FREE CIRCUS TICKETS FOR NEWARK CHILDREN

Colonel Walter Bradley To Act Host To 200 Newark Children At Afternoon Performance Of Downing Bros.' Circus

Philadelphia Philanthropist, Who Spent Childhood In Newark, Asks Newark Post To Cooperate In Giving Circus Party; Children Under 12 Eligible; Mrs. Everett Johnson, Mrs. A. D. Cobb, Mrs. W. A. Wilkinson—Committee To Receive Names

Not A Charity Party, Wants To Enjoy The Company Of Children At A Circus; Teachers, Parents, Children Urged To Send Names To Committee Members Or The Newark Post

FURTHER DETAILS NEXT WEEK

Newark boys and girls are to have a real treat. A Philadelphia business man, who once lived here, has a warm spot in his heart for our dear old town and an understanding of the things that thrill boys and girls, and knows that "going to a circus" rates very high in that list of thrills. But we shall let Mr. Bradley's letter, received at this office last Saturday morning, speak for itself:

Philadelphia, Pa.
August 26, 1927.

Mrs. Everett C. Johnson, Editor
The Newark Post
Newark, Del.

My dear Mrs. Johnson:

I note that Downing Bros. Circus is coming to Newark on Thursday, September 8th. From the enclosed clipping you will note that my early days were spent in Newark, Del., and nothing gave me more joy and pleasure than to attend a circus performance, with the many other boys in Newark.

I am very anxious and desirous to experience again my boyhood pleasure—and it is my intention to come to Newark on the above date and attend the performance given by the Downing Bros. as per their "ad" in your paper. I understand they are going to have three big rings, and wild animals, and it occurred to me that you could round up in Newark a number of kiddies who would join me in going to the circus, boys and girls, white and colored, for the 2 o'clock performance. If I can get you and a couple of other Newark ladies to take charge of the kiddies, as we do on like occasions when attending a performance in Philadelphia, I would be very pleased to have you do so, and make the selection.

If you will join me in giving the kiddies referred to above this treat, I would be very pleased to have you do so and I will bear all the expense connected with the same, and Mrs. Bradley will be with me on this occasion, and I am sure we will all have a most enjoyable time.

With kindest regards, and awaiting your reply, I am
Very truly yours
Walter T. Bradley.

The above letter tells its own story. Here is a man who would like again to experience one of the thrills of his boyhood, and who is wise enough to know that he can gain that experience only in the presence of young people.

In a telephone conversation and in a second letter, Mr. Bradley has stated that he does not mean that these children must necessarily be poor, unable to pay admission to the circus; to use his own words, he wishes "to give the children the treat just because they are children, and want to go to this circus." He thinks that no child of working age should apply, and that two hundred would be a safe number to handle.

Mrs. Johnson has been fortunate in securing the services of Mrs. A. D. Cobb, on West Main street, and Mrs. W. A. Wilkinson, of South College avenue, as her assistants in rounding up the kiddies. Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Cobb and Mrs. Wilkinson have agreed to be at their respective homes on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons, September 6 and 7, between the hours of one to four o'clock, standard time, and will be glad to take the names of any boy or girl, white or colored, up to twelve years of age. The list of those names will be kept and Mr. and Mrs. Bradley, with the three above-mentioned assistants, will be at the circus tent an hour before the afternoon performance, to give the children their tickets.

It will be impossible to promise that these people will take personal care of small children. They will do all that they can, but can accept no responsibility. Older children or parents in charge of these little ones, will have to pay for admission.

The committee asks that every reader of The Newark Post will encourage little children to give their names in promptly. Sunday-school teachers, school teachers and parents are asked to cooperate, in order that there may be little confusion and few disappointments.

There are many times two hundred children in the community, and it is important that the circus-loving child should step along early.

Watch next Wednesday's issue of this paper for further information.

Remember that Mr. Bradley's offer is for the afternoon performance only!

In another column we have reprinted a feature story from the Philadelphia Record of July 9, 1927, which tells something of what kind of a man Mr. Bradley is. He has a number of friends in this town and revisits the scenes of his boyhood life several times a year, always journeying here to the various meetings of the Sons of Delaware of Philadelphia.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bradley, came here after their marriage to the house now occupied by George W. Griffin on Main street. The family lived also at one time in the house where Marritz store now stands. At the time of the father's death they lived on the farm now owned by Hall Brothers, then known as the Bradley farm. At that time Mr. Bradley attended the Welsh Tract district school. He says that a man by the name of Smith taught the school and among his school mates were John T. Wilson, of Wilson's Station, and the Cooch "boys" (Wilkins and William, father and uncle of Francis A. and Edward Cooch).

