High School Teachers Organize

Hear Discussion of New School Code

Local School Board Holds Conference with Commissioner Spaid

A significant step in securing state-wide cooperation in educational matters was taken on Saturday when representatives from the various high schools of the state met in conference in the chapel room at Old College Hall and perfected a permanent organization.

The conference called by Professor W. A. Wilkinson, held its opening session on Friday evening with a very good attendance considering the inclemency of the weather. Dr. S. C. Mitchell extended a cordial welcome to the visiting teachers. He then introduced Dr. Clifford J. Scott of Wilmington, who acted as presiding officer and in a brief opening address designated the passage of the new school code as "the dawn of a new day in educational matters in Delaware."

Dr. Joseph H. Odell, director-general of the Service Citizens of Delaware, spoke of the value of a high school education to a boy and the benefit that would accrue if boys would remain even one year longer in school under the new educational system.

Much interest was manifested in the discussion of the new school code presented by A. R. Spaid, State Commissioner of Education. He summarized the history of the public schools of the state from 1796 to the present time.

He stated that until April 14, 1919, when the governor signed the new school code Delaware had not an established high school system. It was an individual matter, he said entirely. Under the new law the state must subsidize the high schools. He referred to the fact that until this time some schools of the state kept open only 60 days in the year but under this new law no school can close down each year until it has been in session 180 days. This alone is sure to result in great benefits to the children of the state. Every child in the state will now have an opportunity for both a high school and college education without having to pay one cent tuition from the start to the finish of his education.

The speaker stated that a number of the special districts have already elected to come in under the new code and it was hoped that all such districts would take similar action. Last year he said the high schools of Delaware outside of Wilmington graduated but 116. If Delaware College is to eventually secure an enrollment of 600 to 700 as is the hope, more graduates will have to be turned out by the state schools and this the speaker thought will be done under the new law. "The code," he said, "really establishes a high school system in the state and gives uniform state aid. It also standardizes the schools."

To Draft New Study Courses

Dr. Spaid said the principals of the schools will be asked to assist in making up the courses under the new system. Under the classification of the high schools they must have under the law the required number of teachers or state appropriations will be held up. "The code was written with the idea of justice to the children of the state and not for the benefit of the taxpayers," Dr. Spaid stated. "Under this code Delaware will leave its present position of 33rd in the union to education and push ahead and stay ahead. Everything undemocratic in the schools should disappear under the new law."

WHAT OF THE SMALL HIGH SCHOOL?

Superintendent Schilling of the Kent county schools, discussed "Possibilities of small high schools under the code." He said it was not time yet to definitely plan just what can be done in the second group of high schools but agriculture, industrial arts and home economics can be taught. Under the old system the speaker said there was no incentive for the boy or girl in many localities where the grades only ran to the eighth and sometimes not that high but under the new plan of the second group he can go higher and will probably get

LOCAL MEMBERS OF "LIGHTNING DIVISION" HOME

William Stiltz and Pusey Pemberton Pay Flying Visit Monday

Relatives of William Stiltz and Pusey Pemberton were made happy on Saturday evening to learn that their soldier boys had landed in Hoboken and had been sent to Camp Dix. Telephone conversations were held with the boys on Saturday and Sunday and quantities of good things immediately despatched under personal guard of Ferd Stiltz.

Late Monday evening the young men surprised their relatives by paying them a personal visit between trains.

Both are members of the 309th Machine Gun Battalion of the famous 78th or Lightning Division, the first division of drafted men trained at Camp Dix, to which the first two contingents of Delaware drafted men were assigned. It is expected the Delaware boys will be discharged from the service as soon as they undergo physical examination and have their discharge papers filled out.

The 78th division was made up under the first draft call. Several hundred Delawareans were in it. It was trained under General Hugh Scott, commander of Camp Dix. General McRae was assigned to command the division overseas. It left Camp Dix in May of last year for overseas, and participated actively in the battles toward the close of the war, particularly at the Meuse and Argonne Forest, the division going over the top after the Germans without artillery preparation in the Argonne. The 78th division made a splendid record and many of its men have been cited for distinguished services.

Since going overseas many of the Delaware boys have been transferred from the 78th division to other units, and it is not known how many of them returned to Camp Dix Saturday and yesterday, although word was received from many of them by their parents.

According to statements made on Monday night by the Newark boys, they expect to be discharged in a very short time.

An unusually large number attended the regular meeting of the New Century Club yesterday afternoon to hear Lieutenant L. L. Smart tell of his experiences with the aviation corps overseas. He had a number of views and clippings descriptive of his service on the Mexican border and at the front. He told many interesting things of his work in reconnaissance and photographic work and in distributing propaganda behind the German lines.

Mrs. Thomas Ingham sang "When My Caravan Has Rested" by Lohr.

Mr. Goodwin, a representative of the national organization was present and gave the board some valuable pointers as to conduct of the branch. Owing to failure to make proper train connection, Mr. Goodwin did not arrive until late.

Standing committees were appointed and also a committee to draw up the constitution and by-laws of the branch.

AIRPLANE FLIGHTS AID VICTORY LOAN SALES

All Passengers Enjoy The Sport

A decided impetus was given to Victory Loan sales as a result of the visit here on Thursday of two government airplanes under command of Captain G. B. Hoagland.

