Apartments, parking debated Planning department taking closer look

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

It was a tale of parking waivers and an apartment market approaching the saturation point when Newark's planning commission met in February to review separate subdivision plans for Main Street.

Developer Eric Schwab told the planning commissioners the old Newark Diner, vacant for several months, is not handicapped accessible and needs modernization. "But when it's finished, it will look aesthetically as it does today, but be more usable," he assured commissioners.

After demolishing the rear and a small second story of the existing restaurant, Schwab said the classic diner facade would be preserved on the outside of a new ground level restaurant with two additional stories and 10 apartments.

According to planning director Roy Lopata, there are 547 apartments "in the pipeline" for Newark. As a result, Lopata said the planning department was only recommending a maximum of six apartments in a two-story building here.

In successfully arguing to keep the higher number, Joseph Charma of Landmark Engineering said there are approximately 2,000 apartments throughout downtown Newark and no vacancies on Main Street. "I think Main Street is where people want to be," Charma said.

A newly revised plan also dropped the developers request to only an 11-space parking waiver at the complex called Newark Square. "We've reduced the number of seats from 110 to 90 in the restaurant and reconfigured the parking," Schwab explained.

Charma also said a possible municipal parking lot could be included behind the property in the future. "We think integrated parking could be

Explosion reveals problems

Some tenants may have to move

By MARY E. PETZAK

According to staff at the Newark fire marshal's office, a recent furnace incident at 17 Choate Street has revealed more problems.

"I met with the owner's expert on Friday (Feb. 18) and he said the chimney was in excellent condition and it was not," explained building inspector Ron Sylvester on Tuesday. "If you look where the plaster cracked you can see there's no chimney lining there - that's been letting carbon monoxide into the bedroom for a long time."

Sylvester said he "condemned" the building again and ordered the owner to have a stainless steel chimney liner installed before any tenants can move back in.

Fire marshal Kenneth Farrall said a 911 call came in around 4:35 p.m. on Feb. 12 after the girls living in the residence had smelled an oily odor earlier in the day. "They called the owner who was not available and then an oil burner man," said Farrall.

Legislator changes weigh down bill

Special to the Newark Post

Proponents of a Senate-approved education reform bill say a host of amendments pinned to the legislation by state representatives could kill the proposal.

The bill adopted by the Senate during the first day of the new legislative session last month was a compromise, forged last fall by Gov. Tom Carper and leaders from the House and Senate.

The legislation seeks to establish statewide standards for students, based on standard tests, and to make teachers responsible for student performance by linking classroom performance to teacher evaluations.

But House leaders have stalled a vote on the bill since

Train crashes into truck in Bear

Delaware State Police are investigating a crash on Feb. 22 at around 11:25 a.m. between a freight train and a water delivery truck.

According to police, Mark Whaley, 32, of Newport was driving the truck owned by Aquarius Bottled Water Company northbound on Route 72/Wrangle Hill Road. He was struck by a Norfolk Southern freight train when he drove onto a railroad crossing near Porter Road and ejected from the truck which was dragged 65 feet after impact.

Whaley was flown by state police helicopter to Christiana Hospital where he was listed in critical condition. No one on the train was injured. Police said preliminary reports showed the railroad crossing lights were working at the time of the crash. It was not known if Whaley was wearing his seatbelt or why he entered the crossing.

Three charged in sex with 14-year-old

New Castle County Police arrested three men for having sex with a 14-year-old girl who was soliciting herself on the Internet. The girl was arrested in September 1999.

After the investigation revealed the girl had met with the men and had sex for money, a county detective took possession of her AOL account and made contact with the men posing as the girl. Corroborating evidence was collected from chat conversations with the suspects.

Police arrested Howard Gearing, 37, of Newark in October 1999 while he was attempting to meet for sex with a detective posing as the girl. Details of that arrest were not released due to the ongoing investigation. Gearing was charged with rape in the third degree and patronizing a prostitute.

On Feb. 15, police arrested and charged Robin Roberts, 44, of Newark with rape in the third degree and patronizing a prostitute. The following day, they arrested Chris Ruggiero, 30, of Wilmington. He has been charged with rape in the third degree, unlawful sexual contact, and patronizing a prostitute. All three men were released on bail.

Underage entries into liquor stores

Rocks damage property in area

Newark Police reported two incidents of rock throwing in downtown Newark this week. On Feb. 21 around 1:30 a.m., Police arrested Stephen P. Kelly, 26, of New Jersey after he threw a rock through the front window of Klondike Kate's Restaurant on Main Street. Kelly was caught after he tripped over a trash can when fleeing. Sometime between Feb. 20 at 7 p.m. and Feb. 21 at 8 a.m., unknown persons broke a vehicle window on Academy Street by throwing a log through it. Damage was estimated at $200.

School bus crash injures six students

Delaware State Police reported a school bus crash on Friday, Feb. 18 around 7:40 a.m. sent six students to the hospital.

The bus with 24 students from Middletown high school and middle school slid into a utility pole at the intersection of Summit Bridge Road and Armstrong Corner Road when the driver, Colleen Downward, 43, of Middletown, was attempting to turn right onto Summit Bridge Road. There was no damage to the utility pole and minor damage to the bus. Six students were taken to the Christiana Hospital after they complained of minor injuries at school.

Downward was cited by troopers for careless driving.

Vehicles damaged by egg attack

Sometime between Feb. 12 at 11 p.m. and Feb. 13 at 7 a.m., cars parked on Rahway Drive in Newark were hit with eggs by unknown persons causing about $150 damage. Another vehicle was struck the previous night in the same area causing about $50 damage.

New emissions testing at DMV

A two-speed idle emissions test, recently implemented by the Delaware Division of Motor Vehicles, is a new method of analyzing exhaust emissions of gasoline powered motor vehicles registered in New Castle and Kent Counties.

The two-speed testing was implemented in Dover earlier this month for all 1981 or newer vehicles with a gross weight rating of less than 8,501 pounds. All DMV inspection facilities in New Castle County began administering the test on Wednesday, Feb. 16.

The more stringent, two-speed idle testing allows DMV to monitor exhaust emissions at two levels of engine speed. Vehicles must satisfactorily complete both testing modes to renew their registrations. Customers should expect slightly longer testing times.

Older vehicles are not subject to the two-speed test, but are still required to pass Delaware's standard emissions test for registration renewals as in the past.

Cost of crude oil pushes gas prices up

Regional gasoline prices jumped an average 5.3 cents per gallon in February, with both gasoline and crude oil prices reaching nine-year highs.

According to AAA's February Fuel Gauge Report, regional regular unleaded gasoline averages $1.32 per gallon. Gas prices are up an average of 40 cents per gallon since last February, when the average fuel price was 92 cents per gallon.

The current price per gallon in Pennsylvania and Delaware is $1.34 and in New Jersey is $1.29, up 6 cents from a month ago in Pennsylvania and Delaware and up 4 cents in New Jersey.

Change since February 1999 was up 41 cents in Pennsylvania and Delaware and up 38 cents in New Jersey. (New Jersey prices are based on full-service gasoline distribution.)

Meanwhile, truckers nationwide are protesting the steeper rise in diesel fuel which is approaching $2 a gallon in some areas. A convoy of truckdrivers drove through Delaware to Washington, D.C., this week to complain to Congress about the situation.

Gasoline prices have risen to this high level in response to low inventories of crude oil and a per-barrel price of more than $30. The artificially induced shortage exists because nations aligned with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) have deliberately cut back oil production in a successful effort to raise global energy prices.

To help lessen the impact of higher prices, AAA suggests: keep tires properly inflated to reduce the resistance your vehicle must overcome to start moving and to keep going; accelerate gently, brake gradually and avoid hard stops which waste fuel; don't let the vehicle idle which consumes half-a-gallon to one gallon of gas per hour and wastes more gas than restarting the engine; keep the engine lubricated properly; and combine errands into one trip.