His mother was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sloan, and a granddaughter of Dr. Thomas Sloan, a Revolutionary patriot. She was born at Strickersville, Pennsylvania, in 1813 and died in 1899. She was a devout member of Twentieth Street Church, in Philadelphia. She was buried in the Methodist Cemetery here. She spent thirty-five years of her life in widowhood.

Mr. Bradley's uncle, James Martin, built the Deer Park Hotel, the Red Men's Home and "Linden Hall."

When asked by telephone to tell us something of his school-days here, Mr. Bradley referred us to Miss M. Pennington, Newark's milliner, and Miss Pennington's bit of Newark history was very delightful. It seems that at that time there were two school buildings in the town, one of which still stands back of Walter Powell's restaurant; the other stood about opposite R. S. Gallaher's house.

The school children on the north side of Main street went to the first mentioned school; those living on the south side of the street went to the second school. These schools were, of course, ungraded, and one teacher in each school taught and disciplined the fifty or sixty pupils who attended.

Miss Pennington was herself only fifteen years of age when she taught in one of these schools. Her eyes twinkled when she was asked if she remembered Walter Bradley. "Oh, yes, indeed, he and Frank Cornog; they sat right on the front bench, because I had to watch them; they were full of mischief. I had to switch them most every day. When they brought me candy in the morning, I knew they were up to something. Probably they just wouldn't come in when I rang the recess bell; would when I rang the school bell; would stay out and play. But," she added, laughingly, "they weren't really bad, and I never did hurt them."

School Starts Sept. 12

At a meeting of the Newark Board of Education, held last night, was decided to open school on Monday, September 12. Next week will be given over to teachers' conferences, classification of pupils and registration.

Registration days and hours will be as follows:

September 2: Grade 12, 9 to 10 a. m.; grade 11, 10 to 11 a. m.; grade 10, 1:15 to 2:30 p. m.; grade 9, 2:30 to 3:30 p. m.

September 6: Grades 7 and 8, 1:15 p. m.

September 7: Grades 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6, 2:30 p. m.

Pupils entering grade 1, not having previously registered, will be registered on September 7 at 3:00 p. m.

Mann's Invention Boon To Canning Industry

New Device Rapidly Samples Catsup, Corn And Tomato Pulp; Assures Uniformity

Acting as a consulting chemist in mold work for the local cannery, Dr. Mann, of the University of Delaware, found a great need for a rapid sampling device and a specific gravity balance for standardizing tomato pulp, catsup and corn. He perfected such a device and put it into use in the local factory. The demand for the same became so great he further improved the device, placed it on the market and petitioned the U. S. Government for a patent on the same.

The apparatus consists of a rapid sampling device which delivers the boiling pulp, catsup or corn to a 500 cc. Pyrex volumetric flask carried in a unique holder which protects the operator from being scalded; after filling, the flask is weighed on an improved balance having a beam graduated to read in specific gravities instead of grams or ounces, (for both boiling pulp and catsup; also cold pulp and catsup at 20° C.) It is so rapid that the unskilled operator can take the boiling sample from the reducing vats, conduct it into the 500 cc. volumetric flask (without introducing air which makes for much error in specific gravity readings) and weigh the same on the balance determining the specific gravity in 15 to 20 seconds. This assures the operator the same specific gravity for all batches and a uniform product for either pulp or catsup. Over thirty of these outfits are in use in the State of Indiana. Within one year this device has been placed in every tomato canning district of importance in the United States. The U. S. Government has just granted Dr. Mann a patent on the outfit.

CHURCH SERVICES

The usual activities in several of the local churches will be resumed this Sunday after the pastors have returned from their vacations. Reverend D. W. Jacobs will occupy the pulpit of the Methodist Episcopal Church at the morning and evening services.

Dr. R. B. Mathews and his family returned yesterday from Maine. He will occupy the pulpit on Sunday morning at St. Thomas' Protestant Episcopal Church and the Holy Communion will be observed. There will be no Sunday school or evening service.

