SAFETY TOWN

Program teaches kids how to be safe on street, at home

Newark Police Sgt. Donald Graham guides driver Tim Robinson as "pedestrians" wait to cross a Safety Town street.

by Neil Thomas

"What," asked Newark Police Sgt. Donald Graham as seven young children scrambled into brightly painted pedal cars, "is the first thing you do when you get in a car?"

"Buckle our seat belts!" they chirped in unison.

"Very good!" called Graham, as the kids cranked up their foot-powered rotary engines for a spin around the spray-painted streets and sidewalks of Newark Safety Town.

Safety Town, now in its seventh year, is a two-week program aimed at teaching children how to be safe in the home and on the streets. It is sponsored by the Newark Department of Parks and Recreation and the Newark Police Department, and is held at Downes Elementary School on Casho Mill Road.

Although the most visible part of Safety Town is the spray-painted city, complete with plywood buildings, a working traffic light and street signs, the program is actually much more in-depth.

Nearly 90 children in two morning sessions spend two weeks in the classroom with teacher Susan Neiger and a variety of invited guests, from fire fighters to police officers to school bus drivers.

"We really do give the kids a lot of information," said Donna Draper of the Department of Parks and Recreation. "It's like putty — you throw it against the wall and what sticks, sticks."

"They're sharp," added Graham. "They're like sponges. They absorb quite a lot of material that we don't realize."

Among this year's Safety Town programs were:

- Safety Town itself, in which the children used the pedal cars to reinforce information provided in the classroom. They were taught the rules of the road and the meaning of various street signs. New Castle County Crossing Guards taught them how to use sidewalks and crosswalks, and how to cross the street properly.

- Visits by police officers from various forces, including Newark, New Castle County and the Delaware State Police. The police introduced the children to their uniforms, equipment and identification "to let children know what to look for," Draper said.

Christina freezes academic standards

Concerned about the lack of an adequate tutorial program, the Christina Board of Education voted 4-2 last week to freeze its academic standard for eligibility to participate in extra-curricular activities.

Such activities include sports, music and drama.

The standard will remain a 1.75 grade point average, or low C, for the 1986-87 school year. It will apply to all Christina freshmen, sophomores and juniors.

The board agreed to begin phasing in academic standards three years ago. Its policy called for a gradual increase in its standard from a 1.5 grade point average in 1984.85 to a 2.0, or C, in 1986-87.

Part of that policy, however, required that the district establish a tutorial program to help students with poor grades to improve their studies and regain eligibility.

Several board members do not believe an adequate program has been developed at the district's three high schools — Christiana, Glasgow and Newark.

The board approved a one-year freeze on the standard to put a uniform tutorial program in place and to study statistics on the effects of increased academic requirements on marginal students.

Voting for the freeze were board President Dr. James W. Kent, George Evans, Cynthia Oates and Charles "Ed" Hockersmith. Carole A. Boyd and Dona Price opposed the freeze.

Oates, the board vice president, has been a vocal critic of increasing standards without providing students the academic help they need.

"I will continue to be a dissenting vote until I see the tutoring which is supposed to be given to every student who requests it," she said. "Tutoring is not available to all of the students, as it should be (under) this policy."

Ralph Burchard

Newark barber has cropped hair from coast to coast

by John McWhorter

When it comes to hair, there's no doubt that this man can cut it. His name is Ralph Burchard and he's been trimming the locks of the young and old for more than 65 years.

Burchard, 74, began his career when he was only nine — his first customer was his three-year-old brother — but that was three full years after first taking an interest in learning to cut hair.

"The barbershop was my classroom," Burchard said, explaining that he had spent many a day in his local barbershop. He said that he used to sit in the shop in his hometown of Smyrna, just watching how the local barber used to handle his comb and scissors.

Then one day he got his chance when his mother asked him to cut his brother's hair. "I wasn't lost when it came to cutting hair," Burchard said, "and when I was done, my mother said I had done a pretty good job."

And that was enough encouragement for him because ever since he has been cutting hair no matter where he went.

Burchard served in the Merchant Marine during World War II, an experience that took him from one side of the world to the other.

For most of those years, he worked 56 hours a week on the ships, but still managed to fit in a few cuts on the side. "A hundred and fifty a week," Burchard said, and at 50 cents per cut, he saved enough money to start his own shop after being discharged.

Burchard got off the boat on the West Coast and ended up in Maine before he was finished. There he worked on a tug boat before starting up his own shop on Maine's coast where he cut anyone's hair, from the princes to the paupers.

"I got 'em from all walks of life, from people who can't afford a cut to doctors and lawyers and even Harry," Burchard said, pointing to a long time customer who has been coming to him for most of Burchard's 34 years in Newark.

"Millionaires, too, but I didn't know who they were and I didn't bother to find out. They're just people," he said.

And when it comes to the barber business, Burchard explained that some things never change. Like kids.

He said that kids are difficult to cut because they're always moving around, even when they're in the chair. "Kids are too hyper, they won't stay still and they're in and out of the door half a dozen times while they're waiting."

He also doesn't enjoy it when someone comes in on a Monday morning after someone else has botched a home haircut attempt, expecting him to fix it.

"The first month I was here (at 152 E. Main St.) this woman brought in three kids who were all whittled up, so I did what I could for them."

He then explained that when they left, another woman on the street asked the mother where her children had gotten their hair cut. The mother said that Burchard had cut their hair.

"I would have been better off if I hadn't touched them at all," Burchard said, "I don't need advertising like that."

Then there was the story of the newspaper photographer who came in to take pictures and asked Burchard if he minded him taking photos of his clients.

Burchard said that he didn't mind, but that he would have to ask his clients, all except for one. "I pointed to this fellow and said,

'You don't have to ask him, there's a $50 bounty out on him.' Old Tony got so mad that he didn't come back for the longest time," Burchard said, chuckling.

Besides being able to tell a good joke and being able to talk about any topic that arises, Burchard said that a barber must also know when not to talk.

"A barber must be a good listener because some people don't have anyone to talk to," Burchard said, explaining that the barber chair is much like an analyst's couch.

Most of all though, Burchard said that to be a barber, you have to like people. "If you don't like people, then you don't belong in the business."

And it's obvious that Burchard likes the people he sees every day, at 8:30 in the morning, after being at work for an hour, he greeted every customer with a smile and a hello.

But who cuts his hair? That's an easy one. "I'm self-employed," Burchard said.

$200,000 ball park figure

Council makes tentative agreement to buy Doubleday Park

Although it took a while to get the ball rolling, Newark City Council has finally bought itself a hardball baseball diamond.

The city announced Monday night that it plans to purchase Doubleday Park for $200,000 from rock singer George Thorogood.

Council voted 6-0 to buy the park, which is located off Barksdale Road.

The sale is subject to a stipulation that the field first be appraised as being worth at least the $200,000 purchase price, according to City Solicitor Thomas Hughes.

The city also wants to sign a contract making the Newark Babe Ruth League responsible for the field.

"I've been trying to get them (the city) to buy it," said LeRoy Hill, a Pittsburgh Pirate scout and Newark resident who maintains and schedules use of the field.

"This is the only town in the state of Delaware that doesn't have a (hardball field)."

"I think we have to buy it," said Councilman Betty Hutchinson, who added that the city should begin to look ahead to find additional open space for the future.

Doubleday park is used by a variety of leagues, Hill said, including local semi-pro teams, private schools and the Babe Ruth league.

