Downham In Cecil Jail Again

Defies Warning of Elk Mills Property Owner After Breaking Down Fences

Charged with malicious destruction of property and defiance of warnings, Alvin Downham of Elk Mills removed his acquaintance with the Cecil County jail on Saturday.

Downham a few months ago was acquitted of murder in the Centerville court following his arrest in connection with the death of Edward Yeamans, North East taxi driver.

His latest flirtation with the law was recounted by John Lawrence, superintendent of the Baldwin Manufacturing Company plant at Elk Mills. Lawrence, according to reports, said Downham destroyed several panels of fence of the company's property and straightway was served with a terse warning. Downham is then said to have replied that he would tear down as much fence as he thought necessary to work off surplus energy. His arrest followed.

Downham was given a hearing before Magistrate Gove S. Scotten at Elkton and was held in $500 bail for the September term of the Cecil County Circuit Court. Unable to furnish bond he was lodged in the Cecil County jail where he will be held until his case is called unless the bail is forthcoming.

Downham was freed on the charge of murdering Yeamans in the May court of Queen Anne's County at Centreville, Md., after a sensational search for the body of the murdered man. The body was discovered frozen in the ice of a small stream near Elk Mills some time after Yeamans' blood covered taxicab was found in Newark and several days after Downham had been arrested.

Acquitted At Trial

State Police of Delaware figured in trailing the murder car between the time it was last seen with Yeamans and Downham in it and the time it was found. They testified at the trial.

Downham was removed to Baltimore for imprisonment while the case was pending and at his request a change of venue was granted and the trial transferred to Queen Anne's County. A strong case of circumstantial evidence was believed to have been built up against Downham but it failed. Downham did not testify.

SCOLDED, TAKES POISON

Elk Mills Girl in Serious Condition in Hospital

Miss Mildred Ruth, aged 16 years, daughter of Elmer Ruth, of Elk Mills in Union Hospital, Elkton, in a serious condition as the result of having swallowed poison. Grave fears are entertained for her recovery. The girl was granted permission by her parents to take an automobile ride with some boys Sunday. She did not return home until after midnight. She was given a scolding by her parents and then became very indignant because of this reprimand. She went to her room and a short time later her mother heard her groaning. Going to the room she found the girl in agony. She was rushed to the hospital, but physicians are doubtful whether they will be able to save her.

Delaware Editor Makes Dream Pay

Max E. Goetz, president of the Delmarvia Printing and Publishing Company, publishers of the Delmarvia Monthly Review, has invented a burglar-proof window fastener. He received word from his attorney, Charles R. Wright, Jr., of Washington a few days ago, to the effect that he had been granted a patent on the invention. Mr. Goetz will also make application to secure a patent on the invention in Canada.

Mr. Goetz, in speaking about his invention, stated that the idea came to him in a dream a few years ago. The device fastens to the window sash and locks with a key on the inside of the sash, making it impossible for anyone to raise the window intact from either the inside or the outside without the key.

Delawareans Safe In Paris

Foreign Study Group Complete Uneventful Voyage

Friends of the Delaware students who were in the foreign study group which sailed Saturday, July 17, for France, will be interested in a cablegram which was received this morning at the University of Delaware, stating that the party had arrived safely yesterday at noon. The cablegram, which was sent by Prof. Raymond Kirkbride, said that the party was planning sightseeing in Paris today, and tomorrow they would go on to Nancy. He reported that the entire group enjoyed a pleasant voyage.

Miss Dorothy Elizabeth Inderlied, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Inderlied of Bellevue, an honor student from the Women's College, University of Delaware, and Charles L. W. Stein and Fred K. Nevins, both of Seaford, were members from Delaware of the group. The plans for the party, when they left the States, were to the effect that they would remain in Nancy until the opening of the Sorbonne in early October. They will take their Junior year studies at the Sorbonne.

CARS SMASHED UP

Two Coupes Collide On Narrow Bridge Monday Night

Two Ford coupes, owned and operated by Walter Clark of Newark, and Jule Booker of Wilmington respectively collided on a narrow bridge between Newark and Cooch's Bridge about 11 o'clock Monday night.

Three passengers with young Booker were shaken up, cut and bruised, while Clarke and two other occupants of his car were slightly hurt. None were in need of medical attention, according to reports.

