New lighting makes the former St. Thomas Episcopal Church on Elkton Road a dramatic focal point at the entrance to the western end of downtown Newark. Originally consecrated in 1845, the building was restored and turned into lecture space by the University of Delaware in 1997. Bomb threat bill arises from Glasgow HS meeting

By SHARON R. COLE

JUVENILES making bomb threats could be spending at least six months behind bars while their parents face a $10,000 fine if a proposed bill becomes law in the General Assembly.

Co-sponsor state representative Stephanie Ulbrich (R-Newark West) said a second offense could result in five years in jail.

"We have to do everything possible to create a safe environment in our schools," said State Representative Timothy Boulden (R-Newark).

The bill proposal was conceived by State Representative William A. Oberle Jr. (R-Beechers Lot) and other area legislators after a discussion regarding bomb threats was held at Glasgow High School this week.

According to school board member Charles Mullen, there have been 13 bomb threats at Glasgow High School since January.

State senator Dorinda Connor (R-Penn Acres) said four of the bomb threats came during the recent state-testing week. "Students had to leave the school and go back in and finish the test."

Over 200 parents attended the meeting to hear comments by School Superintendent Nicholas Fischer, Glasgow principal Robert Anderson, Attorney General Jane Brady and state legislators.

Few comments on parking lot purchase

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

DESPITE earlier complaints that residents did not have a chance to address the city's plan to purchase land for a new downtown parking lot, only one person asked to comment this week.

Albert Porach of East Park Place told Newark city council on Monday night that he did not think the city needed the lot.

"None of the reports (done by consultants), none of the public forums on parking...recommend purchase of a parking lot," said Porach.

"This proposal should have gone through the Parking Committee - I bet we would have had plenty of good criticism if it did like it should have."

As an alternative, Porach suggested the city lease the top level of the three-story University of Delaware

Skills-based program causes confusion

By MARY E. PETZAK

PARENTS from Downes Elementary School said they are hopeful the Christina District School board will allow them to retain the school's current curriculum grouping plan and even permit other District schools to use it.

Connie Wright, mother of a Downes student, said many parents at the school and others in the District are confused by the program and terminology used to explain it. "Some call it ability grouping but it is based on the skills your child knows and not on IQ," she explained. "Achievement is the better terminology than ability."

Wright said those in favor of the present grouping want the needs of all children to be met. "Why should a child who has trouble with basic addition and subtraction be forced to move on to multiplication?" Wright questioned.

Woman charged in execution-style Oglethorpe murder

NEW CASTLE COUNTY Police arrested a 19-year-old woman and charged her with the execution-style murder of an Oglethorpe man on Saturday, April 24. At deadline, police had not located the murder weapon believed to be a .38 caliber handgun.

County Police responded to the victim's residence in Hillside Heights after fellow employees called police when he did not show for work. Officers found 59-year-old William McGinley deceased inside his home and later learned he had been murdered.

On Monday, April 26, at approximately 3 p.m., detectives learned three female subjects were attempting to use a gift certificate which was purchased with the victim's credit card at a store in the Concord Mall. Numerous officers converged on the mall and interviews with the subjects' associates ultimately lead detectives to apprehension and arrest of Adrienne Young around 3 a.m. on April 27 when she returned to her home in the community of Londonderry.

The investigation revealed McGinley recently sold an insurance policy to Young and the two were friendly. Police determined that Young allegedly ordered McGinley to his knees and shot him in the back of the head at close range. After he fell to the ground, a second shot was fired into his head.

Young was charged with murder in the first degree, robbery in the first degree, and possession of a deadly weapon during the commission of a felony. Anyone with information is asked to call detectives at 571-7924.

Deer crashes through deli door

By SHARON R. COLE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

A FEMALE DEER crashed through the front door of Malin's Market on Route 896 on April 21 as witnesses watched in awe.

"I was standing by the lottery machine, and she came through the glass," said co-owner James Malin. "It sounded like a bomb and I was ready to hit the dirt because of everything that has been going on lately (with school violence)."

According to Malin, the deer came through the glass like it was a screen door and then proceeded to run frantically around the aisles.

"She ran up and down for at least two or three minutes," he said.

Malin explained that one of his customers chased it around the aisles and was able to unbolt the back door and open it so the animal could escape.

"Officers were unable to locate the deer after searching the nearby area," reported Public Information Officer Mark Farrall, who said Newark Police responded at about 7:45 p.m.

Newark resident Felix Cartagena saw the deer heading south on Route 896 earlier before running into the McDonald's parking lot and finally darting across the road into the Market. "At first I thought it was a dog, but it was too big to be a dog," said Cartagena who was driving on Route 896 at the time.

Only a few customers were in Malin's along with the owner and two of his employees. "Thank God it wasn't dinner time when this happened because this place gets full," said Malin.

No one was hurt although Malin said the deer must have suffered severe cuts because of the blood and hair left behind. Malin was able to get the glass in his door replaced right away allowing business to resume as normal on Friday.

Lettercarriers here hope for 10 tons of food

By SHARON R. COLE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

MAIL CARRIERS throughout the area hope to make big deposits at the Food Bank of Delaware during the coming week.

From May 3 to 8, donations of non-perishable food can be made at all post offices where containers will be provided in the lobbies. On Saturday, May 8, residents can leave items at their home mailbox for postal workers to pick up in the sixth annual food drive of the National Association of Letter Carriers.

Paul Himmelstein, local food drive coordinator, reported Newark residents donated over 42,400 pounds of food last year to the statewide total of 194,650 pounds.

"We expect to get over 200,000 pounds this year," said Jennifer Leister, community projects coordinator for the Food Bank.

Leister explained that because of

More than four million pounds of food were shipped in and out of the Food Bank of Delaware warehouse off Route 72 last year.

new programs implemented by the Food Bank and recent welfare reform, the Food Bank has become more visible, and necessary, in the community.

One of the new programs, Life Skills Initiative, is a six-to-eight week course designed to improve the food and nutrition skills of low-income persons receiving food assistance. Participants learn how to manage a food budget and do comparative shopping while also taking food home for their families.

More traditional Food Bank programs include emergency food closets, brown bag clubs and sites in the community where people can come to eat.

Without visiting the food bank's warehouse, it is hard to imagine its size or the massive amounts of food being shipped in and out of the facility. Through 200 non-profit organizations and churches, the Food Bank distributed almost four million pounds of food to Delaware residents last year.

All the food collected by letter carriers will be transported to the Food Bank where it is sorted into categories by volunteers who examine every item for leakages, cracks and openings. After the food is determined to be safe, it is shelved to be distributed later.

Not all items are food. Household products are also popular donations from area businesses.

Leister said that the demand for food is greater at this time of the year because donations are low. "People are not thinking about hunger as much when it's not the holidays," she explained.

Thanks to the growing support from the community and extra funding, the Food Bank also plans to create a more permanent facility for member agencies in southern Delaware. Currently, the only major food warehouse in the state is located in the Delaware Industrial Park off Route 72.

No taping of executive sessions

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

FOR THE SECOND consecutive year, city council voted not to record its executive sessions.

At the board's annual organizational meeting April 20, councilmember Karl Kalbacher proposed an amendment that the City Secretary record the executive sessions on audio tape and retain custody of the audio tape, or verbatim transcripts of the audio tape.

Kalbacher said he thought audio tapes and transcripts would "give a better understanding" of the meeting if they needed to revisit the issues.

Councilmember Gerald Grant noted Planning Commission minutes were verbatim and he wasn't convinced they provided more clarity.

According to City Secretary Susan Lamblack, prior to 1993, there was no executive session minutes kept at all. "I told the city solicitor at that time, we really need to do something to comply with state law," said Lamblack.

In April 1993, council began keeping one record of each executive session which is prepared and signed by Lamblack. Members of council and staff who attend the executive session can read them in Lamblack's presence at any time.

Others can request release of the minutes from city council.