Historic RR slowly rebuilding

Wilmington & Western still needs $250,000 to restore line

By MARY E. PETZAK

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

The Wilmington and Western Railroad is slowly making its way back from almost total destruction of its scenic line.

"We're not there, but we're on the way," said Philip Toman, president of Red Clay Valley Inc. "(With the help of many people and contributors), it's doable."

Toman said following the flooding caused by Hurricane Floyd in September 1999, members of the all-volunteer group were devastated by what was left of their historic railroad. "We walked the line and there was just nothing there," said Toman. "Entire bridges were ripped out and sections of the rails — ties and all — were moved a hundred yards away."

Toman said the group based in Greenbank off the Kirkwood Highway had calls from people as far away as Stanton to tell them their bridges were in the stream near their homes.

The volunteers and friends have been doing much of the repairs up to this point themselves. "We replaced 700 tons of stone along the railbed by hand," said Toman. "Now we need engineers for the bridgework — our goal is to let out the bids for that by the end of February."

According to Toman, he and other Red Clay members were horrified to learn they needed roughly $3.2 million to restore the line. "FEMA initially told us we were not eligible for federal disaster assistance," he said. "Our budget is only $300,000 a year so we could never have paid for the repairs."

The group finally convinced the federal agency of their non-profit status which means they only have to come up with 25 percent, or about $760,000, of the damage costs. "We've raised over $500,000 so far," Toman said. "We found out we had friends we didn't even know we had."

People and organizations as diverse as the Mothers of Multiples, residents living along the line in the Red Clay Valley who had a fundraising party, and members of an area card club have sent in donations. "The most touching thing is the letters we get with them," said Toman. "We've been overwhelmed by the amount of caring out there."

Toman said the railroad is struggling to maintain some events and activities. "We'll have Easter trains and the Bunny, but they will go the other way to the yards," he said. "On Father's Day, we plan to take fathers down to the yards and let them get out and tour the equipment."

But the beautiful view from the antique train windows will be missing for some time to come. "The scenery is all in the other direction on the line that is gone," said Toman, "and the real loss is in the charters and trips that depended on that — some of those were booked a year in advance and we had to cancel them all."

Persons interested in helping can purchase railroad ties for $100 each. "They will get their names on a permanent plaque listing the persons who contributed to the reconstruction effort," said Toman. "So far, we've sold almost 500 of them."

Tie purchasers also get a framed certificate, four passes to the railroad and a subscription to the group's newsletter.

Second candidate files in 6th District

A second candidate has joined the city council race in Newark from District 6. Christine Rewa, currently a member of the city's Board of Elections, announced this week she is running for a seat on council.

Rewa said her district has a lot of issues, including the new reservoir, an arts center and ever-expanding residential development.

"We're growing and adding significant population to the city," she said. "But many of our streets have been grandfathered and exempted from city laws for the benefit of non-resident property owners."

Rewa said as a resident landlord and manager of rental properties, she has experience with student tenants and neighborhood problems. "Why shouldn't everyone be aware of the responsibilities of living on a (property in the city)?" she stated. "It's not the students who make things bad — it's absentee landlords who have not informed their tenants of basic guidelines for living in a neighborhood community."

She has worked as a disc jockey with the University of Delaware's radio station WVUD for 16 years. In addition, Rewa said she has been a folk-singer in Newark, and a stockbroker and an investment fund administrator in Washington, D.C.

"I view myself as a diplomat and catalyst to events, rather than a lobbyist or political professional," she stated. "(City government) requires, above everything, direct experience of the city and a sense of where it should be going for the benefit of everyone who lives there."

A graduate of the University of Delaware with a degree in English, she and her husband live on Prospect Street where she has been a tenant and a property owner for the past 16 years.

First time candidate Garrett L. Wilson also filed last week to run in the 6th District. Incumbent Gerald Grant has announced he will not seek a fourth term on city council from that district.

BETTER NEWARK AWARD WINNER

The property located at 340 Delaware Circle, George Read Village, owned by Janet R. Yoder, has been chosen to receive the "A Better Newark Award" by the City of Newark's Conservation Advisory Commission because of improving the outside appearance of the property.

The Commission established this award about 15 years ago to recognize property owners of houses and businesses who attempt to improve the appearance of their property through structural renovations and/or landscaping, thereby enhancing the image of the entire community.

The CAC has expanded the award to include properties that have made improvements resulting in energy, soil, or water conservation gains or overall environmental enhancement. The CAC awards a property owner by giving them a photograph of their property and a proclamation signed by the Mayor declaring them as the recipient of the "A Better Newark Award." A photograph of the property is also displayed in the lobby of City Hall.

If anyone is interested in nominating a property within the city limits of Newark for the award, please contact Patricia Bodley, City Secretary's Office, at 366-7070. Nomination forms are also available in City Hall, 220 Elton Road.

Christina District one of first with newest Microsoft program

Special to the Newark Post

Christina School District has become one of the first school systems in the country to fully adopt and put on line Microsoft's newest operating system, Windows 2000®.

According to state officials, putting Windows 2000® in the Christina District comes on the heels of Delaware being the first state to fully connect all of its schools to the Internet.

"We are enthusiastic about this partnership between Microsoft and Christina, an example of technology improving the learning experience of our children," said Governor Thomas Carper.

Microsoft's youth and learning director, John Litten, said not only was the district providing students with some of the best possible tools for learning, but it was also allowing parental participation in their child's education.

According to Litten, the state has gained notice nationally for advancing technological capabilities for students statewide.

"This means

the children benefit from very powerful tools for learning and the district has the infrastructure

it needs to function

more efficiently and effectively,"

said Christina

school superintendent, Nicholas

Fischer. "This

A recent story in Education

Week reported Delaware leads

the nation in providing the most access to computers, high technology and the Internet to its students.

"What the state is doing with technology is cutting edge," said Microsoft's local general manager, Brian Boruff.

According to Boruff, the district will be able to create and expand a "Connected Learning Community," within the district to communicate more effectively, share resources and create a very cost-effective foundation for teaching, learning, and managing knowledge now and in the future.

The new package also provides a comprehensive set of web and Internet services that allow teachers to connect with colleagues across the nation. And parents will have a link to participating in the daily activities of their child and the school.

Newark Diner and old drugstore site could get new developments worked out in (lots on that side of Main Street) similar to what the city is working out in Municipal Lot 3 behind Wilmington Trust," said Charma.

Schwab agreed. "We're willing to put up $10,000 toward the engineering for lot integration there," said Schwab. "We've talked to the majority of property owners in the area and gotten a positive response."

During the presentation, Schwab said keeping the diner in its present form was cost ineffective. "The former diner went bankrupt and left bills for the building owner to pay," he said. "The most recent operator couldn't make it."

Gunter Shaeffer, a member of the Design Committee for the Downtown Newark Partnership, said he asked an expert from Massachusetts about costs to refurbish the diner. "It would cost $300,000 to $500,000 - maybe more - to fix it up," Shaeffer said. "When we referred interested people to the expert for details, we never heard from them again."

The commission recommended the plan and parking waiver as submitted with the added stipulation of $10,000 for the parking lot engineering. The developers also agreed to rework the design for the apartment addition to make it more "streamlined" and appropriate to the existing diner.

Only minutes later, Jeffrey Lang of the Commonwealth Group, had an uphill battle to overcome a negative recommendation from the planning department for a parking waiver and subdivision at the old Happy Harry's site across from Klondike Kate's.

Despite Lang's assertion that the vacant retail site to be called Abby Court would be more marketable after renovation and expansion, Lopata noted it was not in the same category as the diner when it came to a parking waiver. "The issue is, what is it about the project that benefits the community and makes a parking waiver worth it?" said Lopata. "I think we need to relook at some of the things we have been doing (when there are over 500 units in the pipeline)."

