recovered the horse. Mr. Richards got the team on Monday afternoon.

NEWARK'S NEW STAR PITCHER

Holton's Game At Chesapeake Praised

Chesapeake City, July 7. To The Post:

Fans of this city are still talking of the great game pitched here on the fourth by George Holton, amateur ball player of Newark, Delaware. Mr. Holton was guest of friends here and was asked to take part in the sport of the day. In the morning game, he left a record of striking out 18 men, only to beat it in the afternoon by striking out the twelve men who faced him in the four innings.

His reply to congratulations that he was no professional but that he did occasionally play a little ball. Chesapeake City claims the honor of this find and looks with interest to the laurels of this Newark Star.

Sewer Work To Begin

In all probability the Sewer will be started in a very short time. L. B. Jacobs, the successful bidder has given bond according to law and same has been accepted. At the meeting of Council on Thursday night the Sewer Commission with Mr. Hatton, the engineer and Contractor Jacobs, the matter will be laid before Council. After the formalities of this presentation the Sewer will begin. The contract, under which Mr. Jacobs has accepted the work, makes provision that the work be completed in 150 working days. With this provision, Newark can well expect to see some real engineering in the next few weeks.

Panama Engineer Visits Newark

J. L. Wickersham of Kanawha, from Panama, visited friends here over Sunday. Mr. Wickersham has been employed by the Panama Railroad as construction engineer. He expects to remain in this vicinity during the month of July after which he will again return to the Canal region.

BANDSTAND WANTED

Newark should build a bandstand for the Minnehaha boys.

ANNUAL MEETING TRUST COMPANY

Directors And Officers Re-elected

The eighth Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Newark Trust and Safe Deposit Company was held at the banking house, on Monday morning at 10 o'clock a. m. All the directors were re-elected, and the following organization effected: S. J. Wright, president; H. G. M. Kollock, vice-president; Chas. B. Evans, secretary; Warren Singles, treasurer, and W. H. Taylor, trust officer.

A semi-annual dividend of 3 per cent was declared and 7 per cent added to the surplus, making a total of 13 per cent surplus on capital stock invested for the year ending July 1st.

Statements showing the progress of the bank are being issued which make interesting reading to those interested in banking. The Trust Company, though conservative, has made remarkable progress. In a few weeks, the new banking house will be ready for occupancy and vague rumors have it that the building will far exceed the published accounts.

With few exceptions which are necessary to real big things, every one is out for business with a royal good time as a paying by-product. With the Firemen as leaders, it can be safely said that Newark is determined to have a Fire Engine suitable to the needs of the Community and further than that, they have made up their mind to pay for it at the earliest possible time. Credit and praise for efforts, somewhat delayed, are now coming to the boys with a vim and whole-heartedness that is good to witness, and if ever an organization had the people with it that organization is the Aetna Fire Company of Newark.

Fourth of July was of course the Big Day. Early in the afternoon, the card of attraction was the Baby Show, under the management of Mrs. Beale.

The Judges had been chosen with the greatest care. Mrs. Grant of Baltimore was selected as the first and Mr. George Daly of Kentucky acted as Associate. Mr. Daly was the guest of Chas. W. Strahorn and as Judge at a Beauty show, he was in his element. To get a sport, a judge of horses, pretty girls, go to the Blue Grass region and there you will find a Daly.

The prizes were awarded: Five dollars to the Coverdale Twins as the star beauties and five dollars to Sherman Wywel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Laurens Wywel.

Early in the evening the crowds began to collect. Teams of all descriptions, automobiles of every make (most of them Fords) began to arrive and by dusk Newark was entertaining one of the largest crowds ever gathered here. Ice cream gardens were crowded to their fullest capacity, booths surrounded by admiring crowds with purse strings cut, balloons, confetti, vaudeville—which was the most popular!

Country boys, town sports, country girls, Summer School enthusiasts, old and young, every body out for a lark. With all the crowds gathered here, there was not the least semblance of disorder. Every body seemed to be in a good humor.

Then the fire works—and they were great. Everybody, even staid old gray hairs, usually above such foolishness looked out with real 4th of July spirit and a compliment to Aetna. The display far surpassed that of last year and the emblazoned AETNA at the end only prompted a return to Carnival grounds for another round at the attractions. Money flowing freely with the commonsense view that it was in payment for personal fire protection and a worth while Newark.

SUMMER SCHOOL SUCCESSFUL

Instructors Well Pleased—Dr. Harter and Dr. Wagner Make Statement

The spirit of the Summer School and its worth is voiced in the following statements by Dr. Harter, Director of the School and Dr. Wagner, State Commissioner of Education. That real work is the dominant feature is shown in the statement that 93 per cent of the students are taking the full quota of subjects.

Dr. Harter interprets the Signs of the Times when he says that the School is the beginning of a Greater Delaware College. His statement follows:

The Summer School for Teachers at Delaware College has opened with a gratifyingly large number of teachers drawn from all parts of the state. More pleasing, however, than this large enrollment is the spirit which has characterized their work; even in the hot, humid weather of last week their earnestness and enthusiasm did not flag. It is evident that our teachers feel the need of such a place of training and that they are ready and eager to undertake a course of study that will make them more efficient in their work. The State has been amply justified in establishing this school. This band of young people will carry out into the State a rich fund of acquisitions and a wealth of training that will surely react most helpfully upon the schools. The time is too short to accomplish the best results.

Hereafter the Summer School should be open six weeks in order that adequate time might be taken for a systematic course of training in the subjects which the teacher should elect as being most helpful and useful in the work of the school room. By the establishment of this school the usefulness of Delaware College is much enlarged. A School of Education will be started when Delaware College for Women is opened. Degrees and certificates will then be given upon the completion of certain courses. Credits in this Summer School for Teachers will be justly counted in work for such certificates. This is a beginning of the greater Delaware College.

Dr. Wagner is enthusiastic in his praise and sees great good being accomplished. He gives out the following statement:

The enrollment of one hundred sixty-one teachers in the courses of the Summer School is a sufficient proof that a well-defined need for it existed. It is the chance to get help to teach successfully that the School stands for to these earnest students. This chance to make their schools good, to secure themselves the joy of their work, to make school pleasant and profitable to their children, is this a good investment of the State's resources of school plant, teaching force, vital teaching personality? If so, then the School is fully worth while. The beginning of the returns from this Summer School investment will be present from the first day the schools open in September. It will show in examinations successfully passed by these students, in plans for teaching wisely laid and skillfully carried out, in studies continued after Summer School is over, the attendance at higher and more special schools.