Services at St. John's R. C. Church will be conducted by Reverend P. A. Brennan at 7:30 and 9:30 a. m., and at 7:30 Sunday evening.

Dr. H. E. Hallman will be in the pulpit of the Presbyterian Church on Sunday, September 5. There will be no services or Sunday school this Sunday.

HEARING POSTPONED

The case of Dr. Charles W. Dunlevy, local dentist, against J. P. Wilson, for trespass and assault, which was to have been heard before Magistrate Thompson on Monday evening, has been indefinitely postponed. Dr. Dunlevy claims that, after a difference in words, Mr. Wilson knocked him down and hurt him painfully. Mr. Wilson claims that Dr. Dunlevy tried to choke him before he struck a blow in his own defense. Dr. Dunlevy is confined to his home because of his injuries. Mr. Wilson will be represented by J. Pearce Cann and David Rinehart.

Wilmington Fair Open On Labor Day

Expect Larger Variety And Number Of Entries Than Ever Before; University Exhibit A Feature

"Everything now indicates one of the most interesting Fairs ever held at the Elsmere grounds," said George K. Ball, president of the Agricultural Fair Association which will hold a six-day and six-night exhibition beginning on Monday, Labor Day. Mr. Ball said that late entries for many of the various exhibits had brought the number up to a much larger amount than had been anticipated and that he was very well pleased with the co-operation shown. To date there have been nearly eleven hundred separate entries in the Woman's Department.

Another department that is going to shine more brilliantly this year than ever before, is that devoted to farm machinery. There will be acres devoted to this exhibit.

The cattle exhibit will also be one of the most interesting of any cattle show. P. S. du Pont, Harry G. Haskell, The Caulk Company, Joseph Mitchell, John Govatos and St. Amour Farms will have herds of cattle in addition to several from Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The Flower Show will be very attractive to everyone who loves flowers. The exhibits will be both amateur and professional so that the home owner who has a little garden will not be placed in unfair competition with the professional who makes his living out of it.

The sheep and swine, the grain and forage, and the pigeon and pot stock will all have interesting exhibits.

There will be hundreds of chickens of almost as many classes in competition and there is a ten dollar gold piece offered for the turkey exhibited that weighs the most.

State Poultry Tour On October 19 and 20

Delaware Poultry Association Sponsors Several Events; Egg Record Report

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Delaware State Poultry Association, held last Wednesday at Dover, it was decided that there would be another State-wide poultry tour held this year and the dates for the tour were set for October 19 and 20. It will end with a meeting and banquet at Milford. The committee decided on the farms that would be visited.

It was also decided that the Association cooperate with the Milford Grange in conducting a State-wide Production Poultry Show on September 30 and October 1, at Milford.

The Delaware State Poultry Association will sponsor and arrange for a baby chick show to be held in connection with the State Corn Show in January.

Mr. H. S. Palmer, extension poultryman at the University of Delaware, gave the report for the Delaware Farm Egg Record Club for the month of July. 138 farms reported. The average number of eggs per pullet was 14.3; per hen, 15.5; per bird in mixed flocks, 14.2. The highest average was made by a flock of pullets with an average of 27 eggs per bird. The best flock of hens averaged 19.8 eggs per bird, and the high average for a mixed flock was 19.4 eggs per bird.

DR. FOSTER HAS FLATTERING OFFER

Dr. F. M. K. Foster, at one time a member of the faculty of the University of Delaware, taught at the summer school of the University of Washington at Seattle and was made the flattering offer of a full professorship in the English Department of that university. The University of Wisconsin, at Madison, countered the offer and Dr. Foster has decided to return here. The Fosters are at present touring through the Canadian Rockies and will return to Madison September 15.

Save The Surface

Two local organizations have recently added to the color and brightness of the community by judicious use of the paint brush. The Chamber of Commerce has had the signs, posted at the opposite limits of the town, repainted and re-worded. The new signs read: Newark, Delaware; State University; Population, 4,500.

The Trustees of the Newark Academy have had that historic building painted and repaired.

I. Newton Sheaffer and staff applied the brush in both cases.

Program Arranged For Red Men's Field Day

Annual Event Red Men's Home, September 10, Will Feature Music And Field Sports

At a meeting held in Wilmington, Saturday night, plans were completed for the annual Red Men's field day, to be held at the Red Men's Home on September 10. The exercises will commence at 2 o'clock and all the tribes in the State will participate.