The two cars were badly damaged, particularly Booker's. The latter sold the wreck to a Christiana man for $50.00 it is reported. Two girls, said to be students at the Summer School here, figured in the smashup, but were not seriously hurt.

It's not so much who knew "Susie" as who in Sam Hill knew "Susie" was in the Hanark Theatre here last spring is probably the puzzle confronting Louis Handloff, Councilman, merchant and movie proprietor of Newark.

Mr. Handloff has been recently served with a summons to the United States District Court in Wilmington in a suit instituted against him by Shapiro and Bernstein, New York music publishers, charged that he permitted to be sung in his theatre

ACCORDING to reliable information gained by The Post yesterday, negotiation are under way for the purchase of a farm near Ruthby, east of Newark, where a fireworks plant will be put in operation.

Clarence W. Perkins and Alberto Cimorosi, both of Elkton, are chief figures in the new organization, it is reported. Confirmation of the deal could not, however, be secured today. Mr. Perkins, candidate for Clerk of the Court at Elkton, is prominently identified with business men in Cecil County. Mr. Cimorosi was formerly connected with the Victory Sparkler Company and is said to own patents for manufacturing several types of fuses and other fireworks.

It is expected that formal announcement of the property purchase and plans of the new company will be made within a few days.

Plans In Readiness For Farm Surveys

Many Expect To Join Pilgrimage Over Northern County Farms Next Tuesday

Director C. A. McCue, of the University of Delaware, will be one of the main speakers during the farm business tour to be held in northern New Castle County, Tuesday, August 3. The farms to be visited are owned by P. T. Pierson & Son, Edw. Pierson & Son and Lewis Clark, all located in the Hockessin area. Director McCue is well informed relative to farm management problems and is an authority in the production of orchard fruits. He is therefore eminently fitted to discuss farm problems as they affect the farmers of northern New Castle County. Prof. H. R. Tolley, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, will also be one of the speakers. Prof. Tolley has made farm management studies in many of the different states. Other speakers will be J. D. Reynolds, President of State Federation of Farm Bureaus, Dr. C. L. Benner, Economist; Dr. T. F. Manns, Plant Pathologist, and H. S. Palmer, Extension Poultryman, all of the University of Delaware. The tour is held under the direction of the Extension Service of the University of Delaware in cooperation with the agricultural organizations of the county. R. O. Bausman, of the Extension Service, is directly in charge of the event. He has completed an organization covering the entire northern portion of the county which should assure an attendance of more than 150 farmers.

Mr. H. L. Dilworth, Chairman of the Agricultural Committee of the State Bankers' Association, has extended an invitation to the officials of each bank of the county to attend the event. It is Mr. Dilworth's (Continued on Page 8.)

ELDER EUBANKS BURIED

Six Ministers Speak at Services Last Week

The funeral services of Elder Eubanks on Wednesday afternoon at Welsh Tract were largely attended by friends not only from Newark, but from Baltimore, Wilmington, Philadelphia and lower Delaware and Maryland. Six Baptist ministers were present and each spoke briefly. They were: Elders J. T. Rowe, Baltimore; H. C. Ker, Delmar; C. W. Vaughn, Hopewell, New Jersey; Horace Lefferts, Leesburg, Virginia; George Ruston, Kelly's Corner, New York; and Lester Dodson, Rutherford, New Jersey. These visiting elders acted as pall-bearers.

DRIVING TO MAINE

Norris N. Wright starts tomorrow for Kennebunk Beach, Maine, to arrange for the arrival of his family there late this week to begin a month's stay in that resort. Mr. Wright will return by train in a few days and will join his family late next month.

Sell Garage To Wilmington Firm

Strahorn Building Purchased by Wilmington Auto Co. For Newark Branch; Begin Alterations Soon

Purchase by the Wilmington Company of the Strahorn garage on East Main street near Choate and immediate remodeling of the building, was announced yesterday by the real estate department of the Farmers Trust Company, which closed the deal.

Rumors of a contemplated sale of the business by C. W. Strahorn, formerly of Newark, were given more credence by Mr. Strahorn's recent visit here. Upon taking possession, the Wilmington firm will install an agency for Buick and Chevrolet automobiles in Newark, together with an enlarged repair shop. Possession will be given August 15th.

