GUNNERS--THINK

CONTRADICT THIS--IF YOU CAN.

"This infamous rage for killing! The suffering that the men with guns impose; the happy creatures mangled in their play and flight; the crippled that drag themselves to the woods and hills to die, with unheard groaning; the little ones in fur and feathers that perish of cold and hunger, wondering why the father and mother that were good to them come back no more.

Oh, brothers of the tongue that speaks, the hand that works such other good, the brain that thinks so high and kindly for those of your own species, will you not hear and heed the plaint in these wild voices that reach you even at your windows? Will you not have mercy on those harmless ones that, after centuries of persecution, know and think of you only with aversion and terror?

AUTUMN COLORS

This is one of the mysterious and bewitching days. Surely it is not that the summer is ended, the green year passing, the winter coming that gives such peculiar influence to the days.

The blue is tender and pale. The skies are full of clouds; this one opening, shutting, melting, reforming, and so through all the changes; this one making haste, as it called to some distant battle, and fiercely driving on in heat to the distant rendezvous; or if milder thought prevail, then they seem like mighty flocks of fleecy birds, gathered from the summer hatching haunts of the north, and borne southward by the annual impulse of migration.

But such is the depth, the beauty and the mystic influence of the heavens, that to look up long into its cope effects you with giddiness, such as men feel who look down from great heights. And then, too, the color of all things is changing--not changed, but only tinting color.

We must except the maple trees. Some of them are changed to a straw color. Yonder is one very green except one branch, which stretches up from the bottom nearly to the top, and that is of vivid scarlet. It looks like a tree with a great bouquet of flowers in its bosom.

But along the fences are crimson leaves, the autumn yellows predominate. The corn is cut up, and stands out on the hills around here in shocks to dry. The emerald grass was never more tender in its green.

The orchard is waiting to be relieved its burden. All summer long it has eased itself by throwing down a part of its fruits, worm-picked, or storm gathered; and now those apples that remain, full grown, plump, ripe, look wistfully at you, as if asking your care for the winter.

And the birds--how they do behave! What is the matter with them? No one of them frolics. They have lost all their gamesome ways. They collect in mown fields for seeds, they hover about orchards, exchanging remarks among themselves in low tones, like well-

STORIES For LITTLE FOLK

BETWEEN THE DARK AND THE DAYLIGHT
WHEN THE NIGHT IS BEGINNING TO LOWER,
COMES A PAUSE IN THE DAY'S OCCUPATION
THAT IS KNOWN AS THE CHILDREN'S HOUR

About four hundred years ago in far away Italy a little child was born. His home was in a village nesting among the mountains of that sunny land. The houses of the little hamlet were built of stone, of such a soft gray color they could scarcely be seen against the background of green trees. From the windows of the houses one could see vineyards of purple grapes.

The child's father was an artist, who loved all things beautiful, and his mother was a kind, sweet woman, whose greatest care was to make her little boy happy.

In Italy it is pleasant to be out-of-doors. The boy, whose name was Raphael, loved to lie under the trees and watch the beautiful colors of the sky—the deep blue of the mid-day, or the varied tints of the sunset. Sometimes a procession of monks wound around the mountain path. They were often accompanied by a cardinal who wore a richly colored robe. The boy delighted in the beautiful colorings. Again he would see a troop of soldiers pass by. Their uniforms and flags made a pretty picture which he never failed to enjoy. The father noticed how the son loved to dream, and was pleased. He said, "Some day, I believe he will be a great artist."

Raphael spent a great deal of time in his father's studio, where he was allowed to help by washing palettes and brushes. After his duties were done he watched the artist at work.

While he was still a little boy the gentle mother died and only three years later the death of the father left Raphael alone. The comfortable home was closed and the boy went to live with his uncle.

One day he went to visit an old friend of his father's. A priest, who was the brother of his host, came into the room. The boy thought he seemed to act strangely and watched him closely. He found the man was blind. Raphael felt sorry for the afflicted stranger. As they were sitting at supper the boy was the first to finish. He drew his note book from his pocket and began to sketch, holding it under the table all the while and thinking no one would see him. The master of the house noticed the action and came to see what he had made. How surprised he was to find an excellent likeness of the kind, patient face of his blind brother.