Music and field events will feature the program. The Continental Band will provide music and Parkinson's Country Band will give comedy numbers. There will also be choral singing and fancy dancing. Thirty-four orphans of deceased members will be guests of the tribes.

Field sports will be a feature of the entertainment program for the day. There will be a 100-yard dash for men, another for women, and another for children; a potato race for boys, a bag race for men, a combination race test for men and women; a standing broad jump for men; a relay race for men and several other events. Prizes will be awarded to the winners of the various events. The members of the tribes will go to the home in automobiles furnished by the members of the various tribes.

There will be a large class adoption held in some hall in Wilmington prior to the session of the Great Council which meets there on October 26 and 27. One of the great chiefs of the Grand Council of the United States will be present. There will be a unique adoption by a tribe of the order from Philadelphia. This tribe will be attired in the original dress. The class will represent the entire state and similar meetings will be arranged in Kent and Sussex Counties, probably in Dover and Milford.

Great Sachem Robert C. Cantler has been assigned to arrange with all tribes and degrees of Pocahontas in northern Delaware and northwestern Maryland for the big Red Men parade to be held in Washington, D. C., in the latter part of October or the first part of November.

It is expected that several hundred members of the order from this state will take part in the parade.

WOMEN'S COLLEGE STUDENT APPLICATION EXCEEDS LIMIT

The Trustees of the University limited the number that might be enrolled at the Women's College to 320 in 1926. This affects students who commute just as much as those who live upon the campus, as it is a problem of class-room space and number of instructors more than it is a problem of housing students. Much concern is being felt by students who have registered late for fear they may not be admitted. It is to be hoped that the next Legislature will be able to make an appropriation for an additional recitation and laboratory building for the Department of Education, which will relieve this congestion.

FIREMEN TO PARADE

This week the Aetna Hose, Hook and Ladder Company will seek further honors for display and military formation, taking part in two parades.

Tonight 35 or 40 members, in uniform and with apparatus, will go to Delaware City to march. Tomorrow night they will go to North East, taking the Continental Band with them.

BARACCA AUXILIARY

The regular meeting of the Baracca Auxiliary of the Presbyterian Church will be held on Tuesday evening, September 6, at 7:30, in the lecture room of the church.

MEETING

The Newark Dairymaids will meet this evening in Odd Fellows Hall, immediately after the Degree of Pocahontas session.

Cooch's Bridge First Stop In Battle Of Brandywine Program

First Exercises Of Three Day Celebration To Be Held On Spot Where Flag Was First Unfurled; Three States Attending

HUNDREDS IN CARAVAN

It seems fitting that Cooch's Bridge has been selected as the first point at which exercises will be held in the three day celebration commemorating the Battle of the Brandywine. Cooch's Bridge was the scene of the first skirmish preceding the battle which took place along the Brandywine, at Chadd's Ford, and there is much conclusive evidence that it was at Cooch's Bridge that the Stars and Stripes were first unfurled in battle. On Thursday, September 8, a caravan of cars, carrying hundreds of passengers from Delaware, Maryland and Pennsylvania, will start from the Municipal Building, Wilmington, for Cooch's Bridge, where the first exercises of the celebration will be conducted. The celebration will continue Friday and Saturday.

The Pennsylvanians who will attend the ceremony at Cooch's Bridge will proceed from West Chester, Media and other points in Pennsylvania by automobiles to the State line on the Concord pike, preceded by members of the Pennsylvania State Constabulary. At the State line, members of the State Highway police will escort the caravan to the Wilmington Public Buildings.

Those who will join the caravan in Wilmington will then proceed to Cooch's Bridge, where exercises will be held at one o'clock. John P. Niels (Continued on Page 4.)

Dog Law Cases Make Little Stir In Court

16 Cases Heard Last Night, Quietly Pay Fines; A Total Of Over 50 Warrants Will Be Issued

The anticipated fireworks at the hearing of the new dog law cases, held in Magistrate Thompson's court last night, failed to ignite and 16 people quietly paid fines aggregating $99. Over 30 warrants have already been served, charging unregistered dogs or dogs running at large, and many defendants had paid their fines before the hearing. Over 40 warrants have been written, but some have not been served. There still remain other warrants to be sworn, to which will bring the total up to more than 50. 1034 dog licenses have been issued by Judge Thompson.