These results may be predicted in entire confidence of their complete realization, and the state of Delaware, by reason of maintaining a free Summer School for her teachers, be ranked with the leading states in the country in opportunities offered to her teachers.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETS

Prof. Friedel Makes Recommendation

Principal R. F. Friedel submitted a report of the year's work in the public schools of Newark to the Board of Education at a meeting of that body on Monday evening. The report showed the total enrollment during the year to be 554, an increase of 23 over the previous year. The total enrollment in the high school was 86. The highest attendance at one time was 499 in February and the lowest 451 in June. The average for the year was 84 4-10. The highest average per cent was 88 7-10 in November and the lowest 76 2-10 in June. This fall off in June was due to some of the primary grades being depleted because of an epidemic of measles and mumps. The number of outside pupils under the graded school law was 49 and the number of outside pupils attending the schools not under the graded law 21.

Mr. Friedel stated in his report that the number of promotions in the grades from the first to the eighth inclusive were 308. Of this number 39 were promoted from the eighth grade to the high school. He also reported that the prospects were that the high school would open in September with 80 pupils.

Several recommendations made by the Principal were acted on by the Board. The committee appointed some weeks ago on securing athletic grounds and on manual training were continued. If possible ground will be secured for the boys to play their games on. It is also desired to start manual training if the board can see its way clear financially to do so.

REYNOLDS ECKEL.

Reynolds Eckel, aged 18 years, son of Rev. and Mrs. Edward Eckel, pastor of Christ Episcopal church at St. Joseph, Missouri, met with a serious accident from which he died later.

Young Eckel had recently completed his freshman year in the University of Missouri and had taken summer work as timekeeper for a construction force on the Burlington railroad.

Late last month, while attempting to board a train he was thrown under the wheels, severing his right leg. He was rushed to the hospital but died in a short time.

The father has many friends in Newark, he having at one time been a student at Delaware College and also identified with church interests throughout this section.

NEW PARCEL POST RULING

Ordinary Stamps To Be Used Order Into Effect July 1

If you are a stamp collector and desire to have any of the Parcel Post stamps in your collection, you had better start and buy a few in advance as on and after July 1 the parcel post stamps will be discontinued and ordinary stamps used on parcels. The order received by postmasters throughout the country is as follows:

"On and after July 1, 1913, ordinary postage stamps, including commemorative issues, shall be valid for postage on fourth-class mail matter (parcel post) and for insurance and collect-on-delivery fees on parcel post mail, and distinctive parcel post stamps shall be valid for all purposes for which ordinary stamps are valid.

"The present supply of parcel post stamps will be sold to the public until exhausted, and after that time only the ordinary issue of stamps will be sold. It should be clearly understood that postage stamps of either series will be accepted as payment for postage at their face value, regardless of the kind of mail matter to which they are attached."

This new order will be of great accommodation to the public, especially those living on the rural routes. It will only be a matter of a short time before packages can be sent direct from the rural box without the trouble of going to the Post station.

Parcel Post, although in practice only a few months, can be pronounced a success.

RECEPTION AT SUMMER SCHOOL

Interesting Entertainment For Teachers

Students and instructors in the Summer School to the number of 190 assembled in the College Oratory on Monday evening for an informal entertainment and reception, provided by the Faculty of the School. Local talent among the members of the Faculty with the generous assistance of friends in the town furnished a varied entertainment of vocal and instrumental music, readings, addresses, and puzzling comedrums. After this rather formal part of the entertainment, light refreshments were served and an opportunity was given for the students of the school to become better acquainted with one another and with the teachers in charge of the various courses.

The first number of the informal program was a short address by Dr. Geo. A. Harter, President of the College and Director of the Summer School. He welcomed the teachers to Delaware College, expressed his pleasure at the already encouraging features of the School, and pointed out that this Summer School is the beginning of higher education for the women of the state soon to be realized by the establishment of a Woman's College affiliated with Delaware College. After a selection by the Summer School choir, composed of about 30 men and women, assisted by the piano, cornet and violin, the chairman of the committee on entertainment, Dr. Sypherd introduced Dr. Wagner, our new Commissioner of Education.

FARM OBSERVATIONS

Every year in Delaware considerable loss of wheat occurs through the ravages of the grain moth known as the "fly weevil" or Angoumois grain moth. Stored wheat is especially liable to damage by this insect. Grain in the stack or stored in barns in the sheaf is also subject to attack. Most farmers are familiar with the appearance of this moth and a description is not necessary. The eggs are laid on the heads of the standing grain and are ready to work on the wheat as soon as stacked or stored. Early threshing is recommended as one of the most effective means of combating this pest as the process serves to separate the eggs from the grain. All wheat should be threshed as soon as possible after cutting as it is impracticable to treat the wheat in the sheaf condition. The presence of the insect is indicated by the heating of the grain in bins. Stored wheat should be examined every few days after threshing and if there is any heating the grain should be treated with carbon bisulphide (a colorless liquid of disagreeable odor), at the rate of one pound of pint to each 250 cubic feet of bin space. Generally two pounds will be sufficient for each 100 bushels of grain. The bisulphide should be placed in shallow plates or pans on top of the grain and the bin covered with boards, canvas or blankets and allowed to remain at least twenty-four hours. The bisulphide evaporates and the gas being heavier than air sinks to the bottom of the bin, destroying the insects. If the grain is to be used for seed it should not be treated for more than thirty-six hours. Longer treatment will not injure the quality of the grain for milling purposes. After treating the grain keep the bins covered to prevent re-infestation. If the wheat is found badly infested and a considerable number of moths already developed, it is well to run the grain through a fanning mill before treating with the bisulphide. Damage from this insect will be lessened by storing the grain in a cool, dark, well-ventilated place and covering so as to prevent the access of the moths.

Carbon bisulphide can generally be procured at local druggists at 15 cents per pound or in the wholesale lots at about 11 cents a pound. Caution—Carbon bisulphide is highly inflammable and explosive when in a gaseous condition and all lights such as cigars, lanterns, etc. should be kept away from it. With the proper attention to the above details little or no loss of stored grain need result through this insect.