Lamblack said an audio tape is used for the convenience of the transcriber. "There is no law that we use it in any situation," she stated.

In 1998, city council voted to stop taping the executive session minutes. "There was a tremendous amount of abuse," said Mayor Hal Godwin, "not just from other councilmembers but from members of the public."

Godwin said people would lift "a sentence or two that they liked from the verbatim minutes" and use it out of context.

In 1997, then-councilmember Nancy Turner instituted a successful lawsuit against the city to release the minutes of a June 9 council executive session. Then-Mayor Ronald Gardner later said he believed the subject minutes contained personnel matters and could not be released.

Those minutes were cited in an ethics complaint, later dismissed by the city Ethics Commission, brought against Godwin by another city resident.

In February of this year, Turner filed a Freedom of Information complaint with the state attorney general, stating that she was "unfairly denied" copies of the minutes of several other council executive sessions. Turner further stated that copies of those minutes were provided to other residents at their request and claimed there was what the attorney general called "a continuing pattern of selective disclosure" in Newark.

According to the city solicitor, Turner verbally requested the minutes from him during the time when the lawsuit was pending, but did not make a formal request to city council as required.

He also noted that, while a councilmember, Turner had full access to the minutes any time she wished to review them in Lamblack's presence.

Lamblack said Turner never followed the procedure for obtaining the release of the executive minutes before or after she left office. "The others made their request to council and were given the minutes," said Lamblack. "Once they got copies, they were available to everyone who subsequently asked for them."

On March 31, the attorney general told Turner that they were closing their file because she had received the minutes.

Since tapes of any council minutes are only kept for six months, councilmembers at the organizational meeting noted that even if there were questions regarding past meetings, the tapes would not be available after that time.

In making his unsuccessful motion for taped executive sessions, Kalbacher said he believed the problems with former councilmembers had been a "unique situation." He further noted that he was not suggesting that anything done by council in the past was not done well.

"No one has ever requested executive session minutes from council and not received them," said Godwin.

3rd annual 24 Challenge Tuesday

QUICK! Take the numbers 3, 8, 23 and 2, and then add, subtract, divide or multiply these numbers to reach the number 24.

This is an example of what 11 students from the Christina School District will be doing at this year's 24 Challenge championship finals. The public is welcome at the event being held at Clayton Hall on the University of Delaware campus on Tuesday, May 4, beginning at 10 a.m.

Students from Bayard, Bancroft, McVey and West Park Place elementary schools are among over 150 students from Delaware schools in the tournament.

Jennifer Montanez, a sixth grade teacher at Bayard, said that students are introduced to the game through their math class at the beginning of the school year.

"Some students (even) use recess time to play the game," Montanez said.

The game is simple. A proctor at each table of four students throws down a card with four numbers on each corner. The students must add, subtract multiply or divide the numbers only once to get an answer of 24. The student who taps on the table first must spit out the answer within 15 seconds.

The game was first introduced in 1988 by inventor Robert Sun who said, "Given the proper tools, math achievement can become a reality for all students." Currently there are 10 editions of the game, including a platinum edition involving fractions and algebra, which reach more than five million children worldwide.

The Bell Atlantic Foundation, together with Bell Atlantic-Delaware Inc., funded the 1999 Delaware State 24 Challenge program providing program materials to 1,500 classrooms.

According to Montanez, the 24 Challenge has not yet been expanded to offer national competition.

Election for school board seat May 11

School board elections for one seat in Nominating District F of the Christina District will be held on Tuesday, May 11. This week, we present profiles of the three candidates running in the election. They were prepared by Newark Post staff writer Sharon R. Cole.

Garrison believes discipline lacking

SCHOOL board challenger Benton L. Garrison Jr. believes there are low performance levels and the lack of discipline throughout schools in the Christina District.

"Why should private be better than public," said Garrison who has researched reports that Delaware's public school testing scores are some of the lowest in the country.

The lieutenant drill instructor for the Department of Corrections, explained, "People don't know enough, even about basic things like our history, countries, city's and capitals which I see as the end result of a poor education."

As a solution to these problems, he wants to reduce class sizes and recruit the best teachers in the area if elected to the board.

For Garrison, these solutions directly correspond to the accountability issues, especially those for teachers, currently facing the district. "If you are going to test them, then pay them more."

Garrison also addressed the accountability of students stating that he agrees with raising their standards, "especially because they will have to deal with their own consequences."

Garrison is also very concerned about the level of discipline allowed in schools today.

He feels that teachers are not given enough control and that Christina schools lack structured systems which would reduce behavioral problems.

"Violence in schools should not be tolerated," he said.

Garrison

Garrison also believes that it is too easy to drop out of school these days and the school board needs to enforce regulations restricting this.

Admitting that he is not a politician, Garrison stated, "I don't believe in flowering things, so if you vote for me, (down-to-earth) is what you are going to get."

Garrison feels that he would be the best candidate because, "I give 110 percent of anything I do. I deeply care about our community and I care about kids."

Garrison works at the Sussex Boot Camp through the Department of Corrections. He is a graduate of Chichester (Pa.) High School and has three children, two in the Christina School District.

He has served in the United States Marine Corps. Currently president of the Robscott Manor Civic Association, he will be joining the State PTA in the year 1999-2000.

Kent still sees work to be done

CONCERN about the ongoing issues of assessment and accountability led incumbent Dr. James Kent to run again for a seat on the Christina District School Board in Nominating District F.

"I think I can still make a good contribution to the things that need to be done in the District," said Kent.

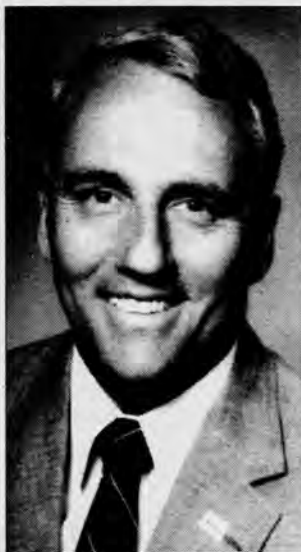

Having served on the Christina School Board for the past 15 years, part of them as board president, Kent had mixed feelings about running for the seat.

On the issue of accountability, Kent is concerned that the current testing schedule, which is a means to evaluating student performance, does not allow for teachers' performance at all grade levels to be measured.

"In fact, it needs to be done so that we have an annual testing program instead of a test at three year (grade) intervals," he said.

Kent also said that the new Delaware standards for students are strictly works in progress. "Once we get them, they are not going to be in concrete," he said.

In addition, he feels that teachers are not getting a level playing field when dealing with children of parents with high and low levels of involvement which may relate to student performance.

Kent

mance.

Having extensive experience both on the board and as an educator, Kent believes that he is the best candidate for the board.

"I have served on the board for 15 years and I'm looking for five more," he said, adding he served as president of the Christina School Board for nine years.

A resident of Brookside Park, he is an associate professor in the department of health and exercise science at the University of Delaware. He also teaches classes at area schools in order to maintain an awareness of what is going with local teachers and students.

Reed favors 'community' schools

FIRST-TIME candidate Christopher Reed said accountability and community-based schooling are his two primary issues in running for a seat on the Christina District School Board.

"There are four main spokes to the wheel of accountability: parents, teachers, administration and students," said Reed.

If elected, he hopes to clarify each person's role regarding accountability which may mean empowering teachers to handle their classrooms on a more individual basis.

Reed said community-based schooling is only fair to students and parents. He specifically pointed out a situation involving students who live in the Route 40 area. "Parents living in Brookmont Farms did not expect their kids to drive past Leasure and Marshall to go to Downes," said Reed.

He also suggested that one way to draw some suburban students to Wilmington is to take a school like Stubbs Elementary, which has a low student population, and turn it into a year round magnet school.

Reed also believes that his experience could help schools save a lot of money with facility engineering.

