Newark Has Building Boom

Several New Homes Being Erected—Others Planned

"Building Boom" is the big word in Newark just now. Contractors, plumbers and mechanics report more work than they can do. Contractor Griffin is pushing the work on the Crompton residence on South Academy Street which will be completed early in September. His work on the Rehabilitation Building has been temporarily held up due to non-arrival of structural steel. This work will be finished around the University opening. Griffin has also been awarded the contract for the fine residence of John R. Chapman and ground was broken yesterday on Welsh Lane and Kells Avenue.

The Cleaves bungalow on Kells Avenue, built by Contractor Greer, is complete and is attracting favorable comment. Wollaston has three houses started on his development on Kells Avenue.

Robert Lewis is remodeling the old Clark home recently purchased by him.

Squire Lovett, through Contractor Greer, is going ahead with his new home up in the Orchard.

In all, the building season is turning out exceptionally well.

STATE SCHOOL BOARD TO CONTINUE ATTENDANCE CAMPAIGN

Request Delaware School Auxiliary to Engage Four Visiting Teachers

Approve Sites for 5 Colored Schools

Approving heartily the enrollment attendance campaign conducted last year by the Delaware School Auxiliary Association, the State Board of Education in its session in the Public Building Saturday afternoon authorized the secretary to request the School Auxiliary to continue the campaign for another year in order that a proper basis for comparison of attendance might be secured. The campaign will begin with the opening of the school year, set by the Board for the schools of the State as September 6.

Another important resolution passed by the Board was a request of the School Auxiliary to assist in the campaign by engaging four visiting teachers and paying their salaries and expenses.

The Board, represented by the president, Dr. T. R. Brown, and Eugene Shalleross, M. E. Culver and Ellwood Souder, received a number of delegations from various districts.

A delegation from the Middletown Board of Education, consisting of Messrs. Shepherd, Burns and Stephens, addressed the State Board in regard to the rental of the Middletown Academy. The business manager was requested to take the matter up with the Board.

Dr. Carlisle headed a delegation from Frederica in regard to the transportation of high school pupils. From Big Oak District, Sussex county, came a delegation asking for the reopening of the school there.

State Architect Hanna reported that he had approved the plans for a new school building at Stockley, and that he had drawn plans for an annex at Clayton.

School sites at Newport, Delaware City, Raymonds Neck, Seaford and Blanco were approved by the Board. These are all colored schools. A letter from the secretary in regard to the rental of a white school site at Millsboro was also approved.

Plans were adopted which will make it possible to help teachers own their own cars and travel by mileage. At present the country cars are used.

A report on the crowded condition of the various schools of the State was received and filed, and the secretary requested to appeal to the School Auxiliary for relief. Reports of the Claymont special district referendum were received.

The Board received and authorized the secretary to approve the financial and statistical reports of R. W. Helm, vocational director.

At the time for adjournment the matter of transportation and health programs was being taken up. The discussion will be continued at a subsequent meeting.

Farmers Told to Advertise

5000 Attend Picnic in Sussex

Co-operation in the planting of crops, as well as in the marketing, is necessary for the success of the farmers of today, according to S. J. Lowell of New York State, master of the National Grange, at a combined picnic of the Sussex County Grange and members of the Farm Bureau, held at Oak Orchard, Delaware. Nearly five thousand farmers attended the picnic, most of them coming in their own automobiles.

W. J. Coverdale, secretary of the National Farm Bureau Federation, was also a speaker and explained what changes the Farm Bureau is making throughout the country by instituting a new method of marketing crops by taking a short cut through the present maze of agents and commission men. Advertising, especially newspaper advertising, is to be extensively used during the next year to show the customers how to secure farm products much cheaper and yet give the farmer a better price. The parcel post system also came in for praise and has furnished the farmer with the means of reaching city consumers at a small cost.

R. J. Allen of Seaford, president of the County Farm Bureau, and Robert G. Houston, a prominent granger of Georgetown, were also speakers.

Movie Season Opens

Manager Hubert of the Newark Opera House is having glass framed billboards placed at the Opera House entrance preparatory to the fall season. Motion Pictures are being given now on Wednesday and Saturday evenings. The every night schedule will probably start about the middle of the coming month.

Sneak Thieves at Curtis Mills Loot Locker While Men Work

Sneak thieves got in some fine work at the Curtis Paper Mills on last Thursday night, making away with $36 from Howard Patchell and $46 and a gold watch from "Bob" Gregg. The operation was pulled in the same room where the men were working. Gregg and Patchell were working at the time on the same machine and it is supposed the thieves slipped through the window and got in their street clothes.

The men took the clothing and left. After ransacking and getting the valuables, the clothing was thrown away about 30 feet from the mill.

No definite clue has been found yet. It is believed that it was some one acquainted with the location and conditions in and around the mill. It is hardly probable that strangers could have made the entrance or located the locker without attracting attention of other men working in the room at the time.

The air is supposed to have occurred some time between 2.30 and 3.30 a. m.

Newark Tourists Having Fine Time

Word received from Newark's European tourists this week gives report of interesting time. The Wrights, Evans, Sypher and Smith are now in France. They expect to return around the middle of September.

Picnic at Shellpot Park

Mrs. Leonard A. Rhoades and the members of her Sunday School class of the Methodist Church had a delightful picnic at Shellpot Park yesterday. The party left on the 10.30 bus to Wilmington and then took a trolley to Shellpot. After a day of fun and frolic and good picnic "eats" they returned on the 4.30 bus to tell of the good time they had on the trip.

Fishing in Canada Wilds

President Hurlbush left last week on a fishing trip in the back wilds of Canada in the Nipigon Lake Region. Dr. Hurlbush will probably be gone until the middle of September.

Receiving Congratulations

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred O. Stiltz, Jr., are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a fine baby boy.

School Auxiliary Breaks with State Board of Education

Dr. Odell Writes Letter That Arouses State Wide Interest and Curiosity

Public Wants Facts Brought Out—Future of Education in Question

Following a get-together dinner of Education and Newspaper men, and a dinner party to the State Board by P. S. du Pont, the letter of Dr. Joseph H. Odell, President of Delaware School Auxiliary Association, breaking off all relations with the State Board, came as a complete surprise to the local and state public.

Newark is interested not only from the standpoint of education generally but from the local point of view of securing a new High School.

At the recent dinner given by Superintendent Holloway to the newspaper men, Dr. Richard Watson Cooper was given high praise for the new school law. One of the speakers, who was associated with Dr. Cooper in the legislative program, said the statute could well be called the Cooper law. This fact, coupled with the fact that Dr. Cooper was and is a member and on the staff of the same organization of which Dr. Odell is the head, led everyone to believe that the closest harmony and co-operation existed between the State Board and the Auxiliary. So the announcement of this break came as a distinct surprise.

This is more than a day's passing news. It effects not merely a day but a generation and the years to come. The decision made and its outcome is momentous and one in which every citizen is interested.

The open door policy of the Board, promised at the Rehoboth meeting, has now full opportunity for expression. The letters and comments given to the Public do not explain and the Public wants an explanation—full and complete with the facts so clearly stated that the truths can be seen at a glance. No word of censure is heard nor intimidated. The Public is waiting—and every one concerned officially should speak frankly.