Although the demonstration was originally planned for Wednesday and postponed on account of rain, the delay only served to advertise the affair to better advantage and draw a larger crowd.

An exhibition flight just over the town about noon excited the whole neighborhood and gave notice of the fact that the Victory Loan demonstration was about to take place. The arrival of the duPont band early in the afternoon confirmed the notice and all who were able to be out assembled at Jex field. The idea of having the music and speaking at Wolf Hall was abandoned upon the advice of the aviators because it was thought unwise to separate the crowd.

Members of the committee busied themselves selling bonds and thus materially increased the number of subscriptions. Mrs. C. A. McCue for making the greatest number of sales was privileged to make the flight. Warren A. Singler was the lucky member of the men's committee. Both enjoyed the sensation and expressed themselves as ready to repeat the performance if the chance should be afforded.

The crowning event of the day, however, was the flight made by William Barton, 86 years young, who is in all probability the oldest man to take such a trip. He had asked several days previously for the privilege and on account of his years of valiant service in the army and of his peculiar experiences with the colors under Albert Sidney Johnson, he was permitted to fly. He enjoyed the trip and regretted that it was so short. Although he was taken up about 3500 feet he suffered no ill effects whatever and was exceedingly happy to have had the experience.

The public schools and the colleges were closed for the afternoon in order that no one should miss the treat provided by Uncle Sam. The Delaware College Battalion marched to the field of activities and did such excellent service as guard that they elicited much favorable comment from the visitors.

The four aviators, Captain G. B. Hoagland, Lt. Charles Lamborn, Lt. R. H. Ellis and Sergeant Hansen, were entertained at the home of Major Baldwin the early part of the week, and came from there to Newark on Wednesday morning. During the trip her engine in one of planes began working badly and in the exhibition flight over the town the trouble continued and could not be remedied in time to take up passengers in the afternoon. After the mechanic had worked on it for some time a trial flight was made.

FALLS TO THE GROUND

The machine seemed to be working splendidly but after ascending about fifty or sixty feet, the engine got beyond control and the plane dashed to the ground head on and buried its nose in the wheat field. The spectators rushed to the scene of the accident and were glad to find that apart from a few scratches and a great deal of mud the aviators were uninjured. (Continued on Page 5)

Fire At Wolf Hall

In some mysterious manner a quantity of ether caught fire at the Wolf Hall laboratory on Wednesday and might have proved serious had not Prof. Firman Thompson, with rare presence of mind, removed a large can of the inflammable material which was in close proximity to the flames.

Fortunately the fire confined itself to the large piece of apparatus, which contained the ether. Only the fact that Wolf Hall is a fireproof structure prevented the flames from spreading beyond the control of those present. Because of the nature of the blaze water proved useless and slowly the flames became less vigorous and in the course of a few more minutes died down so low that they could be smothered.

New Residential Section Mapped Out

Will be Known as Orchard Ridge

Greater Newark Development Company to Boost Town

The Greater Newark Development Company recently incorporated, has purchased 30 acres of ground from A. E. Grantham and propose to run a street through from Depot Road to intersect Latta Avenue. This street will be parallel with Park Place and in front of Women's College.

Latta Avenue will henceforth be known as Orchard Road and the development as Orchard Ridge. It is proposed to sell land of 100 foot frontage for building lots with a number of restrictions imposed as to the kind of house to be built, the distance from the street, etc.

It is planned to develop this addition into a high class residential section. Newark has grown so rapidly in the past few years that there has been a lamentable lack of houses and available land for building near the center of the town is very limited. It is thought that this land lying between the two railroad stations will gradually develop into a central residential section.

This development company has recently filed its charter and has elected the following officers: president, A. E. Grantham; treasurer, George L. Medill; secretary and counsel, George L. Townsend, Jr.

Victory Loan Figures Not Yet Available

While definite figures could not be secured it is understood that Newark did not make its quota for the Victory Loan in spite of earnest work on the part of both committees. A thorough canvass of the district was made and returns are coming in rather slowly.

Bank officials are especially well pleased with the fact that a greater number of subscriptions are made on the cash basis than in any of the previous loans.

Mr. George Rhodes won the helmet, which was offered to the largest subscriber. Another helmet was offered to the member of the committee who obtained the largest number of subscriptions. Mrs. Bonham is highest on the Woman's Committee, having sold to 51 subscribers. Incomplete returns make it impossible to find out who is highest on the Men's Committee.

Big Y. W. C. A. Meeting

On Monday evening, May 19, a public meeting in the interest of the Y. W. C. A. drive to secure a State Secretary who will direct work in the small towns, will be held in Newark.

Mrs. T. Coleman duPont will tell of the general phase of "Y" work and Mrs. Otto Nowland will speak upon local and state phases.

Those interested in the movement are planning a big meeting which will be followed by "flying squadrons" which will visit all Delaware towns. The place of meeting will be posted later.