AMERICA'S FLYLESS TOWN

How it is Done in Redlands

Redlands, California, is not a big place, but it has recently attained wide fame as the only "flyless" town in the United States. A worth while distinction for any place, big or small, when we remember the millions and millions of disease-breeding flies turned loose every summer to plague man and beast. About a year ago the fly question was reached in Redlands. It was high time. The weather was hot and the town seemed to swarm with these insects. The mayor of that city recently remarked: "That we don't do it in our town and we have made Redlands the most unhealthy burg in the land for a fly to try to live in."

"Well, what do you do to get rid of the flies?" the mayor was asked. "Go out in the streets of our town and see for yourself and hunt up Chapman, our official flycatcher. He is the only one in the world, I think, and he has made good. Hear what he has to say about flies," was the reply.

This advice was taken. At the first street corner was noticed a curious object which proved, on close inspection, to be a screened frame, twelve inches square and over two feet high, about the size of a big square waste basket. It was a fly "cage." The bottom sat about two inches from the ground. In this bottom was a cone shaped screen with the large opening down. Under this was placed a banana peel or other fly delicacy. Investigation demonstrated that the pests go under the screen and, the light being above, fly up into the cone and thence through the small hole into the cage. Naturally it would take a rather smart fly to find that little hole again and get out. Flies instinctively fly up and towards the light. So that cage, with no effort whatever, catches flies by the thousands.

It is so complete that the duties of the municipal fly-catcher consist simply in daily baiting the traps, collecting the flies and burning them. According to the report he filed at the end of his first month in office, September, 1912, he killed 3,750,000 flies. He had emptied fifty gallons of flies from 100 traps scattered through the business section of Redlands and he estimated that there were 75,000 flies to a gallon. At this rate of destruction it is no wonder Redlands soon became a flyless town.

At present, over five hundred fly traps are distributed over the little city. They are to be seen in every place—in front of the municipal building, the post office, the railroad stations, many of the big shops and along the highways, but recently the daily task of the official fly-catcher has been light.

It was in July a year ago that Mr. Chapman built his first "fly-catcher" and began experimenting. He found that if the trap could be shaded so that the light would show higher through the cone more flies would enter the cone. He also found that the traps on the shady side of the street would always catch more flies than those on the sunny side.

It was quickly discovered, in conversing with Redlands' fly-catcher, that he has made a deep study of the psychology of flies. He knows how, when and where they breed, how much damage they do and how necessary it is to the health of any community to get rid of the pests. "Every one knows," he said, "the real danger of the housefly. It has been spread broadcast until there is scarcely an intelligent community but contains people who are ignorant of many other great diseases—even infantile paralysis—can be spread by the flies."

"It probably seems to almost every householder that winter kills off all the flies; even a month of cold weather seems sufficient for this; but if you will investigate in the early spring you will be amazed to find many flies about your home. Look in your cellar and you will doubtless find these flies patiently dozing away around the hot-air pipes, in corners of the ceiling, in the rafters and crevices around the kindling piles, behind barrels and boxes stored away, and in many such places."

"In the early April days, or, in the South, as early as the first of March, the female fly that so cleverly tucked herself away in some warm nook of your house will begin to awake from her long sleep, butter her wings, shiver a few shivers and then fare forth to multiply."

"This female fly has from 120 to 200 eggs which she wants to deposit and which she will deposit. If there is no stable at hand she will deposit those eggs in the garbage can, or even in the earth of your rubber plant or ferns or palms. She will find some place to deposit those eggs—any place where there is exposed organic material."

"Now, if the weather is fairly warm, every female fly that was hatched from the 200 eggs deposited by our first fly (the one that passed through the winter sleeping) will begin to deposit eggs at the end of ten days."

"The little fly that first deposited eggs the first of April will have been responsible for descendants by the first of September that will amount to ten raised to the thirteenth power, or more than one hundred thousand million! If one fly can do this, what can a household of flies do?"

"The remedy is to begin in the early spring and fight the flies. Search your house as though you were looking for a two-carat diamond you knew was there, hunt up every fly in every cranny and crevice and kill it. When the warm weather comes keep up the fight with screens and traps and above all with searching out the breeding places and destroying them."

"Working on the basis that the best way was not to swat, so generally advocated, but to capture in large quantities, I devised the fly-catcher. How successful they have been only Redlands knows. They have kept the dwellings, and even the meat markets, grocery stores and fruit shops almost entirely free of flies, and each day thousands and thousands of the pests are caught in the traps.

"The most important thing in the use of the fly trap is the bait. Bread and milk is the best and it should be frequently renewed. It should always be fresh and never allowed to dry up, for it then loses its attractiveness. The best way to kill the trapped flies is to immerse the top portion of the trap in boiling water; then destroy the dead flies by burning, destroying all the germs that are on them."

Plain Thoughts For Plain Men

But what if I fail in my purpose here?
It is but to keep the nerves at strain.
To dry one's eyes and laugh at a fall.
And baffled get up and begin again.
So the chase takes up one's life, that's all.

—Browning.

Any man who speaks his mind and is fearless enough to tell the Truth, without fear or favor, as he sees it, at any and all the time is in constant danger from attacks on his name and life.

The man or woman who repeats that which he or she does not absolutely know should be watched by every citizen. For if those attacks be of such that they would tend to smirch a character or, for the time, lessen an influence—then, truly, he or she is a murderer. "They Say" and "Have your heard?" are the daggers used.

We are always in these days endeavoring to separate intellect from manual labor; we want one man to be always thinking and another to be always working, and we call one a gentleman and the other an operative; whereas the workman ought to be thinking, and the thinker ought to be working, and both should be gentlemen in the best sense. As it is, we make both ungentle, the one envying, the other despising his brother; and the mass of society is made up of morbid thinkers and miserable workers.

Stories By Workers

Feature of North American

Something different in the way of newspaper features is one that The North American inaugurates in its Sunday edition for July 13. Workers have been asked to contribute short stories based upon incidents possible in the occupations of the writers. The first stories are keepers of apartment and boarding houses. An invitation to stenographers which followed brought results in the shape of scores of manuscripts, and it is hoped that every stenographer will write a story. It is now intended to make the invitation general, and all workers except professional writers are invited to contribute stories of not more than 1500 words in length to this very interesting department.