"It can't be bought for just one group of kids — that's understood," he said.

The City of Newark has neared purchase of Doubleday park.

Council annexes Valley Stream

Despite opposition from local residents, Newark City Council voted unanimously Monday night to annex more than eight acres of land west of the city at Woodmere.

Council amended the annexation to exclude a section of Valley Road because of confusion over whether Newark or New Castle County Police would patrol the street.

Council also approved plans by the land's developer to build 18 single-family homes on the property, a subdivision which will be known as a Valley Stream.

The majority of residents now living near the proposed site a

"are strongly opposed" to the project, according to John Gray, a Woodmere resident who said the development will lead to increased traffic and environmental problems.

However, Newark Police have said they believe the new homes will only have a minimal effect on road traffic and will not increase accident risks in the area.

In response to complaints that the development could substantially increase population density, City Planning Director Roy Lopata said the 2.2 units per acre proposed for the site is less than Woodmere's current density.

Many residents opposed the annexation because it originally included a portion of Valley Road. If the city had annexed the Valley Road section, nearby residents would have been unsure if they fell under the jurisdiction of Newark or New Castle County police, according to John Fostick, a Christine Manor resident.

In response to this, Council voted 5-1 not to annex the roadway.

The Valley Stream development is being built by J. Paul Marta builders of Coach Hill.

In other zoning matters, council tabled an ordinance to reduce side yard requirements in RH (one-family detached residential) zonings from 25 feet to 15 feet.

The change was requested by Don Billing, a representative of the Christianstead development site.

According to Billing, the homes planned for Christianstead will not fit on their lots unless the side yard requirement is lessened.

Local residents asked Council to table its decision until the developer can present more details about the proposed homes and their location on the site.

NBA

Sidewalk Days

Following on the heels of the popular and successful Newark Night festival, the Newark Business Association is working to upgrade its annual Sidewalk Days to be held Aug. 15-16.

Sidewalk Days had been a major activity in the city during the mid-1970s but had fallen off in the 1980s. "We thought perhaps we could do better than had been done in the last few years," said Dr. Jeff Miller, a University of Delaware economics professor who recently completed a public service fellowship with the City of Newark.

Among Miller's accomplishments was Newark Night. While that event will probably become an annual event, he said it was too massive an undertaking to hold more than once a year.

Instead, Miller said, downtown merchants "are trying to work toward Sidewalk Days." Although Miller's fellowship has ended, he will lend a hand with Sidewalk Days preparations. Also assisting the NBA with the event will be the Newark public relations firm of Peyton & Dalrymple Communications.

Castle

Water warning

Despite Sunday's torrential — but brief — downpours, Delaware remains under a drought warning and Gov. Michael N. Castle has asked residents to voluntarily limit water use.

Castle issued a similar call during drought conditions last summer.

The Governor has asked Delawareans to limit the watering of lawns and shrubs and the washing of cars. If residents must do either, they should use a hose with a flow-control nozzle.

Also, the Water Resources Agency for New Castle County has announced that it is distributing a guide for conserving water outdoors.

The "Outdoor Watering Guide" provides many tips for reducing water usage through watering methods, mulching and conservation. It also provides a list of drought resistant shrubs, shrubs, trees and ground covers.

For a copy of the guide, stop by the Newark Municipal Building at 220 Elkton Rd. or the New Castle County Engineering Building at 2701 Kirkwood Highway.

Teachers

Bills signed

Citing a nationwide teacher shortage, Gov. Michael N. Castle last week signed legislation to help Delaware attract and keep quality teachers.

"There is no such thing as a good education system without good, quality teachers," Castle said. "If we are to insure a quality education for our children, we must take important steps to address the teacher shortage crisis facing us."

The bills signed into law include:

•SB 370 — Provides Blue Cross benefits after three months of employment to all full-time state employees (excluding casual and seasonal and those positions expected to last less than one year).

"In addition to the salary increases for teachers in this year's budget, this bill will be an important factor in our recruitment efforts," Castle stated.

•HB 530 — Establishes a Teacher Institute where persons holding a bachelors degree in a field other than education can become certified to teach in Delaware public schools. There will be no tuition charged to participants.

"This is another important step in the state's efforts to deal with the coming teacher shortage. We are establishing a program with high standards to attract the best and the brightest who want to teach, and to ensure our high standards for certification are not undermined as we experience more and more openings," Castle said.

•HB 463 — Authorizes the carryover of funds to complete summer training for the Delaware Instructional Improvement Model.

•HB 163 — Increases the number of training requirements for school bus drivers and requires persons applying for such a position to be free of felony convictions or convictions for crimes against a child.

'No chance Vance' gone

Newark alderman Vance Funk leaves bench after 12 years

by Michael Ricci

The "smiling hangman" — alias "no chance Vance" — has hung up his gavel.

After presiding over Newark Alderman's Court for 12 years, Vance Funk III recently spent his last day on the bench. He left to devote more time to his law career.

"I'm happy with what I accomplished," Funk said. "We've done a lot of neat things down here."

Funk decided to resign when City Council rejected a proposal he made last winter to give Newark's deputy alderman power to handle more court cases. The plan was designed to help lessen Funk's case load.

"I thought the proposal was totally reasonable" in light of increases in the number of cases brought yearly before the court, he said. If Newark's population continues to grow, Funk added, the city will probably need to hire a full-time judge within the next several years.

Funk, who is the only practicing attorney among the state's 14 aldermen, has introduced a number of innovative, and usually successful, programs in Newark during the past 12 years.

A decade ago, he started a community service work program which enables people convicted of minor violations to avoid a criminal record by doing work for the Newark Senior Center.

Eight years ago, Funk developed Newark's first parking ticket amnesty week "before that was popular" in other areas.

One project Funk admits did not succeed was a Sunday morning trash cleanup for convicted litterers. "I even bought a box of trashbags" to start the project, which only lasted about three weeks, he said, laughing.

The former alderman has also heard his share of humorous cases during his term.

The funniest one he remembers involved a university football player who bet several friends he could ride a bike naked across university grounds without being caught. The player's friends made the bet and promptly called police — who greeted the nude player as he pedaled across a field.

"He felt he had been entrapped" by police and friends who, Funk said, "were probably exfriends at this point."

Although Funk has enjoyed the time he has spent inside Newark's courtroom, his position sometimes interferes with his law career. Because he heads the court, he cannot handle many cases in Newark as an attorney.

As alderman, a primary responsibility of Funk's position has required him to judge people's guilt or innocence. And what does he consider one of the most valuable skills he has acquired through his involvement with the courts?

"To be able to tell (someone) they're not telling the truth without telling them they're lying," he said. "After 12 years, you really do develop something like a sixth sense."

Council names Ferry

Newark City Council Monday night formally accepted the resignation of its alderman and then promptly hired a replacement.

Council voted unanimously to accept the resignation of Vance Funk III, the city's alderman for the past 12 years.

Council then offered the vacant position to Thomas Ferry, a Wilmington attorney who has served as deputy alderman for the past two weeks.

Both the completion of Funk's term and the start of Ferry's are effective July 18.

The position carries a $16,000-per-year salary.

Mill work cited

The City of Newark's Conservation Advisory Commission has established a program which will be called "A Better Newark."

The program will give public recognition to private property owners who attempt to improve the appearance of their property through renovation or landscaping, thereby enhancing the image of the entire community.