Lang stated the plan would produce a cleaned up, completed commercial/residential site with more trees by the summer. "We're presently talking to retailers and could have up to three tenants for the first floor," Lang said. "We hope to get some new retail types for Main Street."

Lang also offered to reduce the number of apartments from eight to six in the new complex. "It would be a shame to see a small project like this disapproved because of parking," Lang said. "We have leased every apartment unit at (two other locations on Main Street) without parking for any of the units."

Lang also stated the site was more economically feasible with apartments because the square footage cost to preferred retailers would be lowered.

In response to questions from the commissioners, Lopata said he was concerned about the increased pressure of new apartments on downtown but "would love" to see this site renovated for retail use. "This is a close call," he said.

Ultimately the commissioners unanimously agreed to recommend the plan and waiver with a maximum of six apartments in a two or two-and-a-half story building.

Apartment tenants at both sites will be advised there is no on-site parking for their use. Both plans now go to city council for consideration.

"He was working on the furnace when it backfired, causing a small explosion and fire."

The explosion also caused plaster to crack on the chimney wall on the second floor of the house. "The owner was ordered to have the chimney inspected and make repairs and replace the oil burner," Farrall said.

In the meantime, there was no heat in the home plus an "oily, smoky, fuel smell on everything" which Farrall said made the building uninhabitable.

"The heating guy did an excellent job on the furnace," said Sylvester, "but there's no chimney liner at all and that's not his responsibility."

On top of all that, Sylvester said he advised the owner to seal the middle bedroom presently used by tenants. "It is only accessible thorough a bathroom and that's not within code," Sylvester said. "The only way to make it acceptable is to remove the doors and the tenants would probably not like to lose their privacy."

The property owner, Robert Rodriguez, was not available for comment.

Education accountability bill has plenty of input receiving it in January. Instead, they have written 10 amendments — which they say make the bill better, and won't kill it.

"There are times we all wish we could put this in a shredder and start again," said House Speaker Terry Spence (R-Stratford). "But, we've got a bill in front of us and it's our job to use it and craft the best legislation we can."

Despite his role in last fall's compromise, Spence, who is seeking the Republican nomination for the governor's race, has written one of the amendments. It would strip the bill of statewide student testing, replacing it with a tracking system that would test students before and after a school year.

Critics of the host of amendments say the changes could unravel the compromise upon which the bill was forged, and could delay student accountability measures now set to begin with testing in spring of 2002.

"They're nitpicking things within the bill and trying to put together something that's not going to work," said Paul Carlson, executive director of the Delaware Association of School Administrators.

If the House adopts the bill, it goes back to the Senate for a new vote on the amended version.

State senator Anthony DeLuca (D-Newark East) said it is anybody's guess what the Senate will do with the bill if it comes back from the House with substantial changes.

"If they pass one or two amendments that are substantive, we'd probably take a look at them," he said. "If they pass eight or 10 amendments that really change the substance of the bill, it's hard to say."

The House held its last public hearing on the bill this week at William Penn High School.

State lawmakers rejected the teacher accountability legislation that initially was proposed by Carper during a special session of the General Assembly last fall. That led to the compromise between the governor and legislative leaders.

The teacher accountability bill was meant to cap a 10-year school reform effort.

Computer program not the same as education

An announcement by Christina School District this week that it has become one of the first districts in the nation to install Windows 2000 made a splashy headline for the governor's Congressional campaign and free advertising for Microsoft. What it will immediately do for the students in the district schools is less clear.

The district and Delaware have been industriously working on installing computer technology and upgrades in area schools for almost five years. There is no doubt they are ahead of the curve as far as the rest of the nation is concerned.

But only a small percentage of district students have one-on-one access to a computer for any period of the school day. And, teachers complain of not enough training or time to learn how to use this "cutting edge" technology to its best advantage.

Worst of all, even as the new programs are being downloaded in the school buildings, legislators continue to tinker with the nuts and bolts of the whole educational structure.

A decade after Delaware faced up to critics of its education product, we still do not have accountability for all participants. Basic personal accountability in reading, writing, spelling and math are still lacking.

At the moment, if the current bill before the House of Representatives is passed, with numerous amendments to the one sent to them from the State Senate, and the Senate does not make anymore changes to those changes, Delaware may have this accountability legislation in effect by the year 2002.

That is not the same as accountability. That's just when the tests will start "counting" and students and parents will get benchmarks to chart progress — at least a few times in the students' school years.

It won't do any good to be able to look it up in a million different websites if you can't spell it in the first place. Or if you can't understand what it means when you find it. Or if you don't know how to evaluate it in a sea of information. Or if you can't calculate the effect of the numbers you are given on your personal situation.

And parents will still be waiting for an exact accounting in any given year of how and how much their children are learning in preparation for future careers.

Glowing endorsements of what will someday be possible, or probable, are here today. Actual evidence of true success or lack thereof is, unfortunately, still in the future. There will be an accounting then, but will the current students with Windows 2000 be able to benefit from it?

Don't mess with Mother Nature

By ELBERT CHANCE

NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

Several years ago, an amusing television commercial for a butter substitute ended with a clap of thunder and the warning, "It's not nice to fool Mother Nature."

During the last two weeks of January, my wife and I and a group of friends learned from first-hand experience that an aroused Mother Nature can, indeed, be rather inhospitable.

For more than a decade, our little six-couple band has sought a post-Christmas break by traveling to Myrtle Beach, S.C., to take advantage of warmer temperatures and the attractive, off-season golf packages offered by most of the Grand Strand resorts. This year we decided to splurge a bit and booked starting times at several of the area's finest courses for which additional fees were required, but we justified this extravagance by asserting that the year 2000 demanded something special.

Any experienced golfer knows that properly attired players can handle temperatures in the 40s, so long as there is little wind, but our first two rounds did not meet even minimal standards, and our third round was canceled by torrential rains. We salvaged what we could by going to the movies, shopping and watching the NFL football playoffs.

The following day, we were convinced, would be better, if only because we were to play Tidewater, the crown jewel of our package, a course deservedly ranked among the best public golf courses in America. Scenically stunning, with a gorgeous clubhouse and the most courteous and helpful staff we have ever encountered, it surpassed what we had expected to find. But three holes after a chilly tee-off, rain began to fall and after just five holes we reluctantly put our slippery clubs in our bags and headed for the warmth of the clubhouse.

The following day was our final shot, but when we awakened shortly after 6 a.m., the snowfall was so thick that we could barely see the breakers on the shore a hundred yards from our hotel window. After a brief conference with our friends, we concluded that our vacation had come to a premature end and, upon urging all to drive safely, we took to the highway for a trip that normally requires nine-and-a-half hours.

My wife and I agreed that it probably would take longer this time, but it wasn't until two-hours-and-forty-five minutes had been consumed in traveling slightly more than 60 miles to Wilmington, N.C., that we began to understand how long the trip might be.

North Carolinians, we have discovered, are charming hosts and splendid cooks, but they appear to have limited understanding of snow and even less of snow-removal equipment. By the time we reached I-95, the highway resembled the UD ice arena after a careful treatment by the Zamboni and those sections that were not smoothly polished had become frozen ridges that shook and rattled the car as if it were on railroad ties. A reasonable speed was 20

According to the story published with this photo in the Weekly Post in July 1980, "most of Newark and half of Wilmington" attended the fourth anniversary celebration given by Klondike Kate owners Gail and Davis Sezna. The historic building, a jailhouse, poolroom and grange hall among other things in its 100 years, housed Brown's Auto Parts for 49 years before becoming a restaurant. P. O. situation here again troublesome

The Government bought the corner lot at Delaware Avenue and Depot Road, several years before the College Development Plan called for the purchase of all adjoining land.

From a college viewpoint, the lot is unsatisfactory, as it becomes the site of the only un-college building on that side of Depot Road for a stretch of half a mile.