The conditions are few and simple. Aside from the length limit there are no conditions except that the incidents upon which the stories are founded shall be taken from the occupation in which the writer is engaged.

Stories are to be paid for at $5 each, and the best story of each Sunday's quota is to be awarded an additional superiority prize of $5.

Liberal editing is to be allowed, it being intended that the story merit of contributions shall count higher than mere literary form.

Large numbers of stories are sure to be submitted, and it is safe to predict that the product will be more readable than most of the fiction departments. Manuscripts should be addressed to The Story Department of the Sunday North American.—Adv.

CONGRATULATIONS

Congratulations to Aetna! Hats off to Fire Chief Wilson and all his associates! Our best thanks to the ladies who so generously aided in making the Carnival a Success. To all, Newark is your debtor. There is glory enough for you all and right well have you earned it. Tired, worn out, some of you, by a hard week's work, but think what you have done.

No attempt for civic improvement has had the loyal support that has been deservedly yours. Although the object of the Carnival was one that appealed to reason and common sense, it is none the less gratifying that you have had the practical good wishes from all our citizenship that is really awake to conditions and worth while. Little oppositions and petty comments have added only zest to the fray.

The Carnival was a success and Newark is assured of modern Fire Protection as far as Engine is concerned. Look to your laurels, Councilmen, and furnish the water. Congratulations, everybody.

BUILDING LAW NEEDED

A Building Commission with authority to regulate building lines and to put a stop to tenement type of construction in the heart of the town, as advocated by one of our readers in the Peoples' Column of this issue, is an excellent idea and one that needs immediate attention. This suggestion was made a few years ago. No one disputed its merits but by neglect, no action was taken and ruthless building without regard to surroundings are being erected every season.

It is certainly within the province of Council and really, the only commonsense thing to do is to provide for some regulation. Many towns of the size of Newark have the strictest kind of building laws, permitting no construction without approval and permit from some betterment it is unfortunate that this should be neglected.

SUMMER SCHOOL IMPRESSION

"The Summer School is a Success," "Enthusiasm and real work are the key notes," "Teachers giving us the things we need," "Commissioner must have been born in Delaware—he's our sort." He gets things done, and done quickly. Wagner is a determined but good natured booster. "Delaware College is a beautiful place and there's a spirit here that helps a plodding teacher to love her profession," "This Summer School is well worth while and only a forerunner of the success of the Women's College," "I never dreamed you had such full blooded enthusiastic men,"—these are only a few of the remarks heard about the Summer School. During this last week, The Post took the task of finding out just how the School stood in the minds of the teachers and almost without exception the comments are favorable. Not only favorable but enthusiastically so. Especially is this true of those teachers who were not acquainted with the institution or its work. The quotations above are sufficient to tell the story. Received as expressions of honest opinions without fear of publication, they show the spirit of the School.

Every one admitted that work was the dominant feature but that in spite of the hot weather, the subjects had been presented in an interesting manner.

"We are a jolly good crowd of teachers glad of the opportunity given us by the State to come to Old Delaware and the inspiration here will be of great help to me through out the coming year. Certainly a College outlook on life is a big thing."

The reception on Monday evening and rare treats in the lectures (reported in another column) offered will add materially to the popularity of those in charge. Surely there is honor and glory to bestow and enough to go around.

Note:—Comments in the above article were gathered up at random from strangers who are students at the Summer School.

Impressions Of The Gettysburg Reunion

Written for The Post.

Without precedent in history and unique in many ways, the reunion of veterans at the semi-centennial celebration of the battle on the Battlefield of Gettysburg last week, has become world famous and taken its place in the history of the nation.

Greater even than the battle was the reunion of those who fought there; for words may describe the conflict—the rattle of musketry, the rumble of batteries roaring defiance, the dash of cavalry, the hurrying of column against column, the scream of shot and shell, the cries of pain of wounded and dying, the odor of blood and powder and the gray pall of smoke hovering over the field of death—all this the imagination can conceive. But words fail in describing the reunion—a spectacle so sublime that only one's higher and better nature can faintly grasp and perceive its real import.

The fires of wrath and hatred that here burned so fiercely fifty years ago have been extinguished and in the stead new fires of love and patriotism kindled, by whose gentle heat the two sections have been welded into one grand united nation, actuated by ideals of justice and peace and equal opportunity for all.

It is not a sign of weakness, but of big moral courage to admit being in error; and of magnanimity in refraining from flaunting victory in the face of the vanquished; and never were these noble qualities demonstrated to greater effect than at the reunion. Hands clasped hands and eyes looked into eyes, finding there the qualities worthy of admiration and emulation, and not a trace of the rancor and bitterness of 50 years ago.

And this spirit of love pervaded the entire field—from the brown tent city to the most hotly contested—swapping reminiscences of days happily past. What a pity that all these tales could not be collected and preserved for coming generations. A more interesting collection, aside from its historical value, would be hard to find. During these recitals many interesting bits were related not found in our histories.

The camp in itself is worthy of note, being the largest this country, and probably the world, has ever seen. More than 8,000 tents, arranged in over 50 streets, formed a veritable canvas city, with a population of around 60,000, of which 53,000 were veterans, all of whom, with few exceptions, were over 70 years old, a notable fact in itself.

Much praise was bestowed by the veterans on the arrangement and administration of the camp, everything possible being done to secure their comfort, and aside from the heat all were happy and contented.

An instance of the treatment accorded them was given by a New York veteran who had been entertaining several visitors with stories of the battle and leaders, remarking: "If you boys will excuse me I will go have dinner. We are having fried chicken with all the trimmings, and ice cream for dessert. That is the way they feed us here."

One of the many interesting facts here related was that 65 "Johnnies" came from New York at the States expense.

Another veteran, an officer of a Michigan regiment, who was captured and sent to Pickett's headquarters during the charge, related how, after the charge, Pickett rode up to his tent and turning to the Union officer said, "I went in there with 6,000 good men and came out with 1,200," then broke down and cried like a child.

Numberless incidents occurring all over the field showed how fully the veterans entered into the spirit of the reunion. A tall Union veteran with an empty sleeve walked up to a Confederate and grasping him by the hand said, "How are you? Good as you were 50 years ago?" Back came the answer, "Yes sir, better," and a moment more they were chatting away like old friends. Couples and groups of Blue and Gray walked or stood about the field, or with heads close together intently watched maps drawn in the dust, discussing the battle without heat or bitterness, vying in praise of the valor of each side.