Each month the Commission will select a private property owner for recognition by bestowing him with a proclamation from the City Council declaring the property owner the recipient of the "A Better Newark" award.

The Commission has chosen Edward and Kay Sobolewski as the first recipients of this award for the month of July for the improvements made to their property located at 82 E. Cleveland Ave. The building, which was formerly a plumbing shop, was renovated and converted to a very attractive apartment building.

The Mill on Cleveland Avenue has been cited for its pleasant appearance.

University hikes tuition rates

University of Delaware officials last week announced increases in resident and non-resident tuition rates for the 1986-87 academic year.

Tuition for Delawareans will be raised by 5 percent to $2,205 per year, a $105 increase over the current $2,100. Non-resident students will pay $5,200 per year, an increase of $400, or an 8.3 percent rise over the current $4,800 annual charge.

Per-credit-hour charges for Delaware residents in 1986-87 will be $92 for undergraduates, an increase of $4, and $123 for graduate students, an increase of $6. Non-resident per-credit-hour tuition rates will be $217 for undergraduates, a rise of $17, and $289 for graduate students, an increase of $22.

According to President E.A. Trabant, the tuition increases are necessary to maintain the quality of the educational experience for University of Delaware students.

Revenue from student tuition and fees and other sources is necessary to fund increased costs for supplies and expenses in the upcoming fiscal year, he explained, including unavoidable rises in costs for library books, computing and laboratory equipment, the upkeep of improved and expanded facilities and salary increases.

The percentages of tuition increases are comparable to those at other institutions with which the University competes for students.

For example, resident tuition hikes have been announced for Rutgers University (5.9 percent), the University of Maryland (7.1 percent), the University of Vermont (8.7 percent), Temple University (6.7 percent), the University of Virginia (9.7 percent) and Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University (8.3 percent). Non-resident tuition increases for next fall at these institutions range from 6.1 percent at Rutgers to 11.6 percent at the University of Virginia.

The University's operating budget for fiscal year 1987 is $215.1 million. In addition to student tuition and fees, support for operations is received from the State of Delaware, endowment income from gifts, grants and contracts.

Back to Back will be back

Christina board adds student exchange program to curriculum

by Neil Thomas

Back to Back will be back. After a successful one-year trial, the trans-Atlantic student exchange program has been made a part of the Christina School District curriculum.

The Christina Board of Education voted 5-1 during its meeting July 8 to accept a recommendation by Superintendent Dr. Michael W. Walls that Back to Back be included in the district's instructional program on a continuing basis.

Through Back to Back, about 50 students from France visited northern Delaware in March. Christina students from Bancroft and Bayard elementary schools later traveled to France, staying in the homes of the youngsters, they had earlier hosted.

The thrust of the program is to promote international understanding, according to Walls, who worked with Back to Back while superintendent of the Beloit, Wis. public schools before coming to Christina.

The lone board member opposed to adding Back to Back to the curriculum was George Evans of Wilmington. "What's wrong with the program coming before the board every year?" Evans asked, questioning the need for it to become a part of the curriculum and thus under the jurisdiction of the administration and not the board.

"I see it as a part of the curriculum," Walls said. "It should be up to the administration to evaluate whether or not it is meeting students' needs and whether or not it is cost-effective. The administration should have the latitude to evaluate and make those decisions."

Evans also expressed racial concerns, saying that one French family did not want their child to reside with a black family in Wilmington.

Walls said that was true, but that leaders of the French contingent had been made aware of the problem and had discussed it with the French family in question, leading to "heightened awareness."

"I can't assure you that parents in France won't have racial concerns but if there are (concerns), we'll try to address them," Walls said.

"Anytime you send 50 kids across the ocean, you have the potential for problems. But you also have the potential for tremendous growth," he added.

"You can't go anywhere in the world and not meet with some form of prejudice," said Mary Ellen Kotz, the Christina teacher who coordinated the local Back to Back program. "Some (French students) did come feeling racial prejudice, but if you were to ask now the parents of those who were housed in the city would tell you things went fine."

"That's what the program is all about — tearing down walls by accepting that there is prejudice in the world and working at correcting it."

Although most of the local families involved in Back to Back found the experience quite valuable, both Walls and Kotz said some changes will be made to address their concerns.

For one, said Walls, participating families will be informed that there are a variety of "hidden costs" beyond the $880 travel fee. The costs of passports, clothing, tours and photographs add up.

Host families here also found the experience more expensive than originally anticipated.

Hotz said a handbook based on this year's experiences, one which will include a detailed list of expenses, is being compiled.

She also plans to give local students more exposure to the spoken French language "so they will not feel so terrified when they end up in a home where they have to depend on it."

Walls said the total cost of the program in 1986-87 will be about $14,000, the same as this year.

Dr. Kent elected president of Christina school board

Dr. James W. Kent of Robscott Manor was elected president of the Christina Board of Education during its annual organizational meeting July 8.

Kent, who was elected unanimously, succeeds Carole A. Boyd of Fairfield.

Cynthia Oates of Wilmington was re-elected board vice president, and Superintendent Dr. Michael W. Walls was reappointed board executive secretary.

Oates and two new board members — Charles "Ed" Hockersmith of Red Mill Farms and Dona B. Price of Eagle Glen — were sworn into office during the July 8 meeting.

Oates, who was unopposed in the board's May 10 election, and Hockersmith, who upset incumbent Alfred I. Daniel, will serve five-year terms.

Price, who defeated Suzanne S. Burnette of Harmony Hills, will serve the remaining one year of the term of former board member Phillip Darby. Darby resigned his seat in March because of increased responsibilities in his job as a Delaware State Police officer.

In other organizational action:

- Burnette, the unsuccessful school board candidate, was reappointed to represent Christina on the Delaware Desegregation Advisory Committee. Kent asked that Burnett report to the board on DAC activities bi-monthly so the board can give her feedback and direction on issues of concern.

- Kent was selected as Christina's representative on the Delaware School Boards Association board of directors. Price was named the alternate.
- Board member George Evans of Wilmington was appointed Christina's representative to the DSBA Legislative Committee. Hockersmith was named the alternate.
- Oates was selected as Christina's representative to the Delaware State Superintendent's Advisory Council. Boyd was named the alternate.

Deeny

Science camp

Megan Deeny, daughter of Joseph and Catherine Deeny of Newark, is representing Delaware at the 1986 National Youth Science Camp held near Bartow, W. Va.

Deeny is one of 102 recent high school graduates from throughout the nation attending the three-week camp, which will run to July 21.

The camp annually seeks two of the top science-oriented students from each state and the District of Columbia. These students spend three weeks at a rustic campsite in the Monongahela National Forest.

While in West Virginia, campers attend lectures given by leading scientists from all around the nation. Lecturers for 1986 include Dr. Edwin Grayzeck of NASA's Comet Imaging Team, Dr. John Teal from Woodshole Oceanographic Institute and four United Technologies representatives who will bring the jet packs used by shuttle astronauts. The delegates also participate in indoor activities and a trip to Washington, D.C., where they attend a Senate luncheon held in their honor.

The camp is financed through a combination of donations from the State of West Virginia, private foundations, corporations and individuals.

In addition to being selected as a delegate to the camp, Deeny was valedictorian at Ursuline Academy and a National Merit Finalist. She received the Renaissance Science and Math Award and was selected for the Governor's School of Excellence. This fall she plans to attend the University of Delaware and major in math.