The warrants were sworn to by Avery Elwell, deputy state game warden. The fines are remitted to the State Game Commission, which has the administration of the new law. The law states that all dogs over 4 months of age must be registered and that no dogs may be allowed at large from May 1 to October 1, at any time, and that from October 1 to May 1, no dogs may be allowed to run at large at night.

The following were arraigned last night for having unregistered dogs or having dogs running at large:

- Horace Swan, colored, fined $5;
- Charles Wilson, colored, $5;
- Theodore Thompson, colored, $7;
- Thomas Anderson, colored, $9;
- Samuel Anderson, colored, $7;
- Alvin Johnson, colored, dismissed;
- Edwin Bishop, colored, dismissed;
- Alexander Coates, colored, $5;
- Martha Hunter, colored, $5;
- Joseph Wilson, colored, $8;
- Asbury Watson, colored, $7;
- Mrs. Lillian Turner, colored, $7;
- David Lewis, colored, $5;
- William N. Coyle, $5;
- John M. Tutwiler, $5;
- Mrs. C. C. Churchman, $5;
- Elbert Burns, $5.

The following had had warrants served on them, but did not appear at the hearing: Bertha Townsend, Frank Conkey, Grover Henderson and William S. Armstrong.

150 YEARS AGO AT COOCH'S BRIDGE

At Which Time, On September 3d, The British Troops Met A Portion Of Washington's Army In The Only Revolutionary Skirmish On Delaware Soil

The summer of 1777 was a very important time in the struggle for independence. General Howe with the British Army had his quarters in New York, while Washington with the American Army was encamped about 20 miles north of Philadelphia. Washington's reason for encamping there was that he wished to protect Philadelphia from capture by the British. Philadelphia, you know, was then the Capital of the Country just as Washington City is now.

In July of that year, the British embarked on their ships and suddenly left New York upon a secret mission, and General Greene came to this neighborhood to plan a battle. They went to the top of Iron Hill and Gray's Hill and with their spy-glasses, could see the ships and the tents of the enemy. Washington's first thought was to have the big battle right here with the American Army stationed on Iron Hill. The reason was that the sides of Iron Hill sloped gradually and could be approached from every side. There were many views as to where they were going. Some thought that they were going back to England and would leave the American Colonies in peace to enjoy their Independence; others thought that they were going to attack Boston, and others that they intended to sail up the Delaware Bay and River to attack Philadelphia by water. Washington had his scouts out in every direction with instructions to report any attempt to land by the British Fleet. When it was found that the fleet had sailed southwardly past Cape May, the belief was that they were going to attack Charleston, S. C.

About six weeks after they had sailed, the report suddenly reached Washington, that Howe with his fleet was far up the Chesapeake Bay. It was at once known that Howe's intention was to land somewhere near the head of the Chesapeake Bay and march overland to Philadelphia. On the 25th of August, the fleet sailed up the Elk River and landed a few miles below Elkton.

General Sleeps on Floor

The very day that the fleet landed, Washington, with General Lafayette, the first night he was here, stopped at a hotel in Elkton, which stands just west of the Episcopal Church. The very next night that hotel was occupied by General Howe, and he was waited upon by the same colored servants who had waited upon Washington the night before. On another night General Washington stayed at a little house near the Welsh Tract Baptist Church. These were exciting times, you know, and the country was full of strangers, some friends and some enemies. The old woman who lived in the house did not know Washington and did not want to let him in. Finally she consented to do so on condition that he sleep on the floor. The next morning as he was about to leave, she asked what might his name be. Washington tipped his hat, saying: "George Washington, Madam," and rode away. The old woman wrung her hands and said: "To think that I allowed General Washington to sleep on the floor!"

In the meantime, Howe was trying to make friends with the people of the neighborhood. He issued a proclamation offering protection to any who would desert the American Cause. I am sorry to say a good many, both in Maryland and Delaware, accepted his invitation. Conditions were not at all good in Newark. Johnston, in his "History of Cecil County," tells us that Thomas McKean, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence wrote to Washington, stating "that the only remedy he can suggest for this lamentable state of affairs is to have a regiment of Continental troops stationed at Newark."