From the town viewpoint, the lot is unsatisfactory due to its distance from the business section.

From the Post Office Department, the present site is highly satisfactory. It affords convenient routes to both railroad stations.

The Department is said to have gone on record as disapproving any more outlay of money for a site in Newark.

Silent eyes watch thieves

For a mere $4,000 investment in 1976, the Newark Police Department hired ten stake-out officers. And they've been on the job ever since, 24 hours a day, seven days a week, 52 weeks a year. They've never been paid. They've never been sick. And not one of them has even taken a vacation.

They're electronic gadgets called TAC II alarms. Silent and patient, they stand watch over Newark businesses which police crime statisticians think are likely to be robbed or burglarized.

Will schools skirt deseg in class?

Several Newark school district teachers have voiced apprehension about the orientation program to prepare students for September's court-ordered desegregation.

Education materials for students in kindergarten through grade four skirt the issue of desegregation, some McVey Elementary School teachers say.

At the high school level, teachers are concerned that students will not receive enough factual information about the issue, said Christiana Associate Principal LaVerne Wolf.

The Parking Myth-A Special Report

When looking for a parking spot in downtown Newark, relief is a mere left or right hand turn away, yet merchants believe potential customers pass by without seeing any of the four public parking lots along Main Street. The problem, according to a number of critics, centers on inconspicuous signs and a Newark Parking Authority out of step with a changing community.

New building needed

Most elementary schools are nestled in residential neighborhoods, away from quick-moving traffic. Leasure Elementary School is a notable exception.

Although built in 1935 Leasure is now near one of the state's most congested intersections. Farmland has been replaced by shopping centers.

Christina School District administrators cite traffic concerns in proposing to construct a school to replace the current building.

All-State Orchestra in concert tomorrow

The Delaware All-State Orchestra for 2000 will present a concert at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at St. Mark's High School.

The program opens with Overture to Iphigenia in Aulis by Gluck/Wagner, The Unanswered Question by Charles Ives, and Excerpts from the Romeo & Juliet Second Suite by Prokofiev. Dance of the Comedians from Smetana's "Bartered Bride" opens the second half, followed by Sarasate's Zigeunerweisen, (Gypsy Airs), featuring senior violin soloist David Kim of A.I. duPont High School. The beautiful Nimrod from Elgar's Enigma variations leads into Excerpts from Carmen Suite No. One by Bizet which closes the program.

Students from schools in the greater Newark area are Weifang Sun, Weiyang Sun, Barbara Nenno, and Christen Orley, all of Archmere Academy; Morrigan Kownacki, Cab Calloway High School; Agnieszka Szalewicz, Jilla Azarbal, and Jonathan Hoffman, all of Charter School of Wilmington; Janet Lee and Sarah Kong, both of H. The following day, we were convinced, would be better, if only because we were to play Tidewater, the crown jewel of our package, a course deservedly ranked among the best public golf courses in America. Scenically stunning, with a gorgeous clubhouse and the most courteous and helpful staff we have ever encountered, it surpassed what we had expected to find. But three holes after a chilly tee-off, rain began to fall and after just five holes we reluctantly put our slippery clubs in our bags and headed for the warmth of the clubhouse.

The following day was our final shot, but when we awakened shortly after 6 a.m., the snowfall was so thick that we could barely see the breakers on the shore a hundred yards from our hotel window. After a brief conference with our friends, we concluded that our vacation had come to a premature end and, upon urging all to drive safely, we took to the highway for a trip that normally requires nine-and-a-half hours.

My wife and I agreed that it probably would take longer this time, but it wasn't until two-hours-and-forty-five minutes had been consumed in traveling slightly more than 60 miles to Wilmington, N.C., that we began to understand how long the trip might be.

OUT OF THE ATTIC

NEWARK POST ARCHIVES

According to the story published with this photo in the Weekly Post in July 1980, "most of Newark and half of Wilmington" attended the fourth anniversary celebration given by Klondike Kate owners Gail and Davis Sezna. The historic building, a jailhouse, poolroom and grange hall among other things in its 100 years, housed Brown's Auto Parts for 49 years before becoming a restaurant. Mr. Brown, who recalled the poolroom there when he was a child, was retired and living on West Main Street in 1980.

Readers are encouraged to send old photos to the Newark Post, "Out of the Attic," 153 E. Chestnut Hill Rd., Newark 19713. Special care will be taken and photos can be returned. For information, call 737-0724.

P. O. situation here again troublesome

The Government bought the corner lot at Delaware Avenue and Depot Road, several years before the College Development Plan called for the purchase of all adjoining land.

From a college viewpoint, the lot is unsatisfactory, as it becomes the site of the only un-college building on that side of Depot Road for a stretch of half a mile.

From the town viewpoint, the lot is unsatisfactory due to its distance from the business section.

From the Post Office Department, the present site is highly satisfactory. It affords convenient routes to both railroad stations.

The Department is said to have gone on record as disapproving any more outlay of money for a site in Newark.

Silent eyes watch thieves

For a mere $4,000 investment in 1976, the Newark Police Department hired ten stake-out officers. And they've been on the job ever since, 24 hours a day, seven days a week, 52 weeks a year. They've never been paid. They've never been sick. And not one of them has even taken a vacation.

They're electronic gadgets called TAC II alarms. Silent and patient, they stand watch over Newark businesses which police crime statisticians think are likely to be robbed or burglarized.

Will schools skirt deseg in class?

Several Newark school district teachers have voiced apprehension about the orientation program to prepare students for September's court-ordered desegregation.

Education materials for students in kindergarten through grade four skirt the issue of desegregation, some McVey Elementary School teachers say.

At the high school level, teachers are concerned that students will not receive enough factual information about the issue, said Christiana Associate Principal LaVerne Wolf.

The Parking Myth-A Special Report

When looking for a parking spot in downtown Newark, relief is a mere left or right hand turn away, yet merchants believe potential customers pass by without seeing any of the four public parking lots along Main Street. The problem, according to a number of critics, centers on inconspicuous signs and a Newark Parking Authority out of step with a changing community.

New building needed

Most elementary schools are nestled in residential neighborhoods, away from quick-moving traffic. Leasure Elementary School is a notable exception.

Although built in 1935 Leasure is now near one of the state's most congested intersections. Farmland has been replaced by shopping centers.

Christina School District administrators cite traffic concerns in proposing to construct a school to replace the current building.

Kindergarten provides the best educational foundation

By ANNA MACDONALD

NEWARK POST GUEST COLUMNIST

I moved to Delaware nine years ago, and when I first came to the state, I was not impressed. And, if you think that I am now, you are sadly mistaken.

To begin, as a native of Maryland where my oldest child started her schooling, I think I have witnessed the benefits of a superior school system. My daughter now attends Boston University and I go along with the writer of the book "I Learned All I Need to Know in Kindergarten." My daughter went to kindergarten in Maryland.

We moved here at the beginning of her fourth grade when my two boys were 5 and 7.

My husband and I went to register our children for school and this is when I found that my 9-year-old fourth grade daughter had to go to a school in the city of Wilmington. This is not a letter condemning busing. I grew up outside of Washington D.C. There was busing there and I had no problem with that.

But, we had to register our children at the elementary school near our house and the principal at the time could not even tell us how to get to the school where my daughter would be going. Funny, huh? No.

This is where the school district started out for us as not a working partnership or with any understanding of each other.

At the same time, when placing my son in second grade, the placement was by how many students and some code (not any tests or using any transcripts from his school in Maryland). This bothered me at the time, but I was a young parent and still believed that school officials knew best.

As a result, my son, an honor roll student, was placed in a class with, to say the least, very challenging students.

Back in those days of 1990, they had what was called open house and you could go in and observe your child and teacher. I learned a lot from that experience. The only other parent there was another concerned mother and there was not much we missed.