Excellence rewarded

Students attend school sponsored by governor

by Michael Ricci

More than 100 of the state's most talented high school students recently spent a week in Newark — compliments of the Governor's office — sampling college life.

As part of the Governor's School for Excellence program, 110 students from throughout the state lived on campus and attended classes at the University of Delaware from July 6-12. The students, who recently completed 10th grade, were selected to attend the program because of their academic, artistic, dramatic or musical talents.

The school's goal, according to coordinator Richard Fischer, is to "motivate and encourage students to continue to strive for excellence."

Of the 110 participants this year, 73 were selected on the basis of academic skills which placed them in the top 10 percent of all students in the state, Fischer said. The remaining 37 students were picked because of their talent in one of six categories: woodwinds, brass, choral, photography, drawing or drama.

This year's session, the program's eighth, was centered on the theme of decision-making, said Fischer, who also serves as associate director of Continuing Education at the University.

Students attended classes and discussed topics concerning personal decision-making, censorship, and the causes and reasons for decision-making.

All the students were together each evening. During the day, Fischer said, the music and art high schoolers participated in small-group sessions with faculty members.

About 50 University faculty members took part in this year's program.

In addition to classes, a large portion of the program is devoted to introducing the students to a college atmosphere, Fischer said. "They get sort of a mini-version" of university life, he said, adding "by the end of the week, they don't want to leave."

Living in dormitory rooms and eating in dining halls allows the students to experience life away from home and parents, he said.

A highlight of the week was a meeting Wednesday with Gov. Michael N. Castle, Fischer said, during which the students "got a chance to grill the governor" on current issues.

Some of the students also took a trip to the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C., and other went to see a show on Broadway.

In Washington, they saw music exhibits that are normally off-limits to the public, Fischer said, while on Broadway they had a chance to go behind stage.

The School for Excellence Program, which is funded through the Governor's office, is structured to allow each Delaware public school to nominate two students for academic ability and one student in each performing arts category.

Private schools are also eligible to select students for the program.

Because of the school's popularity, almost three times more students than can be accepted apply for spots in the performing arts section, Fischer said.

The program, which is directed by Hope Tyler of the Governor's office, is jointly sponsored by the Governor's office, the State Department of Public Instruction and the University.

ENTERTAINMENT

In this scene from the Brandywiners' production of "The Most Happy Fella," Tony, sung by Harold Pfeffer, explains how he met his love in San Francisco to his friend Joe, sung by Brad Yount.

Frank Loesser's glorious, comic and love-filled musical, "The Most Happy Fella" will be the Brandywiners offering this year at the Longwood Gardens Open Air Theater.

This is the kind of a show that is just "made" for Longwood. It is large in every dimension — the music, the story, the outdoor setting of the Napa Valley, the love — and large on songs which became so very popular with a whole generation on both sides of the Atlantic. Many of us still remember "Standing on the Corner Watching All the Girls Go By" and they tell me that "Big D" is still very popular in a particular Texas city. I can't guess why!

There are some beautiful production numbers in this musical, too. Coming to mind first are "Abbondanza" and "Sposalizio." Then there is the very tender "Mama, Mama" which never fails to bring a tear or two. And, of course, we must never overlook the title song. I was lucky enough to see Robert Weede in the original production and still have most pleasant memories of the evening at the Imperial.

"Most Happy Fella" borders on the operatic. Weede was a star of the Metropolitan Opera and he was selected for the lead. Columbia Records did the original cast album, and because of the very special quality of the music also issued the complete show on three LPs. Quite a departure for those days.

Now we have the opportunity to see it all again, enjoy it all again in the lovely setting of the outdoor stage at Longwood Gardens near Kennett Square, Pa. The Brandywiners have a great cast headed by Harold Pfeffer as Tony, Janean Clare as Rosabella, Brad Yount as Joe, Carolyn Hildenbrand as Cleo and Joe Kinsolving as Herman. No production would be complete without the Brandywiners chorus and dance company; both will have plenty to do in "Most Happy Fella."

Julian Borris is the stage director, Anna Marie Leo is the choreographer and Evelyn Swenson will be the music director. The Brandywiners are going all

THE ARTS

by Phil Toman

out on this one.

When the show opened in 1956 it was named best musical of the season. It has not tarnished with age. Its music is still as vibrant and alive as the love story it tells. Frank Loesser based the show on Sidney Howard's book "They Knew What They Wanted." It is one of those dying breed of shows that supplied the audience with top-tapping love songs and themes you could whistle after you left the Imperial. You can't hardly not never find them kind no more! "The Most Happy Fella" will be offered July 24, 25, 26, 31 and Aug. 1 and 2. As The NewArk Post goes to press, the July 26 performance is already sold out. You might wish to act quickly before the rest of the performances are, too.

The tickets are $10. That is quite a bargain when you realize that the one ticket gets you into four Longwood Gardens at 4 p.m., admits you to the show at 8:30 p.m. and then offers you fountain displays after "The Most Happy Fella." That should make us all "Most Happy Theater Goers." I wonder if Broadway would take a hint from that? I won't hold my breath.

You may order tickets by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope and payment to The Brandywiners, Ltd., P.O. Box 248, Montchanin, Del. 19710.

ENTERTAINMENT

Mitchell-Ruff Duo to perform July 18

The Mitchell-Ruff Duo will perform July 18 in Newark.

The Mitchell-Ruff Duo, an internationally-renowned jazz combo, will perform Friday, July 18 at the University of Delaware.

The concert will begin at 8:15 p.m. in the Bacchus Theatre of Perkins Student Center on Academy Street. Tickets are $7 for the general public and $3 for University students.

Pianist Dwiki Mitchell and bassist and French horn player Willie Ruff have been performing together since 1955, when they left Lionel Hampton's band to strike on their own.

But the combo's real origins go back even earlier — to 1947, when they were servicemen stationed at Lockbourne Air Force Base, near Columbus, Ohio. Mitchell, a 17-year-old pianist with the unit band, needed a bass player for an air force radio show, and he saw a likely candidate in the newly arrived Ruff, who at that time only played the French horn. "He was just a kid, 16 years old," Mitchell recalls, "with a lot of hair, fire-engine red, practically down to his eyebrows. But he had all this energy, and he was eager to learn, so I taught him. Every time he made a mistake I said, 'You got to stand in the corner,' and he hated that, and he'd scream and holler — he had the loudest scream you ever heard. But he never made the same mistake again."

Ruff has been a fast learner ever since, with no visible loss of energy, and the friendship that was formed in 1947 between two small-town Southerners — Mitchell is from Florida, Ruff from Alabama — has deepened over the years into the warmest collaboration, one that has taken them to the top of their profession and to many corners of the world.

It was the Mitchell-Ruff Duo that introduced jazz to the Soviet Union, in 1959, playing and teaching at conservatories in Leningrad, Moscow, Kiev, Yalta, Sochi and riga. And it was the Mitchell-Ruff Duo that brought jazz to China, in 1981, playing and teaching at conservatories in Shanghai and Peking.

Before the first trip Ruff taught himself Russian, his seventh language, and before the second trip he learned Chinese, thereby enabling himself to explain to his listeners, in their own language, the roots and lineage of American jazz, with Mitchell demonstrating on the piano. Teaching and learning have been strong currents in the lives of both men.