"I don't see a whole lot in place (on the board) to make the people who operate the facilities be responsible," he said.

He explained that little things such as a malfunctioning air conditioner need to be attended to in a fiscally-responsible manner.

Reed feels that he is the best candidate for the school board because of his experience as a PTA president and his desire to connect with parents and students within the District.

Reed has been active with the Gauger-Cobbs, Stubbs, and Jenny Smith elementary school PTA's over the past 10 years, three of which he served as president at Stubbs. During his term of office there, he was able to recruit 200 additional members within one year.

He believes members of the board should be more available to people within the community and suggests scheduling picnics or gatherings which would allow more interaction.

A graduate of the public school system in Delaware, Reed is an engineering designer at Day & Zimmerman.

He lives in Breezewood with his wife, former state senator Donna Reed.

The couple have two children, one of which attends a school within the district.

Bill sends a 'clear message' to students

► BILL, from 1

Conner said constituents in the Christina District contacted her about the meeting which was originally scheduled as a routine PTA meeting.

According to Connor, Attorney General Jane Brady announced that upon the arrest of students for violent threats, police can now request $5,000 cash bond for the suspect and the person can not be released until a full psychological evaluation is done.

"I fear for our children's safety," Conner, noting that many schools, including Glasgow, do not have an on-site, full-time resource officer to help monitor the kids.

Glasgow does limit access into the school and has full-time monitors to check student I.D.'s.

Connor also said one of the questions posed by students at the meeting was why there has not been a "full-blown" locker search at Glasgow.

Also a co-sponsor of the bill, Connor admitted that she signed on to the proposal, which Oberle has been quoted as calling "draconian," with apprehension.

"We constantly hammer on the parents with a bill like this," Connor said. "The thing is, sometimes there are signs and sometimes there are not, and I don't know if we can hold parents fully accountable every time."

Boulden, however, fully supports the bill and said, "I am glad to be a part of something that sends a clear message to students throughout the state."

Students want to revitalize mediation program

By LAURA SANKOWICH
NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

SOMETIMES people just don't get along and when those people are neighbors life can get a little difficult. To complicate things further, in the town of Newark those neighbors just happen to be students and traditional residents.

That's where Student Mediation Action and Response Team comes in. Modeled after a similar program in College Park, Md., the SMART program was originally developed in 1994 to mediate between students and other residents of Newark to reach a mutually satisfying solution to conflicts that may arise.

In 1996, the Delaware Undergraduate Student Congress revived the group and was given matching contributions of $250 from the University and the city of Newark.

A recent evaluation of the program by DUSC showed SMART has been responsible for conflict resolution on only six occasions since that time, and only 12 of the group's original 28 members remain.

Last week, DUSC president Andy Weidel presented the review as well as possible future plans for the program to the Town and Gown Committee at their quarterly meeting.

Board member Bill Redd suggested removing the word "student" from the name of the program. "I think it would be more palatable for residents to go into a situation where they didn't feel that the cards were stacked," Redd said.

Weidel suggested the Town and Gown Committee adopt SMART as a branch of the committee to lend it credibility and committee members passed a resolution to offer support to the program as needed.

Under the SMART program, instead of notifying authorities, both parties discuss problems and sign a contractual agreement at the conclusion. Members of SMART's conflict resolution team follow up with both parties to ensure that the agreement is being carried out.

According to the group's strategic plan, future endeavors by the group include creating an identity, publicity and obtaining funding for training. DUSC also supports giving course credit to students who complete the mediation training courses required to participate in SMART.

Grouping not used all day at Downes explained that Downes' grouping is used only for math and some language arts classes and not for the entire school day.

Bob Stachnik, parent of a Downes first-grader, said he believes District officials are among the confused. "Assistant superintendent Laverne Terry sent a memo to all principals stating that Downes' method of grouping violated (federal regulations)," said Stachnik. "We found that is just not true and this method is used commonly in the Red Clay School District and elsewhere in Delaware."

Terry's memo of Feb. 25, states: "An Office for Civil Rights report submitted to the U.S. Department of Education...stated 'Christina schools do not and will not group whole classes together by abilities for instruction.'"

The memo further states: "Of course, there are circumstances under which it is appropriate and necessary to instruct students in narrowly focused groups, i.e. skills-based and in-class pull out groups."

After consultation with Downes' principal, District spokesperson John Holton stated this week that he understands that the school uses a mixed grouping plan in which students in Grades 1-4 are assigned to heterogeneous classes for most of the day. "Students are regrouped into different achievement levels and may go to different teachers for language arts and mathematics," Holton said. "These achievement groupings are based on academic tests, standardized tests, grades and teacher recommendations."

Holton said students can move up or down in the groups based on performance and academic progress during the year.

Parent Brett Wagner said he wants a system that works for all children and pointed out that the highest performing groups at Downes are the largest so children who are behind can have more one-on-one attention. "(Also), we are not talking about ability grouping for the entire day," said Wagner. "We are talking about 2 hours and 20 minutes out of a six-and-a-half hour day."

In a letter to School Superintendent Nicholas Fischer, Downes parent and state legislator Timothy Boulden asked the school district to put in writing that Downes' current grouping practice is acceptable and to research broader use of achievement grouping in the whole District.

Seatbelt offense may be upgraded

GOVERNOR Thomas R. Carper joined bill sponsors State Representative William A. Oberle Jr. (R-Beecher's Lot) and State Senator Margaret Rose Henry (D-Wilmington East) in unveiling legislation which would make failure to wear seat belts a primary offense in Delaware.

Current state law allows police to cite motorists for not wearing seat belts only after drivers have been stopped for another violation. House Bill 88 would make failure to wear a seat belt a primary violation, allowing police to be able to stop and cite those who do not comply.

The bill's co-sponsors are State Representatives Richard Cathcart (R-Middletown), Vince Lofink (R-Carvel Farms), and Roger Roy (R-Limestone Hills), and State Senator David Sokola (D-Newark).

According to State Police reports, 81 percent of the motorists killed (25 of 31 fatalities) on Delaware roads in 1999 were not wearing seat belts. National statistics indicate that more than 50 percent of people who die in accidents would have survived if they had been wearing seat belts.

"Some people may see this legislation as an intrusive measure. I disagree," said Oberle. "This proposal is a simple extension of that common sense logic."

Delaware's current seat belt use rate in 62 percent, short of the current national average of 68 percent and well below the national goal of 85 percent by the end of next year.

Today, 15 states have primary seat belt laws. Seat belt use has increased an average of 15 percent after primary seat belt legislation has been enacted in those states.

According to the Office of Highway Safety, upgrading Delaware's seat belt law would — each year — save 12 lives, prevent nearly 250 injuries, and save the state $37.4 million in associated costs.

As a result of automobile fatalities and injuries each year, Delawareans and their employers lose nearly $102 million in insurance costs, wages, medical costs, legal fees, and productivity. In addition, motor vehicle accidents are the leading cause of deaths among young people between the ages of 6 and 26.

■ Pa. firm low bidder

The Delaware Department of Transportation announces that C.T. Associates is the apparent low bidder for the Old Possum Park Road over Middle Run project in New Castle County.

The Pennsylvania based company was the lowest of six bidders, offering a bid of $525,891.80.

The improvements consists of the dismantling of the existing bridge, constructing a new prestressed box beam bridge on spread footers, and reconstructing all approaches. Also, the installation of guardrails, curbs, sidewalks, and riprap will be a part of the improvements.

All bids are subject to review before final approval. The project is scheduled for completion within 150 calendar days.

Council defends closed negotiations of land purchase parking garage, which Porach said would hold as many as 100 cars.

► LOT, from 1

However, assistant planning director Maureen Roser said college officials would not allow people outside the University of Delaware to use the lot for monthly parking spaces.

"There's considerable friction with the University about who uses it as it is now," Roser said.

City council had already approved negotiations for the purchase of the lot at 249 E. Main St. On Monday, they voted to approve a reduction in the purchase price from $585,000 to $439,624.28.

