Moral Character of Washington

In most qualities, the character of Washington is the most truly dignified that was ever presented to the respect and admiration of mankind. He was one of the few entirely good men in whom goodness had no touch of weakness. He was one of the few rigorously just men whose justice was not commingled with any of the severity of personal temper. His temper, by nature, was ardent, and inclined to action. His passions were quick and capable of an intensity of emotion, which, when it was kindled by either intellectual or moral indignation, amounted almost to fury. But how rarely—how less than rarely—was anything of this kind exhibited in his public career! Seen in his public duties his attitude and character—the one elevated above familiarity, the other purged of all littlenesses—present a position and an image almost purely sublime.

"No airy and light passion stirs abroad
 To ruffle or to soothe him; all are quelled
 Beneath a nightier, sterner stress of mind;
 Wakeful he sits and lonely, and unmoved,
 Beyond the arrows, views or shouts of men;
 As oft-times an eagle, when the sun
 Throws o'er the varying earth his early ray,
 Stands solitary, stands immovable
 Upon some highest cliff, and rolls his eye,
 Clear, constant, unobservant, unabashed,
 In the cold light, above the dews of morn."

But when viewed in the gentle scenes of domestic and friendly relations, there are traits which give loveliness to dignity, and add grace to exaltation like the leaves and twigs which cluster around the trunk and huge branches of the colossal elm, making that beautiful which else were only grand. His sentiments were quick and delicate; his refinement exquisite. The sources of his social nature were the spirit and maxims of a cavalier. His demeanor towards all men illustrated, in every condition, that "finest sense of justice which the mind can form." In all things admirable, in all things to be imitated; in some things scarce imitable and only to be admired.

Something New Century Club Is Doing At Smyrna

Smyrna, Del., Feb. 14, 1910.
 Mr. Everett C. Johnson,
 Dear Sir:—The Secretary of the "Century Club" of Smyrna has asked me to answer your letter to her. I feel that I have not so much to tell about concerning the needed improvements of Smyrna. But the good work has begun and we hope will continue. We have begun at the railroad station, Smyrna being a branch road, and anything but a paying proposition to the P. R. R. Co. they have just left it as it was first built. The stand pipe for the town's water supply stands in front of the station. Surrounding the stand pipe were old crooked poplar trees, (around such trees not even grass will grow). The Civic Committee made an appointment to meet with the "town council", and convinced them that the first thing to do was to have the trees removed. The work was begun, and every tree is down and cut up, but not all cleared off (as weather has interfered). One of our liberal-minded members of Century Club has promised us a fountain near the stand pipe, and we expect to sow grass seed and put out maple trees or ornamental ones of some kind, and make the spot as attractive as possible.
 We hope, before many years, to beautify the surroundings of the lake at the other end of town.
 Very sincerely,
 Chairman of Civics, New Century Club, Smyrna, Del.

The Girls' Bachelor Club was entertained by the Misses Fader on Monday evening. The Misses Wiley and Pennoek, of the West Chester Normal School, were guests of the club.

Does This Apply To You?

"WE READ IN DEAD MEN'S BOOKS! WE LAUGH AT DEAD MEN'S JOKES, AND CRY AT DEAD MEN'S PATHOS! WE ARE SICK OF DEAD MEN'S DISEASES, PHYSICAL AND MORAL, AND DIE OF THE SAME REMEDIES WITH WHICH DEAD DOCTORS KILLED THEIR PATIENTS! WE WORSHIP THE LIVING DIETY ACCORDING TO DEAD MEN'S FORMS AND CREED. WHATEVER WE SEEK TO DO OF OUR OWN FREE NOTION, A DEAD MAN'S ICY HAND OBSTRUCTS US! TURN OUR EYES TO WHAT POINT WE MAY, A DEAD MAN'S WHITE IMMIGRABLE FACE ENCOUNTERS THEM, AND FREEZES OUR VERY HEART. AND WE MUST BE DEAD OURSELVES BEFORE WE CAN BEGIN TO HAVE OUR PROPER INFLUENCE ON OUR OWN WORLD, BUT THE WORLD OF ANOTHER GENERATION, WITH WHICH WE SHALL HAVE NO SHADOW OF A RIGHT TO INTERFERE."