When the Mitchell-Ruff Duo was formed in 1955 it had the advantage, Ruff recalls, of being the least expensive group in jazz, and it was therefore booked as the second act with the best and most expensive bands of the day — Dizzy Gillespie, Louis Armstrong, Duke Ellington, Count Basie — in Birdland, the Embers, the Village Vanguard, Basin Street East and other leading nightclubs. They were all riding the crest of one of the most popular eras in jazz, an era that would soon end with the advent of rock and the dominance of television.

Main St. merchants build momentum

Momentum, as any junior Mary Albert can tell you, is the key to victory in the sports world. But it is also essential to success in the world at large.

That is why, following the highly popular Newark Night festival in June, there was concern that the city's Main Street merchants would fall to follow up on their obvious triumph.

But the merchants, under the aegis of the Newark Business Association, have taken the initiative to keep the momentum driving. They, better than anyone, understand the need to build upon the Newark Night foundation to continue to reacquaint area residents with the downtown business district.

Currently, the NBA is working to revive its Sidewalk Days as a major event. The promotion is scheduled Aug. 15-16 and early plans call for a variety of colorful activities, much in the spirit of Newark Night.

We wish the NBA good luck with the strenuous planning necessary for a successful event, planning which will help them maintain their Main Street momentum.

Newark parks a credit

July is National Parks and Recreation Month and a time when Newarkers should rejoice in the wealth of lovely parks and wonderful recreational opportunities in and around our hometown.

From horseback riding at Carpenter State Park on Del. 896, to boating at Lum's Pond State Park near Kirkwood, to musical entertainment at New Castle County's Carousel Farm off Limestone Road, the activities are endless.

Newarkers take special pride in our own Department of Parks and Recreation, one which is innovative, energetic and always looking for that one new program which will better serve the community.

The range of courses and programs offered by director Jim Hall's department is truly impressive. Theater troupes, clowns, dance, the Newark Community Band, tot lots, boating and the educational Safety Town for kids. The list goes on, and on, and on.

Department horticulturalist Rick Colbert has earned national recognition — and made Newark a better place to live — by sprucing up our traffic islands.

And the city's parks are plentiful and well-maintained. Two — Dickey and Wilson — even have swimming pools.

Currently, the department is giving thought to linking several of its parks with a hiking trail, and it is just that kind of creative thought which keeps the city in the forefront of the parks and recreation field.

The other day, my four-year-old son Noah decided that he had had enough of his plastic, three-key typewriter. He was now ready for the real thing — mom and dad's electric.

Noah likes it, even if it is an anachronism in this day and age when every other Superkid has his or her own computer terminal, color screen and daisy wheel printer. He stands atop a chair and types away, finding the letters which make up his first name and proudly hunt-and-peck N-O-A-H.

One particular day he typed both his name and that of his brother, A-D-A-M, and brought his paper over to me. I was busy reading one magazine or another, and just kind of nodded approval. Then Noah asked, "You know what I want to be when I grow up? I looked up, wondering what was coming. He loves baseball, and fairly worships his Uncle Bill, a police officer.

"What? I asked. "A news 'porter."

I laughed. That was about the last thing on my mind, and the answer caught me unawares. But it was rewarding to think that he wanted to follow in our footsteps, his mother and I having met while working on a newspaper.

And it set me to thinking, because this is my 10th anniversary in this business of newspapering, a business which can provide both the highest of legal highs and the lowest of bearable lows. Sometimes all in the course of one day.

It can provide the deadening boredom of sitting through meeting after meeting when you know full well even the people who have to be there don't really want to be. And it can provide the opportunity to sit in on dynamic debates of the most important of public policy issues.

It can provide access to the dullest of deadheads, but also to the most interesting and colorful people, some mighty and some powerless, but all excited and exciting.

It can mean long days of exasperation when you can't confirm that one last detail to complete a story, when sources won't talk to you on or off the record, when people threaten to come in to the office and punch your lights out. And it can mean the intense exhilaration of having that important source really trust you, piecing together that story, and really punching out an article that might possibly, if anyone reads it, do just a little bit to help make the community a better place to live.

The rewards are great. So great that not too many newspaper people are willing to give up the business — the life, if you will — despite their constant bellyaching about low pay, weird hours and weird people, both in the newsroom and in the community.

Do you really want to know how many potatoes I have seen that someone thought looked like Richard Nixon during his first term? Okay, so they did bear a slight resemblance....

There have been the wrestling bears, the circus pro who was shot from guns, the reporter who tried to fake a conversation in Spanish with a woman in Texas to find out why her boss wanted to fire people's remains into outer space. Honest!

I have to admit a personal fondness for the oddness of it all. It's like having an orchestra seat on the comic opera of life.

The fact is, the ink gets in your blood. That's what my mentors — J. Clark Samuel, the oldest living alumnus of the Wilmington Morning News, and Don Herring, the editor of the Cecil Whig — told me during my first week on the job, fresh out of the University of Delaware. They were right.

The ink has gotten into my blood, and I don't think it will ever come out. India ink, I sup-

POSTSCRIPT

by Neil Thomas

I enjoy working on a newspaper. It's a job where I really do get to try to make society a little better, to improve on life just a hair. Journalists are generally seen as crusty pessimists, but underneath the outer shell most are really optimists, believing that things can indeed be improved. At least, that's how this reporter sees it.

So if my kid wants to grow up to be a news 'porter, that's perfectly fine with me.

COVER STORY

A smiling Rand Townley of Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Co. shows Safety Town participants that a fully-dressed fire fighter is nothing to be afraid of.

SAFETY/ from 1a

•Visits by volunteers from Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder co. of Newark, who showed the children a fire truck and an ambulance. On Monday, fire fighter Rand Townley dressed up in full gear — including face mask and oxygen tank — to familiarize the children with the look of a working fire fighter. Aetna's Jeff Evans pointed out to the children that the hissing of Townley's gear sounded much like a snake, but that they should not be afraid of the sound if they are caught in a blazing building. Then, he said,

"that hissing sound is your friend."
Draper said the main emphasis of the Aetna presentation "is on not being afraid of the (fire fighters). They're there to help."
"We have the children watch them put their equipment on," she added, "so they will see that it's a person, not someone from outer space."
•Talks by local nurses and physicians, who explained the "Yuch" and "Yum" symbols which are found on bottle labels to prevent accidental poisoning.
•A ride on a school bus to let children know just what it is like. "It's a big step for a youngster to get acquainted with a bus," Draper said.

Children were also given information about not talking to strangers, and saying "no" when they know something they are asked to do is wrong.
Safety Town is open to children ages 4-6. It began July 7 and will continue through Friday.
Draper said the program was initiated in 1979 by Kent Perkins, former recreation administrator for the City of Newark.
"He knew, as a parent and an administrator in the recreation field, that this seemed like a good idea," Draper said, adding "It's been extremely successful."

GRADES/ from 1a

"If we have no (tutoring) program, how can we terminate students' rights to participate in all school activities?" Evans asked. "There is planning we haven't done and statistics we don't have."
Oates went further, questioning the overall effects of increased standards on students who are not talented academically.
"I think students should be made to do the best they can possibly do," she said, "but I will harp, and I will harp and I will harp that we have many students for whom a D is the best that they can do. Are we going to deny them (extra-curricular opportunities) because they were not fortunate enough to be born to be A students?"
Boyd, former board president and a strong proponent of higher standards, said that each board member had to decide for himself or herself whether or not extra-curricular activities are a right or a privilege.