"The survey indicated that the parcel was actually 26,711.89 square feet rather than the 35,545 square feet in the appraisal," explained Roser. "(The owner) Dr. Leroy has agreed to a reduced sale price based on the same per square footage in the appraisal."

This means that the city is getting the lot for $12.36 per square foot of appraised value instead of the $16.45 per square foot originally offered.

Some candidates in the recent council election criticized the cost of the lot, saying it was higher than comparable land downtown but did not specify an example.

During discussions about a new retail/residential complex at 124-126 E. Main St. in December 1998,

Godwin

Luft

developer Jeffrey Lang told the city Planning Department that he paid $371,000 for the 14,860 square feet of parking area on that site. This works out to $24.96 per square foot.

On Monday, councilmembers also defended the city's negotiations in executive session and use of public funds for the property.

"By law, the city must bid to buy at the appraised value," said Mayor Hal Godwin. "It's very important that the private sector and other bidders don't know what land we're interested in, or it could drive up the price artificially."

City manager Carl Luft said the public "always ends up paying more" if the negotiations are public. "I've been in this business over 20 years — in Pennsylvania, Delaware and New York — and the Freedom of Information Act applies to this the same way in all states."

Councilmember Thomas Wampler agreed. "My wife is on a school board and she said it would be catastrophic for the school board to discuss it in public if they were buying land."

Luft said the city is funding the 20-year loan for the lot from the city capital fund and will repay it with interest.

City finance director George Saris told council that the city would break even on the deal if they charged $57 per month for parking in the new lot.

Monthly parking in other city lots is currently $50.

Roser said the city is encouraging monthly parkers in other city lots to move to the new one.

"We already have a waiting list and since the newspaper has been following it, we've had more inquiries," she said.

Will anything be enough to stop the threat?

A BILL introduced this week in the House of Representatives imposing new criminal penalties for bomb threats at schools is every bit as "draconian" as its primary sponsor describes it.

It is also a critical wakeup call to all of Delaware following the tragic events of the past week.

State representative William Oberle (R-Beechers Lot) and other Newark-area legislators reportedly crafted the bill following a meeting with parents and administrators at Glasgow High School on April 27.

According to Delaware State Police there have been at least 13 bomb threats at Glasgow since January. Four more came this week following the murderous spree at Columbine High School in Colorado.

We know the Christina School District has valiantly attempted to deal with this problem, both internally and with the greater community. When students are identified through investigation, the District has imposed penalties under the Student Code of Conduct and filed criminal complaints as well.

Obviously that has not been enough. Perhaps nothing will be enough to convince students and others that making such threats is not funny, not entertaining, not trivial, and certainly, not just an adolescent prank.

At the very least, causing the evacuation of approximately 1,350 students plus an entire school staff and assorted visitors is an inconvenience. At the most, it is frightening and dangerous. In fact, as some of those making calls have discovered, it is already a crime.

This week, a preschool set up at Glasgow to help train future caregivers held early graduation and closed. The 3-and-4-year-olds were part of the mass evacuations as well and their parents finally said "enough."

Perhaps a legislative threat of six months in jail for students and a $10,000 fine for parents will be enough. We support the attempt to deal with the problem.

We also hope parents, school administrators, and state officials will strenuously pursue counseling and new avenues of communication with children of all ages to stop the need for such excessive acting out.

Enough is enough. The bomb threats and other criminal incidents at Delaware schools are telling us something is very wrong with some of our children. Don't wait to be told anything worse before seeking answers and help in the lives nearest to you.

IN THE LESS complicated days when I grew up, if a person was selected by his classmates and teachers to be the designated "nerd or dweeb or schnook or weirdo" in his grade — the classmates and teachers constantly "pricked" the designated outsider, and the outsider bled. The kid whose sole usefulness to his classmates was to be the object of their sneers, sneak punches, and ugly jokes had to take it silently — or quit school, as some did. But most of the designated nebbishes silently endured the mocking, the scolding, and the thwarting, then carried with them those silent high school scars for the rest of their lives.

More and more often these days, when pricked too long and too often, those so designated acquire guns and explosives, and along with equally rejected "friends," they shoot the enemy and exact their "pound of flesh" in ways that would have shocked Shylock! (Besides, Shylock knew WHY he was hated and held in contempt; but he wasn't a teenager and he also had made some sort of a career of living with the insults and wounds.) Why did kids for generations — perhaps centuries — endure in silence the abuse of entire classes and some of the faculty? They didn't know any better; and, they also felt they had no choice.

Now they know better; and, in addition, the "pricks" are sharper and more poisoned than ever. Instructional movies are available every week at local cinemas which show teens (played by 20- and 30-year-olds) inflicting verbal wounds on each others' souls.

In my day, the insults for the designated social lepers were unimaginative — they were stupid or fat or had more acne than anybody else or lived in an unacceptable part of town or had a "funny" name or face. Simply crude, oafish putdowns.

Occasionally someone would drop out of school because "he couldn't stand it anymore," but usually they reminded themselves that those four years of hell would someday be over — and stared at the floor and ducked around corners.

But some movies at theaters now have raised the torture exponentially. The needles of "spiritual-acupuncture" are now poison-tipped.

New route from Elkton to Wilmington to be completed soon

An entirely new route from Elkton to Wilmington will be completed this summer when contractors finish paving the last remaining stretch between Glasgow and the Maryland town. According to advisers, this route will more than likely be used by Elktonians in a hurry, as it will take them well out of the way of congested traffic. The route will be through Glasgow, Bear Station, to the Boulevard and thence into the city. It will be concrete going all the way.

Miniature cyclone hits nearby Pennsylvania, Kelly farm suffers loss

A miniature cyclone accompanying the Easter thunderstorm, spent all its fury on a short section from Auburn to Wickerton, between Avondale and Landenberg, Pa.

William Lee, owner of the former Timothy Kelly farm, suffered the heaviest loss, the entire roof being blown from his barn and other damage inflicted.

At Harry Spencer's an orchard of apple trees in bearing were completely uprooted, and at one of the Marvel farms a barn was moved on its foundations, corn crib blown down and other damage.

Magnet school proposal draws fire from school committee

The Delaware Committee on the School Decision (DCSD) has serious reservations about the report on a voluntary magnet school plan written by New York consultant Allen H. Zeion for the Delaware General Assembly.

The Zeion report would create some problems that may be more than it's worth," said Jeffrey Raffel, staff director of DCSD and an associate professor with the University of Delaware's College of Urban Affairs.

The $8,000 Zeion report proposed that magnet schools—schools devoted to specific curricula—be created in the De La Warr and Wilmington school districts for middle and high school students. The magnet schools for the gifted could create segregation through giftedness instead of race, said Raffel—and they would also provide the most educational resources for those who need the least.

Main Street wins favorable review

Matt Hussman of the National Main Street Program spent the day talking about downtown to 22 business owners and representatives from the city.

Newark, along with eight other communities in Delaware, was chosen from 12 applications to benefit from the program, which stems from the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

Hussman said Newark's sidewalks, promotions (such as Newark Nite), no interest loans (up to $2,000) for storefront improvements and commercial tax incentives for renovations and new commercial projects put Newark "in a position of strength where the city can make choices."

Christina building referendum on horizon

Christina School District Superintendent Iris Metts said she plans to propose a referendum to the school board in January 1995 to build one or two new elementary schools and renovate several existing schools.

Besides building new schools in the U.S. 40 corridor, the major capital improvements bond referendum would-if approved by the Christina School Board and voters-provide monies to completely renovate Newark High School, do minor renovations to Christiana High and check heating and cooling systems at Glasgow High.

Metts said the bond would also include finishing the installment of air conditioning to the three middle schools and do major renovations to Stubbs, Bancroft and Pyle elementary schools.

Will anything be enough to stop the threat?