Many of the incidents were such as to bring a mist before the eyes and make the voice husky, this especially being the case at the railroad station, where many affecting scenes took place—the parting of long lost and newly reunited comrades and the saying goodbye to newly found brothers. Southerners went North, and Northerners went South, showing how completely the two sections have merged. All this went to make up an impression that will be indelibly impressed on the memories of the thousands of visitors and sightseers, imparting a wholesome and far reaching moral.

The cordiality with which the Northern veterans received those of the South, far surpassed the greatest expectations of wearers of the Gray. Instead of being met by victors they were met by brothers. And the effect of that welcome will be far reaching, eradicating all traces of animosity and rancor and obliterating sectional lines.

It is well that this field should be preserved as it possesses a high educational value. Located in a section endowed with many scenic merits, the beauty of the field has been enhanced by the best examples of the sculptor's, monument builder's and landscape artist's art.

But greater than all else is its moral value—as evidenced by the reunion of one-time bitter foes, now bound by a common bond of love of country and a firm resolve "that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

the high school directly from the eighth grade. In the past it has pils into the commercial course of been necessary to take one year in the high school before entering the commercial course. The Principal desires that all pupils in the future take the first year's work in the high school even when they enter the commercial course but they will not be compelled to do so now under certain conditions.

The matter of allowing ninth grade pupils an option instead of Latin was referred to the committee on teachers and discipline by the board. The board decided to make an annual appropriation for a reference library for the high school but no certain amount has been decided on.

In the few minutes allotted to him, Dr. Wagner spoke of the relation of the teachers to the state, declaring that the Summer School stands for continued education, and as such must be an important factor in the raising of the standard of education in our state.

"Our aim," said the speaker, "should be the possibility of every person being able to become well educated within our own borders, if he or she so desires." In closing, Dr. Wagner asked for the cooperation of all the teachers in his efforts to carry out the purpose of his office in our state system of education.

A violin solo by Mr. W. J. McAvoy, accompanied by Miss Nellie Wilson, was thoroughly enjoyed by the whole audience. In response to the call for an encore, Mr. McAvoy played most acceptably some old time airs. Fitting in well with the latter, was a vocal solo by Dr. Wagner, entitled "The Soldier's Farewell." This number was received with so much applause that Dr. Wagner gave as an encore "The Lorelei."

Following the violin solo, Dr. W. O. Sypherd read one of Kipling's stories, "Bertram and Bimi." After the vocal solo Miss Devine, Instructor in Primary Methods, entertained both students and instructors with many amusing comedies, connected with names of flowers, authors, etc. The last number of the program was a selection by the choir, led by Miss Jennie Raub and Miss Martha Strahorn. Then came the refreshments and pleasant social intercourse among students and teachers and the few invited guests. The entertainment was in charge of a committee of the Summer School Faculty: Dr. Wagner, Miss Devine and Dr. Sypherd.

PEOPLES' COLUMN

Building Law Needed

Newark, July 7th.

Dear Sir:

As a welfare measure will you kindly advocate a Building Law for the town of Newark. This town has now grown beyond the village stage and is developing too quick to allow buildings to be erected in a manner to menace the health and life of this community. There has been erected in the center of this town within the past six months a row of houses which is a disgrace and to add more have been built by a practical builder.

The general criticism, as you well know, is a condemnation, and I think it is about time that the Council sits up and takes notice and enacts a building code that will put a restriction on such, in case they have not got the courage why then compel the Board of Health to do so, and if this does not reach why go to the Fire Underwriters and urge them not to issue insurance; then maybe people will not feel disposed to lend their money for mortgages on such propositions.

There is no reason for such congestion. Land is cheap and plentiful and there should be a law made not allowing more than a double house on 50 feet of front and each pair must be detached, giving light and air on the sides as well as front and back. I write this as a taxpayer and one who is trying to put up a good renting house and to help benefit and beautify the town—not to menace and disgrace it. Public sentiment is against this style of building and furthermore you will see in the near future another row going up in the same vicinity, built by the same builder.

Now what chance does good property stand only to have their insurance rate increased. This is not a personal thing at any one person, but a criticism against those who do the flagrant acts and I as a taxpayer ask you to urge upon the citizens to demand of our Council to enact a law providing against these menaces and insist upon their doing it at once.

Taxpayer.

GETTYSBURG

Address by President Wilson

"Friends and Fellow Citizens:

"I need not tell you what the Battle of Gettysburg meant. These gallant men in blue and gray sit all about us here. Many of them met here upon this ground in grim and deadly struggle. Upon these famous fields and hillside their comrades died about them. In their presence it were an impertinence to discourse upon how the battle went, how it ended, what it signified! But fifty years have gone by since then, and I crave the privilege of speaking to you for a few minutes of what those 50 years have meant.

"What have they meant? They have meant peace and union and vigor, and the maturity and might of a great nation. How wholesome and healing the peace has been! We have found one another again as brothers and comrades in arms, enemies no longer, generous friends rather, our battles long past, the quarrel forgotten—except that we shall not forget the splendid valor, the manly devotion of the men then arrayed against one another, now grasping hands and smiling into each other's eyes.

"How complete the union has become and how dear to all of us, how unquestioned, how benign and majestic, as State after State has been added to this, our great family of free men! How handsome the vigor, the maturity, the might of the great Nation we love with undivided hearts; how full of large and confident promises that a life will be wrought out that will crown its strength with gracious justice and with a happy welfare that will touch all alike with deep contentment! We are debtors to those 50 crowded years; they have made us heirs to a mighty heritage.

NEW PROBLEMS OF TODAY.

"But do we deem the Nation complete and finished? These venerable men crowding here to this famous field have set us a great example of devotion and utter sacrifice. They were willing to die that the people might live. But their task is done. Their day is turned into evening. They look to us to perfect what they established. Their work is handed on to us, to be done in another way, but not in another spirit. Our day is not over; it is upon us in full tide.

"Have affairs paused? Does the Nation stand still? Is what the 50 years have wrought since those days of battle finished, rounded out and completed? Here is a great people, great with every force that has ever beaten in the lifeblood of mankind. And it is secure. There is no one within its borders, there is no power among the nations of the earth, to make it afraid. But has it yet squared itself with its own great standards set up at its birth when it made that first noble, naive appeal to the moral judgement of mankind to take notice that a government had now at last been established which was to serve men, not masters?