In a letter addressed to Dr. H. V. Holloway, secretary of the State Board of Education, Dr. Joseph H. Odell, president of the Delaware School Auxiliary Association, has broken all relations with the two organizations.

Through the transaction it is possible that Wilmington schools may benefit to a large extent in securing necessary repairs to buildings in that city.

The letter, sent yesterday to the state secretary, follows:

August 22, 1921.
State Department of Public Instruction, Dover, Delaware.
Dr. H. V. Holloway, Secretary.
My Dear Dr. Holloway:

Please allow me to review the situation as it exists between the State Department of Public Instruction and the Delaware School Auxiliary Association. On Saturday last, August 20th, I felt compelled to notify the State Department of Public Instruction that unless a basis of cordial co-operation could be found by this morning, August 22d, I should have to break off relationship with the State Department of Public Instruction. This message had to be conveyed verbally and by telephone through you as Superintendent and Secretary because I had no opportunity to give it directly and in person to the members of the State Department. I held myself and my colleagues in readiness to meet your board under the impression that the meeting held in Wilmington on the 22d, was partly for the purpose of finding some basis of co-operation. At the close of office hours today I have had neither formal nor informal word from you or any member of the State Department of Public Instruction. For the past seven weeks the Delaware School Auxiliary Association has tried and tried vainly to obtain some formal consent from the state department for us to co-operate in furthering the educational interests of the state. We have been subjected not only to delay but to humiliation, until our patience is exhausted. We have offered to do certain things for your board and for the rural schools of Delaware, and your board has made no response. In the meantime we are carrying heavy overhead charges and thus wasting some of the funds which Mr. Pierre S. du Pont placed in our keeping for the purpose of providing better educational facilities for the school children of Delaware. As the executive officer and President of the Delaware School Auxiliary I feel that it would be morally wrong as being extremely bad business for us to continue this policy any longer.

Permit me to enumerate:

1. More than a month ago we offered to build rural schools to the value of approximately $300,000 and present them when completed and equipped to the State Department and certain special school districts. In reply to this offer you have thus far given a tardy consent to our building three or four small schools. (Continued on Page Four.)

Down on the Farm to be Stopped; Squire Lovett to Take a Hand

Citizens will be glad to know that officials have determined to put a stop to the street-tough-conversation around Main Street, especially on the Opera House Corner. The offensive language heard here has been the subject of protest for some time. Constable Thompson has given warning that the language and remarks to passers-by must cease. Squire Lovett has been notified of the conditions and he and Officer Tryons have assured the public that the nuisance will be stopped.

Speed Artist Fined

Joseph Doner, of Baltimore, was arrested by Officer Tryons for violating speed regulations and was taken before Squire Lovett who imposed a fine of $12.00.

Caught in Speed Trap

Herbert Medill, of Baltimore, was fined for speeding on Main Street yesterday afternoon.

Lights Off Again

While not especially news, it is again a matter of record that street lights were off for some time on Monday night, causing considerable inconvenience, especially to side street residents.

Democrat Muddle Admitted

Leading Democratic Paper Gives Interpretation

The friction which developed at the meeting of the Democratic State Committee at Rehoboth, Saturday, when an unsuccessful attempt was made to elect a national committeeman, proves that the stand which Every Evening has taken on certain political matters within the past three months is right.

The action in the committee was in part a rebellion against steam roller methods, and was a formal protest against a certain political transaction which is yet fresh in the public mind.

Andrew Gray is not national committeeman today because of the blunders of his political managers. The first mistake was made when the men from Sussex were not officially notified that this meeting was to be held for the purpose of selecting a national committeeman. Those gentlemen rightly thought that they should at least have been extended that courtesy in the official call.

Mistake number two was registered when it was attempted to nominate Mr. Gray without previously consulting the committeemen who live in the lower portion of the State. Those gentlemen were for harmony also, but they did not desire to have it attained by being crushed by the steam roller. They wanted to feel that they had a hand in the selection of the party's leader.

The third error—and this was the most serious of all—was in permitting a man of Mr. Gray's popularity to be sponsored by the faction which does not seem to be in good standing in the party at the present time. If Mr. Gray's name had been advanced in some other way we believe that he would have been unanimously chosen—say, for example, if it had been arranged (Continued on Page Four.)

Fire at Newark Inn

A slight fire occurred at the Newark Inn today at noon which caused a flare of excitement for a time. Fire Chief Wilson rushed chemicals to the scene. The blaze was extinguished and no material damage done. The cause and source of the fire is unknown.

Traffic Signs

Many towns in the state of New Jersey have the following sign: "Go slow—and see the town—Go fast—and visit the jail." It has been suggested that some such thought be expressed at Newark entries.

Another sign up New York State appeals, too: "Life in this town is very dear to us. As our guest, we know you will help protect it by Driving Sanely."

Newark Democracy at Rehoboth

Misses Ann Hossinger, Lena Evans, Mrs. H. F. Graves, W. E. Graves and County Chairman Eben Frazer represented Newark Democracy at the big meeting held at Rehoboth on Saturday.

Arrested for Drunkenness

Harvey Potter (colored) resident of Newark, was arrested Saturday night by Constable Thompson for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. Taken before Squire Lovett he was fined $4.00 and costs.

Peach Festival at Presbyterian Church

There will be a Peach Festival at the Presbyterian Church this Saturday evening, held under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Society. Peaches, ice cream, cake, candy and fancy articles will be for sale.

There will be no church services in the Methodist Church until the second Sunday in September, when Rev. Frank Herson will return from his vacation. The Sunday School session will be held as usual at 10 o'clock.

Governor Denney Enjoying Trip

State House Undergoing Repairs

Aside from a cablegram received on the arrival of Governor Denney with A. B. Magee, Jr., in England, Mrs. Denney, wife of the Governor, has received several letters, the last one under date of August 10th, postmarked at Plymouth, England, in which the Governor stated that he had enjoyed the trip over and was enjoying the best of health. Mayor Magee has also received letters from his son, telling of the delightful trip over.

During Governor Denney's absence from the State Capital his parlors in the State House are undergoing much needed painting, quite a little of the paint having scaled off.

CRACK ATHLETE COMING TO DELAWARE

Derby from Illinois Takes Place of Le Cato

Mr. S. R. Derby, a former crack athlete at the University of Illinois, has been selected Assistant Professor of Physical Education to fill the vacancy created by Professor J. M. LeCato, who recently resigned to accept a position at the Johns Hopkins University.

Since graduation Mr. Derby has had experience in coaching in college circles for three years and served as an ensign in the navy from 1917 to 1919. Mr. Derby is very well recommended and is highly experienced both as a player and coach of various forms of college athletics. In addition he obtained a certificate from the Coaching School of the University of Illinois which he attended during the summer. His work there was under the direction of Coach Zupke, who is regarded as one of the most experienced and successful coaches in higher college and university circles.

Lawn Fete a Success

The lawn fete held last Thursday evening at Ogletown School was a great success even though it had to be postponed from Wednesday night, due to rain. The people of the community supplied an abundance of home-made cake and candy and fancy articles which were sold at very good prices.