A BILL introduced this week in the House of Representatives imposing new criminal penalties for bomb threats at schools is every bit as "draconian" as its primary sponsor describes it.

It is also a critical wakeup call to all of Delaware following the tragic events of the past week.

State representative William Oberle (R-Beechers Lot) and other Newark-area legislators reportedly crafted the bill following a meeting with parents and administrators at Glasgow High School on April 27.

According to Delaware State Police there have been at least 13 bomb threats at Glasgow since January. Four more came this week following the murderous spree at Columbine High School in Colorado.

We know the Christina School District has valiantly attempted to deal with this problem, both internally and with the greater community. When students are identified through investigation, the District has imposed penalties under the Student Code of Conduct and filed criminal complaints as well.

'Communicate plans to staff, parents and teachers'

To: The editor

From: Ruth Kelly
Newark

THE CARNAGE at Columbine High School is yet another revelation for me that these are indeed the 'last and evil' days. We keep reading about all of these school shootings across the nation and in their aftermath my heart grieves with these parents who lost their children. But soon after life goes back to normal.

My daughter loves to go to school. Staff members tell me how happy-go-lucky she is and I feel secure in knowing how sheltered and protected she has always been at home and at school. I send her off every morning confident of her safety and then it's shattered by news of yet another shooting at a school in a town that I never heard of.

After the sensationalism wears off and the media leaves the various towns, I return to feeling that sense of safety for my child knowing that it happened "there", but could never happen here in Delaware.

I can't explain why, but after Columbine, I am very fearful. As I tearfully watched the terrified students running out of the school building, my heart broke as I envisioned the unimaginable terror that the parents of these students were experiencing waiting to see of their child was alive and well.

I called my school today and learned that our school does have a plan in place in case a situation like this should occur. As a parent, I hope that all schools have plans in place and these plans are communicated broadly to staff, teachers, students and parents.

Other thoughts: Kids should not be wearing coats inside of the school building; the carrying of bookbags during the school day should be banned. Where are these kids getting these guns?

These horrible situations seem to have no rhyme or reason, but there are things that we as parents can do.

For example, if a child is showing aberrant or unusual behavior don't ignore it, get the help needed.

Watch your children and also watch and observe the behavior of other children that they are around.

■ Any community newspaper receives many letters over the course of a year. The number per week fluctuates, of course, the determining factor usually the degree to which our readers are upset . . . about the council representative, the mayor, the superintendent of schools, the guy next door and the latest national news, as is the case this edition.

Dealing with letters to the editor is one of the more difficult jobs for a newspaper editor. We want to let people have their say, for or against, praising or criticizing, and to vent their frustrations over what they usually perceive to be an injustice. Yet we do not want to print unsubstantiated allegations or rumors.

Generally the subject of a letter is someone in government. That's okay with us. We see that as a fact of life.

So, blast away, if you wish. No doubt a salvo or two will be lobbed in the direction of this newspaper and that's okay, too.

What we need from you and what we cannot allow is spelled out in our letters policy, which is printed every week in the staff box in the newspaper. It isn't very long because we don't have a lot of rules.

We expect your name, address and daytime phone number to be on the letter as well as your signature. The phone number will not appear in the newspaper; it is for our use only.

There should be no obscenities, for obvious reasons, and we will make the decision about what is obscene.

We will not allow libelous comments. That is for your protection as well as ours. And there is virtually no circumstances in which we will withhold a writer's name. The reason would have to be extraordinary.

them into each other on the screen, the crowd that cheered them on turns ugly and finishes off the loser. (Drugs, fast cars, booze, cynical promiscuity, and vomit-mouths are the marks of the winners in these movies!)

The young men who haven't made the social "cut" usually can't get dates with anybody, but if they do find someone willing to go out with them, the big letter sweater guys will pull up in their convertibles, insult the girl, then kick in the appointed nerd's teeth.

These movies instruct on many levels, but "Get them before they get you," is a general theme — and the "nerd" always gets gotten!!!

But all is not despair among the nerds and losers! Other instructional movies at the local theaters show men in dark clothes (yes, sometimes trench coats) who can't take "it" anymore, pull out their amazing guns and start making the world safe for nerds!!! If they are cops, they're maverick cops, doing the killing in the name of the law. Or they belong to a secret organization that is saving the world from itself, and only THEY know that all the good guys are really bad guys, and the only way to save the world is to spray the world with bullets, throw bombs, leap out skyscraper windows onto awnings or land in a Porsche standing by the curb, where an adoring blonde with great implants awaits him; then she drives him away as he shoots, shoots, shoots, shoots!! No bullets hit HIM — but all the good-guys-who-are-really-bad-guys clutch themselves desperately, then drop. On an average, the maverick's bullets kill 104 enemies for every 100 bullets he fires.

Those appointed as nerds sit through the revenge movies over and over again, stoking themselves with popcorn and coke. Then they rent these movies or buy them, memorizing every line of the two-syllable script.

After that, it will be just one too many humiliating trips down the school hall; one too many "funny" remarks about his homework assignment or his appearance by a teacher who wants to be popular with "the kids"; or one too many something. And just as all those hours of learning how to devastatingly insult other insecure students paid off for the "in" crowd, now the hours of watching how to "kill the so-and-sos" pay off for the nerds.

The situation was always there, just waiting to get nastier. It did. It will. And TV will bring it right into our living rooms for us!

MORE middle-aged children are witnessing role reversal with a parent who is failing in health. These children assume obligations and responsibilities of a parent, and older parents must accept help in their daily life.

If addressed early, much of the stress can be prevented. Red flags to watch for are alienation, irritability, impatience, withdrawal, lack of compassion, sensitivity to criticism, and lastly, loss of hope, purpose and meaning.

Begin by establishing some approaches that put you in personal control:

Recognize your talents and skills and use them. Know your limitations and seek the right balance. Enjoy successes, accept failures and learn from mistakes.

Keep a sense of humor. In "Preventing Caregiver Burnout" (1994, Pathway Books: Golden Valley, Minn.), author J.R. Sherman says that three to five minutes of hearty laughter is equivalent to three strenuous minutes on a rowing machine. Make a list of things you enjoy and include them in your daily activities. Share your happy thoughts and events with your care receiver.

Stress the positive. Practice being positive and you will be more fun to be around, you will like yourself better, and you will like what you are doing better.

Know your resources. Develop a greater awareness of the illness or disability of your care-receiver and talk with other caregivers. Seek services or support groups in community.

Ask for help. Know you cannot do everything for everyone. Ask friends and family to help with tasks. If needed, hire someone to help you keep a balance between work/family/care giving.

Plan your days. Prioritize your jobs. Make lists. Know what you are going to do, when you are going to do it and where it will take you when you are finished.

Reward yourself. Treat yourself to coffee with a friend, a movie, a weekend getaway. Your rewards can be simple, inexpensive and available when deserved. Make a list of some creative rewards that you can cash-in when need arises.

Exercise. Exercise can take the edge off a stressful day.

Control your feelings. Recognize and understand your moods. Learn to identify events that have a negative effect on your feelings and know how to control your reactions.

Communicate. Share your thoughts, concerns and suggestions with your care receiver. Solicit advice from him or her and from others. Talk about your worries and frustrations. Be flexible and willing to learn.

Build friendships and support systems. Surround yourself with positive and caring people.

Always remember that your care receiver is likely to have similar feelings of frustration and stress. It is difficult for most people who have been self-sufficient to accept increasing dependency. Any loss of independence or control — qualities highly valued in our society — can be a blow to an older person's self-esteem. Most older people will fight to keep their independence as long as possible. Work together as a team.

Most importantly, taking care of yourself will benefit you, your family, and your care receiver.

AT THE 'SENIOR' PROM

IT WAS THE SENIOR PROM all over again for residents at Churchman's Village who pinned on their carnations and boutonnieres for a night of adolescent fun.

More than 40 residents turned out to dance and socialize with family and friends at the event which was themed "A Night Under the Stars."