College Notes

On Friday evening, before one of the largest crowds of the season, the annual Faculty-Senior basketball was played in the college gymnasium. The game was one of the most interesting that has been played this season. The players kept the audience in a roar of laughter from start to finish.

DELAWARE DEFEATS LEBANON VALLEY.

On Saturday evening the Delaware College basketball team defeated the Lebanon Valley Five by the score of 80 to 6. The game was played in the College Gym, and was witnessed by quite a large crowd. From the start the Blue and Gold team simply played the visitors off their feet. The Lebanon team failed to land a goal until near the end of the first half. Houston's goal-shooting for Delaware was the feature of the evening. He was in excellent form and succeeded in landing 26 goals. Lawin at centre, played an excellent game, although up against a man heavier and taller than himself. This victory atones in a measure, for the walkover the College received at Annapolis last week.
 Between the halves of the varsity game the Scrubs tied with the Belmont Trade School, 8-8. The Scrubs had several new men and played the best game of the season. Two 20-minute periods were allowed these teams to play off the tie, but even at the end of these periods the score remained the same.
 Wingett, '09, refereed both games, while Prof. Smith, '06, was time-keeper.

RIFLE TEAM.

The College rifle team made a score of 1613 in the inter-collegiate league on Thursday. The Blue and Gold team has been challenged by the University of Pennsylvania rifle team for an indoor match, which will be held some time this week. The boys of the team are in fine condition and are in hopes of winning this match.

Notes On The Games

One very strong point brought out by the Faculty-Senior game was that a Professor in a Gym suit looks just the same as any other Freshman—only perhaps a little more so.
 The game played by the Faculty was a great surprise, considering the conditions that debared many of the old players.
 Many striking resemblances were remarked upon. Apollo, Icabod Crane, Cupid.
 In the game of Delaware vs. Lebanon Valley it seemed the target was struck every time Delaware put Powder behind the Ball.
 Mr. J. G. Eubanks is suffering from an attack of grip and neuralgia.

MEETING OF BOARD OF TRADE

The Board of Trade met Thursday evening to discuss the proposition of the Bijou Manufacturing Co. of New York, who wish to open a branch plant here for the making of shirt-waists.
 After some discussion, the Secretary was authorized to propose that the Board of Trade erect a building 50x75, install heat and power and give rent for one year. The company to pay in advance $500 for the second year's rent or take over the plant at actual cost, approximately $6,000.
 To do this it was suggested that a stock company be organized under our State Corporation Laws—and a sufficient amount of stock sold to back up the proposition. When the plant was sold to cancel each share of stock with interest. This would give everybody an equal second chance to boom Newark.
 As the proposition submitted to the Bijou people to establish a branch of their business here, was what they asked for, except the one item of bonus, it is very probable that they will call the hand of the Newark Board of Trade.

THE FIREMEN'S BANQUET

The banquet given by the Aetna Fire and Hose Company last night in the Banquet Hall, Opera House, was a complete success. The Chief Fireman and his assistants, of Wilmington, were honored guests of the local company. Geo. W. Griffin was toastmaster. SHUT-IN

I have been requested to give my experience of a shut-in life. People don't seem to understand how I get so much pleasure thus deprived of the activities of life. People who must be intoxicated with excitement in order to have a good time, never can understand the sweet repose of an invalid who has surrendered to the inevitable limitations.

Nearly 12 years ago I had typhoid fever and have been an invalid ever since. For the sake of convenience I shall divide this time into two parts, and first tell some of the lessons and pleasures of the first five or six years.