Bayard Miller, lessee of the garage for over a year and agent for Studebaker cars here, has not announced his plans for the future. He was served with a removal notice this week and as soon as arrangements are made, workmen will begin alterations.

To Change Interior

President J. F. Porter and Treasurer Hodges of the Wilmington Auto Company, who represented their firm in the transaction were in Newark a few days ago. According to them, a new showroom will be built into the garage, occupying about three-quarters of the street front. The present office will be moved back and a new entrance for cars cut through the front near the Lovett store. This, according to the officials, will give adequate display space for new cars, a feature of their proposed plans. Additional changes in the repair department will also be made before the garage is formally opened, it is reported.

When completed, it will be the only complete branch of the Wilmington Auto Co. outside the city.

The garage, an attractive brick building 60 feet by 150 was built several years ago by Mr. Strahorn, who conducted a Studebaker agency and repair shop until about two years ago.

Local People Visit Jersey Towns on Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Blackwell of this town, Miss Minnie Matthews and Ralph Van Pelt of North East were guests of Mrs. Cora Day, also of North East, on a motor trip through New Jersey last Sunday. The trip was a most interesting and instructive one for a one-day ride. It led across the wonderful new bridge from Philadelphia to Camden, through Pemberton, Moorestown, Toms River, and Lakehurst to Pine-wald. Returning, the party stopped at Lakehurst, where they saw the "Los Angeles" in her hangar, the largest in the world, and once the home of the "Shenandoah"; then through Haddonfield, Haddon Heights and Philadelphia to the Wissahickon Drive.

Pine-wald, mentioned above, is a coast resort in the making and most interesting to motorists. It is the seventy-ninth city to be planned and built by B. W. Sangor. It is estimated that it will take seven years to build the city. A force of workmen has already worked there sixteen months. The streets are beautifully laid out in the forest of pines and a community house has been built. The site is on Barnegat Bay, the nearest ocean resort from Philadelphia.

GIVE SOUVENIR COINS

In making change for patrons in the purchase of tickets and in Baltimore and Ohio dining cars, ticket agents and stewards are giving out "Stone Mountain Memorial" half-dollars at their face value, as souvenirs. These special coins were purchased from the Stone Mountain Memorial Association, at one dollar a piece, by the Baltimore and Ohio Company, for distribution among its patrons.

ADDRESSED STUDENTS

Dr. H. V. Holloway, State Superintendent of Schools, addressed the students of Summer School on Tuesday of last week.

Teddy, Jr., Calls On Old Sergeant When He Wants Things Accomplished

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt stood on a little knoll overlooking the Plattsburg target range recently. He smiled. Below him Young America, as represented by sixteen hundred rookies of the Citizens' Military Training Camp, was getting its first introduction to the long-barreled rifle of our forefathers.

Sharply a Springfield spoke upon the still air. The firing grew brisker. The rattle of musketry filled the peaceful hills surrounding the camp and echoed across the waters of Lake Champlain. With furious speed, targets were lowered, examined and raised. Fluttering signal flags waggled the results.

Enter Murphy

Watching the tell-tale flags, the Colonel's smile altered. It became less expansive. Finally he was heard to say something that sounded like, "Awful."

Then: "Sergeant Murphy!" he barked.

Up came a weather-beaten veteran in a field uniform. He halted; the two saluted stiffly. A few terse phrases from the Colonel, another stiff salute, and the soldier strode back to the firing point, determination apparent in the swing of his arms, the set of his head.

That tableau strikingly recalled another meeting which occurred nine years ago in France. The First Division, A. E. F., was poised to launch America's opening blow in the World War. It was in the Sommeville sector, and then, as today, Roosevelt was in command and "Jimmy" Murphy one of his sergeants. Both were with the 26th Regular Army Infantry, the same outfit that now garrisoned Plattsburg, and their regiment had been picked as the first to "move in."

War Days

Zero hour approached. There was no sign of wavering in the ranks, but it was decided that capture of a prisoner would be an excellent tonic for the morale of the regiment.

Then it was that Colonel Roosevelt sent for Murphy. Briefly he outlined the situation. His instructions were equally brief.

"Sergeant, take three men and go out and bring in a prisoner. Keep looking until you find one."