"I believe they are a privilege," she said. "I believe our responsibility as a board is to provide students with an education, to give them every opportunity to devote time to the curriculum...If a student is having such a hard time making grades that he can't maintain a 2.0, it is clear that his time would be better spent on his studies than in those activities."
Superintendent Dr. Michael W. Walls expressed general support for increased standards, but said the entire question is a difficult one.
Citing the excellence movement in Texas, where students were required to reach a certain academic level of achievement before they could participate in extra-curricular activities, Walls said the dropout rate has swelled to 40 percent as a direct result of the standards.
"The question is," he said,

"does the extra effort these students put in to perform outweigh the negative effects on the kids we lose? There is real potential for some downside here."
Walls said he hopes Christina will establish a "real accountability program where kids on (academic) probation end up with a counselor where the opportunities (for improvement) are clearly delineated."

naments," said Glasgow High School graduate Michelle Brock, who was part of the 1984 team which finished ninth in the country. "Even though I've graduated I want to keep playing and a lot of my friends play on the team. It's just a lot of fun."

Although Greer stresses skills during practice sessions, he realizes the need to keep the game enjoyable. A constant barrage of teasing and kidding erupts during practice, and it is directed at all participants, including Greer. The result is a very relaxed but tightly knit ball club that has developed a solid chemistry. "We work hard but basically we're just trying to have a good time and win," said Tina Ruiz a graduate of Newark High School. "We get along real well and it's fun."

"I just enjoy working with the kids," said Greer. "The girls come out and there's no disciplinary problems. The kids just want to play ball."

And play they do. This weekend they will be travelling to Lynchburg, Va. to play in the ASA regionals tournament. If they finish in the top three at Lynchburg, they will qualify for the national championships.

For the girls, the opportunity to travel and play against the best in the country makes all the hard work worthwhile. "It's fun to go away with everyone and stay in hotels," said Brock. "You get a lot of experience playing a lot of different teams, and it was one of the best feelings I've ever had when we won in Idaho two years ago."

Regarding their chances for this season, Greer is optimistic. "If they play together their chances are good," he said. "We're starting to play better and if we continue to improve our play we'll be competitive."

Court repairs

The Christina Board of Education voted six-love July 8 to repair tennis courts at Christiana and Glasgow high schools.

The courts are deteriorating, and Assistant Superintendent Dr. F. Neil Walz said quick action is required to prevent serious problems. "If we do something now we can do it at a reasonable cost," he said, "but if we wait a year, the cost will double or triple."

Walz added that the Newark High School tennis courts are "beyond repair" and are closed to play.

Asked by board member Carole A. Boyd of Fairfield when the school district will rebuild the Newark High courts, Walz said money is being budgeted for reconstruction next year.

The work at Christiana and Glasgow will be performed by American Tennis Courts Inc.

Alderman

Readies Nissan

George Alderman Racing of New Castle has completed work on its new Nissan 300ZX Turbo. The team will test the car July 22 at Lime Rock Park, Conn., with additional testing at a later date.

The car will compete in its first race Aug. 24 at the IMSA Camel GT 500-mile event at Road America in Elkhart Lake, Wis. The Alderman team skipped IMSA races in June and July in favor of completing the new car.

Alderman continues as the team's lead driver. In addition to Road America, Alderman will race the new Nissan at Lime Rock (Sept. 1), Watkins Glen, N.Y. (Sept. 21), Columbus (Oct. 5), and Daytona Beach (Oct. 26). The Nissan 300ZX Turbo is sponsored by CAM2 and Alderman Nissan.

Stars

Babe Ruth squads

The Newark Babe Ruth League 13-year-old All-Star teams began the double elimination state tournament over the weekend, with the Newark Central team splitting a pair and the Newark Prep team losing twice and thus being eliminated from competition.

The Newark Central team dropped their opening round game to Elsmere 4-3 in eight innings before bouncing back to defeat the Newark Prep team 12-1. Newark Central's Rob Callahan picked up the victory against the Newark prep team, which ironically was knocked out by a team from its own league.

The Newark Prep team dropped its opening round game to the Wilmington Babe Ruth All-Stars 6-3.

Sickle Cell Classic

The Brandywine Professional Association will sponsor the ninth Sickle Cell Tennis Classic on Aug. 1-3 and 7-10 in Wilmington.

The event takes place annually, during two weekends in August to raise funds for Howard University College of Medicine's Center for Sickle Cell Disease. BPA has raised more than $40,500 for the Center over the past four years.

BPA expects about 300 amateur and professional tennis players to participate in this year's tournament, equaling 1985 numbers.

They will play matches with winners to be declared in beginners (2.5), intermediate (3.5), advanced intermediate (4.5), open, and seniors 45 and over. Singles, doubles, and mixed doubles matches for each category will also be held.

Matches are played on many local courts, with finals held on the Rodney Courts. An added event this year is the inclusion of singles matches for age 16 and under. The open portion of the tournament is sanctioned by the United States Tennis Association.

There will also be two fundraising social activities designed to broaden support for this important event. The first will be a Sickle Cell Celebrity Match featuring local celebrities on Aug. 1 at Penn Oaks Tennis Club.

In addition, there will also be a Sickle Cell Social Night at the Delaware Theater Company on Aug. 2. The latter will feature an evening of dining and dancing, capped off by a silent auction of art from local and national artists.

All proceeds will be used to further research for eradicating sickle cell disease.

For details, write BPA, P.O. Box 1387, Wilmington, Del. 19899.

walked a few batters and that put the pressure on their defense to make the plays."

Down 5-2, Newark American mounted their own rally in the bottom of the fourth. With the bases loaded and one out, Bedford drilled a ball to left center which had double written all over it. But Canal centerfielder Ryan Fellin, who had made several fine catches earlier in the game, made a sensational running catch to rob Newark American of at least two runs and possibly three.

Although one run scored on the play, the catch took the wind out of the rally as the next batter filed out to right.

"Their centerfielder kept them in the ballgame," said Broomall. "I'm sure we out hit them (5-2) but he made the catches that made the difference. If he doesn't make that one play then we win the game."

According to Weisgerber, Canal had some trouble last year with the structure of the Newark National field's warning track. This year the coaches took several precautions and spent time during practice with the outfielders hoping to acclimate them to the strange field. Since Bedford's ball was a warning track rope, the extra practice paid off.

"We had them out here earlier because we were afraid of the effect of the cinder warning track," said Weisgerber. "We're not used to having that type of warning track and the boys felt it was the beginning of the fence."

Because the tournament is double elimination, both teams will

National all-stars advance

The Newark National Little League All-Stars advanced into the winner's bracket of the double-elimination district tournament with a 5-0 victory over New Castle on Saturday morning at National's George Clark Field on Possum Park Road.

Winning pitcher Mark Steele hurled a two hitter and struck out 13 batters without allowing a walk. Offensively, Steele led the way with three singles and one run batted in. He also scored a run.

Derek Rubini contributed with a two run single.

Newark National was scheduled to face Stanton-Newport on Tuesday and, depending on the results of the game, will play again either Thursday or Saturday.

continue to play. Their next game was to be played on Tuesday night. With the victory on Saturday, Canal advanced into the winner's bracket while Newark American dropped to the loser's bracket, where they face elimination with another loss.