The Red Men's Band was scheduled to play on Wednesday night and as they had previous engagements for the following evening it was impossible for them to be present.

The money cleared from this fete is to be used for the library fund, Victrola records and playground equipment for the school.

WHAT WILL SENATE FINANCE COMMITTEE DO WITH TAX BILL?

House Claims Reduction of War Taxes by $818,000,000

One of the chief duties which confronted the new administration and the new Congress at Washington this year was the revision of the taxation laws passed by the Wilson administration. Those laws which are still in operation were, in large part, passed to meet the emergency of the war and as war taxation are particularly burdensome when carried on into the years of peace. The difficulty of proper revision lies in the fact that while the war debts, war losses, and the comparatively unchanged organization and responsibilities of the government demand revenues almost as large as those of the past few years, the people expect and demand a radical cut in taxation. The demand of the people is based on two firmly grasped convictions—that peace is cheaper than war, and that there has been useless waste and extravagance not only in the carrying out of war measures but in the operation of the regular departments of the government.

According to law, bills for raising revenue must originate in the House of Representatives. As soon as the emergency legislation and the tariff bill were off the calendar of the House, the Ways and Means Committee, of which Representative Fordney is the chairman, undertook the preparation of a tax bill. The question of meeting the problem just mentioned has been under discussion and study by the real workers in Congress since April. It was evident from the first that reducing the taxes was a complicated matter. Business depression made revenues smaller under the existing laws. Fresh losses and deficits from the past few years were cropping up at every turn. There was hope in this dilemma that a saving might be effected by business methods of appropriations and expenditure. For this purpose the Budget Law was passed and General Dawes immediately appointed as Director. The next step was the reorganization if possible on a more economical basis of existing departments, hence the cut in the Army and Navy appropriations and the demand for still further cuts. There was an opportunity by following the traditional tariff policy of the Republican party to offset some reduction in taxes by increasing the tariff. This was done by the House when it passed the "Fordney Tariff Bill" in July.

When the Ways and Means Committee finally met to draw a revised taxation and revenue bill they had before them the present laws with their return in revenue, the estimates of Secretary of the Treasury, Mellon, and Director Dawes of the Budget, as to the revenue and expenditures necessary to meet all government obligations next year and in 1923. They had the estimated increase in the tariff returns, and the various increases and decreases of expenditure likely to occur as a result of changing conditions in the next two years. They had especially the demands of the business interests and the people in general that they be relieved of an appreciable amount of the present tax burden. The tax bill presented to the House, amended, and finally passed August 20th, is the answer of our Representatives in Congress to the tax problem, by a vote of 274 to 125.

The bill, with all the reports and estimates of revenue and expenditure, and much other material is now transferred to the table of the Senate Finance Committee. On this same table is the House Tariff bill, in the process of study and amendment. With the Senate Finance Committee now rests the whole policy and structure of government finance, revenue and expenditure. The country has considerable confidence in the work of this committee. Its hearings and deliberations will be followed with interest.

What the House Tax Bill Provides

In the tax bill as it passed the House, is a revision of the income tax on both large and small taxpayers. The exemption for the heads of families is increased from $2,000 to $2,500 on incomes under $5,000 and an allowance for each dependent increased from $200 to $400. The surtax rates on large incomes is repealed leaving a graduated tax in proportion to the size of the income. These changes affect this year's income.

The excess profits tax is repealed, and to take its place a 2 1/2 per cent increase is levied on the income of corporations, making a total Corporation tax of 12 1/2 per cent effective next year.

Transportation taxes are to be repealed January 1st, 1922, also taxes on life, fire and marine insurance policies. All insurance companies, except fraternal, are to be included in the corporation tax.

Other taxes repealed are those on soft drinks and ice cream, toilet preparations and medicines, and the so-called luxury taxes. Reductions in tax are made on athletic equipment, candy, works of art, furs, yachts, and all small water craft.

The total saving under all the changes is estimated by the Ways and Means Committee to amount to $818,000,000. The total revenue produced by all the tax provisions is estimated at 3,366,000,000. This is against an estimated need, according to Secretary Mellon's original report, of $4,200,000,000.

Progress of Relations With Germany

Ever since the signing by President Harding on July 2nd of the Peace Resolution which was a formal declaration of the peace already existing between the United States and Germany and Austria, the country has been awaiting some action toward the negotiation of a treaty with Germany. The Peace Resolution was supposed to have made a definite opening for such negotiations, particularly in regard to commerce and trade relations.

It is understood that informal discussion of a possible treaty is progressing between the German foreign minister and American Commissioner Dresel at Berlin, and that the discussion as expressing the attitude of the Washington administration is leading toward the preliminary articles of a trade agreement for the guaranteeing of American rights under the armistice and the re-establishing of commercial relations, rather than the drawing of a separate treaty of peace with Germany.

So far, whatever negotiations there have been, have been conducted with no publicity whatever. The opinion is attributed to Secretary Hughes that there is good reason for not making any formal announcements while the preliminary discussions, which are only informal conversations, are going on.

PRESIDENT HARDING WRITES TO HOOVER ABOUT RELIEF FOR RUSSIA

No Public Campaign for Funds; Citizens Desiring to Contribute Asked to Give Through American Relief Administration

Help for starving Russia will be quickly and effectively collected and distributed according to plans of Secretary Hoover. All agencies, public and private in the country, except the small group of sympathizers with the Bolshevik government, are apparently eager to throw all available resources to the American Relief Administration to be distributed under the direction of Herbert Hoover. A bill has been introduced in Congress to give all surplus medical supplies in the Army to this Administration for use in Russia.

Expressing the feeling of the responsible administrators of the funds for Russia, President Harding has written the following letter to Secretary Hoover:

The White House, Washington, D. C., Aug. 18, 1921.

My dear Secretary Hoover: As you are aware, I have given my fullest approval of the action on the part of the American Relief Administration in initiating an effort to mitigate the famine in Russia, particularly to save the lives of children. I know that the entrance of America into the problem of Russia through the full heart of charity is one that will appeal to the whole American people.

My particular purpose in addressing this letter to you is to emphasize my wish that the distribution in Russia of all charity arising in the United States should be carried on through one American organization. It is only through single American representation and administration that we can assure to both American and Russian people the best service in the use of their funds.

I am asking the Department of State to co-operate in directing that passports be given for travel to Russia on relief work only to persons who may be in the service of the American Relief Administration.

It is also important that the American people should be protected so far as we can do so from those persons who may wish to thrive on great disasters by creating unnecessary organizations to collect charity.

I trust, therefore, that all those in America who are charitably inclined will give their support either to the American Relief Administration or to such organizations as may undertake to co-operate with that administration.

Very truly yours,
WARREN G. HARDING.

Marshal Foch Shakes Hands with American Soldier Visitors in France

Greeting the members of the American Legion, now visiting in France, with a hearty handshake for each of them, Marshal Foch said, "I am happy to meet you in Metz, a city which is French once more through the heroism of American soldiers. We are celebrating triumph and victory, but I wish to affirm strongly that without your help, I feel we might not have attained it."