"It is secure in everything except the satisfaction that its life is right, adjusted to the uttermost to the standards of righteousness and humanity. The days of sacrifice and cleansing are not closed. We have harder things to do than were done in the heroic days of war, because harder to see clearly, requiring more vision, more calm balance of judgement, a more candid searching of the very springs of right.

"Look around you upon the field of Gettysburg! Picture the array, the fierce heats and agony of battle, column hied against column, battery bellowing to battery! Valor! Yes! Greater no man shall see in war; and self-sacrifice, and loss to the uttermost; the high recklessness of exalted devotion which does not count the cost. We are made by these tragic, epic things to know what it costs to make a nation—the blood and sacrifice of multitudes of unknown men lifted to a great stature in the view of all generations by knowing no limit to their manly willingness to serve. In armies thus marshaled from the ranks of free men you will see, as it were, a nation embattled, the leaders and the led, and may know if you will, how little except in form its action differs in days of peace from its action in days of war.

COMMON CAUSE STILL CALLS

"May we break camp now and be at ease? Are the forces that fight for the Nation dispersed, disbanded, gone to their homes forgetful of the common cause? Are our forces disorganized, without constituted leaders and the might of men consciously united because we contend, not with armies, but with principalities and powers and wickedness in high places? Are we content to lie still? Does our union mean sympathy, our peace contentment, or vigor right action, our maturity self-comprehension and clear confidence in choosing what we shall do? War fitted us for action, and action never ceases.

"I have been chosen the leader of the Nation. I can not justify the choice by any qualities of my own, but so it has come about, and here I stand. Whom do I command? The ghostly hosts who fought upon these battle fields long ago and are gone? These gallant gentlemen stricken in years, whose fighting days are over, their glory won? What are the orders for them, and who rallies them? I have in my mind another host, whom these set free of civil strife in order that they might work out in days of peace and settled order the life of a great Nation. That host is the people themselves, the great and the small, without class or difference of kind or race or origin; and undivided interest, if we have but the vision to guide and direct them and order their lives aright in what we do. Our constitutions are their articles of enlistment. The orders of the day are the laws upon our statute books.

"What we strive for is their freedom, their right to life themselves from day to day and behold the things they have hoped for, and so make way for still better days for those whom they love who are to come after them. The recruits are the little children crowding in. The quartermaster's stores are in the mines and forests and fields, in the shops and factories. Every day something must be done to push the campaign forward; and it must be done by plan and with an eye to some great destiny.

"How shall we hold such thoughts in our hearts and not be moved? I would not have you live even today wholly in the past, but would wish to stand with you in the light that streams upon us now out of the great day gone by. Here is the nation God has builded by our hands. What shall we do with it? Who stands ready to act again and always in the spirit of this day of reunion and hope and patriotic fervor?

"The day of our country's life has but broadened into morning. Do not put uniforms by. Put the harness of the present on. Lift your eyes to the great tracts of life yet to be conquered in the interest of righteous peace, of that prosperity which lies in a people's hearts and outlasts all wars and errors of men. Come, let us be comrades and soldiers yet to serve our fellow men in quiet counsel, where the blare of trumpets is neither heard nor heeded and where the things are done which make blessed the nations of the world in peace and righteousness and love."

STATE BOARD OF AGRICULTURE

Who's Who On It And Why

The three members of the State Board of Agriculture are not only successful farmers, but they are business men of ability and have shown a deep interest in public affairs. Mr. Oliver A. Newton, the President of the Board, has twice been a member of the Taxation and Revenue Commission during its existence. He has one of the best farms in Sussex county, located near Bridgeville. After having had experience in farming in New Castle county and in Virginia, he bought a small place and from time to time has added to it by purchasing adjoining land. His buildings are commodious and very conveniently arranged, and his dwelling is equipped with all modern conveniences. His stables are supplied with running water and are fitted up with all sorts of labor saving devices. Last fall he built a poultry plant, large enough for several thousand hens, he built a bungalow for the foreman, with a cellar for mammoth incubators, also laying houses, colony houses and brooder houses.

He was one of the first farmers of Delaware to grow small fruits on a commercial scale, especially strawberries, blackberries and dewberries, and these have been his most profitable crops. He is systematic and exact in all his farm operations doing everything in the most thorough and painstaking manner, giving his crops intensive cultivation, high fertilization and expert and scientific treatment in every particular. As an example of his thoroughness he had a large field planted in Gandy strawberries, the land being somewhat low and having a clay subsoil, was first well drained and then pulverized by dynamite.

At the present time the field is absolutely free from weeds, is kept friable by frequent cultivation to preserve the mulch on top and the long straight rows, and already an indication of what the patch will be when it comes to fruiting next spring. Mr. Newton practices diversified farming, growing apples, peaches, pears, potatoes, sweet potatoes, soybeans, cowpeas, buckwheat, wheat and corn, and keeps a moderate sized dairy, sending the milk to the creamery at Bridgeville. Financially, Mr. Newton has succeeded beyond his expectations.

Mr. Newton L. Grubb, Vice-President of the Board, lives on a fine farm in Brandywine hundred that has been in the Grubb family almost since the country was settled. Upon the place are a substantial stone house, barns and other buildings well adapted to the needs of the farm. Mr. Grubb's leading specialty is dairying and he has a fine herd of thoroughbred and grade Holstein cows, all of which are fed a carefully balanced and full ration of grain and forage. Mr. Grubb will keep no cow that does not yield a liberal flow of milk and does not pay a handsome profit. He is also engaged in the poultry business, which, however, in reality is Mrs. Grubb's specialty.

His fields are thoroughly tilled and have been brought to a high state of cultivation by the use of manure that has been made on the farm, supplemented by the use of a liberal supply of high grade fertilizer. Mr. Grubb has adopted a four year rotation, wheat, corn, hay, pasture. Following the suggestion of Agronomist Grantham, of the Experiment Station, he has adopted the plan of spreading his stable manure on the wheat stubble which substantially increases the crop of hay, and this fed to his dairy cows increases the quantity of stable manure and also improves the pasture and leaves the ground in good condition for corn which follows the pasture. Commercial fertilizer is applied to the corn, also the potato crop which is grown upon a moderate area.