That was all. Murphy saluted and without a word went back to his platoon. But the 26th got its prisoner. And today stowed away in the ancient service locker which has followed Sergeant Murphy in his soldiering in many quarters of the globe, there is a Distinguished Service Cross. This the Sergeant on rare occasions exhibits when he wishes to impress newly-joined recruits with the fame and glory of his old regiment. As for his own reputation Murphy needs nothing more than his stern, straight eye to defend that.

Pays Tribute

Colonel Roosevelt today paid tribute to his old Sergeant. He said Murphy has undertaken every mission, from the most exacting to the most trifling, with the same thoroughness and confidence. It's all the same to him whether its capturing an enemy trench or halting the sinful waste of good service ammunition by enthusiastic young rookies.

Blue Sky Advertising Methods On Shore, Says Official; Post Reward

Fraudulent advertising, unethical tactics and dishonest "boom" methods undertaken in connection with real estate advertising or operations on the Del-Mar-Va Eastern Shore will be killed in their embryo state, for action has been taken by the Del-Mar-Va Eastern Shore Association, supported by the Eastern Shore of Virginia Chamber of Commerce, to nip such operations in the bud.

The Del-Mar-Va Eastern Shore Association has posted a reward of $100.00 to be paid anyone furnishing information upon which prosecution may be based against individuals or corporations who are deliberately misleading the public in matter of real estate on the Del-Mar-Va Peninsula.

A. T. Hickman, chairman of the Business Betterment Committee of the Eastern Shore of Virginia Chamber of Commerce, in support of the action taken by the Del-Mar-Va Association, has announced that his committee is taking immediate steps to give protection to legitimate business and to uncover and prosecute those who are in any manner using unscrupulous methods to promote their own interests and using the Del-Mar-Va Eastern Shore as a field for their operations.

Harvey J. Hill, Executive Director of the Association, discussing the situation said:

"It is one of the foremost duties of the Association to prevent dishonest, unfair and unscrupulous practices and no effort will be spared to protect the Peninsula against such.

"We are calling on every member of our Association to inform headquarters if they obtain knowledge which indicates that any unscrupulous practices are under way or if they

George Wythe, Signer

"He might truly be called the Cato of his country, without the avarice of the Roman, for a more disinterested person never lived."

Thomas Jefferson wrote thus of George Wythe, one of the Virginia signers of the Declaration of Independence. The one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the famous document, to which fifty-six men affixed their signatures, is now being celebrated at the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition in Philadelphia.

Wythe was the son of a wealthy planter and an exceptionally intelligent mother under whose instruction he learned Greek and Latin and gained some knowledge of mathematics and the sciences. He received further training at William and Mary College.

Before he attained his majority are being planned. We are posting a reward of $100.00 for such information and I believe that every citizen will take it on himself to aid the Peninsula communities in fighting this very serious evil."

Mr. Hill added that the Del-Mar-Va Eastern Shore Association will take definite steps in prosecuting those found violating the law in any manner as outlined, and where actual violation of the law is not established, but where intent is discovered, such schemes will be squashed with widespread publicity.

both parents died and he was left in possession of a large fortune. From this time until he was thirty years of age he lived a life of dissipation and extravagance. The course of his life was changed when he began to study law under John Lewis, an eminent practitioner, and he rose to the front rank of the Virginia Bar.

George Wythe was a leader in the House of Burgesses until the Revolution. He was a member of the committee which drew up the remonstrance to the House of Commons on the proposed Stamp Act. Wythe was responsible for framing the last-named paper but it so far exceeded the demands of his colleagues in boldness and truth that it was viewed as bordering on treason and accepted only after much modification.

The Virginian was appointed a delegate to the Continental Congress in 1775 where he signed the Declaration of Independence.

He lost almost all of his property during the Revolution, and he helped out his fortunes by accepting a professorship of law in William and Mary College, which he held from 1779-89. Among his pupils were two presidents of the United States, a Chief Justice and a number of other eminent Americans.

On the reorganization of the Court of Equity, Wythe was made sole Chancellor and held the office for more than twenty years. Later he emancipated his slaves and gave them means of subsistence. He died in Richmond, Virginia, in June, 1806.

The Men of Power

"We have today a thousand men who can tell people what to do where we have one who can touch the music, the dance, the hurrah, the cry, the worship in them and make them want to do something. The hero is the man who makes people want to do something and strangely and subtly, all through the blood, while they watch him, he makes them believe they can."