Alsace-Lorraine, taken from the French by Germany and unjustly annexed to that country in 1871, as a result of the World War, is once more a part of France. The people of that province and all France feel the joy and satisfaction of reunion after their long and sore grievance of forty-eight years. Since the great demonstration when the French army formally and triumphantly entered Metz on November 19, 1918, the people of Alsace-Lorraine have been ready to take advantage of every occasion for public rejoicing.

The presence of the American Legion representatives is a specially fitting occasion for renewed celebration and both the French and the Americans were thrilled by the greetings and incidents of the visit to Metz last week. As the Legion men reached Fort Joan of Arc, one of the outer defenses of the city, the Stars and Stripes were run up on the fort and a salute of twenty-one guns was fired. The American soldiers responded with vigorous yells and cheers.

In his response to the welcome of Marshal Foch, Major John G. Emery, national commander of the American Legion, referred to the allied commander as a "liberator who can be compared with George Washington." Marshal Foch, who wore on his uniform of all his decorations only the French military medal and the American Distinguished Service Medal, was visibly affected by this tribute. The celebration at Metz and at all the contacts of the American Legion representatives with the French, as well as the dedication of the French monument to the American Expeditionary Force at Thirey, for which the present visit to France was made, have emphasized and cemented the friendship and understanding between America and France.

Liability to Misinterpretation; Printer's Terms Good English — But

Unobserved and unannounced, the president of a "ladies' aid" society

entered the composing room of a newspaper just in time to hear these words issue from the mouth of the boss-printer:

"Billy, go to the devil and tell him to finish that 'murder' he began this morning. Then 'kill' William J. Bryan's youngest grandchild, and dump the 'Sweet Angel of Mercy' into the hell-box. Then make up that 'Naughty Parisian Actress,' and lock up 'The Lady in Her Boudoir.'"

Horried, the good woman fled, and now her children wonder why they are not allowed to play with the printer's youngsters. — Philadelphia Public Ledger.

There Are Others

In a man's life there are three tragedies. The first is when he decides he's too old for Lord Fauntleroy curls and mamma decides otherwise because they're so cute. The second is when the high school Beatrice he can't live without marries and he doesn't die. The third is his shape in a bathing suit. — Boston Transcript.

Successful Method of Protecting Garden Crops From Insects Recently Demonstrated

A mixture of lime, kaolin, and the pulverized leaves and stems of waste tobacco has been shown to be more effective than the commonly used spray of nicotine sulphate, for eradicating insect pests on garden crops. The United States Department of Agriculture reports successful tests with the new tobacco dust, which show not only that insects succumb to it more quickly than to the liquid spray, but a considerable saving in labor and expense. The dust does not burn the plants. With a hand duster of the bellows type one man can cover three acres a day.

Commuter Discovers That Vacuum Cleaner Will Remove Insects From Young Trees

This story is told of a commuter who owns a small garden and some young fruit trees. He had no sprayer, and had been industriously picking bugs off his plants and trees, but could not satisfactorily reach all the branches of the latter without danger of breaking them. When he was ready to tackle the trees he brought out his wife's vacuum cleaner, attached the long nozzle intended for the cleaning of walls and picture moldings, spliced the wire to make a long enough connection for the porch and garage electric light sockets, and successfully removed every bug from even the topmost branches of his young trees.

Many Uses for Sweet Potatoes and Peanuts

During the hearings preliminary to the presentation of the Fordney tariff bill to the House of Representatives at Washington, citizens from several Southern states asked for protective duties in the interest of special Southern products. A list of 107 uses for the sweet potato was presented, and this according to the negro scientist who had discovered many of them, was far from complete. The list already included such widely different products as ice cream and ink. Cereal coffee was one of the special uses for peanuts.

Male Chicks from Large Eggs

A French scientist, Lienhart, has carried out experiments which indicate that there is a correlation between size and weight of eggs and sex of chick. The heavier eggs were found to produce a large proportion of males, the lighter eggs a large proportion of females. For the successful application of the device, it was found necessary to use eggs produced by pure-breds and from a pen of hens out of the same brood. It was found desirable, further, to set eggs laid at the height of production, as there is an apparent tendency with all hens to lay eggs of less weight at the beginning and also toward the end of a litter.

The discovery, if such it can be called, has not yet been fully exploited, and its limitations as well as capacities shown. The reasoning which led to the first experiments is interesting.

The experimenter had observed that in all breeds and varieties of poultry the male is markedly heavier than the female. Through tests, he was aware also that this difference in weight was true of the chicks, being determinable in the first days of life. He reasoned that the difference would also be apparent in the egg.

American poultry-raisers can be depended on to give the sex-determination plan of Lienhart a prompt try-out. The desirability of being able to regulate the proportion of pullets and cockerels in the hatch when setting the eggs is of prime importance. Setting eggs at present, the poultry raiser calculates on about fifty per cent females. The males are a necessary evil, so to speak. They are sometimes sold for broilers or fries at two months or later, in other cases raised to the roasting stage. This necessity to hatch many males which are not needed requires more exhaustive poultry equipment than would be needed were it possible to regulate sex of the hatches. Should sex-determination become practical, it would alter poultry conditions to a considerable extent, and result in the marketing of the prospective roosters in egg form, with the prospective hens reserved for hatching.—Scientific American.

Riding a Kite Has More Thrills than Flying One

A small water plane has been invented which is self-stabilizing when it is in the air and is controlled from the ground along the shore. The string to this exciting kite is a steel cable, and the man who flies it has charge of a fifty horse power electric motor on the ground. The plane carries several passengers and as it combines the thrills of flying with perfect safety, it is tremendously popular at the bathing beaches where it has been installed as a feature of the water sports.

Plant Pests Cause Loss of Millions of Bushels of Wheat

If all the wheat now destroyed annually by pests could be saved and made into flour the United States Department of Agriculture says it would add approximately 29,463,700 barrels to the yearly output of the Nation. The annual production of wheat in this country for the four-year period 1916 to 1919, inclusive, was 783,849,500 bushels. The annual loss from disease during this period was 147,318,500 bushels.

While it is not possible entirely to eliminate wheat diseases, it is possible to reduce the toll much below what it has been in recent years, says the department. One branch of the work of the office of cereal investigations in the Bureau of Plant Industry is to work out the preventive and control measures for the diseases of all cereal crops. Another branch of the work of this office, which is of equal importance in increasing production of cereal crops, is the development and introduction of superior varieties of grain which produce higher yields in localities where they are especially well adapted, or which have disease-resistant qualities. This work is carried on in co-operation with the various State experiment stations, and in many cases has made profitable farming possible in sections in which agriculture was hazardous previous to the introduction of new crops or varieties particularly well suited to local conditions.

"Contentment is as lofty and fine a state of mind as smug satisfaction is unbecoming and unworthy. Faith in the future will make use of contentment, but it can do nothing with smug satisfaction. The man whose mind is closed to all proposals for change, for reasonable experiment with the unfamiliar and untested, is stubbornly without faith in the future. His mind and spirit move in a closed circle and are the captives of their present environment. The free spirit will use its environment as a stepping stone to new experiments, and to new undertakings. It will not be wasteful or extravagant of effort because it and past experiment have taught and what enterprises and undertakings have been definitely set aside as unwise, unbecoming or unworthy."

