OLD DRAWYER'S CHURCH

RICH IN HISTORY--ANNIVERSARY JUNE 4--PROMINENT SPEAKERS

Sunday, June 4th, will mark the celebration of the two hundred and third anniversary of the establishment of the congregation of Old Drawyer's Brick Meeting House, near Odessa, Del. Year after year, the ties of association draw crowds hither who review the story of this early beginning of Presbyterianism in America.

The entire adjoining country is rich historically. The field of this congregation began to be settled as early as 1671, from which period the settlement was rapid. This section with that below the Apocynimink, seems to have appealed to the emigrants, for in 1683, New Castle, St. Georges and Apocynimink were the only subdivisions in the county.

Old Drawyers is pronounced by Rev. George Foots, the acknowledged authority on the history of this region, the second Presbyterian church to be organized in New Castle county, and probably the second in the State.

The settlers in this locality were divided into four classes: The Swedes, the Dutch, the French Huguenots and the Irish, Scotch and English. A congregation was formed in this community about the year 1700. In 1709 the Presbytery of Philadelphia ordered Rev. John Wilson to preach at Apocynimink once a month on a week day and once Sabbath a quarter, until the next meeting. It is probable, however, that a congregation was gathered long previous to this, from the fact that Rev. Nathaniel Taylor settled here in 1833, and he was well acquainted throughout this section of the county.

On the original territory included by the limits of this congregation three Presbyterian churches have been formed, also three Methodist churches.

The first house of worship which was of wood, soon became too small for the congregation. The records tell us that this was enlarged as early as 1734. In 1759 a subscription was started for the purpose of erecting the building that now stands. Its erection was begun in 1773, and in 1775 a committee was named to settle for the building of Drawyer's Brick Meeting House.

The name seems to have been derived from the creek upon whose banks it stands. The original name was "The Church of Apocynimink." Its corporate name is, "The 1st Presbyterian Church in St. Georges Hundred."

Many renowned in the annals of the State and Nation have worshipped in the historic old building, whose deeds as we are about to assemble on the spot, are interesting to recall. In the following brief sketches we quote Mr. Foots.

"Hon. Nicholas VanDyke, son of Gov. VanDyke, was born at Berwick in Dutch Neck, in 1779. He graduated at Princeton College, and was admitted to the bar, and soon acquired an enviable reputation as a lawyer, and a man of strict integrity. In 1798 he was elected a member of the Legislature, and to the House of Representatives of the United States in 1809. In 1815 he was elected a member of the Senate of the U. S., in which he continued till his death in 1823."

"Hon. Arnold Naudain, though a native of Kent county, resided here, and while a member of this church was elected to the U. S. Senate. He was a graduate of Princeton College and a physician."

"Col. Thomas McDonough was a physician. He held a major's commission in the army, in the American Revolution, but soon returned to his medical profession. At the close of the war, he was appointed judge of the court, and continued in this office till his death in 1785."

"Commodore Thomas McDonough was born near the Trap. His name will long be cherished by his countrymen as the hero of Champlain, immortalized by the capture of the entire British fleet on that lake, in 1814--the second event of the kind recorded in history."

"Captain Kirkwood was a veteran of the Revolution. He early entered the service and remained in it till the close of the war. The Delaware regiment was raised, and mustered at Dover before the Declaration of Independence was made, and was put under the command of Col. Haslet. In this regiment, Kirkwood held a captain's commission. Within three weeks after the declaration, this Regiment was in the battle at Trenton, on the 26th of December, 1776. January 3rd, 1777, they were in the battle at Brimston, where Haslet was killed."

The Regiment figured in the battles of Brandywine and Germantown. In 1779, they were ordered to Charleston. In the battle of Camden, they were in the front division, under the command of Baron DeKalb. The Marylanders and the Delaware regiment, maintained their position with noble intrepidity until the retreat was ordered.

The Delaware regiment was reduced to less than two companies. This shattered remnant was put under the command of Captain Kirkwood, who commanded it till the close of the war."

Since 1836 the first Sunday of June has marked a gathering at Old Drawyers, where services are conducted under the auspices of the Friends of Old Drawyer, an organization formed to "care for, repair and preserve the ancient building."

The program as arranged for next Sunday includes an address by Rev. William E. Roberts, of Philadelphia, stated clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, on the subject "Presbyterianism in Colonial Times," also an address by Chief Justice Pennington.

The name of Thomas McKean, Esq., Governor of Pennsylvania, (later a signer of the Declaration of Independence) is found in our records, in the year 1772. Whether he resided here in that year, it is impossible to decide. He was one of the committee to collect the subscription for the erection of this house of worship."

DR. BALL GIVES NOVEL RECEPTION TO STUDENTS--CITIZENSHIP DISCUSSED

The reception given on last Friday evening by ex-Senator L. Heister Ball, and Mrs. Ball, at their home at Eankland, proved to be not only one of the most enjoyable social events of the year but a profitable one as well.

This is an interesting and much to be commended innovation. The class in civics with the theories learned in the classroom came in contact with the public men versed in the practical workings of government and surely learned something worth while. Dr. and Mrs. Ball have made a suggestion to our High Schools and Colleges that we hope many others will follow.

By request Congressman Heald spoke on "Meaning and Duty of Citizenship." Quotations from his speech given below show originality in expression of his observation and experience.

"It is all right to be a theorist, but it is results that count. Men and women have been allowed to grow to maturity without any preparation whatever, for the duties and responsibilities that will come to them. It must be that we have had inherent faith in the ability of our people to make good citizens naturally. That all are not able to do so, is patent to all who observe the large number who are not sufficiently qualified to be valuable members of society, and it is only by improving the quality that we will be able to increase the value of the community in which we live. MY OWN PRACTICAL OPINION IS THAT GOVERNMENT, PARTICULARLY IN A CITY, SHOULD NOT REPRESENT THE VERY BEST ONLY, IN THAT COMMUNITY. This, I know, is heresy, and will be resented by Dr. Ball, but I do believe that while it is our constant aim to improve the quality of our citizenship, we must not neglect the men and women, who, through lack of opportunity and training have not attained to the highest culture. They are entitled to be represented and to be heard. It is my conviction therefore, that the best government and the best results come from administration by the average citizen. Where representation comes only from the upper classes, it breeds discontent. Government in the hands of a class given but one point of view, and leaves out of question the intensely human factor--the point of view of all other men."