As soon as Washington learned that the British were in the Chesapeake, he marched his troops

THIS interesting story of local battlefields during the Revolution was told over three years ago to Newark Boy Scouts, by Edward W. Cooch, direct descendant of Thomas Cooch, who occupied the homestead during the invasion of the British.

south through Wilmington and engaged the British between Iron Hill and Stanton.

General Howe's Army consisted of 17,000 men, Washington had 11,000. From these 11,000 men, he selected about 1,700 which he put under the command of General William Maxwell, with instructions to harass the British and give them every possible annoyance. It was this picked regiment of 1,700 which fought at Cooch's Bridge against Howe's 17,000.

Howe, in marching up from the Elk River avoided the road over Iron Hill on account of its roughness, and came over the lower road through Glasgow. On September 3d, his lines reached all the way from Glasgow to a point above the Welsh Tract Church. This made a line of about four miles long. According to a diary of a British officer, the American Army was spread out for two miles. The British lines were over the eastern slope of Iron Hill, and the Americans were on the other side of the Creek, somewhere near the line of the Newark and Delaware City Railroad. The fighting therefore was right across where we are now. If the battle of the Brandywine at Chadds Ford had not followed so soon, and been so much larger, the battle here would have been given a more important place in history.

Of course, the 17,000 British were successful against the 1,700 Americans.

Hides Family Treasure

The Americans had a picket around the Cooch mill from which they were driven by the British who then burned it, and did other acts of wanton destruction. They stole from the surrounding country, one hundred horses and about a thousand cattle and other animals.

For about five days Howe occupied the Cooch house, and in order to protect his horses from being stolen or reclaimed by the Americans, he stabled them in the parlor. Their hoof prints in the floor could be seen until the floor was renewed during my grandfather's time. The old race which ran the mill, and the dam which, supplied it, can easily be seen just a short way up the woods.

Just before the battle of Cooch's Bridge, Colonel Thomas Cooch took his silver and put it in an iron chest, which I now have in the attic. He put his gold in a measuring dish from the mill, called a toll dish, and took them out in the woods and buried them, marking the spot so he could get them again after the British had gone. After the battle, however, the ground was so changed, that he was unable to find the gold. Many attempts have been made to find it since then, but so far as I know it is still out there.

After the battle of Cooch's

Bridge, Howe decided that Stanton and Newport were too well fortified, so he marched up through Newark and from there to Chadds Ford, where the big battle took place.

There was a fife and drum corps at the battle of Cooch's Bridge. A story is told of a man named Humphries, who was a fifer at that battle. In order to keep out of the fight, Humphries hid his fife. Years afterwards someone asked his son whether or not it was true that his father had hid his fife and the son replied, "Yes, he hid the fife and he hid the fife too." Now you know that in an army, flags always go with the music, which is another evidence that the flag saw battle here.

Now boys, who was the General who fought at Cooch's Bridge? (Chorus, "William Maxwell.") Unfortunately for history, General Maxwell's house with all his papers, letters and records was burned only a few years after the Revolution. How much we could have learned from these precious documents, can now only be guessed. Among the sources of information are letters from Washington to Congress, an account written by John Marshall, afterwards Chief Justice of the United States, and the diary of Captain Montresor, a British officer.

This community is in sympathy with Mrs. J. C. Barr, whose mother died and was buried in the M. E. Cemetery last Saturday. Mrs. Thornton was also a sister of Mr. John Ward of this place. Her death was caused by old age.

Mr. Goslin, a tobacco salesman, received a broken shoulder blade and several cuts about the head and face when the automobile he was driving ran into another car driven by Charles A. Leasure, of Glasgow, at the cross road in Glasgow last Friday morning. Goslin's car turned over and was completely wrecked. Leasure escaped injury, but his automobile had a fender and wheel demolished.

It appears that Goslin was behind Leasure coming from Elkton into Glasgow and that the former motorist failed to see Leasure's hand signal due to a truck obstructing his view. When Leasure turned off the main road to his home, Goslin did not succeed in getting his car slowed down sufficiently and crashed into the right rear wheel of the motor ahead of him, throwing him out and breaking his shoulder.

Christiana

On Saturday, August 27, Miss Elizabeth Owens and Rev. Preston W. Spence, Jr., were married in Mt. Salem M. E. Church, Wilmington. Rev. W. Vaughn Moore, pastor of the church, officiating. For more than a year Mr. Spence has been pastor of Christiana and Salem M. E. Churches, and has made many friends not only in his own congregations, but also among the townspeople in general. Mr. and Mrs. Spence will occupy the parsonage here in Christiana when they return from their wedding trip.