TREES THRIVE IN SANDY SOIL

Bring Prosperity and Pleasure to Farmers

Thousands of acres of sandy, unproductive land in Nebraska have been turned into valuable and attractive forests by the United States Forestry Service. Instead of a menace to the farmers because of sandstorms caused by the wind blowing the sand in great, dense clouds over the roads and farms, this land now furnishes the soft wood needed by the farmer for many purposes, and the trees add to the beauty and comfort of farm life in the surrounding country. The forests serve as a wind-break from storms and wind, protecting both cattle and crops, and are already ideal picnic grounds.

"The officials of the United States Forest Service, and the farmers of Nebraska are exceedingly proud of the successful culmination of this dream and experiment. Where once existed nothing but barren and desolate semi-deserts, one may now observe beautiful young forests which are already supplying the farmers with an abundance of cheap fence posts and other lumber. These attractive forests are also utilized as picnic grounds where happy families for miles around assemble on Saturday afternoons and enjoy life as only rational and healthy human beings are capable of doing.

"Nebraska is not the only state that has large quantities of waste sand areas. Other states are likewise afflicted. They can easily overcome this unfortunate condition by following the Nebraska plan. The officials of the Forest Service, located at Washington, are only too eager to co-operate with any community desiring to improve such conditions. Which will be the next community to tackle the job?"

Navy Training to be Limited Under New Appropriation

The decrease in the appropriation under the navy bill, the first step in the limitation of armaments as a naval policy, while not so drastic in its affect on personnel, as the cut in the army appropriation, does put the navy under immediate necessity of reducing the Naval Reserve.

The staff of reserve officers numbers at present in all grades and departments about 26,500, 6,700 of these are in the Coast Defense Reserve and decision has just been reached to abolish this whole department of reserves. Officers in this department with special records for active sea service during the war, will be given the opportunity of transfer to the sea-going reserve force which is to be retained.

In the Reserve Aviation Corps are about 3,250 officers. This department will be retained with about half the number of officers. The Dental Corps, Construction Corps, and Chaplain Corps of the reserves are to be abolished and the Medical and Supply Corps are to be greatly reduced.

All of these changes are regarded as necessary and the wisest arrangement for reducing the actual expenditures for the Naval Reserve from the $14,000,000 asked for in the original Naval Bill to the $7,000,000 appropriated by Congress.

Truth vs Fact

The "Mirrors of Washington," commenting on the National Personalities of the Day, is the book of the hour. The anonymous author in Sunday's New York Times gives his explanation for writing the book. His comments on newspapers are interesting observations and tend to show the trend of the times. Truth versus Fact is his theme. In the practical public's disgust for high flown phrases, the terms of Truth and Facts have become confused. Today Truth is demanded which in the final analysis is Facts correctly interpreted. Here in Delaware Facts are often published. What is needed is Truth—or the interpretation of those Facts. The author makes the following pertinent observations:

"So great is the need of truth to a democracy that a vast industry employing billions of capital has been built up to supply it. Never in the history of the world was so much money and so much energy spent to obtain the truth as by the American press today, and I believe, on the whole so disinterestedly.

But the daily press is limited by its own nature. It gives you every twenty-four hours the complete history of one day. It overwhelms you with facts. Often you cannot find the truth for the facts. You get a daily close-up of the Government. You do not see the Government. Your eyes are fastened upon the political beauties of Washington. You see the stars in the title roles of democracy, all specially posed. You almost forget the play in the bewildering succession of films.

"Not only does the pressure of the immediate overwhelm editors and correspondents, but a certain convention has grown up in the press which leads it to present to its readers a bare transcript of daily events rather than a study of and comment upon what is behind those events. No matter what happens you "must not be editorial in news columns." Editorializing is left for those who are far away from the facts and who can only guess at what they mean.

"This convention has grown up from the desire of newspapers to avoid old abuses of partisanship. In their wish to tell the truth, without color, they tell not the truth but the facts. The truth is not an uncolored thing. It differs from the facts as the vivid colored visual image of your friend differs from his photograph. The press gives us, then, not public life as it is, but the æsthetic values of public life.

"And this newspaper convention against editorializing, which is spreading from the news columns to the editorial pages, opens papers to the press agent. It was discovered by the Wilson Administration, with the war to aid it, that what it chose to say about itself was news and could find its way to front pages. Our public men are only too well aware that they can largely write the daily story of themselves that goes to the country. Each has his own press agent.

"Our magazine, not having a daily duty to perform, might give a little of the true color to the photographs of the press. But the only color many of them have on their palettes is the color of rose. The all-action tendency spreading among them is nowhere more conspicuous than in their sketches of public men. Some one told his editor, after the muckraking period came to its unhappy end, that 'you cannot permanently sell pessimism to the American public.' You cannot. Neither can you permanently sell optimism to the American public. You cannot sell them any 'ism' at all.

"President Harding is starting out modest and unspoiled. His strength is that he has surrounded himself with able advisers and listens to them. Without being great himself he may, and I hope he will, give us a great Administration. Recently he has referred to himself, talking to his friends, as an ordinary man in the Presidency. The object of a 'Mirror' is to keep him and all his associates from bamboozling themselves—as Wilson, who had no Mirror during the war, did so successfully that he could not be 'debamboozled'—with us all standing by applauding the growing illusion."

Farmers' Picnic in Sussex

Sussex farmers are developing real community spirit, and a very practical advantage is to follow to the farmers themselves and to the State. No one can read of the picnic held by the Sussex County Grange and Farm Bureau, with the speeches by authorities on planting and marketing crops, and the other excellent items on the program, without feeling a sense of progress, and also the expectation that those of us who live in towns are going to buy directly from the farmer the good things which can be produced better by Delaware farmers on Delaware soil than anywhere else.

It is a smiling comment oftentimes that Sons of Delaware never tire of extolling the virtues of the Diamond State. And the boast is well founded and being practically proved every passing year. Rich as the State is in its history and glorious deeds of the past, the agricultural interests and possibilities are just being realized. The farmers are making history every day. The Garden Spot of our dreams is fast becoming a reality.

ranged beforehand that a group from one of the two lower counties was to have the pleasure of putting him forward.

By this we do not mean to condone the action of the Sussex delegates who bolted. We condemn that action. We believe that the majority should rule in party meetings just as it does in general elections. This is certainly not the time for defections from the party's ranks. Instead of leaving the committee room, the bolters should have presented their side to the committee, made a strong plea for their points, and then accepted the ruling of the majority.

But the Sussex countians did no such thing. In their impetuosity they shouted "lets go," and go they did.

There are many things which we could say about this transaction, but we believe that harmony is the first need of the Democratic party, and we are willing to do our share by omitting caustic criticisms which we could level at various groups in the party which participated in the meeting. But we wish to suggest that Saturday's debacle proves that Every Evening's position on Democratic party politics has been sound. We would recall to mind the fact that within the past few weeks we have time and again called upon all concerned to get together and agree upon a man who would be acceptable to all. Every Evening's advice went unheeded; the steam roller was pulled out, and at the last moment the Sussex men threw a monkey wrench into its works. . . . Even the novice in politics can recognize the moral in Saturday's happenings.