"This method produces socialism--which is today almost as serious in the United States as it is in the German Empire. Socialism is the result of the discontent with the manner in which men and parties are conducting affairs. Legislative bodies crystallize the best of the collective judgments of men into statutes and ordinances, and it is quite impossible always to interpret what seems to be the will of the people to the satisfaction of all men. The time seems to come when revolutions are necessary. The established order of things is overthrown--the result always of excess and

way of the other. A POLITICIAN, NO LESS THAN ANY OTHER PROFESSIONAL MAN WHO IS HONEST AND DOES HIS DUTY, IS ENTITLED TO RESPECT AND I want to say right here that the men who are interested in politics put more time, energy and honest effort into it than goes into almost any other profession. That some politicians are dishonest does not condemn the class any more than the fact that some storekeepers are dishonest condemns all storekeepers. There is nothing disreputable in politics, nothing that prevents a man from holding up his head to the face of antagonism or criticism."

Dr. Ball welcomed the class, and said in part: "Upon one question," he said, "I must differ with Mr. Heald, and that is regarding the character of public officials. I HOLD THAT PUBLIC AFFAIRS ARE BETTER ADMINISTERED IF THE VERY BROADEST MEN, MEN OF KNOWLEDGE, CULTURE AND EXPERIENCE ARE AT THE HEAD OF AFFAIRS. Such men are qualified to study the characters of men, and to distinguish the needs of all classes. They know how to meet every situation. I contend that the better, the broader, the nobler a man is, the higher will be the quality of the service."

ADVOCATED STUDY OF GOVERNMENT There could be no course inaugurated that would portend greater good for Delaware, Wilmington and all concerned than the study of the subject of government and civic conditions, and I think the Wilmington High School is especially fortunate in the work it is doing along this line. Nothing needs more careful study than the functions of modern government in order to appreciate what is being done for the good of our country and for everybody and everything. It is the duty of government to give the very best that it can.

ALL SHOULD BE POLITICIANS. I KNOW IT IS THE CUSTOM TO SNEER AT THE WORD POLITICIAN, BUT PERSONALLY I WANT TO SAY THAT IT IS THE DUTY OF EVERY MAN AND WOMAN TO TAKE AN ACTIVE INTEREST IN POLITICS. Ours is a government by parties, and YOUR interest must be in the primary, as well as in the GENERAL ELECTION. At the former men are selected who are to carry out the party platform and policies. Study politics and take an active interest not as an office seeker but as a citizen. Then if you are qualified, YOUR FELLOW CITIZENS WILL SEEK YOU OUT. Exert your influence for the best for the country's good, and that will be the best for you. No matter what your occupation, calling or profession may be, dignify it, and let it in turn dignify you."

OLD SOLDIERS' GRAVES IN THIS LOCALITY

Forget them? No, never. As coming years wane, Down through the ages that follow entrain Our children will still bring bright flowers and lay On the graves of our dead each Memorial Day.

- Col. Whitley, Samuel Alexander, Robert Kirkwood, John Crowe, Thomas Wilson, Columbus Henry, M. D., Amos Davis, James Wilson, Oats Roberts, Samuel Ferguson, Col. William Garrett, Major Richard Bennett, Col. Henry Whitley.

According to the custom followed for years children from the public school visited the cemeteries of the locality on Tuesday, scattering blossoms and placing the stars and stripes over the graves of those who responded years ago to their country's call. Each Memorial Day finds a smaller G. A. R. representation among the living and a greater number among the dead. But when each veteran shall have lived his allotted time, and be gathered to his fathers, the work of honoring these benefactors will go on. The beautiful customs shall never be outgrown for the gratitude of a later generation shall follow them.

The graves of the following were marked with flags by Reynolds Post, No. 3, yesterday:

Strawberry Festivals The ladies of White Clay Creek Church will hold the annual strawberry and ice cream festival on Monday evening next, June 5th. None need be reminded that the ice cream is all homemade, of the very best, from pure cream and in a variety of flavors. If you want to enjoy a choice, dainty dish, be on hand Monday evening at Old White Clay.

Students in Philadelphia Professor Hayward and the Agricultural students of Delaware College spent Monday in Philadelphia.

Through the courtesy of Dr. Gay, professor of Animal Husbandry University of Pennsylvania, a number of interesting places were visited including large stock yards and several private stables, University of Pennsylvania Department of Veterinary Science, large horse markets and also oil factories. These factories handle the tubercular fat of cattle. The products, oleo, oil and stearin are exported. The latter is used in connection with cotton seed oil in making neutral lard and candies and chewing gum.

One of those strawberry festivals for which the church is famous will be given by the ladies of Salem M. E. Church on June 14th.

Reopening Of Wesley M. E. Church The people of Wesley Methodist Episcopal Church, McClellandville, have completed extensive improvements to the interior of their church. Church, will preach at the services and Wesley choir will render music appropriate to the exercises. The public is cordially invited to the services.

IMPRESSIONS OF NEWARK

OLD SHIPTON

CHAPTER III.—First Impressions

Before going down to her first dinner at Mrs. Cawes' table, Marian had dressed herself with unusual care, having heard, while riding up in the Red Hack, that a certain Mr. and Mrs. Rush had taken a prize at the County Fair then in progress, for being "the best dressed couple on the grounds," from which she inferred, not without a pang of disappointment, that the standard of outward appearance was high in Old Shipton.

As she opened the door of her room, she saw Mrs. Harrow leaning over the banister, and calling, "Hallie! Hallie! Say! Here! O, mercy! Say! Hallie! Come! O, accompanying her words with violent pounds on the wood from her fist to give emphasis to the demand.

Marian, unaware that this was only Mrs. Harrow's customary way of expressing her impatience, was hastening to her assistance, when the parlor door opened, and Miss Hallie looked up crossly. "What, Ma?"

"Why didn't yo' come?" demanded her mother. "I like to fell over the banisters, callin' you. —I mighty like to fell over the banisters!"

"Well, Ma, I didn't ask you to," said Miss Hallie, indifferently. "What do you want?"

"Why, take this shawl," (Mrs. Harrow had her own chamber hung with blankets in mid-summer to shut out the air, and madden Miss Hallie, who slept with her). "It'll be cold in the dining-room, and you'll have trouble with your ankles again. Put it on."

"Pshaw, Ma!" said Miss Hallie, closing the parlor door again. "I don't want it."

Mrs. Harrow, who was, by the way, the widow of an officer in the Confederate army, tossed the shawl over the banister, and tramped back to her room, to get her ear-trumpet, before going down.

What seemed to Marian a great number of people, were ranged about the table, the boarders having been reinforced by six relatives of the family who were in the habit of calling on her aunt at dinner time on market days, having a considerable distance to travel into Maryland on their return. These stared fixedly at the Devines, who took the seats appointed them, Marian receiving the place of honor at George's right hand.