The carnival being held under the auspices of the Christiana Improvement Association is attracting considerable attention, although the attendance has been cut down by the unfavorable weather. Saturday night there was a minstrel show and every night there is music by an orchestra. The "Bingo" booth seems to be very popular, as well as the candy booth and the fish-pond. Thursday night will be "Community Night," when a loving cup will be awarded to the community association having the largest number of members present at the carnival. A gate prize is given each night. Saturday night this prize was won by Mrs. Sue Currinder, but as she was not on the grounds at the time, the prize was forfeited. Monday night Miss Elizabeth Campbell was the winner, receiving an aluminum roaster. The main prizes, to be awarded the last night, are a six-tube Atwater Kent radio, a double-barreled shotgun and a bridge lamp.

September the Third

September third stands for one of Delaware's proudest claims, yet our tendency is to allow this day to pass unnoticed. As the anniversary of the only battle fought on Delaware soil its significance is not slight; but should it be true that at Cooch's Bridge, on Delaware soil, the Stars and Stripes were first unfurled in battle, the day is of national importance. While Delawareans believe in the claim, there is yet work to be done to prove the claim to others. What a noble contribution to the history of the State will be the work of the patient researcher who brings forth the facts!

All the evidence points to our claim being a good one. In June, 1777, Congress resolved that a flag should be adopted and the design as drawn by Washington was put into the hands of Mistress Betsy Ross.

When Howe's unexpected action in sailing southward, up the Chesapeake and in going overland toward Philadelphia was discovered, the American army began a hurried march to the south, to put themselves between that city and the enemy. When the army marched through the city, one of the accounts mentions "the flags flying" as an item of special interest. What more reasonable to suppose than that the order left with Mistress Ross seven weeks before had been rushed to a conclusion and the flag lately adopted had been put in the hands of the men?

During the days that preceded the Battle of Brandywine our entire section was reconnoitered by General Maxwell and his men who were sent out for the purpose of harassing the enemy. That their work was effective is suggested by the determination with which the British drove them away, making the attack with a number larger than the body which they were to encounter.

We Delawareans complete the dramatic picture by inserting the Stars and Stripes; the claim has not been successfully refuted; let some patriotic person take up the work of solving the question for those who are not convinced.

Meanwhile, as this anniversary rolls around, let us make the pilgrimage, in fancy, if not in person, to the historic battleground, and tell our children of those troublous days and of brave men and women whose spirit is our proud heritage.

The Wilmington Fair

The Fair this year at Elsmere promises to be unusually interesting, and an encouraging reflection of agricultural and industrial conditions in the State. Fairs have kept pace with the times and the Wilmington Fair is no exception. Features are planned to suit both young and old, members of the swiftly moving younger generation and the alert, quieter, older folk. There will be interest and fun for everyone; the finest kind of a place to go to be both instructed and entertained. Newark always has an added interest in Delaware fairs, due to the University exhibits and the active participation of local people.

A Gracious Act

Walter T. Bradley, of Philadelphia, evidently has learned the truth that "the only love we keep is the love we give away." The treat which he proposes to give to the children of his old home town is a gracious thought and we hope Mr. Bradley will be richly rewarded by the bright faces of the lucky youngsters.

PEOPLE'S COLUMN

Newark, Delaware, Aug. 31, 1927.
Editor of Post, Madam:—

The Every Evening of 30th inst. stated the breaking of a dividing fence was the cause leading to the charge of trespass and assault against me by Dr. Dunlevy. This is incorrect, as the fence which was broken is on my property, being 4 inches from the dividing line.

This line should be fenced by Dr. Dunlevy but is not, so that I am forced to put up a temporary fence.

The plaintiff and defendant in this case should be reversed, as Dr. Dunlevy led the assault in such a manner that I was compelled, in the defense of my life, to use force.

During the encounter Dr. Dunlevy fell, striking his face against a stone, causing the painful injury which the Every Evening describes.