Building Memorials

(From Christian Science Monitor)

So frequently is announcement made of gifts of large sums by persons of wealth for the founding of some needed public enterprise or for the support or extension of institutions already established, that the casual reader of the day's news gives to the matter little more than passing notice. Heretofore the practice of setting apart some considerable portion of one's fortune for public purposes was unusual, except by testamentary bequest. Now it is the effort of many thus generously disposed to see to it that their reasonable wishes regarding the uses to which their gifts are to be put are carried out while they are present to execute their own self-imposed trusts.

It would be impossible, by the employment of any merely superficial process, to estimate the beneficial influences of this newer method of procedure. But it must appear that the results possible when the expenditure of these sums, often large, is made under the direction of the donor, are bound to be more satisfactory to all concerned than where years have elapsed between the indication of the original purpose and the time of fulfillment. This, however, is not the most important consideration. The voluntary distribution of wealth by the possessors of large fortunes has, during recent years, done more to correct, in the public thought, the fear of wealth as an instrument or agency of evil, than could have been accomplished in any other way which human ingenuity might have devised.

One easily recalls, if he happened to be in touch with social and industrial conditions a quarter of a century ago, or thereabouts, when men of great wealth began an organized campaign ostensibly for the purpose of deflating their fortunes, that they were regarded somewhat askance. It was even charged that some of these were seeking to make a peace offering to the public in propitiation for some real or fancied offense committed in the accumulation of their possessions. But expiation, even though sought, is never gained by such means as this.

The admission is compelled, as one observes the purposes to which much of the wealth thus devoted to the public welfare has been put, that those who have given and those in whose behalf the gifts were made have shared in the benefits. This could not be so if wrong or selfish motives prompted the benefactions. The law of just compensation does not automatically reverse itself. Mankind cannot be blessed by the bestowal of that which is given without right or for selfish purposes.

Throughout the length and breadth of Christendom today one beholds, if he will but look, the tangible evidences that the truth of the immortal maxim, "It is more blessed to give than to receive," has been proved and established in the hearts of men. This realization has been emphasized, perhaps, because some have built schools and colleges and endowed them in perpetuity; some have built homes for the homeless and supplied them with food and bodily comforts; others have laid out and beautified broad streets and highways, and still others have planted or preserved magnificent groves and forests and laid out parks and playgrounds and opened them to all comers.

But those who have thus given have given only of something which they had that might meet a need which they recognized. They have not given more, however, than those who have made as willing sacrifices in numberless other ways. The monuments which men and women build for themselves are not all of wood, or bricks, or stone, or even of estates, or groves, or paved highways. These physical manifestations of generosity and thoughtfulness are but the tangible forms which express the thought behind them.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED

WE quote from the first issue of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, printed in the year 1836, a part of an advertisement of the Clermont Boarding Academy.

For Greek, Latin, French, Spanish, German and Drawing—each $5 per quarter additional."

"Downing Street"

Downing street, in which the prime minister of England has his residence, was named after Sir George Downing, "a sinner with all times and changes, skilled in the common cant, and a preacher occasionally." He was sent by Cromwell to Holland as resident there. After the restoration he espoused the king's cause and was knighted and elected M. P. in 1661.

ALL KINDS OF PEOPLE

"The Woman Whose Life Was Narrow"

She had married young, and her life had been all work and no play. They had always lived in the same little house. At first, it was not so bad; but now the neighborhood was rough and poor. There were four boys and a baby girl, tiny and weak. The mother never got far from home; each day was work, just like the day before, and she was missing everything worthwhile.

All this I heard from her sister, who had been my guest. Would I go with her to call, to see if I could suggest something that she, my friend, might do to make the life of her sister broader, brighter?

I always "go slow" on these broadening projects, realizing that many persons would think my own life narrow; realizing, too, that many of us who pigeon-hole ourselves as "broad" do not stop to think that any such mental attitude immediately restricts. Yet I went to see the woman, sympathizing, wondering if I really might not help.

I found the home as her sister had pictured it, very humble, in a section of the city that is indeed unlovely. But what else did I see? A side-yard made glorious and beautiful with the blooms of old-fashioned flowers. There was hope, thought I. Then the family. The devotion of the four boys to their mother and to the baby sister was a joy to see. A lump came into my throat. The mother seemed not for one moment to sense any feeling of pity for her. I was glad she did not.