CHARTERHOUSE HAS VARIED AND ENTERTAINING HISTORY

ESTABLISHED AS MONASTERY IN YEAR 1200

W. H. LOGAN, JR., TELLS OF RECENT VISIT TO ENGLISH LANDMARK

William H. Logan, Jr., a brother of Mrs. Francis A. Cooch, who is doing overseas work under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. in an interesting letter just received recounts the experiences of three hours in London. A portion of his letter follows:

We were told we could not get in to see the Charterhouse as it was Saturday; usually it is because it is Sunday or some other day, but I have been told those tales on former occasions. So we hung around and had some conversation with the porter, who finally told us to go in and see Brother Bridger. We went across a small court yard, through an archway into a larger court. You must understand that all one can see from the outside is a high stone wall and inside all these places are court yards, with buildings about them, often beautiful gardens and archways through the buildings from one court to another, but you would never suspect it from the outside.

The grounds of the Temple, inner and middle, are perhaps as large as the old grounds around Delaware College, but they are all surrounded by shops and high buildings, except the part of the embankment—the drive along the Thames, and that has a low stone wall and a high iron fence above it.

However, we found Brother Bridger, who turned out to be the Librarian of Charterhouse and a most entertaining and kindly gentleman. He regretted so much that as Saturday was cleaning day and it was so difficult to get charwomen and it was necessary for the stairs and floors to dry before being tread on he could not show us inside the buildings, out he would do the best he could for us. So he had us sit down while he told us of the ancient place and urged us to stay for tea. Calling in his good looking young country cousin who had come from her home in Surrey to go to college in London, to hear the recital and meet the gentlemen from America.

He had lived, twenty years ago, in Englewood, N. J., and a man there had been very kind to him and become a great friend, so whenever he had a chance to do anything for Americans it was only paying back the debt he owed to the man in New Jersey. So we got some of the bread which had been cast so long ago.

He told us that the Chartreuse monks established a monastery some time in 1200 and had an Abbot and 24 monks. Henry VIII, the much married one, wanted to take their property one time when he was a bit hard up or perhaps out of luck, and sent a retainer to spy out a charge. All this boy could say about them, after over two hundred years occupancy, was that they spoke too freely among themselves of the acts of the King. Anyway he confiscated the possessions. Henry evidently had a bit of a conscience somewhere and wanted the Abbot and the monks to sign a paper to say that he had a right to take the property. John Houghton, the Abbot, replied that he had sinned against God's poor and God's church and worst of all God himself, and he would not sign. Following the gentle customs of the time the whole outfit was taken to Newgate, and had an iron band put around their bodies and a chain fastened from it to the wall so they had to stand upright. Every morning for twenty-four days, with their breakfast, was brought the paper to sign, with the promise of liberty and a pension, but there was nothing doing.

Eventually they were released but the Abbot and one of the monks were taken to Tyburn, the execution place of common criminals and there John was strangled, then cut down and disembowled, his heart was cut out and his head stuck on a pike on London Bridge. His body was cut into four pieces and an arm and a leg were stuck with tar on top of the gate thru which we had walked. In the night the monks took down the pieces and buried them. Then they took red bricks and made a design on the wall I (for J) H and a large cross for John Houghton and a smaller cross for the monk, and we could see those markers as we looked out the window of Brother Bridger's room where we sat by his little fire and the kettle was boiling away for the afternoon tea.

I have an idea that this same Brotherhood of Chartreuse Monks had a church on the site of the Cheshire Cheese and it must have been before that place became a tavern in 1667. A Duke of Norfolk got possession of the Charter House, as the English corrupted the name, and was put away by Elizabeth because he placed over his door the arms of Mary Stuart, which are still there and mostly because he said Mary was better looking. Of course Lizzie couldn't stand for that. So he lost his palace and his head.

Endowed as School and as Home.
About 1620 or so, Thomas Sutton bought the grounds and beside it built a school for poor boys, with the privilege to the master to add others to the specified number. That school has been taken to Goldalming in Surrey and is one of the most important schools for boys in England. There are some 600 added to the original number and the charges for them make the Master's job rather "cushy." I think this is the place where they wear blue coats, hence a common term. The original school buildings are used as a school for the sons of the Drapers and Mercers Guild.

Thomas Sutton also endowed the Charter House as a home for men who were single or widowers, over fifty, who had lost their fortunes thru no fault of their own, had done good to their fellow men and could satisfy the trustees as to their moral character during their lives. The King and the Queen, the various Archbishops and some other notables were made trustees and a board of 16 looks after the affairs and management.

There are some 50 old men live here and have, so we were told, much more freedom to come and go and have no class distinctions as are kept at St. Cross Hospital in Winchester. These men too are not allowed to wear their gowns outside the grounds, while at St. Cross they can never be without the gowns and badges.

We saw the huge fireplace where the monks cooked their roasts and beside it a smaller one, about five feet across where they "probably did their eggs."

On one of the window panes, on the "traitor's stairway" is cut with a diamond, the fact that some old boy said he would rather be living unmarried in Charter House than have a wife and live elsewhere. Brother Bridger likes to tell that a little girl of ten said "sour grapes" when she read it.

The room in which he lives, or has for his office, with a bed room beside it, was occupied by Captain Thomas Light, whom Thackeray visited when he was writing "The Newcomes" and used him as the prototype for Col. Newcome. A tablet on the wall outside recounts this and in the hallway is framed part of Thackeray's manuscript. Hopkinson Smith wrote "Thackeray's London" and gives a chapter to Brother Bridger, who has an autographed authors copy which he very proudly displays. Smith also made a sketch of the room from the corner at the door where Brother Bridger had us stand then gave us a post card copy of the illustration which appears in Hopkinson Smith's book, and also gave us one of the outside of that room.