"Dee-vine," said that gentleman, meditatively, after having introduced the new-comers to each of the boarders, separately, "Dee-vine. That there seems to be sort o' on the French order. Goin' to have some of the fowl, Mrs. Devine? Which part?"

"Anything," said Marian in a low voice.

"You're easy suited, Ma'am. Professor?"

"White meat," said Robert, exchanging plates with Marian, who had received a back, and had no intention of demurring.

"Ask yer Mom, if she's goin' to have some of the fowl, Hal," said George, addressing Miss Harrow, who had come in, flushed and triumphant from a successful morning of tennis on the college campus.

"Chicken, Ma?" shouted Miss Hallie.

The old woman paused in her favorite diversion of thumping on the table with her napkin-ring, and turned her head, slightly. "What does he say?"

"He says they've got chicken. Do you want some?"

"Yes, I'll take the second-joints. What's in that dish?" indicating one with her finger.

"Tomats," said George.

"She means the egg-plant," said Mrs. Lamia, whose apparent engrossment in her own plate was deceptive.

"Egg-plant, Ma?" screamed Miss Hallie.

Mrs. Harrow shook her head. "I'd rather have white bread, Lavinia," beckoning to the house-girl, who stood at Marian's back with a tray, "put down the winder."

"Good land!" ejaculated George, laying down his knife and fork, and throwing himself back in his chair, "have all sixteen of us got to sweat because the old girl's blood ain't good at circulation?"

But this was evidently the case, for Lavinia closed the window, and there was no further objection. Mr. Harrow, who was never suited with anything, and made the most outrageous demands, for which she gave no equivalent, was regarded as a very important personage, it being subsequently surmised that the Devines, on the contrary, "had never been used to much," or they would have "complained of their victuals."

The latter having been served, and Mrs. Harrow appeased, George turned his attention to the other boarders, who were addressed in turn, as "Mrs. Peyton," "Doc," "Melon," "Madam Lamia," (humorously known as "The Morning News," and "The Every Evening"), "Lot" and "Hal." It was some time before Lavinia had supplied the demand for vegetables and "relishes," from all sides, but when she had, and retired to the end of the room, George again turned to Marian, to whom from that day he was never anything but kind.

"Well, Mrs. Devine, are yo' goin' to the races?"—this with a little smile which Marian learned to like. "They're havin' the County Fair down yere to Budtown, now, you know."

Marian replied with truth that she had not thought of it. Her husband was so occupied that he had little time to spare.

"O, yo' needn't go alone," said George, hospitably. "Some of us is goin'. Yo' can go with us."

"Ah, thank you, Mr. Cawes," cried Marian, "but I don't go anywhere without my husband."

At this reply of the young wife a smile, starting with Mrs. Lamia, and gathering force between Miss Harrow and Miss Charlotte, crept round the table.

"Well, yo' needn't go if yo' don't want to," said George gravely, "but I tell yo' what it is, there'll be some mighty petty trottin' done! I'm a goin' over to Sulphur Park, though," he continued in a tone which implied that Budtown Fair might do for amateurs, but was altogether too tame a show for connoisseurs. "There's racin' for yo'! A hundred and thirty ohkses entered. Nothin' but racin'; yer time ain't all took up with big punkins an' hors. Me and Sam Dorsey's goin'. Ever see Sam Dorsey, Doc?"

"No," said the Doctor.

"I tell yo' what it is," said George, by way of peroration. "Old Shipton's the garden spot of the world. It beats all for turnin' out smart boys. Me and Sam Dorsey went to school together, and the instructors was always glad to see us comin'. The chap who learned us spellin' was a great tall feller, nor'n six feet high. He used to sit on a big stool with rungs on it, that he clim' up an' down like a ladder. One of these yere long pins stuck into it would assist him to get off, sometimes. We was all standin' round the stove one mornin' and the boys got to tellin' what their Pops had on their farms. Sam spoke up after a while, and says he,—

"What's George talking about?" enquired Mrs. Harrow, at this stage of the narrative.

"Tell her religion!" exclaimed George, impatiently, upon whom Mrs. Harrow's remarks always acted as an irritant, if they did not chance to amuse him. "I'd a heap rather be blind than deaf! Well,—Sam spoke up, and says he, 'I bet my Pop's got something on his farm none o' yours ain't!'"

"Wot?" says the boys. "Why," says Sam, "my Pop's got a mortgage on his farm."

"Deed, George, I think I'd tell something original," said Miss Charlotte, loftily. "Are you interested in the present controversy between High and Low Church Episcopalians, Mrs. Devine?"

"Contraversy," murmured George, "that's pretty good." He invariably called attention to Miss Charlotte's little assumptions.

"I beg your pardon, I'm afraid I have not taken notice of it. What was the ground of disagreement?" Marian began to hope that in Miss Charlotte she was going to find a person who would enlighten her on many points.

"Why, you know, some believe in purgatory and some do not."

"Indeed?" said Marian, in surprise. "I thought that was a Catholic doctrine?"

"O, of course, but a great many Episcopalians are just the same as Catholics. Now, there's the doctrine of Paradise—"

"Is there's lost," interrupted George, who liked to make displays of fictitious ignorance, "I've saw it advertised in the papers."

"Nearly all Episcopalians believe in that," pursued Miss Charlotte, ignoring what she termed her cousin's silliness. "When an Episcopalian dies, they expect to go right to Paradise, without waiting for the Judgment. It's a very pleasant idea. I should like to entertain it, myself but I'm a Presbyterian. We have very few doctrines in our church," (Robert's shoe touched Marian's under the table with unnecessary emphasis). "We believe in the simple teachings of Christ."

Marian, who saw no way out of this queer snarl of denominations and creeds, assented to this last proposition with eagerness. "Ah, so do I! They seem to me so much more practical and simple than St. Paul's. Sometimes I wish the Epistles had not been preserved."

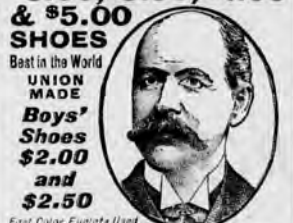

This would have been a very shocking statement in some circles, but it fell upon the irreligious boards of Mrs. Cawes' dinner table without any disastrous results. Miss Charlotte merely dismissed it with the remark that the New Testament was none too large as it was, and branched out upon another theme, which George cut short at the start. "If I was you, Lot, I'd let up, now. Though I shouldn't a' said it, for you're like Dr. Small's nag; give her a cut and she switches her tail and goes all the slower."