When his sixteenth birthday arrived, Raphael went to study with one of the greatest artists in Italy. He worked so faithfully that in a short time he had learned all the master could teach him. Then a longing seized him to go to Florence, which was noted for its art treasures. After staying there a while he went to the larger city of Rome. Here there is a wonderful palace called the Vatican, which is the home of the Pope. When Raphael was 25 years old he received an invitation to come to the Vatican and do some painting on the palace walls.

His first work was the painting of frescoes. To make a fresco the artist paints on the wet plaster, and the colors dry with the plaster. The Pope was so pleased with this that he engaged him to paint all the walls of the palace. Some of them were already decorated with the work of his former master. They had been ordered removed so as to make room for Raphael's. But he loved his old master and did not want to grieve him, so persuaded the Pope to allow those special ones to remain. One of the most famous of these paintings is the Madonna of the Chair. In this famous picture a beautiful mother is holding the Christ child in her arms. The picture is round and an old fable tells us it happened to be made that shape in this way.

In one of the beautiful valleys of Italy an old hermit lived. Besides his humble home a great oak tree shed its mighty branches, shading the house from the heat of summer and protecting it from the winds in winter. The swaying of the branches and the rustling of leaves seemed like sweetest music to the old man who called the tree "my friend."

There was one other who was kind to the lonely old man. She was the daughter of a vine-dresser who lived nearby. Mary remembered to carry the choicest fruit to the hermit and always helped him whenever she could.

One day a terrible storm swept over the country. The oak groaned and moaned in the power of the wind. The old man thought its branches seemed to beckon him to come. He climbed to a place in the boughs close to the trunk, and was high and dry, after his cabin had been swept away. As soon as the storm had passed the little Mary came to hunt her friend. She took him to her own home and cared for him. The old man was so grateful he prayed that the memory of these two good friends might live forever.

Years afterward the oak tree was cut down and made into wine barrels. Mary married and became the mother of two beautiful boys.

One day as she sat at the window of her home with her children around her, Raphael passed by. "What a beautiful picture," he exclaimed. He made a sketch of the group on the cover of a barrel that stood by—a round piece of wood that had been cut from the trunk of the old oak. The prayer of the hermit was granted, for the picture grew into one of the world's most famous paintings—the madonna of the chair.

There is a story told of another of these paintings. It is called the Sistine Madonna—another beautiful picture to represent the mother and the Christ Child. Two angels are standing gazing into the face of the mother.

When the picture was first painted the angels were not there. It was on exhibition before the world had called it great. Raphael came into the room one day to find two little children resting their arms on a ledge and gazing in wonder at the faces above them. This sincere admiration was the greatest encouragement he had had. He gratefully seized his brush and painted the little angel faces gazing in wonder and admiration at the beautiful faces above.

Watch for these pictures. The magazines are full of them. "One cannot see them without loving both them and the gentle artist who painted them."

Appeal To Boy Scouts

Among new features of the boy scout movement is the vote of the executive committee to establish a national court of honor which will award medals to boys for deeds of heroism. William T. Hornaday, director of the Zoological park, the Bronx, New York, has issued an appeal to the boy scouts to protect the birds and wild animals of the country. He urges them to watch sharply for violations of the game laws and to help to bring such violators to punishment.

Still another field of usefulness for boy scouts is pointed out by Theodore Roosevelt. Colonel Roosevelt urges the scouts to see that gangs of roughs do not make the playgrounds impossible for children. He points out to the boys that the qualities of a good scout make for success in business and urges upon them the importance of unselfishness, gentleness, strength and bravery.—Newark News.

State College For Colored Students

Professor Harry Hayward, director of the Delaware State farm at Newark and of the State's agricultural experiment station, has been asked by the Board of Trustees to assume the general oversight and direction of the agricultural operations at the State College for Colored Students at Dover. Professor Hayward attended the meeting of the board and accepted. Professor C. A. Short, also of Delaware College at Newark, was asked to prepare a sewer and perfect sanitary system for the State college here and he consented.

The trustees elected Henry P. Cannon, of Sussex, president; George W. Marshall of Kent, secretary and treasurer, and Francis H. Hoffecker, Wilmington, John B. Hutton and W. C. Jason of Dover, prudential committee.

NEWS

Here and There

The forty-ninth anniversary of the emancipation of the negro race from slavery will be observed by the colored people of Kent and Sussex counties on Friday, October 13, 1911, in the town of Milford.