In order to be fair to the subject, I should explain that in health I was naturally enthusiastic in whatever occupation I was engaged in. What seemed monotonous to some people was a recreation to me. Physical labor rested me from mental labor, and vice versa. I was out on the road part of the time nearly every day during the greater part of my life—and enjoyed it too. I was brought in contact with many people and loved my friends dearly. In fact, I was acquainted with a public life, but previous to my marriage and also previous to my illness, I had decided that I would enjoy a somewhat retired life, away from so much confusion and bustle, where I would not be required to attend evenings "affairs" of stylish society, (which was a matter of conscience with me), sometimes retiring as late as 2 a. m.—therefore, when I realized that I was an invalid, I grasped the situation and began to consider how to make the best of such conditions as surrounded me in our home.

My husband did not enjoy excitement—did not enjoy such things as theatres, excursions, etc. He

Sunday School Lesson
By R. S. Holmes

Lesson IX. February 27, 1916.
FALSE AND TRUE DISCIPLINE.

(Matt. 7: 13-29.)
Golden Text: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." Matt. 7: 21.

Go the right way. Be guided by the right men. Test men by what they do, not by what they say. Profession will not avail in the judgment. Doing God's will is the key to heaven. Build right. Your work will endure. Build wrong it will perish.
That is the whole of this fine lesson.

NOTES.
Vs. 13. It requires action to become a resident of the Kingdom of Heaven. One cannot sit in a boat and be wafted in by the winds. "Enter" is the word. Each soul for itself. I cannot enter for you, nor you for me.

There is a "gate" to the Kingdom of Heaven. It is narrow, too. It is always wide enough for the soul that Christ escorts. But remember it is a gate and gate mean not only admission, but also exclusion.

Jesus did not hesitate to say "destruction." There are many now who say there is no such thing. This one teacher said there was. With whom do you stand, the many or the One?

Vs. 14. The only additional thought in this verse is "few." How strange it seems that Christ should open the gate for all mankind, and only the few should find it. Is salvation limited? By no means. But the broad road is attractive. The crowd is there. Always men have liked to be with the crowd.

Vs. 15. The sheep and the wolves are brought into strong contrast here. The sheep is the animal symbol of innocence; the wolf of treachery, violence, deceit and ruin. A false teacher is a false light on the shore. A false teacher is a misleading sign-board. Worse than that. He is a wolf within, a signboard is not. A wolf means to kill its victim. There has been no time since Jesus said this when men have needed to be more wary. Beware of false teachers, false ministers, false expositors of the Gospel of Christ.

Vs. 16. To be on guard is easy. Look at the fruit on the tree. Do you want grapes? You know where to go. Be as wise in following teachers as you are in gathering fruit.

Vs. 17. The tree of the parable is a man. A good man does good things. Not always. But the sum of the direction of his life is good. Vice versa. Influence that springs from action is more powerful than that from words.

Vs. 18. That "cannot" is far-reaching. It needs modification sometimes. Insects may sting the fruit ere it ripens. But it is not the fruit-bearing power of the tree that spoils the fruit. It is the evils from without that attack that make the trouble. The good tree starts its fruit as it should. But an evil, worthless tree cannot do that.

Vs. 19. Remember, Jesus was talking about men and calling them, in illustration, trees. Bad trees are burned for fuel. That is all they can be used for. Get them out of the way. Use the ground for good trees. Did Jesus leave anything unsaid here? Was he thinking that evil teachers men who lead others astray, men whose life product is only evil, will be sent to destruction?

Vs. 20. "Wherefore." That is equivalent to saying, "I will give you a test by which you may always know the good from the bad. Test men. Watch their fruits."
Mr. Becher once said, "Some men pray cream, and live skin milk." That was a homely farm-erism for this same idea.

Vs. 21. Now comes the broad statement of the principle of membership in the Kingdom. To call Jesus "Lord" gives no entrance to the Kingdom to those who fail to do God's will.