Miss Charlotte's recitals were, in truth, long and tedious, ending finally, not in a point, but in a general dissipation of ideas, which was poor reward to the listener who had patiently heard her out. George, himself, inclined to be epigrammatic, was especially nervous under them. "Yo' mustn't persecute yer friends, Lot," he reminded her, on this occasion.

"The Bible says yo' mustn't, and so does Comley's spellin'-book, with the yella cover on it."

Marian's plate having been removed, untouched, and dessert having been served, the Devines left the room, and silently mounted the stairs.

so do I! They seem to me so much more practical and simple than St. Paul's. Sometimes I wish the Epistles had not been preserved."

This would have been a very shocking statement in some circles, but it fell upon the irreligious boards of Mrs. Cawes' dinner table without any disastrous results. Miss Charlotte merely dismissed it with the remark that the New Testament was none too large as it was, and branched out upon another theme, which George cut short at the start. "If I was you, Lot, I'd let up, now. Though I shouldn't a' said it, for you're like Dr. Small's nag; give her a cut and she switches her tail and goes all the slower."

Miss Charlotte's recitals were, in truth, long and tedious, ending finally, not in a point, but in a general dissipation of ideas, which was poor reward to the listener who had patiently heard her out. George, himself, inclined to be epigrammatic, was especially nervous under them. "Yo' mustn't persecute yer friends, Lot," he reminded her, on this occasion.

"The Bible says yo' mustn't, and so does Comley's spellin'-book, with the yella cover on it."

Marian's plate having been removed, untouched, and dessert having been served, the Devines left the room, and silently mounted the stairs.

Discussion Of The Rural Schools

[Written for the Post.]

One of the best advertisements for any community, as well as for any town, is a good school.

Thinking people, desirable citizens, when about to locate in a new place, usually give considerable thought to the educational advantages and make their home in and add their intelligence to that community which offers the best.

Thus, from the fact that the rural school has failed to keep up with the times and is not the factor that it once was, the drift has been too much away from the farm and those who live upon farms make every effort to send their children to the schools in the nearest towns.

In no other business would we tolerate methods of such doubtful excellence as those we employ in our rural schools.

We know that there is something wrong and we are thinking and thinking of what is best to do, and if we do not act quickly the district school, as a whole, will fall into utter disrepute.

Of course, splendidly conducted rural schools do exist in the State of Delaware, but the man who lives in that district where such a school exists, speaks of it as a matter of congratulation and has no confidence in its continuance. A generation ago the district school meant much more than it does to-day, was well attended and earnest young men and women found food that was suited to their minds. There was not then the gulf between the county and the town school that there is today. The re-establishment of its old standard of excellence, with consideration of new needs, is the most important problem for educators in our State to-day.

The rural school is slow to meet the advancing conditions. It is too much alone.

Parents are losing confidence in them. Those who will admit that they received satisfactory educational foundation in rural schools are not content to send their children to the same schools. They do not hold the institution in sufficient respect.

DECADENCE OF ORATORY

I have in my possession a printed program of an exhibition held in a school near Newark only 23 years ago. Music, vocal and instrumental was furnished by an orchestra composed of eight young men and women, pupils of the school there were recitations and orations by others, the subject of which would scarcely be understood by the oldest children at that school today. An exhibition of like nature would now be impossible there. Just here it occurs to me that declamation and exhibitions play too small a part in all of our schools at present.

Who can imagine an intelligent portrayal by country school girls of such characters as sweet Ellen of Loch Katrine or of Portia at Court?—or between school boys such dialogues as that between Brutus and Cassius, or a rendition of Patrick Henry's famous speech?

Do you say that such efforts would not be truly appreciated by those in attendance? Perhaps not, but should not the school in every community be an educational factor to each one in that community?

We express fears of the decadence of oratory, yet we smile at hero worship.

How many young men of this coming generation will be able fearlessly to take part in public discussions? Why, public discussions, even of public questions, is on the wane.

How many of these young men will give credit to their old school for their interest and enthusiasm in civic and national affairs?

It is not time wasted to give our young folks a taste of such things and they, as school children, should be brought more before the public eye than they are.

The analysis will mean more after the oration than it did before, and the spoken word often finds an abiding place for great thoughts in the young mind to which the written word had failed to appeal.

REGULATION OF SALARIES

To return to the question of the failure of the rural school in our State—the teachers are usually conscientious, but too often untrained and inexperienced and there is too much variation in salaries paid by different districts.

The State of Delaware should demand only trained teachers for each an every one of her schools and she should supply the requisites to meet her own demands.

The system of schools should be so regulated that every school within the State should correspond exactly in matters of salary, examination of teachers, number of school days, holidays, etc.

In this day, the children who, at present, may live in a district which pays the lowest salary, may not suffer the consequences of living within that district. It may be impossible to keep the boys and girls who are fitted for the high schools from going to the towns, because parents are becoming more and more willing to make every sacrifice that their children may receive such benefits, but if the confidence of the people in the rural schools shall not languish and die the Board of Education must very shortly put into operation such measures as shall make those schools a standard of efficiency and sufficiency in the place they propose to fill. There must be more of sameness in provisions and conditions, that a child may not be dependent upon its environment for the standard of the school which it shall attend, but be assured of a good school, wherever he may live.

There is not, at present, proper training for the teacher, and too much is expected of her. While the pupils may need a different form and she may know it, she must of necessity restrict herself.

CONSOLIDATION ADVOCATED

The advantages of the consolidated school are wonderful. The teachers would not then be so time-pressed, work could be divided and they could afford to specialize and better equip themselves.

The idea may sound impracticable at first, but it simply needs the daring to start, and we should very soon wonder at our previous delay.

The outlying districts, or a reasonable part of each one should be combined with the schools of each town. The majority of children who attend the schools about Newark could just as easily walk into Newark and the increased taxes would furnish the Newark school with additional teachers and equipment.

Beyond these, a consolidation could occur and in the next instance so closely do our towns lie to each other, we could combine with another town, and the burden of transportation would reduce surprisingly and could well afford to be met when the resultant benefits are duly impressed.

I believe in practical methods for the country child, with just enough of fancy and ideals that he may not tire of life—an education that will bring him into his own; nor force him away. By that I do not mean that the cabbage worm must always take precedence over the aster beetle, but I do mean that teachers who have intrusted to them the mind of our children upon which they may make such wonderfully good or terribly wrong impressions, shall be in sympathy with their surroundings, shall have training to that end, and shall have the time and place to carry out their conscientious purposes.

Post-Philosophy

(Contributed.)