He certainly did treat us right. He tapped the old monk trends of the stairway in one of the buildings and it sounded like stone, after being walked on for 700 years it naturally had little voice left.

Then he took us to the school adjoining and showed us in the wall of the Charterhouse, which formed one side of the school yard, where there had been cells, endowed by Lord Mayors of London, this place is just outside the limits of the City or London Town. Here food was placed through a hole and some monks got something to eat besides what they had to cook in those big fireplaces.

Beside the small arched entrance in the outer wall, where the Porters lodge is, there is a big gate and in it a little door near which is a large knocker. This was a sanctuary and if a man pursued got to the knocker he was safe and a monk let him in the little gate to tell his story to the Abbott who would decide what to do with him.

Outside the wall is a fair sized grass plot in which in 1300 something when the Black Plague was killing four out of five in London Town, they used to come out at night to put their dead in a shallow grave. It is said that 5000 were put here and whenever they excavate for any piping or drains they find human bones.

We heard the bell sound four o'clock from its wooden belfry as it has been doing for 500 years, and could appreciate the story Brother Bridger told of the American he was showing about who asked if a certain thing was old. He got peeved when he was told it was not old, maybe 250 or 300 years, but not old. "Why," he said, "anything in our country that is 100 years old we go miles to see." I asked our guide what part of the country he had come from, for I knew it wasn't along the Atlantic seaboard.

Visits Guild Hall.

Then we went to the Guild Hall and saw the Banqueting Hall, where our Woodrow received the Freedom of the City, and where the blackened stone pillars mark the ravages of the great fire of 1666.

The Guild Hall is now the Town Hall of the Corporation of London as you were told in the story of Lord Mayor's Day.

Not far away is the Mansion House where the Lord Mayor lives and as it was almost five we thought we would not be able to get in. But the footman who answered our ring turned us over to an old boy who showed us about. In one of the drawing rooms, among other private possessions of the present Lord Mayor, Sir Thomas Marshall, were signed photos of Woodrow and the Mrs.

Then we had tea, of course, and went down St. Swithins Lane to see the Rothschilds Banking House and the iron gates I like so well. I learned then that they are in front of the Salters Guild House, and that Salters have to do with horses harness, so the Bobbie said. Yesterday I found it is the stirrup.

From that to St. Swithins Church by London Stone at the end of the Lane and to London Bridge, under which much water still flows and home by bus.

That for three hours and not a mile from my habitation.

Yesterday, when the clocks had been set forward an hour for the beginning of Summer, we had two furious snow storms, followed by sun and at night the sidewalks were hardly wet. I went to Hammersmith and walked with the fair Aileen and her Father along the Thames, between the Hammersmith and Putney bridges where the lower half of the Orford-Cambridge course is.

In the evening a man came to call on them who is connected with the Sopwiths, who build the airplane bodies. He says he will get me a ride in an airbus. I told him I could go any hour of the day or night. He is to go tonight to Ireland to arrange for a landing place for the two men they have sent over to St. Johns to make the try at the Atlantic flight. They are to spread a great stretch of sail cloth on the ground, pipe clay it to keep it white and burn flares day and night to mark the landing place. Perhaps by the time you get this they will have done it. They are to be in constant communication by wireless telegraph and telephone. The fuselage or wheels can be dropped if necessary and right themselves to form a boat, equipped with provisions and wireless apparatus. Here's luck to them!

GOVERNOR MAKES IMPORTANT APPOINTMENTS

New State Board of Education Chosen; Local Man on County Board

A number of important appointments were made by Governor Townsend on Thursday. They include the Board of Education and the County School Commissions authorized under the new school code; the Survey Commission which will arrange for a survey of State, county and city government by experts and report their recommendations of new laws to the next Legislature; the State Board of Charities and a commission to erect an addition to the State House, which was suggested by the Governor in his message to the General Assembly as a fitting memorial to those who fought in our wars.

Governor Townsend selected men of prominence and recognized ability from all parts of the State for the important appointments he made. It is known that the governor devoted considerable time and thought to the selections he has made and he has prevailed upon men who are high in big business affairs to bestow part of their time and ability upon affairs of State.

The new State Board of Education named includes Pierre S. duPont, former president of the big powder company, who has taken a deep interest in Delaware College and educational affairs generally; George B. Miller, president of the Wilmington Board of Education; Hervey P. Hall, former Speaker of the House, and a business man of Smyrna; A. B. Peet, of Milford, former Representative in the Legislature, and Harvey Marvel, of Laurel, president of the Laurel Packing Company.

The school commissioners for the various counties were appointed. For this county the following were chosen: George L. Medill, of the Security Trust and Safe Deposit Company, whose home is in Newark; William H. Danzenbaker, of Claymont, who is a Representative in the Legislature, and Eugene Shalleross, of Middletown, farmer and active in the Grange.

For Caesar Rodney School, in the Camden-Wyoming district, the first consolidated school in the State which has accepted the provisions of the new school code, the following Board of Education was appointed: Dr. T. R. Brown, Jacob G. Brown and J. P. Jump.