Naturally many interesting historical events cluster about this old home. In the house is a family Bible printed in London in 1783, that has been in the Grubb family all this time. Mr. Grubb also has an account book of some local merchant whose name, however, has been lost as the first two pages of the book are missing. The accounts are with leading families of Brandywine hundred and date back to 1740. This book is of unusual interest and reveals much of the customs of those early days.

Mr. E. W. Jenkins, Secretary of the Board, has a truck farm close to Dover and it is a model of its kind. Mr. Jenkins spends much of his time in Suffolk, Virginia, near his extensive factory and trucking land, as these interests require a large portion of his time. He has wide experience in the fertilizer business and in growing market gardening crops, and is a close student of current events and public questions, and his interest in the political affairs of Kent is well known.

Delawarean Honored

The University of Puget Sound, located at Tacoma, Washington, has conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity upon the Rev. Francis Burgette Short, S. T. D., who is now the pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Spokane, Washington. Dr. Short is a Sussex county, Delaware, product, and was educated at the Wilmington Conference Academy and Delaware College. He went West about twelve years ago at the request of Bishop Hamilton to assist in raising $1000,000 endowment for the University of the Pacific, near San Jose, California. Since the completion of that undertaking Doctor Short has served a pastorate at the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Portland, Oregon, and also served the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Salt Lake City, Utah. He was recently transferred to the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Spokane, Washington, one of the largest in the West, where he has been received with an enthusiastic welcome. Relative to the honor conferred upon him by the University of Puget Sound, he said: "I greatly appreciate the honor which has come to me at the hands of the University. I never sought it and therefore do I appreciate it the more because it comes to me entirely at the hands of my friends. I sincerely trust none will ever regret the honor conferred upon, nor the trust reposed in me."

The Editor—What He Is

"An editor is a tired, nervous man who decides what shall go into a newspaper and explains why it got in afterwards."

"The editor works upstairs at an antique desk entirely surrounded by old papers, and produces the results which enables the business manager to sit down stairs in a room fitted with mahogany furniture and a Persian rug and to respond to toasts at great banquets in solemn state and a dress suit."

"It is the editor's duty to feel the pulse of the world and hold the stethoscope to business; to assist at the birth of history, to translate the present, refute the past and arrange the future; to illuminate ignorance, reward merit, put the spotlight on villainy and the pulmotor on reform; to make statesman and desecrate demagogues, to elect presidents, crown heroes and secure bigger salaries for baseball pitchers; to act as an alarm clock for public opinion as an elevator for political candidates, and as a goat for every man who says something in a careless moment and who repents later by declaring that he was misquoted; to enshrine truth annihilate error, to bring the national tear for great misfortunes and the national laugh for great foolishness."

"For doing all this some editors get as much as $200 a month."

"An editor can lower the tariff, head off war, harness the wrath of the whole people and raise a million dollars for flood sufferers."

"And some editors are so powerful that they can raise their own salaries $10 a week."

"Editors are seldom praised, but they do not mind that. If the red-faced man who is seeking an editor fails to find him and has to lick the janitor instead, the editor is well satisfied with life."

"Editors do not often ride in automobiles and if they save any money the business office feels as cheap about it as if it had paid too much for printers' ink."

"Some men are born editors, but more of them die at the job."—Ex.

Negro Progress

Enthusiastic negroes from every state in the Union will meet in Philadelphia this fall to celebrate their first half century of freedom.

Prejudiced as we are in some sections we must admit that the negro has made tremendous progress, intellectually, morally, and financially. We can but realize that the breach is lessening when we read statistics. Though only 50 years from slavery, there are 100,000 negroes studying in the higher institutions of learning in our country; more than 200,000 are engaged in mercantile pursuits; there are 64 negro banks, doing a business of $20,000,000 annually. They own and control 100 insurance companies and 300 drug stores. More than 50,000 negroes are in the professions; 219,647 of the colored race are owners of farms, the total value of which is estimated at $490,000,000.

Surely the door of hope was a healthy inspiration and of material worth. That the idle and worthless are still with us can only be expected. In 50 years, one could scarcely expect a freed slave to get his bearings. Their success has been remarkable and compares favorably indeed with History as recorded.

This 50 Years of Freedom Celebration will be worthy of note. It will lead to even greater incentive to the race for progress and suggestive of his place and work in the development of the country's needs.

Already the support of a long list of prominent persons all over the country has been received. As the first of the series, the History of Cecil County, Maryland, is now in preparation. Victor Forbert, who is at the head of the enterprise is now spending some time in Wilmington in the interest of the work.

The publications will be perpetuated, and to guarantee which The Advance Company is now being incorporated in Delaware. The Wilmington address of the company is No. 333 duPont Building, Mr. Forbert was in attendance at the Chamber of Commerce banquet to the Peninsula Press Association on Monday night of last week, at the Hotel duPont.

Wilmington Chamber of Commerce gave a luncheon last Tuesday at the Hotel duPont to officials and business men of New Castle as a first step towards organizing a State Chamber of Commerce and advancing the industrial growth of New Castle. The speakers indulged the hope of the ultimate merging of New Castle in a Greater Wilmington.

A Serious Obstacle to Good Telephone Service

Get the right number—don't guess.

Perhaps you occasionally get the wrong number when you make a telephone call. Do you blame the Telephone Company?

Now is there any chance that you were wrong?

Many mis-directed calls are due to the subscriber speaking indistinctly or calling the wrong number. Memory cannot always be trusted.

When calling, speak distinctly, giving each figure of the number with clear enunciation.

And—first, last and always—consult the current issue of the Bell Directory.

See if this doesn't help.