One good rule for making friends and keeping them is to drop off that "careless" habit. No one man knows it all, and people like positiveness in action more than positiveness in speech.

Capability is most appreciated when not spoiled by self-assertiveness.

The aggressive man is all right in his own estimation, is mostly honest and hard-working, but the human mind tires of him.

We must consider that variations sometimes combine to form exquisite melody, and we become aware that life played without them were not half so sweet.

If you cannot be the star, be ambitious as an understudy; you may be called upon to play after awhile.

What a blessing in life is the mind that justly values the things of life—that calls the great things great and the little things little! How dark do we count the hours when we failed to get the proper perspective.

The reply caustic is oftentimes the reply costly.

Many a scene masquerades under the name of "Discipline," and we make a mistake to associate this word with children.

This is a day of catch phrases and quick actions; we become impatient with the painstaking workman, we accord scant grace to the careful man of science and even find tedious a lengthy expounding of Holy Writ.

Be thankful for respectability, if you feel that you have it not, be thankful for the humility which makes you sensible of the lack of it.

BOOM NEWARK

THERE is not an inland town in the Atlantic States to our knowledge that has the advantages with which Newark is favored. Her location among these hills gives her first rank as a healthy place to live, her railroad facilities on the two main trunk lines only a short distance from the leading markets of the world, give every inducement to the prospective manufacturer, her public school system and college, her experiment farm—all create favorable impressions on those who learn of conditions existing here. A beautiful and productive surrounding country to appeal both to the sense of beauty and the profit seeking settler. This town has every natural advantage required for growth—unsurpassed facilities for development.

There is but one thing lacking for the proper development to make it hold the place it is so well fitted for—and that is,
co-operation among its business men,
its churches and its citizens. Read the papers of the day and name a town of this size that has not an active organization working for civic improvement, and material and educational advancement. Town, city and State advertising are being considered absolutely essential to the improvements of conditions and well being of citizenship.

If your idea is to make this a residential town as some express the desire,
then co-operate and state the advantages of locating here. By civic improvements, make this section enticing
to the home-seeker. Many of the professional and prominent business men of Wilmington are building houses in country places that are farther distant from their business, with less natural beauty and advantages than we have here. Newark is losing these who would add to the social life of the intellectual classes, and bring profit to our banks, business houses and real estate men. A well planned campaign telling our story would attract some of these.

Again to you, whose idea is to attract industries, you who realize the honest worth of the mechanic as well as the social graces of the professional man,
why not effect an organization to carry on a movement to attract such industries as would be of commercial advantage to our town. You need not necessarily seek large industries. Several small concerns employing 50 to 100 men each would mean no small amount of business.

The excuse made that Newark can not get together is well founded to a certain extent. But those who favor this movement—get together and see what can be done without the support of the extreme conservative. Invite every business man and manufacturer, every church, the college—all the institutions
to take part—if the manufacturer refuses, tearing a new industry will effect
this pay roll, do not give up. It is proof that he is not giving his employees what they are worth and all the more reason you should furnish competition. If the college refuses, do not give up. It simply means that they are not earning their full salary. The college man's influence and assistance should not be scuffed at. Society should demand a part of his time outside the classroom.
He owes something as a citizen to the community in which he lives, and should be heard.

Every business man, every institution,
every newspaper should work for the betterment of this town and community.
And if that self satisfied, self sufficient small minority do not care to take part,
it is no excuse that the rest do not do their part to carry out their ideas of the development of this town and community.

Some one laughingly suggested it was time for another POST Board of Trade article again. This is the result. We may be wrong in many of our suggestions and conclusions, but in this we have not had sufficient proof to stop.
Aside from the development of the town and the improvements that can be brought about in the surrounding farming districts—all advantageous to every citizen whether from a mere betterment
of conditions or from a purely commercial standpoint—this we do know, that Newark has in the near future, if not right now, some serious civic problems to face—and of a severely practical nature—and that to settle them in behalf of the good of all, will demand a consideration that only a wise and healthy co-operation will be able to meet.

STATE COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT
AT DOVER

THE Commencement exercises at the State College for Colored Students held last week are worthy of the highest commendation. The military drill in the morning showed that good work had been done. The addresses by the graduates in the afternoon were delivered in a plain, simple manner void of all attempts of display and showed time and thought in preparation.

The Governor gave a short address.

full of timely and sympathetic advice,
and was roundly applauded. He with a good crowd of visitors spent the day on the grounds, inspecting the different departments of work.

President Jason and the Board of Trustees met with warm praise for the work they are accomplishing. The colored boy and girl are being taught above all else the dignity of labor and the honor attached to the doing of that work well. A striking feature of the exercises throughout was the quiet, orderly manner of all assembled. A work is being done here that needs more publicity. More of the colored race should know of the advantages
given to those who wish to make good.

Training in such a school as this does away with the race problem. The man, be he white or black, who can earn his living, do his work well and enjoy the privileges granted him today, need have no fear. And this is the kind of training being given our colored boys and girls at the State College near Dover.

WE, EASTERN FARMERS

CONSTANTLY the Eastern Farmer has the methods of his Western brother held before him as a pattern. The New Englander is regularly informed that he is being put to shame by results on the prairie land. For his encouragement, therefore, we print the following from
the "Green Lake Record" of Minnesota:

On one acre of meadow land, newly plowed, a Massachusetts man produced 123 bushels of dry shelled corn. To do this he spread upon the acre 25 tons of stable manure and 250 pounds of commercial fertilizer. It has not been shown that the soil and climate of Massachusetts are one bit better adapted to corn than those of Minnesota. From rock-ribbed New Hampshire comes the story of a farmer named CRAM, who has harvested 50 bushels of shelled corn per acre at a cost per bushel of 28 cents.
Against this is placed the statement of "an extensive Iowa corn grower," that his 40-bushel-an-acre crop cost him a little more than 40 cents per bushel.
Evidently the Yankees are setting a pace
in corn growing—now that they have awakened to the value of scientific farming—which the "Kings of the Corn Belt"
can attain only by adopting similar methods.

Cheer up, Delaware farmers! Science is the great conqueror of our day, and constantly makes the victory over nature easier for every man who accepts the lessons which science teaches. We Delaware farmers can work—all we need is a little more thought and study and we will come into our own.

THE SEWER AGAIN

LET us suggest to the good folks of the town that the sewer be installed, even if the bill is defeated. How can it be done? Determine just what kind of system suitable to the needs of the town, bid out the cost per running foot
front, install the plant and pay the bill.
This would need no authority from the Legislature. It would prove a temporary hardship on some property holders,
but the value of property would be increased in greater proportion than the cost.