"Not every one" admits some, while it excludes some. Think that through. Obedience to God is the supreme test. Apparently the two things will characterize members of the Kingdom. Obedience and reverence.

Vs. 22. "Many will say." Jesus will be popular some day. Many will want admission to the Kingdom some day. "In that day,"

He does not tell here, but plainly enough it was the day when he was to "sit on the throne of his glory" of which he speaks in chapter 5 of this gospel.

Even then, at the opening of his ministry, he was thinking of himself as Judge, and with power to admit and exclude men from the Kingdom.

It hardly seems possible that men could and would be workers of iniquity who have done such things. But note. Jesus does not say they would have done those good things. He says they would say they had. There is a difference between a man who says he has done something and one who really has done it.

Jesus will know who has been doing things in his name, and who has not. He will not tell such as have really helped men "in his name." I never knew you.

Vs. 23 is his final word to hypocrites and pretenders, "Depart." How will one whom he bids depart ever get back? Note—Jesus says "workers of iniquity" will not be in his Kingdom. Our only comment is, he knew. Men may theorize and argue all they desire. He knew.

Vs. 24-27. This parable has never been surpassed. Paris has recently been showing what comes in time of flood to great structures built on unstable foundations. The greater the structure, the worse the fall. Quarry blocks from the rock, drew them to the banks of the Seine, pile them up. See them fall when the water soaks the earth to soft mud. Character built so must fall. Hearing and doing. That is the test. "My sayings" are eternal bedrock truth.

These are the last words of the great law of the Kingdom. Live this Sermon on the Mount, and there are not storms enough in nature to cause your loss. Fail to live it, and only God's mercy can avail and perhaps that cannot.

Vs. 28. "Astonished?" Well, yes. He was saying such things as the world never heard before. He left no principle of life untouched. How could this peasant do this? How did he dare to say, "I say unto you, no man shall enter the Kingdom except I swing open the gate?"

Vs. 29. The Scribes taught. "Moses says," He taught, "I say." The Scribes said, "Abraham is our father." He said, "One is your Father, even God." The Scribes said there are so many commandments. He said, "There are but two commandments."
He declared war against the interpretation which his present was putting on the past. He also said, "I have not come to destroy the past, but to fulfill it."

Whom will you choose to believe, Christ, or what men now say about Christ?

SHUT-IN

preferred making short visits to long ones, and I consider this was all in my favor. I saw at once that I must not grieve over my affliction. I must try to be cheerful and study the happiness of those around me. I soon found out that my husband was a wonderful man in the home, and could influence me to see the bright side when I needed encouragement. I never felt lonely when he was on the place. I felt that I ought not to murmur if I had to remain at home the rest of my life. I believed that I had already had as much pleasure in going about, as many who had lived to be old. I could enjoy meditating on past pleasures. I seemed to have the faculty of enjoying whatever was not really sad, or distressing.

When in health, I naturally entered into the pleasures of my friends, and did not envy them their greater good fortune (if they had it), so, after I was shut in I could still share, in a sense, their pleasures.

After my eyes got strong enough for me to read, that became one of my principal entertainments, and I never had appreciated my eye sight so much as then. Previous to this (over two years) others would read to me a little. I always preferred to wait upon myself, and the most humiliating part of my invalidism was having to be waited upon.

We had the good fortune to secure respectable help the first five years—jolly and good company. My husband possessed sterling qualities—was patient, cheerful, considerate and all the rest worth while. We soon learned the advantages and comforts of a simple life. Charles Wagner's book appeals to us. So much can be gotten out of little things, "considered little by the masses." Household economy became a real source of pleasure to me. I wrote the memoranda, and kept our account book of sales and expenses. We appreciated the necessities of life more than some do their abundance. Poverty is no disgrace in affliction.

I took an interest in my husband's occupation. Occasionally he would lead the cows and calves around in front of my door for me to admire; would bring in some of the vegetables and fruit from time to time—and wild flowers; thus I kept in touch with the outside world. I dearly love country life, and can see some very pretty scenery from our windows. When we begin to count our blessings, how soon we feel that it is a privilege to live.