A few years later I met this mother again and found that we were both the only ones there for an open in house in one of the schools in Wilmington. There the teacher explained to us that our children were placed in this class because they expected our children to teach the rest of the class to behave. They were especially selected to help other children learn from their attitudes to be better students.

Huh? Would our children learn anything? Or would they get discouraged because they were just waiting for other children to settle down?

In the meantime, my daughter who had been a straight-A student, found out they redistricted and now she had to attend a middle school where no one from her school in the city would be going.

Well, OK, she could make new friends. But, as I said, there is no uniformity to this district and the kids that go to one school of the same grades do not learn the same as from another. This is in the same district. That's in the same community as your neighbor or your friend.

Needless to say, her transition was extremely hard. But, she persevered — she learned all she needs to know in kindergarten (in Maryland).

Now to my youngest son. He went to kindergarten in Delaware.

Let me first say that he has been a President's Scholar, on the math league, and has passed the assessment tests with exemplary scores. Why? Because he is very intelligent.

The reason I am telling you this is because he has no clue on why he should go to school, now.

It's not because he is struggling. He is bored and he is tired of the messed up way they have taught him. He sees the miscommunications and the struggles of teachers trying to teach classes where they can't. He has lived it all his school life.

There's no reaching for the stars in Delaware education — just reaching for something to hold on to. There is no commitment to anything. No goals to reach, no set standard that everyone, at least in the district, should meet.

I know this because I have been on PTAs and I have gone to conventions. I work in the cafeteria for one of the schools. You think we don't know what's going on with the students? We see them everyday.

In Maryland, way-back-when in 1986, when my daughter started kindergarten, she had to take simple tests of motor skills and just was asked simple questions. But it was the beginning of a standard. And she had to perform or reach certain goals to reach the next level in first grade. This is missing in Christina School District.

At my son's high school, they have let telemarketers set up tables to tell 16-year-olds, "come work with us and you'll make lots of money." Are there tables set up for colleges? Once a year.

But these get quick rich jobs are there all the time. They have already decided that since only 63 percent of the 9th grade will graduate, that only a small percentage need to even consider going on to college. It is the year 2000, and all you ever hear is you have to have a college diploma these days. Maybe Christina School District missed that, too.

In closing, I have written this because it does start when you're little. And a little goes a long way: You learn things when you are young that will stick with you your whole life through, including trying to finish high school with teachers and students like zombies going through the halls.

Thank you for reading this.

to 25 miles per hour, and countless abandoned cars, ditched SUVs, and overturned 18-wheelers testified to the foolishness of those who had exceeded those limits.

By mid-afternoon, feeling the stress of these difficult conditions, we decided to seek fuel for both the car and ourselves, but neither Roanoke Rapids, N.C., nor Emporia, Va., could meet our needs.

Not a McDonald's, a Burger King, a Denny's, a Hardee's nor any other eating place was open, and when we did make the mistake of trying to park in a combination gas station-convenience store, we got stuck.

We might still be there if three kind-hearted young men hadn't noticed that we weren't having much luck digging with a sand wedge and a nine iron and come to our rescue.

With dusk beginning to fall, we decided to seek refuge in Petersburg after 12 hours on the road. We later learned that two other couples in our group had made similar decisions.

As we rolled down the exit road, my wife exclaimed, "I don't recognize the name of that motel."

Thoroughly beat and uncharacteristically (I hope!) short tempered, I barked, "I don't care what it is. If it has a bed, we're taking it!"

It did, and though we later discovered that the Kleenex box in the bathroom was empty, the bar soap didn't lather and the bulb in the reading lamp over the bed was burned out, it seemed like the Hotel DuPont to me.

The remaining miles to home passed much more quickly the following day. Road conditions improved and there were no further newsworthy incidents. But we surely learned one important lesson: It isn't nice to mess with Mother Nature.

PSC files complaint against Conectiv

Special to the Newark Post

A complaint was filed Feb. 18 requesting the Public Service Commission to implement emergency relief measures for Conectiv customers.

Staff executive director Bruce Burcat said the complaint will probably be heard at the next regular Public Service Commission meeting on Monday, Feb. 28.

The motion asks the commission to order Conectiv to open walk-in offices in each county so customers can discuss problems with representatives in person, conduct a public meeting in each county and suspend direct debit billing.

According to the complaint, billing problems began when Conectiv installed a new billing system in December, replacing a 25-year-old system.

Since then, commission staff received more than 650 complaints, ranging from customers receiving no bill to incorrect funds being removed from customer bank accounts through automatic debit payments. In addition, customers have been unable to reach customer service representatives to correct the problems.

Conectiv said it has added about 130 more customer care representatives to handle calls. It hired additional meter readers, is waiving all late payment charges and will not disconnect the service of customers who have fallen behind in making payments.

Salad days are near

I don't know about you, but I'm ready for spring. It's too cold to do any outdoor gardening, but here's a way to get an early start.

Lettuces, a cool-season crop, are ideal for spring vegetable gardening because they grow to edible size quickly.

The true lettuces, endive (escarole), and chicory (radicchio) are members of the aster family. The lettuce cultivar 'Iceberg' is over 100 years old, though the insipid heads we are accustomed to are supposed to be nothing in flavor or texture like the original. Lettuce is probably descended from a wild Mediterranean lettuce that ancient people started selecting for superior eating qualities over 2,500 years ago.

There are dozens of salad mixes to buy prepackaged at the produce counter.

One that seems to command a premium price is mesclun. Mesclun, from a French dialect, means "mixture." The classic mesclun originated in the Provencal region of France. It is composed of chervil, arugula, lettuce and endive in proportions to balance out the color, flavor, and textures.

It is said that each town in France has its own version of mesclun.

Mesclun American-style is made of most anything that produces edible leaves. Mesclun here usually starts with a base of mild-flavored head lettuce to give it bulk and crispness. The flavor and textural accents come from any combination of mustards, spinach, chicory, parsley, fennel, escarole, and cress. Asian culture can also influence American-style mesclun; tat-soi, mizuna, and bok choy are examples of alternative ingredients. The confines of the garden or the supermarket produce display are not the only place to find makings for mesclun. Wild greens and herbs such as purslane, sorrel, and dandelion are only two of the possibilities.

Just make sure you harvest from pesticide-free areas.

A successful mesclun is a treat for the eye and the palate. The various leaf shapes and textures please the eye and tease the mouth. The rainbow of colors can range from palest greens into deep emerald, and bronzy reds through purple. Even edible flowers are candidates for mesclun. Heighten the visual appeal of your mesclun with

WHAT IS THE OCEAN'S FUTURE?

Special to the Newark Post

Biliana Cicin-Sain and Robert Knecht, co-directors of the University of Delaware's Center for the Study of Marine Policy, have published a landmark book on how the United States governs the ocean around it.

"The Future of U.S. Ocean Policy: Choices for the New Century," published by Island Press, provides an in-depth analysis of American ocean policy and a call for action on the most critical marine issues facing the nation.

"Many programs for ocean protection and development were enacted in the 70's, making the United States, at that time, a world leader in ocean management," said Cicin-Sain. "However, these programs were flawed in the sense that they were based on single-sector approaches — one set of regulations was created to manage offshore oil development, a different set of laws was made to manage fisheries, and so on."

In their book, Cicin-Sain and Knecht pinpoint nine ocean issues that will demand policy attention in the next decade.

At the top of the list is implementing a workable plan for restoring America's most depleted fisheries.

Other key issues range from returning coastal waters to a "swimmable and fishable" condition, to promoting new ocean-related technologies such as marine biotechnology.

To address these issues, the marine policy experts call for a national plan for developing the 200-mile Exclusive Economic Zone, which constitutes the "U.S. ocean;" a national ocean council to guide U.S. ocean policy, with representation by federal and state agencies, industries, scientists, and environmental groups; a stronger ocean partnerships between the federal government and the 35 coastal states and territories; and U.S. ratification of the Law of the Sea Convention and the Convention on Biological Diversity to help the nation regain its position of influence in international marine affairs.