The new State Survey Commission appointed comprises Clarence C. Killen and Captain Horace Wilson, of Wilmington, W. Watson Harrington, of Dover, Harry L. Cannaon, of Bridgeville, and Dr. Frank L. Grier, of Milford.

The State Board of Charities appointed comprises former Governor Charles R. Miller, Mrs. Peter T. Wright and State Senator Thomas F. Gormley, of Wilmington; Mrs. L. Irving Handy, of Smyrna, and Dr. G. Layton Crier, of Milford.

The commission to erect an addition to the State House appointed includes former Governor Simeon S. Pennell, of Greenwood; Dr. Rowland G. Paynter, of Georgetown, former United States Senator Harry A. Richardson and Henry Bidgely, of Dover; State Senator Frank R. Pool, of near Odessa; former Senator David C. Rose, of Newark; Representative J. Edward McNabb, and A. D. Warner, president of the Chamber of Commerce of Wilmington.

Methodism "Adopts" Villages In Chateau-Thierry

Twelve villages on the battlefields of Chateau-Thierry, where the United States soldiers and marines won undying fame by stopping the German drive on Paris at its spearhead early last summer, have been "adopted" for reconstruction work by the American Methodist Episcopal Church, it was announced recently by Dr. M. E. Swartz, Methodist Centenary secretary for the Washington Area.

Bonresches, Vaux and Le Thiolet, names which will always live in American history, are three of the towns entrusted to the American churches by special arrangement with the prefect of the Department of Aisne and M. Lebrun, Minister of the Liberated Territory in the French Cabinet. The others are Bonneil, Mont de Bonneil, Azy, Nogentel, Vincelles, Monneaux, Montecourt, Crozy and Aulnois. The towns are in a district bordered on the north by Belleau Wood, changed by the valor of the sea-fighters of the U. S. Second Division to Bois de la Brigade de Marines (Marine Brigade Wood). The district is just northwest and west of Chateau-Thierry.

The city of Chateau-Thierry itself is not in the Methodist Reconstruction territory, but it will serve as headquarters for the Methodist workers.

An elaborate community centre will be built in Chateau-Thierry by the Methodists. This is an independent project, however, the physical rehabilitation of the city being entrusted to other forces.

The announcement of the Methodist plans was made to Dr. Swartz by Dr. Ernest W. Bysshe, for ten years superintendent of Methodist missions in France, on his arrival from Paris.

Have A Well-planned Garden

Many farmers fail to realize that one-tenth of an acre devoted to a well-planned and well-tended garden will in many cases produce as much food as an acre of field crops. The garden should, and can with a little planning, be made to produce throughout the entire season instead of only during a month or two in the spring. Three to five plantings of snap beans planted at intervals of two to three weeks, at least three early and one late planting of peas, and frequent small sowings of lettuce will insure a continuous supply of these vegetables during the entire season. Sweet corn should be planted every two or three weeks during the early part of the season and, if the growing season is long, two plantings should be made in July or August for autumn use. The early garden should also be planted so that space will be available when needed for planting fall and winter crops, thus making it possible to have fresh vegetables practically the entire year.

"All Things To All People"

Hot water bottles supplied, laundry lists translated into German, French money exchanged—particularly for the purchasing of engagement rings, onions sold for sandwiches, girls supplied for dances and theatre parties, letters written to any one from President Wilson down.

These are just a few of the things which ought to be printed on a big sign over the emergency desk in the lobby of the Y. W. C. A. Hostess House in Coblenz if the newcomer is to get any idea of what the American women in the gray-blue uniform at the desk can do for callers.

Any time of the day or night that one drops into the Hostess House—and everyone does, for it's the social center of Coblenz, the same thing is happening. Privates and generals come in to demand the most impossible of things in a military center and they get them if it is humanly possible.

This afternoon in the course of two hours a major appeared on a mission made each week to the Hostess House to have his laundry list translated into German. A minute later two privates came in for advice about shopping for gifts to send home.

Next an American woman who had been interned during the whole period of the war came in to ask concerning the proper officials to whom to apply for help in getting a passport to America.

A sergeant from the American Police Station across the street brought a German girl in who was being used as a witness in a case, asked that she be cared for, given dinner, and not be allowed to talk to any Germans during the time.

The next request was for three girls for a dance, then a private appeared with a request for help in writing a letter applying for his discharge.

A captain on a convoy from France came in breathlessly to have French money exchanged. He had just seen the engage ment ring he had been hunting for his fiancée for months.

Hot water bottles were supplied a sergeant suffering from a typhoid shot. A captain appeared at four o'clock with a light weight champion asking that he be given dinner. It seems that they could not let him eat at noon as he must weigh exactly 135 pounds at 3 o'clock and because he had exceeded that weight at 10 in the morning the company had been engrossed reducing him. Steak and potatoes were necessary, the captain said, else the athlete would lose strength having been put through five steam baths in the course of four hours to attain the desired weight. The required dinner was cooked. A wrathful general appeared for one dozen eggs which his sergeant had failed to get him. Nurses came in to ask that a trip to Cologne be planned and tickets secured for them, also opera tickets.

A private came in to apply for a job as orderly at the Hostess House, another one came in to get a nurse to go to the Little Playhouse with him. Still another wanted onions for a sandwich being sick of "corn willy" and "slum."