Young and old danced as entertainer Kit Stewart strolled around the room singing songs like Sinatra's, "It had to be you."

Tracy Juergens, marketing director for Churchman's Village, thought that adding a twist to the concept of a senior prom might just be a great spring time activity for residents residing at the Village. Students from Chi Omega sorority and Kappa Sigma fraternity at the University of Delaware were also invited to help in planning and holding the event.

Laura Kretschmar of the Chi Omega said that she was looking for a senior citizen related project for her sorority. "This was our year for senior citizens and also the first year of philanthropy," said Kretschmar.

It didn't take long for the college students to mingle with some of the senior prom-goers cutting loose on the dance floor to the "Electric Slide" and the "Macarena."

Village said, "This is the first time we've been to anything formal since we've been here."

The couple have been living within the independent living program for about six months and Nelridge gladly participated in the prom saying, "We haven't danced together in years."

Some of the residents, like Adeline Rolewicz, eagerly anticipated the festivities. After hearing about the prom plans a few months ago, Rolewicz immediately knew she was going. "I said, I'm going to ask my neighbor Vergil Cale to come," Rolewicz recalled.

Juergens hopes to make this an evening which residents can look forward to every year.

Flowerama of Newark, Kirk's Florists and Genaurdi's of Pennsylvania also supported the event.

Two great shows running at Brandywine River Museum

Americans love a bargain. "Buy one get one free or $5 off your next purchase," or anything like that gets our attention and often our business. There are "bargains" every once in a while in the world of museums too. Case in point, the Brandywine River Museum up in Chadds Ford.

Right now there are two great shows running concurrently. They are quite different but both quite interesting and we can enjoy them both for the price of one admission. Doesn't that count as a bargain?

In one of the third floor galleries there is an exhibition called "Andrew Wyeth's Family and Friends." Throughout his long and prolific career, Andrew Wyeth painted many of his family and friends. These works are the subject of the exhibition which runs through the month of May. The show is drawn from the private collection of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Wyeth, the museum's own collection and a private collector who chooses to remain anonymous. The gallery includes 40 watercolor, drybrush and tempera paintings covering a half century of the artist's productive years.

The work in the exhibition which appears with my column today and is called "The Children's Doctor" and is a tempera on panel done in 1949. It depicts Dr. Margaret Handy, a pediatrician who lived in the Chadds Ford house she built on the hill above the Wyeth studio.

No exhibition with a title like "Andrew Wyeth's Family and Friends" could possibly be complete without some paintings Helga Testorf. There are 13 in the show.

THE ARTS

By PHIL TOMAN

This part of the show includes some of the famous, sometimes infamous, paintings from the sensational tour which began at the National Gallery of Art in 1987. Remember those paintings?

It is a great show with many more works of art than I have space to cover here. This show in the one gallery is worth the trip up to Route 1 where it crosses the Brandywine Creek, but there is another show too, quite dissimilar but none the less interesting. It is called "Posters in an Age of Elegance."

Through the 19th century posters grew from a few words on a sheet of paper pasted upon a poll to an art form of their own. They advertised everything under the sun. They were very often crude in design and execution. Then, in the early 1890s, companies began commissioning artists, not printers, to create some images to advertise their merchandise. Interestingly enough, the primary purpose of most artist-designed posters was to sell books.

Two early experimenters were the firms of Harper & Brothers and the Century Company. Both went to French artist Eugene Grasset. The art form progressed until in 1893 the magazine "Harper's New Monthly" began publishing posters in their periodical.

The works of American Edward Penfield epitomized the poster style of our land. His works contained dynamic designs with boldly outlined shapes and limited color. He knew how to capture Americans' attention and frequently featured young women holding or reading a magazine.

There developed a poster mania in the United States and in the years 1896 and 1897 it became obvious that many of our countrymen were more interested in buying the posters than the product they advertised. Although the era of their advertising dominance was short, the posters remained very much in demand and brought high prices even during the great depression.

Many of the top poster artists of the era are in the BRM show which, like the other show I am writing about today, runs through the first weeks of May. Some of the artists include Louis Rhead, Elisha Brown Bird, Maxfield Parrish, J. C. Leyendecker and Henry McCarter.

The Brandywine River Museum is open everyday from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Admission is $5 for adults and $2.50 for everyone else. For more information you may call the museum at 610-388-2700.

If you are shopping for a gift for an art loving friend, don't miss the Museum Store just off the lobby.

Andrew Wyeth's "Children's Doctor" is one of 40 of his works in an exhibition titled "Andrew Wyeth's Family and Friends" now on at the Brandywine River Museum.

New county regs issued for public information

By LAURA SANKOWICH

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTOR WRITER

County Executive Thomas P. Gordon has handed down an executive order regulating the release of county information to the public and increasing fees for photo-copying.

Under the new Freedom of Information policy, in order to obtain documents or information from any New Castle County office, the person requesting the information must submit a written request either by fax or mail to the County Attorney's office identifying the file or record they wish to see.

Following a review of the request by the legal office, the request can be accepted or denied.

The policy also states, "Requests that do not adequately describe the document or file sought, or require the Department to do research not contemplated by the Freedom of information Act will be returned to the applicant."

The county has about 20 days to respond to a request, and if approved, an appointment must be made to view the document. Then there is yet another set of rules as to the length of time it will take for documents to be copied at $1 per page. The county also reserves the right to charge administrative fees.

John Flaherty of Common Cause of Delaware said that when most people make a request, they may not have all the information they need to describe the file or document. "The problem with this policy is it doesn't take into account how this will affect the public," he said.

Flaherty said the new regulations also seemed to contradict state law. "In section 1001 under title 29 of the state Freedom of Information declaration of policy, the philosophy behind the law provides that citizens should have easy access," he said.

Beverly Baxter, head of the Committee of 100, a group representing the business community, said the policy is drawing criticism from both businesses and civic groups. Of particular concern is the $1 a page fee when individuals can pay 5 to 10 cents a page for copies elsewhere.

Baxter also noted that it goes against Gordon's vow to make government more responsive.

No public discussion came before the order was imposed. "What they should have done is hold a public hearing so people could have input," said Flaherty. "It's a shame they did not take into consideration the people who would be affected by it."

County attorney Bill Rhodunda said citizens are only notified of the policy upon making a request for information. They are then supplied with a copy of the policy and a request form explaining the procedure to obtain information. Rhodunda said that because the process is central and more formalized, it should speed up the information gathering process. "Everyone has to be treated the same," said Rhodunda. "Our archives are in bad shape because there are missing documents, this is a way for us to keep control over it. This shouldn't slow anything."

Both Rhodunda and Hubbard cited requests from businesses for documents and information as taxing on resources and time.

Jeninne Gerrick, president of the Bear Glasgow Council of Civic Organizations said that group has not encountered any issues with land use. "They have been more than accommodating in supplying us with information," she said.

However, Dave Tackett, vice president of the 7 & 40 Alliance, said his organization did encounter some difficulty with land use when it came to obtaining a speaker. "We had it set up at our monthly meeting to have a talk on the UDC, and they agreed to do it," he said.

The speaker later canceled, notifying the organization that they must put in a written request in the future.

Hubbard said the new policy, introduced less than a month ago, is currently undergoing review for revision.

Family businesses featured at UD roundtable

Mark Stellini, president and CEO of InfoSystems Inc. and Dorothy M. Peoples, president of R.C. Peoples Inc. will speak at the owner/CEO roundtable at the University of Delaware Family Business Center on Thursday, May 6.

The topic is "Family Business Ownership and Management". Stellini and Peoples will identify pressing issues in succession and provide workable strategies for strengthening family business ownership and management.

Stellini joined his family's data processing business in 1981. Today his father serves as chairman of the board and his uncle vice-president. Stellini has been responsible for switching the company's focus from mainframe computers to PC's, and for diversifying and expanding the company's services to include system design, telecommunications, and training. Those innovative ideas have allowed Stellini to build the company from $2 million to $90 million since becoming president in 1986.