Yet, that was the same path that the defending state champions took last year after dropping the second game of the tournament.

"It puts us into the loser's bracket, which is single elimination. That makes it tough," said Broomall. "But we're used to that and we feel pretty confident that we can do it."

Blood Bank opens new office in Stanton

Blood Bank of Delaware has moved its blood center, laboratories and administrative offices from University Office Plaza in Newark to its newly constructed headquarters building near Stanton.

The move was accomplished on July 4 and regular donor appointments were scheduled at the new site beginning Monday afternoon, July 7.

The first donor at the new blood center was Robert H. Bolling Jr., president of the Welfare Foundation which donated the five acres of land for the Blood Bank's new building. That gift was the cornerstone of the Blood Bank's capital campaign which funded the construction.

The second donor was William J. Miller Jr., immediate past president of the Blood Bank, under whose direction the building project was initiated.

The new site is located on Del. 4 across from the Christiana Hospital and directly in front of Blue Cross and Blue Shield's Health Maintenance Organization. The 1½ story building covers 20,000 square feet and nearly doubles the size of the University Plaza facilities it replaces. Those facilities had been rented since 1974.

Key operational areas have been expanded at the new building to accommodate additional equipment and staff. For example, the donor room provides space for up to 10 donor couches. Six were crowded into the former site. The laboratories have been expanded for the additional refrigerators, freezers and testing equipment needed to process or store the increased amount of blood needed daily for distribution to hospitals. The Blood Bank's computer system has been expanded as has the classroom space needed to train staff and conduct community education programs.

The new site has a garage to house administrative and delivery vehicles, and an enlarged storage area will allow for bulk purchasing of supplies.

The building was designed for efficiency and utility. A recovery system will use the heat given off by the freezer and refrigerator compressors or radiated by the sun into the central atrium to warm other areas of the building during cooler periods.

The intent of the design by architects Greenhouse, Kriedler, Nahrgang, is to provide a tranquil place to give blood by bringing the outdoors inside. Donors enter into a large waiting area covered by a massive skylight. The walkway into the donor waiting area is lined with plants, trees and shrubs, much like a park. The result is a comfortable experience for donors and visitors.

General contractor for the construction was Nowland Associates of Newark.

Cost of the new facility was $1.85 million and was entirely funded through the capital campaign conducted by the Blood Bank. More than $700,000 was donated to that fund-raising program by more than 35,000 individual members of the Blood Bank.

Major contributions were also made by the Welfare Foundation which, in addition to the five acre building site, donated $50,000. Another $250,000 was donated by the Longwood Foundation; $230,000 by E.I. duPont de Nemours & Co.; and $100,000 by the Blood Bank's board of directors and staff. More than 300 Delaware businesses and foundations made contributions to the building program.

Blood bank membership now stands at 138,000 families that total 450,000 people covered by the blood assurance plan.

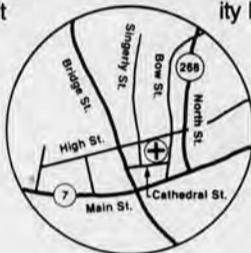

The Blood Bank annually draws more than 36,000 units of blood at its three permanent donor centers and bloodmobile. More than 11,000 patients in Delaware hospitals need blood transfusions each year.

In addition to the new Stanton site, other donor centers are located at 913 Market Mall, Wilmington and 215 Dover Street, Dover. Blood donations are by appointment only for the convenience of donors. Appointments can be made by calling 737-8400.

Union Hospital is proud to announce the opening of its new addition, the William A. Shelton Memorial Center. Responding to the unprecedented growth in Outpatient services, we've designed our new facility to meet these crucial needs.

Please join us at the opening celebration and learn what's new during a tour of our facility, Saturday, July 19, 1986 from 12 noon to 3 p.m. Refreshments will be served. We're still the same hospital that's given you quality health care for over 75 years, but now we're something more!

WEDDING

Nadel, Baker wed

Laurie Ellen Nadel of Cherry Hill, N.J. and Ronald Vincent Baker of Newark were married May 18 at the Sheraton Poste Inn in Cherry Hill.

Their parents are Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Nadel of Cherry Hill and Mr. and Mrs. E. Vincent Baker of Newark.

The bride is a graduate of Cherry Hill High School East and the University of Delaware and is a credit analyst for MBank USA, Wilmington.

A graduate of Newark High School and the University of Delaware, the groom is a reporter for WILM-Newsradio.

The couple will live in Newark. The maid of honor was Maria Nadel of Phoenix, AZ. The bridesmaids were Johanna Levitt, Debbi Bass, and Christiana Melniotis. The best man was Robert McCall Jr. of Fredrica, DE. The ushers were William H. Clark Jr., Russell Nadel, and Wesley Cross.

Officiating were Rev. J. Calvin Alt and Rabbi Shimon L. Berris.

Recently while lunching with Lydia at Bamberger's, we eavesdropped on the following conversation between a mother and her adolescent daughter:

"Maryanne, I just heard that the boy in the next block has saved almost a thousand dollars. Why don't you save something? You know, having a savings account with more than $14.35 is a sign of real maturity."

"Oh, for heaven's sakes, Mom. It's probably easy for him to save, he doesn't HAVE to shop."

"HAVE to shop? What does that mean? Is it a form of compulsive behavior? Is it a genetic characteristic like blue eyes? If so, is it dominant like naturally curly hair or recessive like having twins?"

I began thinking. One delightful, soft-spoken and charming young lady that I am personally acquainted with showed signs of a dominant, obsessive shopping gene even before she was tall enough to hand money to the lady behind the cash register at the toy store.

On her fifth birthday she was given six brand new, crisp dollar bills (one for each year and one to grow on) by generous grandparents. Opting to visit Woolworth's before making a deposit in the piggy bank, the child in question spent $3 on a doll outfit, $1 on nail polish with genuine gold flecks in it, 75 cents on two red barretts, and $1.10 on a plastic mug with Snoopy as its handle.

If my calculations are correct, there was 15 cents left for the piggy bank. Right? Wrong! A nickle gumball machine stood sentinel by the door. And that machine, ladies and gentlemen, gobbled up, without so much as a by-your-leave, the remaining 15 cents.

According to three early childhood and merchandising experts that I consulted, this child has all the characteristics of becoming a Significant Shopper.

What makes a Significant Shopper? Money helps. It, however, isn't absolutely crucial. Significant Shoppers like to shop but don't feel compelled to buy things. Buyers are a separate and distinct subcategory which will be covered in a later column.

Given her druthers, a Significant Shopper prefers to buy things, but if there isn't any cash on hand, then strolling through a mall, checking on the stores, handling the goods, trying things on, thinking about them, keeping track of prices at competing businesses, chatting with the clerks — who they know on a first name basis — and staying abreast on the merchandising scene is a satisfactory alternative.

HOMEFRONT

by Dorothy Hall

Several Significant Shoppers confided in me that some of their most pleasant Saturdays have been spent at a mall where the only things they bought were french fries and a large cherry soda.

According to popular mythology, Significant Shoppers, especially major league ones, are almost always women. If you think that being a shopper is like having a high metabolism, something all us low metabolism people yearn for, I suppose that is a compliment to our sex. However, if you, like most people, think that shoppers are weak, vain and frivolous people, then I have some surprising statistics for you.