A Y. M. C. A. girl taken suddenly ill came for a room. An officer came in to inquire about evacuation hospitals and to have a sick friend located for him.

So it continues all day long. The Y. W. C. A. workers supply all needs. The Hostess House is "on" used by some privates "as a slick place to coach up on how to act when you get back home and out with civilized people. Table cloths and china after bare tables and mess kits for months."

Recipes are even given of favorite dishes when there is a possibility of persuading a company cook to try his skill on them.

First Aid For The Tired Housekeeper

One form of first aid for the tired housekeeper is rubber heels. Anyone who is much on her feet needs them, and it is surprising how that silent, elastic cushion soothes the nerves and relieves tired backs. No one questions the value of rubber tires on vehicles, and there is the same necessity for a rubber-tired housekeeper. Many women who are kind and considerate to everyone around them are really cruel to their own feet. They wear poorly fitting shoes, or think they can "make out all right" with run-over heels or worn soles that chafe or callous the foot, or they think the constant pain and strain of fallen arches is merely a temporary rheumatic affection. Foot troubles depress the nerves, and lead to symptoms whose origin is not always recognized. There is every reason for the housekeeper, above all other workers, to be kind to her feet.

A Campaign For Courtesy

It is said that Springfield, Mass., has started a six-months' campaign of courtesy, a campaign that costs nothing, includes no buttons or badges, and is merely to let actions speak louder than words. Most people who travel around a good deal, and have much experience in business life, realize that public politeness is a rare quality. We are hustled about everywhere, and we find entirely too many cases where the employees of public utilities and the salespeople in all sorts of business are curt, negligent and uncivil. Good will is a valuable asset in any business, and it may be that many employers do not realize how much their employees do to lessen it. The great telephone companies urge "the voice with a smile," and there are many families where instruction in the art of being pleasant is evidently needed. There is no question that efforts to be courteous, pleasant and cheerful react on the moral nature of those who practice these minor virtues. If courtesy and cheerful consideration for others form the basis of home life, they are likely to become a valuable habit when the children go out into the world.—Rural New Yorker.

NEWARK HIGH PULLS FIRST PLACE IN MEET

Wins Over DuPont High by Four Points in Class 2

Newark high school added to the laurels already gained in baseball by pulling down first place in Class 2 events at the sixth annual interscholastic field and track meet held at Delaware College on Saturday. Jacob Tome Institute won first place in Class 1 with 36 points. A persistent rain, a hold over from Friday evening's storm made a most discouraging outlook for this great event but the arrival of so many of the entrants decided the uncertain matter of holding the meet on a sodden, water-soaked field, with several inches of standing water in spots and pools of water in the jumping pits. Officials and spectators spent a most uncomfortable time as well as the participants. All protected themselves as best they could, many seeking the shelter of Mechanical Hall and viewing from the windows of that building the indomitable spirit of the lads who participated in the events.

Newark won by a small margin over duPont. Tome Institute, by winning the one-mile relay, secured the silver loving cup offered for the school winning this event three times, it being Tome's third win.

Guild Plans For Big Dance Monday Night

Members of St. Thomas's guild are putting forth every effort to make their first annual dance to be held in the Armory next Monday night. This is the first formal affair the Guild has given and Representative W. D. Dean, chairman and others of the committee are planning to make it a notable one. Guests are expected from a distance and from nearby towns.

FOUR "FRATS" GIVE SATURDAY EVENING DANCES

Number of Out-of-town Guests Attend Festive Affairs

Newark's social calendar is so full this month that it is not an unusual thing to have several events on the same evening. The past week capped the climax for social activities with four dances in one evening. Kappa Alpha, Sigma Nu, Omega Alpha and Sigma Phi each chose Saturday night for their respective parties.

Old College Hall, Newark, was the setting for the dance party of the Kappa Alpha Fraternity. The rooms used by the fraternity were decoratively with flowers and fraternal colors and emblems.

The patronesses were: Mrs. Samuel Chiles Mitchell, Mrs. W. H. Steele and Dean Winifred J. Robinson of the Woman's College.

Jimmy White's orchestra furnished the music. Refreshments were served during the intermission in the dancing.

The Newark guests included, Miss Cornelia G. Pilling, Kent Roberts Greenfield, Miss Boulah Law, George S. Mitchell, Paul Pie Steel, Miss Marian Law, Miss Elizabeth Kelley Wingert, Frederick C. Lord, Miss Mary Davis, Miss Lillie Ferguson, Miss Mary Mitchell, Miss Calysta Fechley, Dr. S. C. Mitchell, Dr. W. H. Steel, Professor G. E. Dutton, Dean E. L. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Cann, Miss Anna Galla her and Miss Harriet Wilson.

SIGMA PHI ENTERTAINS AT "FRAT" HOUSE

Delaware Alpha College Chapter, Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity, gave a house party and dance on Saturday evening in the fraternity house on the hill.

The rooms were decorated effectively with purple and red pennants, streamers and lights. The floral decorations, which were elaborate, were dogwood and potted plants.

The patronesses were Mrs. George L. Townsend, Jr., Mrs. Charles L. Penny, Mrs. Levi K. Bowen, Mrs. Harold E. Tiffany, Miss Drake and Mrs. George Carter.