"The ocean provides us with some of our most desirable food, least expensive transportation, and along its shore, wonderful places to restore the soul," said Knecht. "The ocean also is one of the most vital links in the intricate system that sustains all life on our planet. It is a complex set of interconnected parts, physical and biological, that operate as a whole producing the goods and services that we have come to take for granted."

The book has received glowing reviews. "Everyone interested in America's stewardship of its coastal and ocean resources should read this well-balanced and well-researched book," said Timothy E. Wirth, president of the United Nations Foundation. "It offers a compelling blueprint for ocean policy reform and for renewed leadership on ocean issues at the global level."

Roger McManus, president of the Center for Marine Conservation, said, "Biliana Cicin-Sain and Robert Knecht have provided us with the ultimate guide to the emerging debate on U.S. ocean governance. This work is our handbook to change our future for the ocean."

Local columnist publishes novel

The world has long been fascinated with the compelling characters and cataclysmic events surrounding the end of the 300-year Romanov dynasty of Russia:

The mystical (some would say mythical) Rasputin and his influence on the heir to the throne, Tsarevich Alexei; four lovely Romanov daughters, the Grand Duchesses Olga, Tatiana, Marie and Anastasia, the passionate love affair between Tsar Nicholas and Tsarina Alexandra, the brutal assassination of the royal family by Lenin's Bolsheviks and WWI and the Communist Revolution of 1917.

However, few books have touched on what was the greatest secret of the age: the Tsarevich Alexei's curse of hemophilia.

"Alexei & Me," written for Young Adults, grew out of the extensive research done by author Greer Firestone for a musical theatre presentation of Nicholas and Alexandra. He discovered that first person books and related resource material of the era touched little on the heir to the 300-year dynasty and his hemophilia.

According to Firestone, all the history in the 60,000 word novel with accompanying pictures is exact. The only fictional contrivance is the addition of a Siberian peasant boy, Sergei Protopopov, brought to the palace by Nicholas and Alexandra to be friend, bodyguard and "everyman" to the teenaged heir. Taken from first person historical accounts, the novel might be considered memoirs written by Protopopov.

Firestone has been a newspaper columnist for eight years and a freelance feature writer for 25 years. This is his first novel. He has produced, directed and performed in regional musical theatre productions over four decades.

chive blossoms, violets, nasturtiums and others. Their flavors include lemony tartness, peppery notes, refreshing minty sensations, and bitter bites.

Mesclun is easy to grow indoors and out. Many seed companies provide a mesclun-mix of seeds. This can be a good way to explore the ranges of flavors put together for you by the experts. Then once you learn your likes and dislikes, you can start buying individual packets of seeds to create your own blend of mesclun greens.

Try growing some mesclun now under fluorescent lights. Use fresh potting mix in trays, and keep the soil evenly moist. Avoid air temperatures above 70 degrees. Start harvesting the greens when they are a few inches tall.

This may be as soon as one to five weeks after planting. Use scissors to snip off all the leaves from a particular plant just above the crown. With sufficient light and water, the plant will regrow after its crewcut.

Once the weather settles in March or April, you can start sowing your mesclun out in the garden. Start the seeds indoors 3 to 4 weeks before transplanting outside. Small seed plug trays are a good way to grow mesclun. Just make sure the seedlings don't become root-bound before transplanting. This will cause the plants to bolt, or go to seed, and become inedible too soon.

To grow mesclun in the heat of the summer, sow seeds in a spot that has rich, moist loamy soil and afternoon shade. Look also for a mesclun seed mix developed for hot weather. Some mesclun aficionados sow new seed every two weeks throughout the season to ensure a steady supply of tender young leaves.

Newark art show seeks emerging artists

The Newark Arts Alliance is seeking artists, aged 14 to 22, to submit work for their upcoming show entitled "Threshold" running from March 3 to April 8.

Up to three works in any medium including original crafts, may be dropped off at the Art House, 132 E. Delaware Ave., Newark, on Sunday, Feb. 27, from 1-4 p.m. Artwork need not be for sale. Artists will be notified whether work was selected for the show.

The Newark Arts Alliance is a non-profit arts organization that builds community through the arts. This program was made possible, in part, by grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, the Delaware Division of the Arts, a state agency committed to promoting and supporting the arts in Delaware and the city of Newark Revenue Sharing Grants. For more information, call 266-7266.

New digital organ dedicated

A state-of-the-art digital organ installed at Head of Christiana Presbyterian Church was dedicated on Sunday, Feb. 6.

The technology of the instrument made by the Allen Organ Company of Macungie, Pa., is based on digital sampling of sound produced by selected pipe organs around the world, permitting individual stops and notes to be voiced and regulated like a pipe organ. It is the first such instrument in the Newark area.

The public is welcome to hear the new organ at services in the church located off Nottingham Road at 1100 Church Road, Newark.

Phil Toman is taking a sabbatical from The Arts. The Newark Post's longtime arts editor will be returning at a future date with his columns on the art scene in the tri-state area.

Glasgow boys, girls run 1-2 at state track meet

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POSTSPORTS EDITOR

Glasgow's boys and girls teams flexed their leg muscles in style last Saturday in competition at the Indoor Track State Championships at the University of Delaware Field House.

The Dragons' boys team unseated defending champion Salesianum to win their first title since 1994 and second overall. Glasgow finished with 56 points, while Dover was second with 53 and Newark was third with 52.

Salesianum (48), Christiana (41), Smyrna (36.5), Brandywine (32), St. Mark's (30), Hodgson (26) and McKean (23) rounded out the top 10.

Glasgow's girls team, which won the title in 1994, '96 and '97, but had not finished in the top three the past two years, finished second with 48 points behind Dover (84 points).

Two-time defending champion William Penn was third with 42, while Christiana, which finished third last year, was eighth with 29.

"Some things didn't happen the way we planned, but that's what happens in a state meet," said Glasgow Coach Art Madric about his team's title. "I'm sure some of the things that Sallies had planned didn't work for them either."

"It's been a long season. A lot of kids are brand new and had never been involved in track or any sport for that matter. One of my concerns coming in (to the season) was knowing how to come to the state championship meet and perform and focus. Do the things you need to do to win the meet."

Ice hockey provides cool fun for kids

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POST SPORTS EDITOR

The sounds of pucks cracking off stick blades and skates slicing through ice can be heard year-round at almost any hour of the day or night at the University of Delaware and The Pond ice rinks as hundreds of players continue the growth of ice hockey in the area.

For some, they just can't get enough of the fast-paced sport that requires agility, toughness and intelligence to play even down to the teeny-tiny players in the Atoms and Mites divisions, where players are as young as six years old.

A few minutes after the relatively king-sized University of Delaware Ice Hockey Club finished practice last Thursday at the Gold Arena, the Pee Wee Gold team (11-12 years old) of the Delaware Junior Blue Hens Ice Hockey Club scattered onto the ice for an hour-long session.

The arena is one of two hock-

Hodgson took the sting out of a 41-24 defeat to William Penn during the regular season by winning the Blue Hen Conference wrestling title last weekend on the Colonials' home mats.

Hodgson, which won its fourth consecutive Division II dual meet title three days before, finished with 287 1/2 points. William Penn, which won the Division I title, was second with 281 points, while Newark (146) was third.

Hodgson's Jordan Sianni (112 pounds), Mike Welch (130), Ryan Smith (152), and Derrick Davis (171) all won titles. Five other Hodgson wrestlers finished second.

The rest of the Blue Hen Conference team standings were: Alexis I du Pont (136), Howard (132 1/2), Mount Pleasant (96 1/2), Middletown (96), Glasgow (90 1/2), Brandywine (81), Concord (77), Christiana (65), Delcastle (47), McKean (28), Dickinson (24), and Charter (14).