Peoples along with her husband started a general contracting business in 1955. Over the next 35 years their endeavors expanded into residential, commercial and industrial developments. Some of their communities and projects include Caravel Farms, Hockessin Valley Falls, Caravel Woods, Melody Meadows, Peoples Plaza and Caravel Academy.

The roundtable event will be held at the Wilmington Campus, Goodstay Center from 8:30 to 11 a.m. The fee for the meeting is $75. For more information or to register, call James O'Neill, Director of the University of Delaware Family Business Center at 831-0743.

Facing one of its toughest tests of the season, St. Mark's High rode the strong arm of junior pitcher Dana Travis and some timely offense to beat visiting William Penn 3-1 in a nonconference softball game Monday.

Travis, who had a perfect game going through four innings, surrendered her first earned run of the season when she allowed two hits in the fifth. Travis finished with 13 strikeouts and walked none to improve to 9-0, the same record the Spartans have posted this season.

William Penn pitcher Kim Camponelli, meanwhile, was also tough to hit. She scattered five hits, struck out one and walked two.

Camponelli, who splits starting duties with Stefany Tiberi, saw her record fall to 4-2.

The Colonials are 6-3 overall, but 6-

"We just didn't make enough contact," said William Penn Coach Dave Taylor, whose team also lost games to St. Elizabeth and Flight A foe Glasgow this year.

"We had too many strikeouts, but then that's because that's a very good pitcher throwing them in there."

"We had one inning where we didn't make a couple plays at the plate and that gave them two runs. Otherwise it was a 1-1 game."

"I think we held our own. Except for the one inning I think we played them even and it would be nice if we had a rematch, let's put it that way. Somewhere down the line in the state tournament or something and hopefully we can iron out a couple of our mistakes, make a little contact and play a little better."

Blue Hens hold off Penn State

TWO WEEKS AGO Marc Traverso was crying on the sidelines, his University of Delaware lacrosse career seemingly ended with a knee injury.

But the St. Mark's product wasn't even close to finished. Traverso became the latest medical miracle for the 7th-ranked Blue Hens as the senior defenseman returned to contribute heavily to a dramatic 12-11 victory over No. 9 Penn State Saturday night.

The victory before 2,500 at Rullo Stadium capped the fifth annual Delaware Youth Lacrosse Day festivities, which included a pair of high school games and a youth clinic, all to benefit youth lacrosse in the First State.

The Blue Hens, who faced No. 1-ranked Loyola Wednesday in Baltimore, host America East foe Drexel Saturday night.

"This has been the biggest roller-coaster ride of my life the past week," gushed Traverso after the Penn State win. "I thought I was done when I got hurt. I went from one of the lowest points of my life to one of the highest right now. I'm just glad I can contribute to the team."

Coach Bob Shillinglaw, whose 10-1 Hens are vying for the second NCAA Tournament berth in school history, has seen superstar John Grant battle a leg stress fracture all spring.

Now Traverso has come back from a torn meniscus in his left knee that required arthroscopic surgery and threatened to wipe out the second half of his final season. Traverso showed his value with a sensational last-minute clear after Grant - the nation's leading scorer with 77 points - fed Dennis DeBusschere for the winning goal with 1:11 left.

The Hens held onto the ball and ran out the clock as they added another chapter to their storied season.

"There are so many sub-stories to this whole season," said Shillinglaw. "Guys have been getting injured all year but we keep finding a way to win. There just was no way that knee was going to keep Marc from playing."

Three-time defending girls state soccer champion Alexis I. du Pont High left little doubt it's still the team to beat by demolishing visiting St. Mark's 6-2 in a nonconference game Monday night.

AI, which is the top-ranked team in the state and tied for 13th in the nation in the NSCAA rankings, improved to 9-0 by forging a 5-1 lead at halftime before a crowd of about 400.

St. Mark's, which lost to AI 1-0 in the semifinals of the state tournament last season, suffered its first loss after seven consecutive wins.

"(AI) just came out and beat us to everything," said St. Mark's Coach Tom DeMatteis. "I really thought we were up for it, but we weren't and they're good. That's why they're three-time champs."

"And five (first-half) goals. I really can't say that the goalkeeper (Christy Ganc) was at fault. That was some of the worst marking I've seen. It was a shooting gallery for her. As good as she is, she can't get to all those."

"We did a lot of things in terms of spacing and where their defenders are," said AI Coach Fran Kulas.

"I've seen St. Mark's play a lot. We had a game-plan and the girls did a fantastic job of doing what I asked them to."

"Our girls felt confident. We train extremely hard. I was not surprised at the way they played because I see them play like this every single day."

After play began in the first 15 minutes or so at a fairly even pace, the quicker, more-skilled Tigers began to run at will through the Spartans.

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

DANA TRAVIS - ST. MARK'S

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

It's hard to imagine St. Mark's High softball pitcher Dana Travis improving on last season's performance.

The junior righthander from Coach Hill in Newark finished 18-3, losing 2-0 to Indian River in the state championship game.

It's hard to fault a pitcher when she only gives up two runs, especially when her team doesn't score.

Travis seems determined to carry the Spartans back for another shot at the title. On Monday, she improved both her own record and her team's to 9-0 this season by throwing a two-hitter with 13 strikeouts in a 3-1 victory over William Penn.

The Colonials' run was the first earned run Travis has allowed this season.

Travis began playing ASA softball when she was seven years old and started pitching when she was 8.

Hitters have been lamenting that decision ever since. In her three-year varsity career at St.

Mark's, she's lost four games.

"I throw whatever's working that day," said Travis about her pitching philosophy. "I like to throw my fastball a lot and throw it up high (in the strike zone)."

Travis also mixes in screwballs and an occasional changeup at times.

Travis, who played in some big games in her career, said she never gets nervous before a game.

"I'm usually pretty relaxed. I guess that's just how I am," she said.

Travis is also a threat off the mound. She entered the game against William Penn hitting .519. Although she went 0-for-2, she drove in the Spartans' third run with a sacrifice fly.

In the classroom, she has a 3.3 grade-point-average.

For her summer-league team, Travis gets to play in the outfield, which she enjoys, when she's not pitching.

As for what she likes about pitching, Travis said: "I don't know. I guess I've just always liked it."

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

DANA TRAVIS - ST. MARK'S

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

It's hard to imagine St. Mark's High softball pitcher Dana Travis improving on last season's performance.

The junior righthander from Coach Hill in Newark finished 18-3, losing 2-0 to Indian River in the state championship game.

It's hard to fault a pitcher when she only gives up two runs, especially when her team doesn't score.

Travis seems determined to carry the Spartans back for another shot at the title. On Monday, she improved both her own record and her team's to 9-0 this season by throwing a two-hitter with 13 strikeouts in a 3-1 victory over William Penn.

The Colonials' run was the first earned run Travis has allowed this season.

Travis began playing ASA softball when she was seven years old and started pitching when she was 8.

Hitters have been lamenting that decision ever since. In her three-year varsity career at St.

Mark's, she's lost four games.

"I throw whatever's working that day," said Travis about her pitching philosophy. "I like to throw my fastball a lot and throw it up high (in the strike zone)."

Travis also mixes in screwballs and an occasional changeup at times.

Travis, whose played in some big games in her career, said she never gets nervous before a game.

Stream MAP of Maryland/Delaware

Why every fisherman and boater needs this map

Professor Higbee's® Stream Map of Maryland/Delaware is the first and only highly detailed map of its kind. This new 2 x 3 1/2' foot color map shows virtually all of the 12,000 miles of Maryland/Delaware streams, plus lakes. Now, overlooked streams and lakes are easy-to-locate on one map.

FREE GUIDEBOOK
Will take you to 250 boat launches and fishing piers, 12,000 miles of streams, and 603 lakes.