MANHOOD WORTH WHILE

The Ideal to Follow

What man is there who has not known at one time—or many times in his life—a sinking of the heart a quailing of weak flesh, when face to face with overwhelming odds? On the field of Gettysburg in the week past there were thousands of men who had fought a good fight and kept the faith according to their interpretation of the right and of their duty. They believed with old Sam Fessenden, of Stamford, "God Almighty hates a quitter." History does not question their heroic title. They held their ground; they charged as they were bidden; they endured the leaden hail; their lifeblood ebbed amid the meadow grasses, and the moon looked down upon white upturned faces in a mockery of peace and celestial benison aloof from their anguish. Brave as they were, their glory is the greater in that they were only mortals with human weaknesses—not demigods nor Titans, but men and the sons of men. They wanted to run, but a certain fighting spirit rose within them and held them there. Fear walked hand-in-hand with death amid the host, but fear did not prevail. "You are afraid!" said a veteran of many fights sternly to a stripling novice beside him. "Yes, I am," the youth admitted, "and if you were as afraid as I am you would run away!" That was the genuine and noble courage—when a man's own soul said no to the faltering hands and feet that would have refused their functions. The only cowardice is surrender, and none is to blame because some sudden quail of terror comes upon him—"If you can force your heart of nerve and sinew To serve your turn long after they are gone, And so hold on when there is nothing in you Except the will which says to them: 'Hold on!'" Gettysburg was fought once and for all; the kind of struggle that goes on within is ceaseless. A man need never become complacent in the surety that he has the upper hand of the indefatigable enemy. The serpent is scotched, not killed. It only waits till he is lulled to rest to compass his assassination. Yet what man of mettle is there who would effortlessly win? In this "gymnasium of the virtues" there are obstacles to be overleapt, weights to be lifted, fierce wrestling encounters, races to be run, ladders to be ascended to the top. You must exercise till it tells on thews and sinews—at first in the pain of it, afterward in the accretion of new strength. So shall the spirit grow robust and fortified to meet all that shall happen, nor be overthrown. It will stand like a rock that is punished by the sea—again and again by the wild, white wrath of the onslaught it is submerged, but it emerges.

You cannot learn much from one who has not been tried and tempted. He must have been there and come back in order to tell you what it was like. That does not mean that he deliberately courted the test of moral strength—that he tried to see how near he could come to the brink without going over. But he has been through the refiner's fire of adversity. Whatever he has or is he got by deserving. He never was a minion of fortune. Every time he was flung he rose from the dust and forgot the bruises to fight better. Fate itself, trying conclusions, veered of the attempt to "take a fall out of him" and had to give him what he wanted. Others, by his example, took heart and tried again. They argued that if he could they could. Nothing capable of being put in print comes anywhere near the personal example of a man. A leader who embodies a creed, a code, a law is more than any text or aphorism though in letters of burnished gold ten feet high. There is nothing in creation to compare with the soul of man.—Ex.

Histories Of Pennsylvania Counties

An important movement has been started having in view the advancement of the Delaware Peninsula, through the wide exploitation of its wonderful advantages and resources, and the fostering of progressive spirit among its people both at home and abroad. The plan is to issue a series of handsomely bound and illustrated histories of the counties of Maryland, Delaware and Virginia, on the Delmarva Peninsula. The editions will be of the highest literary and illustrative art standard, portraying the historical scenes and places, river courses, natural advantages, homesteads and review the lives and useful work of citizens and natives of the various counties, both in local and national fields.

CARD OF THANKS

On behalf of Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Company, I wish to thank the ladies who took an active interest in our Carnival for a large part of our success was due to their efforts; To the Boy Scouts who was ever ready and willing to aid in every possible way; to Minnehaha Band for their generous supply of music which goes to make a carnival popular; to Mrs. Marion Jane Murray, our popular singer; to the press for their liberal supply of advertising and to the public in general through whose generosity it was possible to make our Carnival such a grand success.

Very truly yours,

E. C. WILSON,
Chairman Carnival Committee

Bank To Give Prizes

The Security Trust and Safe Deposit Company of Wilmington, it has been learned, is considering establishing cash prizes for farm products raised in this state. The plan, if followed, will be modeled after that of the Corn Exchange Bank of Philadelphia, which annually distributes big sums in prizes to farmers. A official of the trust company said last night that the plan had not yet been formally adopted, and added that he would rather not discuss it at the present time.

According to the report the bank is considering awarding cash prizes yearly of a value of $300. The prizes yearly of a value of $100 E prizes, it is said, would be awarded to Delaware farmers for early choice varieties of cantaloupes, tomatoes, potatoes and other produce.

Judicial Recall For Delaware Man

As a result of recent decisions George N. Davis, circuit Judge of Multnomah county, Oregon is facing the recall. Petitions demanding recall are now in circulation. If signed by 25 per cent of the voters, a recall election will be held.

The cause of this unfavorable publicity is the granting of a series of non-suits in personal injury damage cases.

Mr. Davis will be remembered as student at Delaware College and later as Attorney in Wilmington.

Firemen's Carnival

Pronounced A Success

Due to rain on Saturday evening, it was decided to hold the Fair open on Monday and Tuesday nights of this week. Skeptics of the wisdom of this move were seen moving toward the woods early Monday evening for here came the crowd again. Of all the pleasures of the week, it is doubtful if any were more enjoyed than Monday night.

The Carnival of 1913 is now a part of Newark's history. Although all the reports are not in the Treasurer's reckoning, a net profit of about $2500, the greatest Carnival yet.

Detailed reports will be published in our next issue.

Last night the usual crowd gathered and took recognition to the fact that it was the last night of the season's Carnival. Everybody was in happy spirit. Much interest was manifested in the announcement of the lucky numbers. The fortunate ones follow:

Handkerchief donated by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson was won by Robert Motherall; gold watch, T. W. Patchell; kitchen cabinet, W. Nutter; trip to Niagara Falls, H. Hill; umbrella, Mrs. David Grimes; clock, John Ramsey; box of candy, Tony Martone; pillow, Geo. W. Griffin; electric iron, S. A. Carr; pair of shoes, Chas. P. Steele; lunch cloth, Mrs. Tillie Thomas; bride doll, Herman R. Tyson; cane umbrella, Geo. H. Winters; box candy A. Groome; quilt, Mrs. Heath; image, Fritz Heidman; doll, Agnes Frazer; center piece, Dr. Syphard; china vase, Mrs. W. Koelig; big cake, Amos Osmond; cut glass vase, Mary Young; center piece, Mary Colmery; hand painted bowl Mrs. L. Thomas; embroidered collar, Mrs. McNeal.

A class of candidates was initiated into Diamond State Conclave Imp. O. H. No. 1123, of Newark, last evening. Another class will be taken in next Tuesday evening, July 15. The local conclave was organized last year and includes in its ranks many business and professional men.

Wisdom is knowing what to do next; Skill is knowing how to do it; and Virtue is doing it.