—Every Evening.

We cannot proceed on this basis because our overhead charges would be out of all proportion to the amount of construction undertaken.

2. We have offered to continue the work of pupil enrollment and turn all of the results over to the State without cost. Pupil enrollment ties in very closely both with the attendance campaign and with medical and dental examinations of school pupils. For the last named—medical and dental work—we have available $18,000, which, with the amounts furnished by the Child Welfare Commission, the American Red Cross and the Delaware Anti-Tuberculosis Society would make it possible to safeguard the health and improve the school progress of the pupils of the State. We regard these three phases of work as inter-related and that the value of any one of them is greatly lessened if all are not put into effect at once.

3. You have our written assurance that everything we do is to be done under the authority and subject to the direction of the State Department of Instruction, and that in no way do we wish or contemplate any weakening or transference of the powers of your board. To put the matter bluntly, there are certain things needed for education progress in Delaware, and your board does not possess the money or facilities with which to do them. We have offered what you lack and we have offered it in a sympathetic and co-operative spirit, and we have received little beyond delays or rebuffs in return.

I am enclosing our check for $4,501 to the order of the State Department of Public Instruction, the itemized amounts being as follows:

For additional supervisors in the white schools not provided for by the Legislature, $3301; for additional supervisors for colored schools per our letter of August 3, 1921, $300; balance due on Felton Academy to be used for repairs to the building, $1000. Total $4601.

With the receipt of this check I must notify you that our relationships are closed. Of course, you may make a formal appeal to the Delaware School Auxiliary Association that a no relationship be formed that I will place such appeal before its members.

Our charter and deeds of trust do not confine us to expenditures for rural schools; at our discretion we can divert our funds into other channels, within the limits of the State, as the city of Wilmington, where new school buildings are as urgently needed as in any part of Delaware. When the P. S. du Pont fund was established the Claxton Survey on Wilmington schools had not been made and the appalling condition of the city schools was not apparent.

In closing please permit me to render a summary of our trusteeship to date:

The Delaware School Auxiliary Association has expended for Educational purposes in Delaware, $1,384,346.17.

The above amount does not include any moneys spent by the Service Citizens of Delaware.

At this moment we have schools under construction or contracted for as follows:

Schools for White pupils	$407,000
Schools for Colored pupils	204,000
Sanitary work at State College for Colored pupils, Dover, Delaware	10,500

Total $621,500
I remain,

Yours Sincerely,

JOSEPH H. ODELL,

President.

At Dover yesterday Dr. H. V. Holloway, secretary of the State Board of Education to whom Dr. Odell's letter was addressed, gave out for publication copies of two letters which he said he had written to the Delaware School Auxiliary Association and mailed to that association Monday afternoon as a result of the meeting of the State Board in Wilmington on Saturday. These letters dealt with matters that Dr. Odell mentioned in his letter. One of Dr. Holloway's letters to the Delaware School Auxiliary Association follows: "I am pleased to inform you that the State Board of Education at its meeting in Wilmington Saturday adopted unanimously the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the State Board of Education hereby approves the enrollment-attendance campaign that was in effect for the year 1920-1921 and requests that the Delaware School Auxiliary Association continue its work in tabulating the results of such investigation for the benefit of the State Board of Education and under its direction for the year 1921-1922."

Continuing, this letter says: "I was also directed to ask the Delaware School Auxiliary Association for an appropriation sufficient to cover the salary and necessary traveling expenses of four visiting teachers, one for New Castle county, one for Kent county, and two for Sussex county, who should assist the schools of the State as such and by getting the findings of the School Auxiliary Association in regard to attendance before the people of the respective school districts."

In the second letter, Dr. Holloway said the shortness of time at the meeting last Saturday prevented the State Board of Education from taking up the plans relative to medical inspection in the schools. He added, however, that since the meeting he and Dr. Thomas R. Brown, president of the State Board, had gone over his report (evidently meaning a report from the School Auxiliary Association) and that the things they desired had been made possible by the various organizations mentioned in the report. The letter suggested some follow-up work in this line in Kent county.

about a satisfactory arrangement whereby the State Board would be willing to proceed with the work as planned by them for the advancement and upbuilding of the schools of this State.

"The State Board has no money with which to extend or improve the housing conditions of the public schools of the State and it is only by working in harmony with and soliciting the aid of the Delaware School Auxiliary Association that anything can be done looking to that end. I do not know whether it was for lack of action or action contrary to their wishes that caused them to take this step.

"As far as I am concerned I hope that some action will be taken by the State Board asking the Delaware School Auxiliary Association to reconsider this action as I feel the work they are doing is a most wonderful help to the educational and physical condition of our schools. I do not think the work of P. S. du Pont has been appreciated to the extent it should be.

"I do not know of any differences among the members of the board toward the State School Auxiliary Association as they have been very modest in their suggestions and only ask to be allowed to do the most good in the best way possible."

Mr. Holloway Explains; Says Files Do Not Contain Dr. Odell's Statement

When Secretary Holloway of the State Board of Education was asked today about the first point in Dr. Joseph H. Odell's letter of August 22, concerning an offer to build rural schools to the value of approximately $300,000 and present them completed and equipped to the State Department of Education and certain special school districts, he replied that he had gone over his files and was unable to find any such statement, but remembered that Dr. Odell referred to a tabulation in his office containing a list of schools which he had the board of trustees of the Delaware School Auxiliary Association pass upon before vacation. This list, however, was never received by the State Department, Mr. Holloway declared.

MAYOR TO ASSIST IN RAISING FUNDS

Will be Chairman of the Wilmington Community Service Campaign Committee

Mayor Harvey will act as chairman of the fund-raising committee of the Wilmington Community Service campaign, to be held September 26 to October 1, according to an announcement made yesterday by John P. Nields, chairman of the Community Service.

In speaking of the activities of the Community Service, Mr. Nields said: "The past year has seen the organization of ten or more neighborhood associations, whose sole interest is in providing opportunities for wholesome play and recreation in the respective neighborhoods."

Nearly one-half of the money to be raised in the campaign, Mr. Nields said, will be used for permanently equipping those neighborhoods which are unable to satisfactorily equip their own playgrounds.

150,000 U. S. CLERKS TO BE LET OUT SOON

Will Be Dismissed as Soon as Possible to Get Back on Pre-War Level

Approximately 150,000 government employees in Washington and throughout the country are slated to be dismissed as rapidly as possible so there may be a speedy return to pre-war employment by the government. The administration has adopted a policy of striving for the pre-war allotment of clerks even before the reorganization program now being worked out is put in operation. It is in furtherance of the general economy policy.

These employees, for the most part, are in the civil service. The total number of civil service employees is around 450,000 now, whereas before the war the number was 300,000.

The first step in retrenchment with regard to discharge of clerks came on July 1, but it appeared last week, when 4,000 more employees were dropped, that the process is far too slow. In consequence, a policy was adopted to get back to the pre-war level by December 1, if possible.