Unless some such method is taken up the town will be handicapped for ten years before authority can be gained.
It is good argument to let the future
pay a part of this since the benefits are permanent. But by delaying, we are laying ourselves and our children open to too great a risk. How many of the Sewer Commission, how many of the Council, how many of the citizens are willing to show the spirit that the sewer is the main object and need and not the method whereby it can be secured? If the leaders of this movement and our prominent citizens will come forward and state their willingness, it is most probable that the property holders can be convinced of the real necessity of this improvement and can be persuaded to do their part.

Who will be the first to go on record
for a sewer installed and paid for?

MR. TAFT RENDERS JUDGMENT.

IN the mad rush for wealth in the last few decades the lines between profit
from legitimate business and improper gain from undue use of trust control over other people's property and money have sometimes been dimmed, and the interest of society requires that whenever opportunity offers, those charged with the enforcement of the law should emphasize the distinction between honest
business and dishonest breaches of trust.

"The application for pardon must be denied. In the first place, the record shows moral turpitude of that insidious and dangerous kind to punish which the national banking laws were especially enacted. Those laws were intended to secure on the part of national banking officials the faithful and honest administration of their trust in the use and handling of the funds of the banks, including its capital, surplus and deposits for the benefit of the shareholders and depositors."

One law and one application of it for all men—that is the foundation of the sort of government that men will support and fight for and die for, and it is worthy of their devotion. One kind of justice for rich and poor and a sane and just man at the head of the nation who has the courage and sense to act on his convictions. Every man knows now that the President has performed an act that will prove more efficacious than hundreds of statutes in bringing about a sounder and more honest conduct of business; that these convictions by the court and this decision by the President are of incalculable benefit to every financial institution in the United States conducted on a sound basis, and that they will afford a valuable safeguard to the money and possessions of myriads

of men, as well as aid in inspiring stronger confidence in the integrity not only of our financial institutions but in

THE HONORED DEAD

A FEW more flowers, a few more wreaths, a few more tears every year for the Honored Dead. Each year the files of the living grow smaller and the ranks of the dead are closing up. Soon
there will be no comrades to lay a wreath on the soldier's grave. Those dead are an inspiration to the living. The old guard keep the story before us. When the last tap is sounded let us not forget to keep alive their deeds before our children and teach them that American manhood at its best loves him who stands uncovered before the flag and drags a tear for those who fought under its folds for the preservation of home and the one side and the country on the other side.

Materialism has not yet so gripped us but that the G. A. R. still is us something that urges manhood and country
and God to the front.

Our feelings of war are today so merging into the brotherhood of peace that we give a tearful smile to the hero in blue join with the hero in gray as they salute and place a wreath on the grave
of the UNKNOWN AMERICAN.

And we, too, take increased devotion and kindly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain."

SUGGESTIVE TO COLLEGE MEN--
ROOSEVELT

"BUT, for our good fortune, one of our States, the State of Wisconsin, has now developed such a body of public opinion and such a body of leadership
among its public men and its students, that hereafter we have good reason to hope that we can find within our borders
what we need."

"It is noteworthy that in Wisconsin,
when one speaks of such leadership it is possible to include therein the student as well as the political leader. In no other State in the Union has any university done the same work for the community that has been done in Wisconsin by the University of Wisconsin."

"I found the President and the teaching body of the University accepting as a matter of course the view that their duties were imperfectly performed unless they were performed with an eye to the direct benefit of the people of the State."

"I found the leaders of political life,
so far from adopting the cheap and foolish cynicism of attitude taken by too
many politicians toward men of academic training, turning, equally as a matter of course, toward the faculty of the University for the most practical and efficient aid in helping them realize their schemes for social and civic betterment."

"As a matter of fact, it has rarely been my good fortune to meet a body of public men who are more practical and at the same time more obviously earnest
in their desire to achieve ideals for social and civic betterment than the public men whom I met at Madison. They were as free from the cant of the professional reformer who defies words and refuses to face facts as they were free
from the cant of his reactionary brother who thinks it a sign of cleverness to disbelieve in the possibility of warring against corruption."

"Again, I found the legislators grappleing with the question of workmen's compensation. Through one of the Wisconsin University professors they were accumulating every fact of importance
which had bearing on the proposed legislation, and they were engaged in business-like fashion in trying to secure a law which should work the maximum amount of good and be open to the minimum number of objections."

Children's Day At Salem

Children's Day exercises were held in the Salem M. E. Church last Sunday evening.

The program comprised thirty-six numbers, for the most part songs and recitations, by the young people of the Salem Sabbath School.

The selections were well chosen and without exception, well rendered. The choir, composed of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Brooks, Miss Palmer, Miss Groves, W. K. Brooks and Harry W. Davis, organized, furnished lovely music and singing.

A feature of the evening was the singing of Miss Ebel Groves, of Wilmington. Miss Groves has a beautiful voice, well trained. Miss Albee Brooks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Brooks, of Glasgow, sang a solo in her sweet, childish voice.

Master Fred Mitchell caused much merriment by his recitation "When Mother Buys her Spring Hat." Altogether the exercises were delightfully carried out and children and teachers are to be congratulated. The church was filled to the utmost, and many could not find room to enter.

Health Of Delaware

According to reports received from the State Board of Health today the general condition of the health of the residents in the State is good. Two cases of small-pox exist at Newark, a man and wife, but they are recovering.

The State Board will have diphtheria antitoxin ready for distribution by July 1st.

Four patients recently suffering from rabies have received the 31 days' treatment as given by the State Board and are now sufficiently recovered to be permitted to drop the treatment. The case of a colored man at Delaware City is still receiving treatment.

Much good has been accomplished by this treatment, as given by the State Board, the price charged per treatment is only $25.

PLUMBING-I am ready to attend to any work you may have.

Live Stock At State Farm Valued At $8000

Those interested in live stock would appreciate a visit to the State farm. From a small beginning, three years ago, the farm has gradually acquired an array of stock that will appeal to all interested in farm life and business. The farm is gaining favor every day and the support being given it is gratifying. Contrary to the belief that was prevalent some time ago, not one cent has been spent by the State for this stock. When the farm was first purchased, some uninformed critics raised objections to such lavish money being spent from the taxes to purchase thoroughbred stock. This is not the case, as the money expended for all stock comes out of the appropriations from the National Government.

At the present time the farm has 16 registered milking Guernsey cows, 8 calves and 2 bulls, worth about $4,000. Besides the Guernseys the farm has also 2 registered Jersey cows and a Jersey heifer valued at $250.