She talked intelligently of her little community, of the church and of the school. I could see that she was tied down, as women say, that her neighbors were not of her kind, but I learned that she did not waste her strength and sweetness in rebellion. She was an individual in the community, she was really reaching, in her quiet way, problems in the inner circle which we could not reach from an outer one.

Before we left, we were shown the flowers and given huge bouquets. We learned that these neighbors whom we thought to be undesirable had, during the previous summer, bought fifty dollars worth of these flowers. The money went to a foreign relief fund. As we stood there, I noted that boys, passing the house, invariably looked that way and spoke respectfully, and that she called them by name.

As we came home, my friend put her question: "What would you do?" And my answer came almost as a rebuke. "Do? Why let her alone. She means more in her humble walk, than perhaps do you or I in ours. If you want to do anything, just hold up her hands, spiritually. Never put an idea of self-pity into her head."

A life may be narrow; at the same time it may run very deep.

John Bull's Frisky Season

IVOR BROWN, in the Baltimore Evening Sun

August is England's holiday month. Our schools do not enjoy an immense summer vacation, enabling the more prosperous braves and squaws to cross a continent or two with a papoose strapped on the luggage. Having only six or seven weeks to spare, the English family of the middle class engages rooms at a seaside resort which can be reached in a train journey of three hours and at a cost of some $5 per head. All the same sort of people suddenly deposit themselves in the same sort of week in the same sort of place. These August assemblies are all very jolly and accustomed and reassuring. Anywhere there is no fuss with passports, visas, currencies and barbarous tongues. Shrimpton becomes home-town. Everybody just plays tennis and golf all day instead of playing only in the evenings and week-ends. When the families bundle themselves back in September they all meet at the suburban tennis club and say they've had a really wonderful change.

That talk of change may be a piece of social usage that the moralist can sniffily dismiss as humbug. But no amount of superior persons will be able to show that the complete migration of Surbiton to Shrimpton or of Oldham to Blackpool has not been a complete success. The thing is proved by the fact that the same families go to the same sea beach, play the same ball games and listen to the same troupes of pierrots for years on end. No body of people can be happy for long if it lacks a code and a tradition. The English bourgeoisie are intensely happy people and not least because they have got their frisky season as disciplined and detailed and codified as a railroad time-table.

There on the Shrimpton shore stands the Esplanade Hotel, in which the father on holiday can rely on having his dinner served just as badly as his own cook could manage it. Peep into the lounge of the Esplanade one evening and you are compelled, in adoration of that blissful scene, to utter the title of the play, "They Knew What They Wanted." There they all are; wearing just as much evening dress as will satisfy their sense of security without bordering on the starch or the vulgarly splendid. There is the bridge table, the old lady with her sewing and the young girl by the radio set, the illustrated papers and the hint of whisky soon to emerge. No wonder that the hotel-keeper boldly advertises "a home from home." He knows the basic truth of all English life—namely, that familiarity breeds content.

There stands on the dining tables a menu card, which has been supplied gratis to advertise a mineral water. Should you inadvertently invade the Esplanade refectory before the gong has called you to its ritual you may discover a melancholy waiter (who at other seasons is the oppressive servitor of young Oxford or Cambridge), using that card as a toothpick. Why blame him? Since English refinement rejects the salutary toothpick as an object of public use and display, it merely drives the healthy-habited person to effect the necessary clearances with improvised weapons. There are bus tickets; there are menu cards. These, indeed, are to be little other justification for the menu cards at the Esplanade Hotel. The Esplanade public knows exactly what it wants and gets it. If the diet sheet were ever altered, they would immediately leave and seek an establishment which had a proper reverence for the rules.

Shall we follow the happy Esplanaders through their gravy-soup, synthetic codfish, roast beef of Old Argentine, sodden potatoes and cabbage that is coming up for the third time in a sea of green waters? Shall we proceed to the stewed rhubarb, the blanchmange, the Manibotan Cheddar cheese, the chill and swarthy coffee? We shall not. We shall merely note the jaws in action below a score of masks that register intense satisfaction in the calm, confident Anglo-Saxon manner. We shall reflect that these diners knew what they wanted. Their ambition runs as little to local produce, the creams and curds and crackling bacon of pastoral England, as it runs to the kickshaws and composts of the alien world.