St. Mark's, meanwhile, dominated the 11-team Independent School Qualifying Tournament. The Spartans had nine champions and its four others starters also qualified for the state Individual Tournament, which will be held Friday and Saturday at Delaware State University.

Andrew Donofrio (140) of St. Mark's was named the tournament's outstanding wrestler.

Christiana boys top Glasgow

By JOE NYE

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Christiana finally played with the line-up its been looking for all year and it paid off big as the ninth-ranked Vikings upset No. 6 Glasgow 66-60 Friday night in a pivotal Flight A boys basketball game played on the Dragons' home court.

The Vikings (11-8, 5-6) were bolstered by the return of senior James Stewart, who had been ineligible for the first part of the season. But Stewart made his return count as he scored 12 points and played tough inside defense to pace the victory.

Christiana also got 16 points from Virgil Rush and 12 each from Byron Greene and six foot, five inch tall center Greg Brown to avenge an earlier loss to the Dragons.

Glasgow (11-8, 6-6) was paced by guard Shane Mundy, who led all scorers with 22 points. Twins Aaron and Alvin Walker chipped in with 11 points each.

"This was a really good game," said Brown. "We just got a couple of guys back, and it took a little time to get it together, but we should be strong from here on out."

Christiana broke out to a 9-2 lead, highlighted by a three pointer from Rush, but the Dragons clawed back right away to tie it at nine after a Mundy jumper, and when Aaron Walker knocked down a free throw, Glasgow had a 10-9 lead at the end of one period.

Though they would tie it up again a few times later, the lead would prove to be the last for the Dragons as Rush knocked down three more jumpers early in the second quarter. When Stewart hit for two inside at the end of the first half, the Vikings went into their locker room up 25-21.

"The team is playing hard and really coming together right before the tournament," said Viking head coach Ron Hollis. "You know it's funny, this is probably the nicest group of kids I've ever coached and sometimes I thought they were too nice. But they're not being pushed around anymore."

Rush, who'll be taking his football skills to Bucknell next year, hit another jumper to open the second half, but Mundy matched him stride for stride, hitting back-to-back treys from the corner to knot the score at 27-27.

The two teams continued to stay close to one another, but the Vikings finally got their biggest lead of the evening at the end of the quarter when Brown went up and under for two to give Christiana a 43-33 lead going into the fourth quarter.

"We missed too many opportunities in the first half," said Glasgow Coach Donald Haman. "We would catch up but could never get on top. Their foul shooting down the stretch hurt us as well."

Foul shooting was a big story on the night as the Vikings hit 16 of 21 from the charity stripe while the Dragons shot only 19 for 30, but still had their chances in the fourth quarter.

After Christiana opened up an 11 point lead at 49-38, the Dragons fought back behind a pair of put-backs by forward Matt Folke and guard Tyrelle Bennett and a three by Aaron Walker that cut the lead to six and led to a Vikings time out.

When Rush fouled out, for the first time in three years, the Dragons looked poised to take advantage of a leaderless team. But senior guard Maurice Rogers kept the team afloat even as Glasgow was clawing its way back to within four with 1:37 remaining.

Rogers then broke the Glasgow press and found Brown all alone under the basket for a key hoop. The teams traded free throws down the stretch before the final horn sounded a 66-60 Christiana victory.

Simpson, Hines lead Glasgow

By JOE NYE

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

A pre-planned special evening for LaShanda Simpson turned out to be even more so as the senior sensation led fifth-ranked Glasgow to a 78-63 win over visiting Christiana in a girls Flight A basketball game last Friday.

Freshman Kristin Hines led Glasgow with 28 points, but the night belonged to Simpson, who poured in 23 points and was honored at center court after the game for being selected as a Gatorade All-American in volleyball.

Only the fourth Glasgow athlete in history to be honored on a national level by Gatorade, coaches and loved ones had the chance to praise her volleyball achievement and overall contribution to the school, where she has been named All-State in basketball, volleyball and track.

"This was a very special evening for me," said Simpson. "As for this game, we came out very fired up and we're really picking up momentum with the tournament coming up."

The Dragons (16-5, 11-2) momentum literally started on the opening tip as Katie Stevenson hit a three pointer from the left side five seconds into the game and after a pair of baskets by Simpson and a pair of free throws from Hines and Jaleah Brown, Glasgow was up 11-2 before most fans had even settled into their seats.

When Hines hit another three five minutes into the game, the Dragons were already up 21-4 and cruising to a 26-7 first-quarter lead after the acrobatic Simpson cut through two defenders and scooped in a shot that brought the crowd to its feet.

The Dragons continued to stretch their lead and after Stevenson hit another three, they were up 37-16.

"That was a pretty good first half," said Walker. "We've got six seniors on this team who have showed lots of determination and we've really turned it up a notch the past two weeks."

"And you have to give the kids a lot of credit. Like (senior) Julius Milbourne. Unfortunately, he didn't win any events, but he banged all day long, every event and gave us 100 per cent."

Milbourne provided numerous points for the Dragons by finishing second in the 55 meters (6.62), 200 (22.8) and 400 (51.07). Milbourne also led off Glasgow's second-place 800 relay team (1:34.95) that included Abe Nimrooz, Jeremy Swift, and Kyle Heyward.

Newark's Jason Forbes won both the boys' triple jump with a distance of 48 feet, five and 3/4 inches, and long jump with a leap of 22-10 3/4.

"That was my personal best," Forbes said of his effort in the long jump. "In the past I've jumped about 21."

"It was good competition. When I saw (Christiana's Jon Watson) jump 22-3, I said, 'I've got to beat that.'"

William Penn's Jonathan Fletcher was second in the triple jump at 43-3 3/4, and Glasgow's Romeo Varfley was third at 42-3.

Watson (22-3) finished second in the long jump and Swift (21-2 3/4) was third.

Swift also won the 55-meter high hurdles with a time of 7.64. Forbes was second at 7.87, and Hodgson's Todd Manlove was third at 8.10.

Christiana's Danielle Bailey picked up wins in both the 55 meters and 200, the latter in a meet-record time (25.08).

"I knew (the 200) was going to be a real tight race between me, April (Brown of Howard) and Kamilah (Salaam of Glasgow, who finished third at 26.37)," Bailey said. "They stayed on me and really pushed me at the end and I think that's what got me the record."

William Penn's Stephanie Crawford won the girls' shot put with a toss of 37-4, while teammate Lateefah Vaughn was third at 34-9. Crawford won four of the five previous meets this winter, finishing second once, and that was to Vaughn.

"I tried to go for the height and have good technique. Just go for it," said Crawford, who added that one of her uncles and grandfathers also threw the shot.

Newark's Isaac Wolkowicz was second in the boys' shot put at 48-6.

In the girls long jump, Glasgow's Kim Chase (16-3 3/4) finished second.

In the boys' high jump, Hodgson's Mitch Ryan finished second and teammate Armond Williams was third. Both cleared six feet.

St. Mark's won the boys' 3,200 relay in only their second outing this year. Tim White, Josh MacPherson, Kyle Berseeth and Mike Lahm turned in a time of 8:29.31.

Newark's John DeFranco, Daniel Bowser, Patrick Wilcox and Bryant Perkins finished second in the 3,200 relay in 8:39.91.

In the final event of the meet, Christiana's boys' 1,600 relay team of Quinn Martin, Joe Dury, Jeff Tatnall and Andre McMillan finished second (3:33.06).

Christiana boys top Glasgow

By JOE NYE

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Christiana finally played with the line-up its been looking for all year and it paid off big as the ninth-ranked Vikings upset No. 6 Glasgow 66-60 Friday night in a pivotal Flight A boys basketball game played on the Dragons' home court.