The horse stock is represented by 6 hackneys, $1,000 all of which with one exception, are pure bred; 7 Percherons, $250, and 6 mares worth fully $1500.

In the sheep line there are 5 pure bred Rambouillet merinos, 2 American merinos of the A type and 15 Shropshires estimated at $350.

In the swine they have 2 pure bred Yorkshires, and about 25 Berkshires that would bring $800.

This would total a conservative estimate of $7900 worth of live stock on the farm today. This does not mean that this is the actual sum expended, as considerable of the stock has been raised on the farm. Also a number of surplus sheep and pigs have been distributed to various parts of the State, and have done much to stimulate a greater interest in pure bred live stock. A farmer of this community, who at first opposed the whole idea, said recently that "in a few years the color of all the hogs in the county would be changed. He was referring to the breeding of Berkshires.

Some of the surplus stock has been sold for fancy prices. A Percheron stallion colt raised on the farm would probably bring $500 under the hammer.

With this showing during the short period the farm has been in operation and under adverse circumstances from lack of facilities, Delaware farmers may well look forward to great results with the new barn and projected dairy equipment. The Agricultural Extension work recently provided for, will probably be mapped out by July 1st, when the appropriations are received.

New State Board Of Education

The new State Board of Education's standing committee, as finally agreed upon, are as follows: Text books—Messrs. Twitmyer and Messersmith.

Teachers—Messrs. Ridgely and Messersmith.

County Superintendents—Mr. Twitmyer and Mr. Davis.

Admission to pupils to graded schools—Messrs. Hering and Brady.

State aid to students in Normal Schools—Messrs. Hayward and Hering.

Course for study in schools—Messrs. Twitmyer and Messersmith.

School grounds and buildings—Messrs. Hayward and Brady.

Statutes and school law—Mr. Davis and Mr. Ridgely.

By-laws were adopted in the course of the May meeting, two of which are:

"First, in addition to the secretary designated by the statute, the officers of the board shall consist of a president, a vice-president and a secretary pro tempore, who shall be elected annually at the regular May meeting of the Board to hold office for the term of one year or until their successors are duly chosen."

The Board elected George S. Messersmith secretary, pro tem, and Henry Ridgely vice-president.

By-laws second, third and fourth treat of the board's order of business and its treatment of and hearing of reports of the county superintendents. It follows:

"Fifth. The regular meetings of the Board shall be on the second Friday of every month, except in July and August. Adjourned meetings and special meetings shall so determine, or whenever called by the president, or in his absence by the vice-president. All meetings shall be held in the town of Dover unless otherwise ordered by the Board, at 10:30 a. m. The secretary shall give to the members about one week's notice of meetings.

The State Board was formally served with the following law passed by the recent General Assembly in relation to Delaware College:

"House Concurrent resolution: 'Whereas, the Trustees of Delaware College as now constituted are unable to agree upon a charter for the college, therefore

Be it resolved, That the State Board of Education be and it is hereby directed to consider and formulate a plan whereby a charter of all the interests concerned may be framed and be reported to the next session of the General Assembly for adoption.

"The State Board of Education, in performing this duty, shall receive no compensation other than actual expenses incurred, and that these be paid by the State Treasurer out of any money in the State treasury on warrants drawn by the president of the State Board of Education."

The Board considered at length the condition of the schools for negro children and the collection and application of tax moneys toward their support. Numerous reports were heard and considered from the county superintendents. The Board adopted this resolution:

"Resolved, That each county school superintendent be furnished with a list of the standing committees, and the members thereof, and be directed to report in writing to the proper committee on any suggestions he has to make concerning any matter within the province of such committee or committees said report to be sent to each member of said committees or committee."

New Castle County Directory

The New Castle County Directory has just been issued. It contains all of the householders, obtained by a house to house canvass, of all towns on trolley lines radiating from Wilmington, showing whether married, and gives telephone number.

Members of granges in New Castle county, Del., and southern Chester county, Pa., are given also registered voters in New Castle county, outside of Wilmington, whose names were listed by registration officers. There is a list of the commissioners of the various school districts and the population of the county. The directory has several new features which are not incorporated in directories. Never before has a directory been issued that included lower Chester and Delaware counties, several towns of which are directly within the Wilmington trade zone. Copies of the book may be obtained from the publisher, John T. Mullins, 833 Orange street, Wilmington.

His Majesty-- The Dog

THE MORE I SEE OF MEN
THE MORE I LOVE MY DOG

(In last week's issue we gave the famous speech of Senator Vest on the dog. We made no contents. This week, by request, we are reprinting the speech—giving the facts leading up to its delivery.

All good men love a dog. To win the love and respect of a dog is no slight compliment. And not to know that love is to lose something of which the best have felt a sense of honor and pride.

An old "yaller cur"—yes—there are lots of us in both the brute and human species. So let us treat him kindly as we ask our superiors to treat us.—(Ed.)

Senator Vest, of Missouri, was attending court in a country town and while waiting for the trial of a case in which he was interested, he was urged by the attorneys in a dog case to help them. He was paid a fee of $250 by the plaintiff. Voluminous evidence was introduced to show that the defendant had shot the dog in malice, while the other evidence went to show that the dog had attacked the defendant. Vest took no part in the trial and was not disposed to speak. The attorneys, however, urged him to make a speech, else their client would not think he had earned his fee. Being thus urged, he arose, scanned the face of each jurymen for a moment, and said:

Gentlemen of the jury: The best friend a man has in this world may turn against him and become his enemy. His son or daughter that he has reared with loving care may prove ungrateful. Those who are nearest, and dearest to us, those whom we trust with our happiness and our good name, may become traitors to their faith. The money that a man has he may lose. It flies away from him, perhaps when he needs it most, a man's reputation may be sacrificed in a moment of ill-considered action. The people who are prone to fall on their knees to do us honor when success is with us may be the first to throw the stone of malice when failure settles its cloud upon our heads. The one absolutely unselfish friend that man can have in this selfish world, the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous, is his dog.

Gentlemen of the jury, a man's dog stands by him in prosperity and in poverty, in health and in sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground where the wintry winds blow and the snow drives fiercely if only he may be near his master's side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer, he will lick the wounds and sores that come in encounter with the roughness of the world. He guards the sleep of his pauper master as if he were a prince. When all other friends desert he remains. When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces he is as constant in his love as the sun in its journey through the heavens. If fortune drives the master forth an outcast in the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him to guard against danger, to fight against his enemies, and when the last scene of all comes, and death takes the master in its embrace, and his body is laid away in the cold ground, no matter if all other friends pursue their way, there by his graveside will the noble dog be found, his head between his paws, his eyes sad, but open in alert watchfulness, faithful and true even to death.