Features of the evening were piano solos by Miss Anna Ritz, two tenor solos by William Allison of Philadelphia, and fancy dances by Clement Alexander and Miss Marie Simon.

The refreshments were served by "Hun," the colored housekeeper for the fraternity, and a staff of assistants.

The Newark guests were: Miss Edith Spencer, F. Johnson Rowan, Miss M. Justine Armstrong, Miss Anna Ritz, F. Bayard Carter, Mrs. L. K. Bowen, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Townsend, Jr., Mrs. C. F. Penny, Mrs. C. G. Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Tiffany, Mrs. Mary G. Foard, Miss Stewart, Miss Drake, Mr. and Mrs. George Carter, Knowles R. Bowen, Dr. W. Owen Sypherd, Miss Dora Law, G. Gray Carter, Miss Mildred Leo Carter.

OMEGA ALPHA HAS INFORMAL AFFAIR

The Omega Alpha Fraternity held an informal house party at the "frat" house Saturday evening, and there was dancing for a short time. This "frat" will hold its annual spring dance in Old College Hall next Friday evening.

SIGMA NU ENTERTAINS AT ARMORY

Newark Armory, beautifully decorated with Sigma Nu colors and dogwood was the spot chosen by the Sigma Nu fraternity for their informal dance. The Six Blue Brothers Jazz Band of Washington furnished the music.

Mrs. John Pilling, Mrs. H. L. Bonham, Mrs. Coy, Miss Wilson, and Mrs. Oleott, the latter from Washington, were the patronesses. A buffet luncheon was served during the evening.

Among the participants in the dance were the following from Newark: Miss Ruth Guyer, Miss Olive Heiser, Miss Katherine Steel, Miss Helen Steel, Miss Helen McNeal, Earl Ramsay, Alvin Allan, P. Williams, Prof. Neff, Coach Shipley, Coach LeCato.

An unusually large number of out-of-town guests attended all four of these affairs and gave Newark an air of great festivity.

Card Of Thanks

Mrs. Columbus Beck and children wish to thank the members of the American Vulcanized Fibre Company for their kindness during the time of the illness and death of the husband and father. They desire also to thank friends and neighbors for their floral offerings and deeds of kindness in the recent bereavement.

VICTORY DANCE A DELIGHTFUL SOCIAL EVENT

Members of Younger Married Set Guests of Young Ladies

One of the prettiest dances held in Newark for some time was that held at the Armory on Friday night, known as the Victory Dance.

About 30 young women of the town planned and arranged the affair and effected a unique decorative scheme. The balcony was arranged with swings and wicker chairs to simulate a summer porch. The stage was a bower of blossoms, dogwood, lilacs and peonies. Japanese lanterns toned down the lights and varicolored "throwers" in the hands of all those present pitched aloft simultaneously during one of the final numbers gave a beautiful rainbow effect.

The Victory idea was accentuated in the banquet room decorations which featured the flags of the allies and unique arrangement of the colors.

The girls had as their guests the following members of the younger married set, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Bonham, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Holton, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Townsend, Jr., Professor and Mrs. Harold L. Tiffany, and Dr. and Mrs. Walt Steel of this town, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Plumley of Perryville.

May Festival Tonight

This evening from 7 to 9 a May Festival will be held on the College campus by the students for the benefit of the Eaglesmere fund. Ice cream and cake will be on sale.

The Battalion did well in this emergency by keeping the crowd back. The plane was so badly injured that it had to be taken apart and shipped away for repairs. Sergeant Sansen, members of the Battalion, and a guard from Elk Mills remained on duty all night guarding the planes. The continued wet weather prevented the wings of the uninjured plane from drying out. Lieutenant Ellis therefore remained over the week-end and was unable to make the return trip until yesterday.

ENTERTAIN AVIATORS

The evening previous to the exhibition the four aviators together with Miss Cornelia Pilling, Dr. and Mrs. Steel, Major and Mrs. Baldwin, Charles Newcomb of Elkton, Merrill Van G. Smith, Dr. W. O. Sypherd were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Herman Tyson.

Lieutenant L. L. Stuart who had so many interesting experiences overseas in the air service trained on the same field with Lieutenant Ellis who likewise has had unusual experiences on the other side. He was shot down behind the German lines by machine gun fire and taken prisoner. He is very reticent about this circumstance, however, and would say only that he was treated very well by the enemy and that he fell into the hands of the Red Cross. Lieutenant Stuart was entertained over night by Major Baldwin and enjoyed renewing acquaintance with Lt. Ellis.

Mayor Eben B. Frazer gave a luncheon for the aviators, other visitors and State Chairman Marvel and Judge Daniel O. Hastings, who were to have been the speakers of the day.

the incentive to continue his education through college. At least the children good citizenship training.

Mr. Schilling said at this time it looks as though he will be short 35 teachers in his county next school year. Recently he went to the West Chester Normal to see about engaging teachers and was told that the graduates of that institution did not want to go to rural schools of Delaware to teach. They do not mind coming to Delaware but not the rural districts. The only hope, Mr. Schilling said in this respect is consolidation of the schools in the rural sections. Such consolidation brings about community centers.