The Vikings (11-8, 5-6) were bolstered by the return of senior James Stewart, who had been ineligible for the first part of the season. But Stewart made his return count as he scored 12 points and played tough inside defense to pace the victory.

Christiana also got 16 points from Virgil Rush and 12 each from Byron Greene and six foot, five inch tall center Greg Brown to avenge an earlier loss to the Dragons.

Glasgow (11-8, 6-6) was paced by guard Shane Mundy, who led all scorers with 22 points. Twins Aaron and Alvin Walker chipped in with 11 points each.

"This was a really good game," said Brown. "We just got a couple of guys back, and it took a little time to get it together, but we should be strong from here on out."

Christiana broke out to a 9-2 lead, highlighted by a three pointer from Rush, but the Dragons clawed back right away to tie it at nine after a Mundy jumper, and when Aaron Walker knocked down a free throw, Glasgow had a 10-9 lead at the end of one period.

Though they would tie it up again a few times later, the lead would prove to be the last for the Dragons as Rush knocked down three more jumpers early in the second quarter. When Stewart hit for two inside at the end of the first half, the Vikings went into their locker room up 25-21.

"The team is playing hard and really coming together right before the tournament," said Viking head coach Ron Hollis. "You know it's funny, this is probably the nicest group of kids I've ever coached and sometimes I thought they were too nice. But they're not being pushed around anymore."

Rush, who'll be taking his football skills to Bucknell next year, hit another jumper to open the second half, but Mundy matched him stride for stride, hitting back-to-back treys from the corner to knot the score at 27-27.

The two teams continued to stay close to one another, but the Vikings finally got their biggest lead of the evening at the end of the quarter when Brown went up and under for two to give Christiana a 43-33 lead going into the fourth quarter.

"We missed too many opportunities in the first half," said Glasgow Coach Donald Haman. "We would catch up but could never get on top. Their foul shooting down the stretch hurt us as well."

Bastianelli tradition continues

Freshman adds to list of family wrestlers

By CHRIS DONAHUE

NEWARK POST STAFF WRITER

It's not easy to be either a wrestling coach or a wrestler.

Now imagine that your son is one of those you have to coach - fairly - and your dad is the one who's the coach.

Things could understandably get a little strained at times in that situation.

But for St. Mark's Coach Steve Bastianelli and his son, Tyler, a freshman who wrestles for the Spartans at 145 pounds, their relationship seems to be all business when it comes to working on the mat.

That's impressive considering that Steve was a state champion at Sussex Central High. Occasional impatience toward his inexperienced son would also be understandable. But Steve's experience explains why that's not the case.

"It's challenging," said Steve, who is also an assistant soccer coach at the school.

"But it's not like it's the first time. I've coached him in soccer when he was younger. I'm coaching my daughter in soccer now, but there's a big difference between the two.

"Actually, we make out better when I don't coach him," he added. "It's hard to explain. I wrestled for my dad (Herman, at Sussex Central) and we had a real good relationship. But you don't know what he was going through until you go through it yourself.

"We've have struggled, but I feel like we've grown and I think I've gotten better and I think he's improved, too.

"The thing is, this is not like some kid who does a ton of wrestling. He's basically a three-month-a-year guy. Soccer is his love and he plays it all the time. It's not like we've worked out (wrestling) in the summers. We haven't. We play soccer all the time in the summer.

"In terms of me working with him individually, I've spent tons more hours with him playing soccer with him than I have wrestling. We've done a little bit, but not very much.

"For the longest time, he didn't have any interest (in wrestling) and all of a sudden he said he wanted to. And he's done pretty well (16-12 in his first 28 matches). For a 145 (pound) freshman with our schedule, it's very good."

Tyler said although it took him a while to get interested in wrestling, it seems to be in his blood. It was also a good way for him to keep in shape for soccer, which he began playing as an eight-year-old and is his favorite sport. Last fall, he helped the Spartans win the state soccer championship.

"I just thought (wrestling) would probably be a good sport for me since my dad did it and he was pretty successful," Tyler said. "It's definitely harder with your dad as the coach. But I figure in the long run it will be better for me because he's pushing me really hard."

Tyler said as far as he can tell, he doesn't receive any special treatment because he's the coach's son. And, his mom hasn't had to break up any "wrestling matches" at home caused by strategic differences between the two.

"She helps out a lot," Tyler said with a smile. "She tries to stay out of it because (Steve) knows what he's doing out there."

Ice hockey provides cool entertainment for kids

► HOCKEY, from 16

ey sites at UD. A few minutes away on Marrows Road, scores of children were scurrying around the ice last Saturday at The Pond, which opened a second rink in December. Like the UD, The Pond, which opened in 1996, provides leagues for all age groups, including adults. Instructional classes and camps for ages 4-16 are also available, including during the summer.

Gold coach Jim Middlemas, of Cannonshire in Newark, whose son, Greg, plays for the Gold team, said the hours spent practicing, traveling and playing games can be long, but the rewards are great.

"I enjoy practices because I get to teach the kids," said Middlemas, whose team won a Christmas tournament in Lancaster, Pa., and finished third at a Thanksgiving tournament in Virginia.

"(Teaching) is what it's all about, showing them the mechanics of the game, showing them about how the game is supposed to be played. In the games, you try not to do a whole lot of coaching, you just try to let them figure out what you're doing in practice and then match that to the games. I like working with the kids."

Middlemas and assistants John Dawson, Rick Beeson and Ken Finnegan, whose sons are also on the team, oversee a roster of 16 players. They begin their Delaware Valley Hockey League season in October and end it in February. However, with tournaments and spring and summer leagues, some play 12 months a year.

"(Hockey's) a lot of action," said Greg Middlemas about why he likes the sport. "It just keeps going on and on. You can go real fast, and the contact."

As for playing in the summer, he said: "It's nice because it's hot outside and you come inside and it's cool."

Justin Dawson has been skating since he was two years old and began playing when he was eight.

"I like the speed and I like to shoot and I like to score goals," he said.

Ricky Beeson, of Bear, said: "I love (hockey). I just like playing."

All three would recommend the sport to any boy or girl looking for a fun activity and to meet new friends.

Off the ice, meanwhile, each team must also have someone to do the mountain of paper and leg work, like making schedules, keeping statistics, finding ice time, paying arenas, contacting tournament officials, insuring that rosters are accurate, and making phone calls to players.

Finnegan, of Newark, said he volunteers about 10 hours a week.

"Our philosophy is that you get them involved in as many activities as they can, then they choose one that they can enjoy," said Finnegan, whose son also plays basketball, lacrosse, baseball, and soccer.

The cost to equip a hockey player from scratch averages about $500, while the cost for playing is about $600. Equipment, fortunately, can last for several seasons.

There are more than 4,000 players from 33 clubs from Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Virginia in the DVHL, Middlemas said. At UD rinks, there are about 30 in-house teams comprised of players ages six to 18 years old. The Gold plays a 17-game schedule.

"The bigger clubs field three or four teams at every level," Middlemas said.

Coaches Dawson and Beeson said it's an excellent sport for not only building team concepts and character, but for making new friends and seeing other parts of the country.

"What I've always thought is that there's a lot of things that these kids are going to carry with them when they leave the game of hockey, although many of the kids will never leave the game," Dawson said. "Hockey is a game for life. It's a game you can play when you're 50, 60 years old."

"What I think the kids get the most out of is they learn how to accomplish things, they get self-confidence; team-work. Hockey's a lot like a war. They go to battle together and these kids, when they rely on each other and win a game, can take all these things with them as they grow up and serves them well."

Another sign that the sport remains healthy, and good news for young players looking to continue playing in the area, is the recent formation of club teams at Caravel Academy, Glasgow, Newark, Delaware/Hodgson, and Salesianum.

The Gold, meanwhile, will be one of many area teams who will compete at the UD rinks March 15-18 in the Tim Roman Tournament.