I merely record; I do not mock. Bliss is a serious matter and it is the proper business of mankind to achieve it. But students of the social scene, while they approve the English achievement in simply picking up their entire domestic ritual and dumping it intact each August upon some sea coast village, must admit the superior energy and audacity of the American who first of all crosses 3,000 miles of watery desert and has no sooner glimpsed London than he talks of slipping over to Budapest with as little sense of an adventure as stirs the Londoner when he books a ticket to Brighton. For my own part, I stand by my own people. My own idea of Europe is to stop at Boulogne, in refusing locomotory holidays, the Angles are on the side of the angels.

But when I see those who differ from this restful view put their theory into furious practice I am fully capable of wonder. I hereby salute the pilgrim fathers, mothers and children who are now preparing to sit up all night in a stifling second-class carriage in the company of the itinerant Latins, whose secretions of saliva so far outrun their capacity to retain it, I do not take my hat off to France, but most certainly I raise it to those who intrust their lives to a French railway. I also bow to those who in questing after the glories of Spain are ready to establish intimate relations with the bedbug and other lastling enchantments of the Middle Ages.

And so these intrepids will go steaming home to Grand Rapids long after a September morn has seen the British suburbanites fold up their bathing tents and creep serenely back to Streatham. The old English noble used to manage, with much cracking of coach whips and wine bottles, the Grand Tour. But in this matter of mileage-eating we are degenerate folk, not sharing the American appetite for the Grand Hike. I have just been reading your Mr. Sinclair Lewis' novel, "Mantrap," and I felt abashed. What English lawyer would ever make so noble a fool of himself as Ralph Prescott in this book. What dapper little attorney from Bedford Row would regard the Ghost Squaw river as all in the day's hike? Our sense of fluminal escapade is satisfied by paddling Madeleine home to Thames Ditton. We may occasionally think of the Big Outdoors, but we don't see it quite as big as all that.

So leave us to our Esplanade Hotel. We mean to be happy this August, and we don't miss our aim. We go on playing our golf in the same old careless way, and when your Mr. Hagen says we're too darned lazy to play well we know that he's darned well right; also that, in another sense, he's darned well wrong, because we still intend to keep the driver as a joystick instead of making it a pedagogic cane. I am well aware that, as civilized beings, we ought to be intolerant of all the sudden things we eat, and that is why I am rather shy of August at the Esplanade Hotel for my own particular vacation. But I am still more shy of the bedclothes in the Balkans, and I feel no impulse to hear the vocal Italian singing "Funiculi" at the bottom of the funicular railway. That is where one's Englishness finally bubbles out—at the railway ticket bureau in August. "Two to Shrimpton." He-men indeed! And in the Frisky season!

And at the same time little Miss Selina K. Sprott, of Seattle, will be inquiring of the station master at Brondol whether she must change here to get a lift on the cattle train to Crzyńsk, so she can get down the Vistula by coal barge and see that Angles are on the side of the angels.

WORTH SOMETHING

Government data from several thousand farms show that the value of the family living from the farm at farm prices is approximately one-third of the cost of living of farm families, and two-thirds of the cost of food, fuel, and house rent. It is one-ninth as much as the farm receipts and one-third as much as the farm income.

SALT

Ordinary cows in milk require about one ounce of salt a day, while heavy producers need more. Many dairymen mix it with the grain, adding from one to two pounds to each 100 pounds of concentrates. In addition, salt is kept accessible so the cows can take more if they desire.

THE HAPPY MEDIUM

Forty years of sound agricultural planning and progress have revolutionized the economic and social life of the Danish people. From a depressed state of peasant agriculture, which threatened the welfare and prosperity of the whole Nation, Denmark stands today as the world's foremost agricultural country in the scientific organization of her production and marketing. Her people, rural as well as urban, appear contented and prosperous. Neither extreme wealth nor extreme poverty exists.

SEE ALL

Progressive farmers keep an eye on both domestic and foreign market conditions so as to measure competition in marketing staple crops.

SAVE CALVES

Calf diseases result mainly from filth and carelessness. Cleanliness is necessary in feed, pens, bedding, and stalls or other utensils.

SOME SEED IT IN SUMMER

Late summer seeding of red clover is successful in much of the southern and eastern part of the clover area. The use of high-quality American grown seed is strongly advised. Much of the imported seed is unfit for use in the United States.