LOST STREAM MAP FOUND AND RESTORED

The recently published Stream Map of Maryland and Delaware resembles another map—known to Pennsylvania anglers as the "Lost Stream Map." The "Stream Map of Pennsylvania" was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor. Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible...a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand, the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 x 5 foot map. The map sold extremely well — until it was lost several years after it first appeared in print. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates, declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill. The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key. Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue. Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Holding an updated map, Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day." Then, by combining Professor Higbee's knowledge with computer technology—the Maryland/Delaware Stream Map was created.

Rave Reviews

"It is amazingly detailed and names some creeks in the Mohawk Valley that can't even be found on topographic maps." —John Piarres, OBSERVER-DESPATCH-ULICA

"If you're looking for the most definitive maps ever created depicting every single creek, river, stream, pond and lake...then Professor Higbee's Stream Maps are without question the finest." —Howard Brand, THE NEWARK STAR-LEDGER

"Professor Higbee's Stream Map belongs on the den wall of every freshwater angler and paddler in the region." —Tom Meade, Providence Journal - Bulletin

Watershed Boundaries

Boundary lines for the 16 Maryland and Delaware watersheds, which drain into Chesapeake Bay, are shown on the Stream Map. The entire Chesapeake Bay watershed covers 64,000 square miles in 6 states. Almost every drop of anything that falls on or spills in the watershed eventually ends up in the Bay. Success in restoring the Bay begins with each individual protecting his or her own watershed. You can also help by becoming a member of the Chesapeake Bay Foundation, and supporting its efforts to reduce pollution, protect and restore habitat, restore fisheries, and educate and involve more citizens. The Bay belongs to each of us. Its survival depends on our actions today.

FREE LOCATION GUIDEBOOK INCLUDED

NEW Map of Maryland / Delaware Rivers, Streams, Lakes, and Chesapeake Bay

Stream MAP

of Maryland/Delaware

Why every fisherman and boater needs this map

Professor Higbee's® Stream Map of Maryland/Delaware is the first and only highly detailed map of its kind. This new 2 x 3 1/2' foot color map shows virtually all of the 12,000 miles of Maryland/Delaware streams, plus lakes. Now, overlooked streams and lakes are easy-to-locate on one map.

FREE GUIDEBOOK
Will take you to 250 boat launches and fishing piers, 12,000 miles of streams, and 603 lakes.

LOST STREAM MAP FOUND AND RESTORED

The recently published Stream Map of Maryland and Delaware resembles another map—known to Pennsylvania anglers as the "Lost Stream Map."

The "Stream Map of Pennsylvania" was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible...a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand, the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 x 5 foot map.

The map sold extremely well — until it was lost several years after it first appeared in print. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates, declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill.

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Holding an updated map, Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

Then, by combining Professor Higbee's knowledge with computer technology—the Maryland/Delaware Stream Map was created.

Rave Reviews

"It is amazingly detailed and names some creeks in the Mohawk Valley that can't even be found on topographic maps." —John Pheas, OBSERVER, DISPATCH-UNION

"If you're looking for the most definitive maps ever created depicting every single creek, river, stream, pond and lake...then 'Professor Higbee's Stream Maps' are without question the finest." —Howard Brant, THE NEWARK STAR-LEDGER

"Professor Higbee's Stream Map belongs on the den wall of every freshwater angler and paddler in the region!" —Tom Meade, Providence Journal - Bulletin

Watershed Boundaries

Boundary lines for the 16 Maryland and Delaware watersheds, which drain into Chesapeake Bay, are shown on the Stream Map.

The entire Chesapeake Bay watershed covers 64,000 square miles in 6 states. Almost every drop of anything that falls on or spills in the watershed eventually ends up in the Bay.

Success in restoring the Bay begins with each individual protecting his or her own watershed.

You can also help by becoming a member of the Chesapeake Bay Foundation, and supporting its efforts to reduce pollution, protect and restore habitat, restore fisheries, and educate and involve more citizens. The Bay belongs to each of us. Its survival depends on our actions today.

Time marches on at Maclary

By SHARON R. COLE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

THE END of April marked the beginning of another journey in time at Maclary Elementary School. Past and present memorabilia were placed inside a larger time capsule on April 30 for Maclary's 30th anniversary to look back over 60 years of history.

On March 30, students and staff opened the time capsule hidden at the school in 1968. Inside were a Bible, a 1968 issue of a local newspaper, a bulletin from the Newark Special School District, some coins, two election pins bearing the names Nixon/Agnew and Wallace, and an old-fashioned audio cassette tape labeled "Mr. Hettricks class tape, Room 24, 1968."

Some of the items going into the new capsule included a Delaware Quarter, all of the current student's names, a Newark Post article on the school's 30th anniversary, a cloth containing colored thumb prints of the pre-kindergarten students and a recording of kindergartners singing the "Happy Birthday" song.

"Maybe we should bury a tape recorder," principal Richelle Talbert said. Talbert is still trying to find a tape recorder which can play the cassette from 1968.

In addition, Maclary students in grades one through four contributed written assignments that they have been diligently working on for the past month.

Among predictions for the future, current events, and historic and modern heroes, one fourth grade student read his poignant response to the question of what the world would be like in 30 years.

"In 30 years there will be no homeless or poor people," he said.

In the year 2029, when the capsule is opened again, people also will find out that we were infatuated with Beanie Babies, many of the Maclary students wanted to be teachers, and students saw Michael Jordan, Jeff Gordon and Oprah Winfrey as their heroes.

"This time capsule is almost like footprints that we are leaving in the sand," explained Talbert.

To cap off the celebration the entire population of Maclary paraded outside where mascots YoUDee and Bluewinkle entertained the crowd while the Newark High School Marching Band performed.

For their final piece, the band played "Happy Birthday" and the entire field filled with bubbles created by jubilant Maclary students who then enjoyed a huge anniversary cake.

Proposed student housing at former Budd site gets mixed reaction

Developers Ambling Associates of Valdosta, Ga., began their efforts to make their estimated $30-million deal for the DelChapel Associates' property on South Chapel Street pay off.

At the same time, University official Rick Armitage revealed the University of Delaware is negotiating with the developers of the former Continental Fibre/Budd site to become co-owners in the 296-unit student housing complex proposed there. (See related story this issue page 5).

Company president Mike Godwin told the commissioners that if he gets approval from the city for his proposed complex, he hopes to begin demolition at the unsightly 21.7-acre industrial property by July and be ready to open in August 2000.

"We've already negotiated with the demolition contractor and talked to the environmental people," said Godwin.

Ambling will also take out an insurance policy "with very high limits" to cover unforeseen problems with the cleanup process.

Godwin said Ambling has built and

Auditor finds equipment misuse at CHS

State also finds accounting errors

By SHARON R. COLE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The Delaware State Auditor's office has released their findings and recommendations from an investigation of eight complaints about possible misuse of funds and property at Christiana High School.

State auditors found that an internal investigation by the Christina District previously had located two go-carts valued at $1,060 in the home of Christiana principal John Vann. The district suspended Vann for six days in December 1998 in that incident.

The state auditor's report also concluded that Vann and Christina administrators apparently did not have or had not followed guidelines or usual district practices when dealing with some other school funds and property.

However, an allegation that

Vann spent $50,000 to renovate his office was found to be false. In investigating that allegation, the auditor found Vann did not submit a purchase order as required for the installation of a new carpet in his office. The carpet was one of the costs involved in the office renovation that did exceed $4,000.

In response to questions about purchase orders for carpet in schools, district spokesperson John Holton reported, "Procedures for these types of purchases have been in place since the inception of the district."

Holton also explained that the district did have some guidelines and procedures in place to prevent improper use of funds either before the investigation or before recommendations were made by the state.

Another allegation surrounds the mystery of missing laptop computers.

According to the report, 11 laptops were ordered for Chris-