"In the day of prosperity be joyful, but in the day of adversity consider." God also hath set the one over against the other, to the end that man should find nothing after him?—Bible. During the last five or six years I have had additional difficulties to contend with in the household responsibilities.

We have not been able to secure competent housekeepers—have sometimes had to "get along" with no one in the house for awhile. There have been extremities that would have driven us to despondency, had we not been sustained by the great God of grace and providence. Healthy people are apt to misjudge invalids, afflicted with chronic or nervous diseases. Some see into think we needlessly get into ruts and could get out of them if we had the ambition or exercise will power. How could it be possible for a sensible person to spend months and years in a chair or bed if he or she possessed strength to walk around and ride, etc.—and it did not cause greater suffering? Many efforts I have made.

"Fairest sometimes that thy Father hath forgot?"
Though the clouds, around thee gather, doubt Him not.
Always hath the daylight broken,
Always hath He comfort spoken;
Better hath He been for years than thy tears."

There is an old statement that "Happiness comes from within the mind, never from without." An entertaining mind is a wealth within itself, and people who always look away from self for amusement, are not the happiest, though they go to everything within reach.

An invalid must never lose patience, be exacting, or get in a hurry, it will affect the peace of the home, if we do, or at least, cause people to think we are difficult. We must be considerate of others and, if they are reasonable, they will be considerate also; it is contagious. To see an invalid struggling to create a cheerful atmosphere in the home will inspire others to help it on. We appreciate little kindnesses more than well people do.

We get the best out of those around us by expressing our gratitude for what they do for us.
When healthy people are tired they must be excused for a little irritability; if the invalid is amiable and charitable things will soon clear up. We learn not to expect inexperienced people to understand our peculiar requirements, but just so they stop doing that which grates upon our nerves—loud, rapid talk, sarcasm, banging doors, etc.—we ought to be glad. We become accustomed to our limitations and enjoy repose, but we long for little visits from congenial friends. I dislike gossip, though I like to hear respectable news by way of variety and to keep in touch. I regret—oh, so very much—that my nerves require visitors to be under restraint, it causes many to stay away, who would otherwise make calls occasionally, no doubt, and it causes me to be more completely shut in. But then it is better to be shut in than to be shut out. Some poor, wretched people have no homes, and some people who have, don't enjoy them.

It is just a place to stay when they can't go anywhere else to have pleasure. It seems like there is a wise provision made by way of comparison. Great strength is given in the day of great trials, misfortune, and affliction. Little strength is given in the day of worry, aggravation and discontent.

I have been told that I am happier than many who are in health and I believe it is true. Life is a serious problem. Very few live it through without trials, sorrows or affliction in some form. If I can bear up under my part it is because there is a Power above man sustaining me. I realize the truthfulness of the scriptural language, "As thy days thy strength shall be." It is not well to dwell on the dark side, "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof"—Bible. There is a natural viewpoint to the situation, but there is also another viewpoint not natural. The cheering rays of God's love causes rejoicing in affliction when He thus favors poor, weak mortals.

An old lady once told me that "I acted as if I enjoyed being sick,"

STORY

Business Growth.

This month 3 years ago I started here at 34 New London Avenue just above B & O.

From a very small stock of groceries I have now a full line of general supplies.

My store is considered a little out of the way but some one has said, you know, that if a man make a better mouse trap or sell a better article the world will make a beaten path to his door. I am getting that path.

I buy from the leading firms and my goods are fresh and of the first quality. I positively refuse to hold goods. So I sell at a small profit.

I carry full line of flours and feeds of leading brands.
A line of Shoes and Working Men's Furnishings of all kinds.

I am very proud of my store. I am grateful to my patrons. I have built up this business and hope to continue.

I have purchased this property during the last year; have improved it and am ready to give you my best service.