Then Vest sat down. He had spoken in a low voice, without any gesture. He made no reference to the evidence or the merits of the case. When he finished, judge and jury were wiping their eyes. The jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $500. He had sued for $200.

A YALLER DOG'S LOVE FOR A NIGGER.

There's a rude mound in yonder grave-yard cold,
 That knows no Decoration day,
 And he that is laid underneath it to mould
 Is only a "nigger" they say.
 He died an old vagrant! Not a cent did he own!
 And he left not a soul to be sad,
 They gave him his freedom, and he wandered alone,
 And an old "yaller dog" was all that he had.

 They laid him away in the cold,
 damp clay,
 That poor old worn-out slave,
 Not a prayer for his rest did anyone say,
 But his dog lay down on his grave.

And there you see him, day after day,
 At morning, at night or at noon
 And the daintiest morsel can't tempt him away
 From the sad, rude grave of the coon.

He lies there and mourns the whole day long,
 For nobody else does he care;
 Neither menace nor threat can drive him away
 From the grave of the nigger laid there.

There's a mighty fine monument standing right nigh,
 But to me that rude mound seems bigger,
 For there's a monument that money can't buy—
 The "yaller dog's love for a nigger."

Suggestion For Dust

The following method for laying dust has been tried in several towns with success. As water extinguished fire, moisture subdues dust. Kainit has a strong affinity for vapour and if a dusty street is given an occasional dressing of this article, dust will disappear. 1000 pounds per acre will give good effect. If 100 bushels of gas lime per acre is added to the kainit, a smooth dustless surface will follow. This is claimed to be better than sprinkling and much more inexpensive.

COLLEGE NOTES

Delaware's team, which has evidently gone stale on account of so much work incident to such a long schedule, dropped both games which were played away last Friday and Saturday.

In one of the most spirited elections ever held in the college the Frat element succeeded in electing their men by a small majority. All three of them had to combine, however, to perform this feat.

President of the Athletic Association—Ennis. Vice-President of the Athletic Association—Sloan. Secretary of the Athletic Association—Taylor. Treasurer of the Athletic Association—Tammany.

Base Ball Manager—Rice. Assistant Base Ball Manager—Smith. Track Manager—Sawdon. Assistant Track Manager—Sawdon. Tennis Manager—McCafferty. Assistant Tennis Manager—Gonia.

H. S. Garrison, '11, R. R. Whitcomb, '12, and A. S. Houghton, '13, have been chosen to represent the Delaware College Y. M. C. A. at Northfield, Mass., during the week of June 25th.

The latest word from the printers says that the Blue Hen, published by the class of 1912, will make its debut on Friday, but we doubt it.

RAUGHLEY'S SPLITTERS PUZZLE THE TOWNSMEN.

In what was probably one of the best attended games ever played on the Athletic Field, Delaware very much surprised the Willis' Hopes by defeating them on Decoration Day, 13 to 1. Gregg occupied the mound for the Newarkers and pitched rather poor ball, as there had been safe bingles were secured of his delivery, and he issued two passes and hit one man.

The contest was replete with sensational features, notably the home run shot of Taylor to deep right, and the three base slams of Jackson and Morris to the left garden ditch. Both outfielders also distinguished themselves by making several difficult catches. Pop Montgomery was right on the job and showed that he has lots of baseball left in him yet, by accepting three chances without an error. Knopf likewise played a star game in the centre grass-plot and appeared to have recovered from his recent attack of amnesia.

Table with columns: DELAWARE, R, H, O, A, E. Rows for Harvey, Dunn, Marshall, Hoch, Taylor, Knopf, Saracene, Huston, Raughley, Totals.

Table with columns: NEWARK, R, H, O, A, E. Rows for Jackson, Marney, D. Willis, Gregg, Morris, Herdman, Roberts, Montgomery, Barrow, Totals.

Score by Innings: Newark 0 0 0 0 0 1 0 0—1. Delaware College 0 2 0 0 0 3 2 3—13. Home run—Taylor. Three base hits—Jackson, Morris. Two base hit—Dunn.

The Fruit Crop Of Delaware. Dover will add to its industries a fruit juice house within the year, if the plans of the Board of Trade mature.

Delaware is now raising a grade of fruit unequalled in this country, and the increase in the acreage of grapes alone within the past few years has made it imperative that extra means be used to take care of the crop.

The juice house, as planned for Dover, will handle strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, peaches, pears and probably apples, as well as grapes, and this will furnish employment for a number of hands from the middle of May until October each year.

The Dover Fruit Juice Company will have an authorized capital of $100,000.00 of which $25,000 will be issued at once in $10 shares.

As all the fruit juice plants now operating have shown a profit of over 20 per cent, it is likely that Mr. Horace P. Clark, who has charge of the matter for the DOVER BOARD OF TRADE, will find little trouble in allotting the shares.

According to the best prospectus issued by the Board of Trade, the company will be managed by an experienced fruit conservator, and a plant of this kind will be an important addition to the Dover industries.

Trip To Washington

Delaware College class in Landscape Gardening has just returned from Washington, where, under the guidance of Prof. C. A. McCue it made a three day tour of inspection of the public parks and squares.

The idea of the tour was to take note of the actual designs and methods of planting the various trees, shrubs and flowering plants. Many beautiful designs were seen. At each park and square a student was required to give his ideas as to the means he would use to improve the general plan of the park or square under discussion.

One of the most interesting features of the trip was a visit to the Botanical Gardens. Here the students were asked to take particular note of the various as to their habits of growth and their ornamental values.

During the trip Professor McCue explained the idea the city authorities have of improving the city. He illustrated his explanations by means of models which are in the Congressional library. He showed how they intended to cut a broad avenue from the capital to Washington's monument, and also explained the position the federal building will occupy on either side of the new avenue.

He further showed the students the position of the proposed bridge across the Potomac, and how it would greatly add to the beauty of the city. He also called attention to the many public playgrounds in the city.

The last day of the tour was devoted entirely to the study of the landscape details of Arlington Cemetery. The new and the old sections were compared. The utility of the walks and drives was discussed. The use of formal flower beds was also brought into the discussion.

The tour was a great success. The students received a considerable amount of practical instruction which cannot be obtained in the college. Incidentally the numerous public buildings were visited. Among them were the agricultural buildings which perhaps created as much interest as any, owing to the fact that some of the students looked upon these as places where in the near future they may be employed.