Major League Shopping — anything more than $3,250 — is a predominantly male preserve. Get yourself into any classy car dealer and see who is kicking the tires and fondling the dashboards? Women don't hang around Porsche showrooms and haggle with the dealer about wire wheels. Smart women, Significant Shopper or not, hang around Porsche owners.

And what about boat shows? Who studies and scrutinizes yachts and 39-foot sail boats? Not the ladies. They are looking at the upholstery and wondering if it resists stains and how it would work on the porch furniture they saw last week.

Personally, I think that the shopper's gene deserves considerably more study and research. Is it recessive? Is it dominant? Is it sex-linked? How do people who have the shopper's gene manage in a non-materialistic society? Do they sublimate it and become monks?

Finally, how does a mother of a child with a dominant, obsessive shopper's gene ever get her daughter out of the mall before it closes?

Fire tip

Know escape routes

Everyone knows to be aware of fire exits in their own homes. It's important to know your way out quickly in case of fire. But what would you do if a fire occurs while you're shopping in a department store, visiting your dentist, watching a movie in a theater or attending a musical, concert or play in a crowded auditorium?

Experience tells the Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Co. that you would get out the only way you remember — the way you came in. That reaction is typical and deadly.

In a theatre, for instance, all patrons trickle in through one door near the ticket taker. If the theatre is full, a fire occurs and everyone tries to get out the way they came in, obviously they all won't fit. Fear may then cause people to panic and push and shove. Injuries occur; people are trampled. This compounds an already serious situation.

Instead, when you enter any public building, check out the exits. Note where they are and keep track of the ones nearest you. Make this a habit and teach your children to check out exits too.

CPR

Rescuer course

A basic rescuer course will be offered by Union Hospital of Cecil County staff members for the general public 6-10 p.m. Monday and Tuesday, July 21 and 22.

The program is to benefit people who have never had a cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) course. However, anyone with a medical or coronary history that may be aggravated by active, physical exertion should consult with their physician before registering.

The course includes background information about heart disease, risk factors, prudent heart living, and heart and lung function. One-and-two rescuer CPR, foreign body airway obstruction management, and pediatric resuscitation will also be taught.

The cost is $15 per person. To register, send your name, address, daytime telephone number and check for $15, made out to Union Hospital or call Lori Grimes, R.N., Union Hospital Staff Education Department, Bow Street, Elkton, Md. 21921. Deadline for registration is today, Wednesday, July 16.

Preparing safe summer barbecues

The savory smells of sizzling steak, barbecued chicken and grill-cooked burgers — what summer celebration is complete without these?

Barbecuing has been a long-time favorite for meat preparation, and it continues to grow in popularity, according to Debbie Amsden, University of Delaware extension home economist.

But along with the summer heat comes the increased risk of microorganisms that can cause food poisoning. Amsden offers several safety precautions to help reduce food-poisoning risks.

Prepare all foods in a clean area with well-washed hands and utensils. Keep all foods refrigerated until preparation or grilling time. If meats are to be marinated, do so in a glass or plastic container in the refrigerator for a minimum of six to eight hours before cooking. Turn the meat at least once to let the flavors penetrate.

The grill itself should be kept clean and free of food particles. To prepare the grill for cooking, rinse it in warm water then coat it with a non-stick vegetable spray. Or lightly rub the grill with vegetable oil to make clean-up easier and to help keep food from sticking. Thoroughly wash the grill in hot water and soap after each use.

When building the fire, be sure it is hot enough to properly cook the meat. "A good rule is to use 30 quets to grill one pound of meat," Amsden advises. "Cook all meats at a low to moderate temperature unless a recipe indicates otherwise."

To judge the temperature of the fire, hold your hand at the cooking height, palm side down. "Count the number of seconds you can hold your hand in that position before the heat forces you to pull it away. At low to moderate temperatures you should be able to hold your hand over the heat for four or five seconds," the home economist says.

AAUW's Harder says women are re-entering colleges

"A major demographic change in today's society is the emergence of re-entry women in higher education and in the job market upon completion of their degree or certificate," according to Sarah Harder, president of the 175,000-member American Association of University Women. She indicated that most re-entry women report they return to school and enter the labor force because of economic necessity.

Harder, an administrator at the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire, was in Hazelton, Pa., to address the conference of the Middle Atlantic Region of AAUW. The two-day meeting (June 27-29) at Pennsylvania State University drew participants from five states—Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania—and from the District of Columbia.

Attending from the Newark branch were Gail Ames, Joan Collins, Hilda Davis, Annette Gruber and Ethel Hines.

Harder urged the members to renew their activism on behalf of educational equity for women, as well as issues affecting both the homemaker and the employed woman.

She reported that AAUW testified at the April 30 information hearings held by the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources. The Committee is looking at issues affecting women who are in transition from one role in their life to another, such as those who have interrupted education after high school or jobs and are resuming either after a lapse of years.

Speaking of the millions of women re-entering higher education, Harder termed them "good news for higher education institutions, for American society and for the economy."

"Even when attending part-time and tending to family and work duties, reentry women outperform younger students by earning higher grade point averages and having higher completion rates for courses," she said. "Women re-entering education are achievers. They are motivated, dedicated and bright."

"Thus, the re-entry woman student provides the best capital investment our country can make now and in the future," said Harder, "given the need for an educated America and expanded ability in the scientific and technological marketplace."

"In striving to achieve their full potential, women can find themselves in the position of being reentry students for several reasons," Harder said. She told of her own experience 22 years ago when she was a single mother with two children and no child support. She was one of the more fortunate, for her parents agreed to sustain her and the children while she completed college.

Today, women are also returning to college to work toward financial security after death of a spouse or to prepare for a career change or entering the job market after absence of some years.

Among the barriers to achieving the full potential of reentry women students cited by Harder are:

- Making part-time students with less than six hours of courses ineligible for federal student aid.
- Failing to consider child care costs in calculating their aid.
- Discouraging those who receive Aid to Families with Dependent Children. Such women find themselves in a Catch-22 situation since student financial aid is often counted as income, so they lose AFDC needed for subsistence or financial aid.

"In short," Harder said, "such a student faces a stark choice. She can go to school and thereby increase her chances for economic self-sufficiency, or she can feed her children."

Among the recommendations for corrective action proposed by Harder are amendments to the Higher Education Act of 1965 that would:

- Fund additional research and data on students and student aid recipients, including information on gender, age, families, disability, and ethnic background.
- Amend student aid policy to assure that child care costs are accurately reflected in a student's budget and in the accepted formula for cost-of-attendance.

- Allow AFDC recipients to be eligible for student financial aid without the threat of having subsistence income, medical and nutritional assistance withdrawn.
- Amend student aid policy so that women students are not penalized and denied financial aid due to family and work responsibilities.

STEER THIS WAY

By:
John Mascher

Investigate the extinguisher for your car. A box of baking soda in the glove compartment. Even better, carry a real extinguisher approved for use on gasoline fires.

Why is wearing seat belts safer than being thrown clear? Because if a person goes through the windshield or is thrown out the door, the result is more certain to be severe injury.

Remember, oil changes may result in piston ring and valve guide ring wear to the manufacturer's recommended schedule or interval.

Starting in January, the lead content of gasoline will be reduced by 90 percent in response to a ruling by the United States Environmental Protection Agency. In a few years, leaded gas may disappear altogether.

Watch your gas mileage. If your car needs a tuneup, you could be using as much as 71 percent more fuel than you should.