Dr. R. C. Reed, of Elmira, N. Y., who has been recommended by the committee on Discipline and Instruction of Delaware College, for the Chair of Veterinary Science and Bacteriology, has accepted. The new Professor will assume his duties early in October.

Contractor Thomas Allen, of Stanhope, N. J., who is building the road from Christiana to Cooch Bridge, has been having difficulty in getting laborers to carry forward the work. Being unable to get sufficient local help, he employed imported labor. The first night the aliens took up their quarters some one opened fire on their bunkhouse with a shotgun. No one was hurt, but 18 of the men refused to stay and left the next morning.

The first local institute of the New Castle county Teachers' Association will be held in the Y. M. C. A. building, 10th and Orange streets, Wilmington, on Saturday, October 7th. Two addresses on some phases of reading and literature will be delivered by Miss Anne Rothwell Stewart, of Baltimore. Mrs. Edith Smith Davis, superintendent of the Department of Scientific Temperance Instruction for the World's and National W. C. T. U. will make an address. The morning session will begin at 10.30. Luncheon will be served to the teachers by the Institute Committee.

The dedication exercises of the new Peoples' Settlement building, Wilmington, will be held on October 16th. Jacob Riis, of New York, and Rev. H. W. Kellogg, of Columbus, Ohio, will speak on the occasion.

The Patriotic Order Sons of America has now a membership of 1700 in Delaware represented in 25 camps. The new State President is H. R. Loose, of Wilmington.

Mrs. M. Jane Murray, proprietress of the Delaware Duckerie, exhibited fowls at the New York State Fair held in Syracuse, recently, and won the blue ribbon. She will also show at Mt. Holly, Hagerstown, Philadelphia, New York, Wilmington, Baltimore and probably Camden and Boston.

Tome Institute of Port Deposit opens with the largest enrollment in its history. Thirty states are represented in the Boys' School.

The pupils of Appleton public school will hold an ice cream social on the school grounds on Saturday evening, October 7th. Proceeds for school purposes.

Alfred Taylor, colored, of Iron Hill, was admitted to the Delaware Hospital last Thursday with a badly lacerated hand. The hand was caught in a circular saw. 19 stitches were required to close the wound.

An oyster supper for the benefit of Head of Christiana Church will be served at Mrs. E. B. Milburn's, near Elk Mills, tomorrow, October 5.

Effect Of Scientific Work Shown

The display of vegetables shown by the Delaware Railroad Demonstration Farm at the New Castle County Fair proves once more that an old worn out farm can be made to pay under careful management. It is less than two years since this company purchased some land at Bacon, Del., that was in a seemingly hopeless state of depletion.

The following varieties of vegetables from this land held their own as to quality when shown beside those raised on improved farms; pumpkins, cucumbers, potatoes, yams, sugar beets, mangle woad, peanuts, lima beans, wax beans, onions, cantaloupes, tomatoes, peppers, radishes, eggplants, okra, watermelons, raspberries, corn, rhubarb, scallions, squash, salsify, leeks, alfalfa, pickles, cotton, peaches, and ripe strawberries in pots.

The demonstration farm is really demonstrating that scientific methods will bring fat crops from the fertile lands of the Delaware-Maryland-Virginia peninsula no matter how barren science may have made them appear.

The Skeptics

By Bliss Carman.
It was the little leaves beside the road.
Said Grass: "What is that sound
So dimly profound.
That detonates and desolates the air?"

"That is St. Peter's bell."
Said rain-wise Pimpernell;
"He is music to the godly,
Though to us he sounds so oddly,
And he terrifies the faithful unto prayer."

Then something very like a groan
Escaped the naughty little leaves.
Said Grass: "And whither track
These creatures all in black,
So woebegone and penitent and meek?"

"They're mortals bound for church,"
Said the little Silver Birch;
"They hope to go to Heaven
And have their sins forgiven,
If they talk to God about it once a week."

And something like a smile
Ran through the naughty little leaves.
Said Grass: "What is that noise
That startles and destroys
Our blessed summer brooding
When we're tired?"

"That's folks a-praising God,"
Said the tough old cynic Clod;
"They do it every Sunday,
They'll be all right on Monday;
It's just a little habit they've acquired."

And laughter spread among the little leaves.