SPECIAL DISTRICTS LIKE NEWARK

At the close of his talk several questions were asked Mr. Schilling relative to the possibilities of special districts like Newark securing the state aid that they now secure in case they do not elect to come under the provisions of the code. Both he and Dr. Spaid said they could not see why any district would wish to stay out but if they do stay out they would likely lose their state aid which in the case of Newark is at least $2,400 a year. Taxes, Mr. Schilling said in some of the rural districts would be less under the code than it has been, as these districts will receive more state aid.

George L. Medill who was recently appointed by Governor Townsend a member of the New Castle County School Commission under the new code, was also present and asked a number of questions relative to the code. Members of the Newark Board of Education were present and held a conference with Dr. Spaid at the close of the meeting relative to the application of the code to the local schools and with reference to the provisions of the Smith-Hughes Act.

The Board was especially desirous of obtaining a copy of the new code in order to know definitely just what the acceptance of its provisions will mean. Up to the time of the meeting, according to the statement of one of the members, no one of the Board with possibly one exception had been able to secure a copy or an abstract of the code, hence their conference with Dr. Spaid.

THE SATURDAY MORNING SESSION

Commissioner Spaid presided over the morning session and introduced L. C. Armstrong, State Supervisor of Agriculture, who discussed "Provision for Agricultural Education in High Schools."

Helen R. Brown who initiated the work in Home Economics in the Newark Schools last year and is now in charge of that department in the Dover schools gave a practical talk on the provision for Home Economics Education in High Schools that served to clarify the matter for those interested in the status of this subject under the new code.

Prof. W. A. Wilkinson, head of the department of Education at Delaware College made a particularly strong plea for professional preparation on the part of high school teachers.

An important feature of this session was an address by Dean Frank P. Graves of the University of Pennsylvania who discussed "Present Day Tendencies in Education." He emphasized the importance of vocational and industrial education at this time and warned against the danger of the "misfit" due to a too hasty or thoughtless decision in the choice of a vocation, and urged the necessity of wise vocational guidance. He gave an interesting exposition of the two great educational movements represented by Dewey and Thorndike, the one concerned with process; the other with product.

He discussed the time lost in the lower grades, the modern effort to secure more efficient work through interest, and the modern idea of educational measurements and reduction of all school work to a scientific basis in order to eliminate loss of time and render the school period most profitable. At the close of his talk permanent organization was effected by the election of the following officers: President, A. H. Berlin, principal of the Wilmington High School; Mrs. Lucile Pratt, of Milford, vice president, and Professor W. A. Wilkinson of Delaware College, secretary.

The morning session was especially well attended. The whole body of teachers was entertained at luncheon by Delaware College and many remained for the track meet in the afternoon.

New Silks

A recent trip to New York silk centers brings to our silk section for the attention of discriminating buyers a number of new ideas. The demand for silks has been so large as to deplete supplies, this applies particularly to printed foulards. We have secured new printings in the popular navy blue grounds. Also Crepe de Chine and Charmeuse, which are equally as scarce.

Many new novelty Silks go on sale for skirts. Bear in mind our reduction sale of Coats, Suits and Dresses.

We solicit charge accounts from those of established credit, and prepay delivery charges on all purchases within a reasonable distance.

Deodorizing the Garbage Can

Well, here I am in her home. I work from morning till night and am glad to do it. I am a necessity to any woman who wants a perfectly clean sanitary home to live in.

7 A. M. Everyone in this neighborhood has remarked how healthy and clean this family looks. Each member sprinkles me in the bath every morning. I refresh them and brighten the beginning of their day.

8 A. M. Breakfast over, I assisted the Maid in washing the dishes. I cut the grease off the dishes, glassware and china. All kitchen utensils I sterilized and made bright and clean.

8:30 A. M. The refrigerator. I cleaned it thoroughly. Sprinkled in warm water I go into every nook and corner. I know it must be hygienically clean so that the food will be wholesome. I make it so.

9 A. M. In the laundry. Ah!—here I work with my old co-worker—soap. The Laundress knows I save half the rubbing and brighten the colors, and make the clothes clean and sweet. Also Laundress is clever. She knows I can take the place of a light starch, so this morning in doing lingerie waists a little of myself was used instead of a light starch. When I got through with them they were confections.

10 A. M. Made the King of the household happy at ten. I washed the Baby. In Baby's bath I made him cool, clean, and comfortable. Then I cleaned the milk bottles and rubber nipples. I made everything around King Baby sanitary.

11 A. M. I renewed the gas range. After she dissolved me in water and washed and wiped the old range dry with a clean cotton cloth, the nickel trimmings glistened, the pipes looked new and the zinc plate looked clean again.

2 P. M. One tablespoonful of myself in a quart of water and the Maid and I cleaned the tarnished silver.

3 P. M. There were some stains rimming the bath tub. You should have seen me take them off and without harming the polished surface a particle. I left it clean as a new pin. While we were in the bathroom, I helped disinfect and clean hair brushes, combs and other toilet articles, and at

5 P. M. I went after that garbage can. I deodorized it, cleaned it, killed all the fly eggs deposited there and rendered this necessary receptacle safe to have around.

Who am I? I am the world's greatest cleanser and the most harmless antiseptic. I purify everything with which I come in contact. I save time, labor, and expense. I am a hygienic necessity in every home. Yours,