Secretary Weeks took the lead in demanding reductions of civilian personnel, issuing orders to chiefs of all branches of the War Department to get back as rapidly as possible to the pre-war level. This same policy is to be followed almost immediately by heads of other government departments.

"It has been brought to the attention of the Secretary of War," Mr. Weeks announced, "that, notwithstanding efforts made for reduction of the civilian force of the War Department and in the military service generally, there still remained on July 1, 1921, a total of civilian employees in the field service of the War Department of 68,332, which constitutes a reduction of about 22 1/2 per cent of the total since March 1, 1921.

"While appreciating the fact that large facilities and supplies left over from the war still exist, and provisions for maintenance and protection thereof must be made, it is certain that by a better distribution and organization of civilian employees a still greater reduction in force can be made which if carefully studied and put into effect will reduce the civilian personnel in each branch and department comparable to the civilian force employed prior to the war.

"The Secretary of War directs that a gradual reduction in civilian personnel be effected so as to reduce the number by December 31, 1921, in such manner as to effect a saving equal to that realized between March 1, 1921, and July 1, 1921, on the total of army civilian employees. In order that a clearer conception of the civilian employees situation may be obtained the Secretary of War directs that beginning with the month of July monthly reports be submitted."

Whether it actually will be possible to get back to pre-war level officials are unable to say at this time, but that is the goal for the present. Since the beginning of the war the government has gone into several new enterprises, including the bureau of war risk insurance and the shipping board, with radical expansions in other lines, particularly in the Treasury Department. It is possible to get back to this level now there is little doubt that it will be possible when the reorganization program now being worked out by the joint congressional committee on reorganization is complete.—National Republican.

New Supply of Oil Discovered

Concern that the supply of crude oil in this country would be exhausted within a few years seems to be relieved by the prospect of a new source. The Rocky Mountains of the West abound in great masses of oil shale. The shale is a deposit from former mountain lakes, which when heated gives off gases that are easily condensed into crude oil. Gasoline and lubricating oil are extracted in the proportion of from twenty to one hundred gallons a ton.

Engineers are trying to solve the difficulties presented by the location of the shale, which is in great cliffs on the mountain sides. Constructing trails and getting the necessary machinery installed presents a formidable undertaking on some of the high ranges. Engineers are hopefully on the job, however, and expect to make it possible for the United States to draw upon this practically inexhaustible supply of oil.

Three Cent Postage

a Justifiable Tax

The suggestion that there be a return to 3-cent postage—which prevailed during the war—as one means of raising the $4,000,000,000 needed to pay the government's expenses next year is worth the serious consideration of Congress. While this would properly be regarded as a tax, it would be a tax for which the payer got his full money's worth, which is not the case with all taxes. The efficient dispatch and delivery of a first-class letter is worth more than 2 cents and it is worth more than 3 cents. No one pays it that does not get the service given for it, and no one who gets the service can evade paying it. It is self collectible, at no expense to the government. It will cost no more to issue 3-cent stamps than 2-cent stamps, and each one used means 1 cent additional income for the government. It is spread over the whole country among practically all of the people, and is a burden to no one.—Indianapolis News.

New Discoveries of

Gold and Oil in Alaska

A boy six years old is having the exciting adventure of discovering a new gold field in Alaska and starting the usual rush of prospectors. This gold strike which is near Gridwood, is said by surveyors to run in ledges through a long area, and the quartz is estimated to yield $1,400 to the ton.

According to another report oil has been discovered in several hills on one of the capes in another part of Alaska. A second oil supply has been discovered at a distance of three miles from Cape Simpson and only a few hundred yards from the shore. Prospectors in the party of R. D. Adams say the flow of oil down the hillside can be seen from the coast. The oil streams on the cape flow into lakes at the foot of the hills.

These discoveries are hailed with delight by many of the older residents and developers of Alaskan territory, who believe the country has a great future in the development of its resources, and who have been working hard to create new interest in its promise and reward for vigorous and capable young Americans.

INTERESTING STORY OF GULPH ROAD HAS ASSOCIATION WITH DELAWARE

Narberth Is Present Home of Former Dean of Agriculture at University of Delaware

Associations past and present make interesting reading for the Delawarean in John T. Faris's description of the Gulph Road, in his book, Old Roads Out of Philadelphia. Harry Hayward, now head of the agriculture department of N. W. Ayre and Sons Advertising Agency is a resident of this historic section. "There is no more picturesque road near Philadelphia than the Gulph Road, branches of which wind in what seems an aimless manner through Lower Merion Township. The pedestrian, the horseman or the automobile owner will enjoy a trip along the sections which are marked on a good road map as the Old Gulph Road. But the trip should be made in a leisurely manner that none of the points of historical interest may be missed.

"The oldest section of the road leads out of Narberth by way of Narberth Avenue. On this section may be seen the ruins of several old mills dating from before the Revolution, notably Dove Paper Mill, where the paper for Continental bank notes and other city government paper was made."

In his description of the Bryn Mawr section of this road, Mr. Faris gives the story of the famous Harrison House, so named by an early Delawarean. The house was built in 1704 by Rowland Ellis, who called his estate Bryn Mawr, after his old home in Wales. "He was obliged to transport in panniers, on horses, all the sand, stone and other material used for the house, since there were at that time no road vehicles available. It is a two story house, built of stone, with quaint dormer windows.

"In 1719 the house was bought by Richard Harrison, together with several hundred acres of land. The name Harrison was bestowed by the new owner, this being his own name with the change of a single letter.

"From his old home in Delaware where he had been a tobacco planter, Richard Harrison brought his household goods and slaves in a sailing vessel. The vessel was attacked by river pirates, and the goods were stolen. The slaves were compelled to find their way overland to the estate on the Gulph Road.

"The story is told that some of these slaves soon afterward attempted to poison the members of the Harrison family, that they might be free to return to Delaware. One morning they put poison in the chocolate, and placed it on the table just before the silent moment which was kept by the family, after the manner of Friends. Just then there was a knock. Some one, rising to open the door, overturned the chocolate. No one would have known of the poison but for the pet cat, which died after licking up the chocolate. Frightened by the event, the guilty slaves confessed the crime they had attempted.

"On the death of Richard Harrison in 1747 the property came into the possession of Hannah Harrison, his daughter. In 1774 she married Charles Thompson, friend of Benjamin Franklin, and secretary of the Stamp Act Congress of 1765, and secretary of Congress for the first fourteen years of its history. History says that he presented to Washington the certificate of his election as President of the United States. But perhaps his greatest claim to fame is that he was known among the Indians with whom he dealt as 'The Man Who Always Speaks the Truth.'

Lafayette Day to be Celebrated
A movement has been started to make a nation-wide anniversary celebration every year on September 6, to be known as Lafayette Day. The Lafayette-Marne Committee, the American Legion, and the Lafayette Day National Committee are co-operating to make this year's celebration nation-wide and to establish the annual fete-day. The first Lafayette Day celebration was held in New York City in 1916. Last year a celebration took place at West Point. This year the larger movement is to have its official national ceremony at Mount Vernon, the home of George Washington. Secretary of Commerce, Herbert C. Hoover, will be one of the speakers, and also Dr. John H. Finley.