HAY KILLERS

In growing a crop of alfalfa the worst animal pests are gophers, ground squirrels, prairie dogs, and mice. This is particularly true in the western half of the United States. The best means of holding them in check are poisoning and trapping.

"INSIDE" INFORMATION

A pinch of curry powder is sometimes liked with lima beans.

Turn cakes upside down when they are taken from the oven and allow them to cool partially. Remove from pan before the cake reaches room temperature or has a chance to sweat.

Tomatoes fresh, raw, or canned are a good source of vitamins A, B, and C. This is the reason that child specialists often recommend that young children and sometimes babies be given tomato juice. It is a good plan also to include tomatoes often in the family menu.

Serve all lamb dishes piping hot, on hot plates, because many people object to the texture of the fat that has hardened as it has cooled. Tart jellies and tasty sauces also "cut" the fat and tone down the pronounced flavor of the meat.

To win in a primary these days a candidate must be a chameleon that looks wet to the dries, dry to the wets, like a friend of the farmer in the country and like a friend of the consumer in the cities.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Historic Whiteman's Grove To Be Scene Of Annual Harvest Home On August 12th

Full Day's Program For Big Summer Reunion Announced; Band, Sports, Big Dinner And Speaking Will Feature Event

Announcement of particular interest to residents of New Castle County and points in lower Chester County Pa., that the annual Harvest Home Picnic at Whiteman's Grove, about three miles north of Newark, will take place August 12th, was made early this week.

Harvest Home at Whiteman's has been an event of importance for three generations and has never failed to draw large crowds of people. Farmers and their families from a radius of twenty miles came regularly to this party and look forward to it every summer with renewed interest.

Full Program

The Ebenezer M. E. Church will again have charge of the affair this year, and officials have prepared an unusually full program for the day. The speaking program follows:

At 10.30 an address by Mr. Richard R. Wood, of Philadelphia, Pa., on "Military Training."

At 2.30 Rev. D. E. Ewing of Baltimore will speak on "Prohibition."

At 3.30 Mr. J. Howard Marshall, Jr., of Philadelphia, Pa., subject, "The Challenge of Peace to Youth."

At 7.45 Rev. Frank Herson of Newark will speak.

Band Engaged

Music throughout the day will be furnished by the crack Ferris Industrial band. There will also be sports for young and old, probably a baseball game between two picked teams, and a great deal of politics discussed. In fact, Harvest Home is a favorite hunting ground for politicians and office seekers. They never fail to attend.

The chief feature, however, in the minds of many, will be the big dinner served at noon in the grove. Corn on the cob, home made applesauce, chicken and all the delicacies of the season will grace long tables under the trees. Later in the afternoon a supper will be served. Both meals will be handled by the ladies of Ebenezer Church. Fancy articles, pastries and novelties will also be on sale.

OBITUARY

JOHN ELLIOTT

John Elliott, aged 83 years, who had been in poor health for some months, died on Friday at his home on Delaware avenue. His wife, Mrs. Frances Elliott, died early last spring. He lived in Newark practically all his life, for many years in the old Elliott house on Main street now owned by the University of Delaware. His only son Lee Elliott died many years ago. The funeral was held at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from the undertaking parlors of E. C. Wilson with interment in Head of Christiana Cemetery.

Women to Be Active

The new Willys-Knight sedan, to be given away on closing night, is in town and will be a prominent feature. The merry go-round and other amusements are scheduled to arrive in a day or two.

While adjacent towns have been unfortunate in their carnivals this year in a great many cases, it is confidently expressed that Newark's party will keep up the high standard of excellence maintained during many years of activity.

Beetle Quarantine on Empty Baskets

At a meeting of the State Board of Agriculture, Thursday, July 8, 1926, at Dover, the following quarantine was passed, supplementary to the Japanese Beetle Quarantine, which went into effect May 15, 1926:

"All empty fruit baskets and packages must be inspected before coming down the State from within the area quarantined against the Japanese Beetle. This quarantine effective on and after July 15, 1926."

"All trucks having empty baskets will report to the Japanese Beetle Inspectors on Fourth street, between King and Walnut streets, Wilmington, Delaware. The Inspectors will then accompany them to Fourth and Walnut streets, where there is a space provided for the inspection of the baskets, and permits issued."