September 6th is the anniversary of the first battle of the Marne in the World War. As an annual anniversary this day, called Lafayette Day would celebrate both French aid to America during the Revolution and American aid to the French during the recent war, but more than all it would be a day of international friendship to express and cement the admiration and understanding between two great nations.

STREAM OF SILVER FLOWS TO AMERICA

White Metal Coming Back to This Country After Helping to Win the War

In this section of the country, where paper money, to large extent, suffices for hand-to-hand purchases and where the silver dollar, which burdens the trousers pocket in the West, is a rarity in daily business dealing, the importance of silver in the Government scheme of financial security is lost sight of, particularly when gold at the moment commands so much attention.

Silver, like gold, is trickling toward the United States. It is coming to its best and readiest market in a stream that, of course, is not comparable to the amount of gold imported, but yet in sufficient volume to present unmistakable evidence that nooks and crannies are being searched for hoarded silver, that bank vaults of Europe in which silver has been collected for months are being emptied, and that our own chest, depleted by war needs, is being refilled to its normal brimming level. The silver now coming to the United States was mostly mined in this country, or at least exported from here, and comes back with a service stripe.

Silver was used in the war to offset German propaganda in the Far East. While troops were holding back the Germans in their drive on Paris in the Spring of 1918, a flood of silver offset completely the efforts of the Germans to stir up trouble in the Far East. Silver dollars, idle in the vaults of the United States Treasury Department, were melted down into bars and hurried across the Pacific to provide additional cover for paper money, about which the natives of India had become alarmed.

The importance of dispelling disquieting reports in the Far East about the reserves, is indicated by the importance of silver in the economic life of the Far East. It is the money of the bazaars of India. It is the coin in which bills are paid and purchases made, and is the coin with which the native has been familiar since childhood and the one bullion in which he places explicit confidence.

The Pitman act of April, 1918, authorized the melting of silver dollars to the extent of 350,000,000 to meet the world shortage of silver, production here falling far short of meeting the demand. The stock of silver money held by the United States was reduced from $757,400,624 in 1915 to $540,282,594 held at the end of 1920.

Now the chest is being replenished. Last February the coinage of silver dollars was resumed and the Treasury is to continue its purchases of silver and coining operations until the last silver dollar melted to help win the war has been restored.—New York Times.

A Better Chance
Thousands of country-bred folk who have made a go of it in town are crowding round the ticket windows to buy transportation back to the scenes of their childhood, which they mention with considerable emotion. It is a curious fact, however, that they will be ready to make the return trip in two weeks or less. They talk about "God's country," but show no signs of being willing to remain there indefinitely themselves. Pinned down to facts, most of them will admit that the reason they left the country was to get a better chance.

The researches of a Columbia professor on the relative standing of country and city schools give a clue to the reason. The country child has just about half as much chance for education as is offered his city cousin. Up among the hills school is kept for 137 days a year, in a square wooden building where, too often, the instruction is given by a teacher who failed to get a position in town. The city child, with 185 days' schooling under a better teacher in a fine building, does eight years' elementary work while the country child is skipping through what amounts, on paper, to only six years.

These figures are taken, not from one state, but are representative of the whole Union. The chief advantage the country offers are the extra curriculum activities in turnip patch, pasture, orchard and wood, but even the out-of-door life cannot be all the poets paint it. The rural death-rate is greater than that of the cities.

The only bright side to the picture is that the country myth is being exploded in the interest of the children who must grow up there. The story has been told in order that the barefooted youngsters may have a better chance.—From the Boston Globe.

Country Editor
Everybody has written about the trials and tribulations of the country editor, but few have written about his joys.

He stands ahead of the preacher, the lawyer and the public speaker because he never talks to empty benches, but speaks in all the homes where his paper goes. He never makes impromptu speeches which generally disgust the audience, but writes with deliberation and premeditation. The preacher's influence for good seldom reaches farther than his congregation, while the editor's field for good reaches all the congregations in the county. The lawyer makes a great speech in the courthouse and only one or two hundred persons hear him, but when the editor writes a good editorial it is copied in various papers in the state.

The editor distributes more flowers than a florist and he asks nothing in return for them but thanks. The editor has an opportunity to do the individual citizen a service and he never hesitates to do it if consistent with his obligations to the public. The editor has the greatest opportunity to convert men and women to his way of thinking on public questions. As the lighthouse on the shore warns the ships from the rocks the editor can warn the public from frauds and fakers. The editor has the greatest opportunity to protect society from evil by standing for the law and creating public sentiment for it.

The editor never tires of boosting his town and county, and if both do not grow it is not his fault. He helps the deserving young men with words of commendation and restrains the old by words of warning. His field of usefulness is broader than any one else in the community, and if he does not get any returns for his efforts for settlement he has a sufficient reward in seeing things get better. He rejoices in his opportunity for service to his fellow man, his town and his country, and goes on his way rejoicing, whether or not he gets any return for it.—Elizabeth, N. J., News.

Russian Output Falls 90 Per Cent
Herbert C. Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, has issued an analytical statement of conditions of poverty and industrial and agricultural demoralization brought about in one of the most productive regions of the world by soviet doctrines and Socialist economics.

The statement of Secretary Hoover is based on facts in the possession of the department. They reveal the full destitution of Russia, a destitution which the world has been loth to believe, and which has brought millions to the point of actual hunger and complete poverty. Russia of today has an abundance of only one commodity, namely, paper rubles, of which 1,000,000,000,000 are now in circulation, but with a value constantly approaching zero, and with little or no purchasing power even were there produce to be bought and sold.

Agriculture, transportation, industrial production reveal the same story of decay and demoralization. The Commerce Department report shows that in many of the fertile provinces of Russia agricultural production was reduced last year in some cases to less than 50 per cent, and as low as 25 per cent of the year before; that even the provinces which have still surpluses, and they are only four as compared with 20 in pre-war days, cannot export them because transportation has even out-distanced agriculture in decay.

The exportable surplus of food which amounted to 6,000,000 to 10,000,000 a year had disappeared last year, to the extent that the urban population were going on half rations. Railway inefficiency is shown by the fact that of 19,106 locomotives, not more than 7,650 at the outside are fit for operation, and of these 1,000 are idle because of lack of fuel, coal production having declined 80 per cent. The outlook now is that whole sections of Russia must be closed to transportation. Statistics submitted show that industry in general has decreased 80 per cent while the important textile industries of the country are approaching the point of zero production. At the moment there are only 4 per cent of the Russian cotton spindles operating.—National Republican.

Build Your Character in Your Home

A Word to Home Builders

A MAN'S home is his castle. It should represent his own ideas. The community will oftentimes judge the man by the house he builds.

Many men, however, have not the building streak in their make-up, so they send off and get a ready made set of plans and house and call it home. It doesn't represent them. They are never comfortable in it. It is a place to live, but never a home.

What the prospective builder needs to do is to get a contractor to put the ideas in the building that represents the owner.

I COUNT my success on this one fact. I talk over the prospective building and try to get the point of view of the man--then put those ideas of his into the home.

I shall be glad to go over your ideas and plans.