J. P. Wilson.

MISS McNEAL IN NEW POSITION

Miss Elizabeth McNeal left on Monday to take up her new duties as assistant superintendent of the Montrose School, Reisterstown, Maryland. The property which houses the school was built by Jerome Bonaparte as a home for his wife. The work at the school is with sub-normal children and Miss McNeal is working for a degree in Psychiatry. A future issue of The Post will contain an account written by Miss McNeal of the work being done at the school.

will deliver an address at the Cooch's Bridge monument, which marks the site where the flag was unfurled. After these exercises the caravan will reform and proceed to Elkton, headed by members of the Maryland state highway police and a caravan of Maryland residents.

Exercises will be held at Elkton, commemorating the landing there of the British troops.

The caravan of the three States will then proceed to the scene of the battle at Chadd's Ford, following the trail taken by Washington's army.

After visiting the battlefield the caravan will proceed to Chester where exercises will be held at the Washington Hotel, where General Washington wrote his report of the battle for the Continental Congress.

While the celebration will continue on Friday, the closing feature of the program on Saturday will be the banquet at the Hotel du Pont-Biltmore. This feature will follow the pageant to be staged on the farm of J. and J. Bennett, which was the scene of the battle.

Josiah Marvel, of Wilmington, will be the toastmaster at the dinner to be served in the Hotel du Pont-Biltmore that evening. Invitations have been extended to the Ambassadors from Great Britain and France and U. S. Government officials to attend. Bishop Philip Cook will deliver the invocation.

"The Story of My First Job"

Walter T. Bradley's Experience

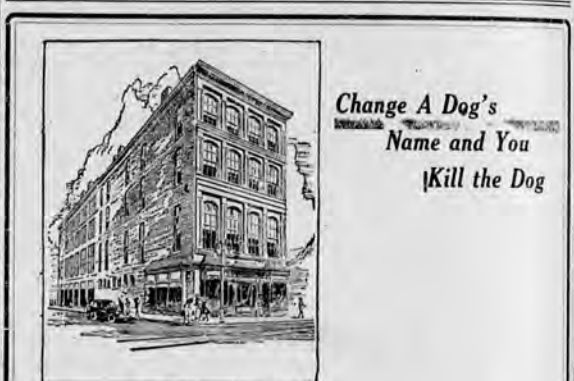

One day in the summer of 1877 a young man walked up Ninth street with thoughts of business in his mind. He had decided to enter the mercantile world, and as he strolled along he spied a "To Let" sign on a building yard, such as is used for lumber storage. It was just exactly what he wanted and on August 7, 1877, he established a coal and builders' supply business. At that time he did the soliciting, while he had drivers to deliver the material and a girl to attend the office details.

Today Colonel Walter T. Bradley is one of the best-known men in the business, and it was through his energies and abilities that the concern has developed into one of the largest in this city. Mr. Bradley was born in Smyrna, Del., on July 7, 1855, and was one of seven children. His early education was acquired in a district school in Newark, Del., and in the fall of 1871, his father having died, came to Philadelphia with his mother and family.

As a lad of 16 he entered the employ of the publishing house of J. R. Lippincott & Co. to learn the trade of bookbinding. He served as an apprentice at a weekly wage of $2 and eventually became a journeyman bookbinder. He worked at his trade only one year after serving his apprenticeship, when he realized the value of a better education. Although 21 years old, he decided to go back to school and took up a business course in 1876, entering Bennington Academy, at Bennington, Vt., where he remained for about one year. It was after he left Bennington Academy that Mr. Bradley started the coal and builders' supply business.

While having relinquished the presidency of the concern to his nephew, Colonel Bradley is still actively engaged as chairman of the board of directors, and arises at 6 o'clock every morning, and is in his office at 7. When finished with his office duties, he immediately sets out upon a round of visits to various charitable institutions he is vitally interested in. Colonel Bradley, although 72 years old, is very active, attributing much of his vitality to the fact that he never gets up from the table but what he doesn't feel hungry. He never has had any illness.

Colonel Bradley has long been interested in military affairs and served on the staffs of Governors Pennypacker, Stuart, Tener and Brumbaugh. He was a foremost spirit in the formation of the Pennsylvania Reserve Militia and served for 16 years in the National Guard. He is one of the original members of the Manufacturers' Club, the Builders' Exchange and the Philadelphia Bourse, and also is affiliated with numerous other organizations and fraternal societies. He is treasurer of the Masonic Home of Pennsylvania and the William L. Elkins Orphanage for Children, as well as a trustee for the last 20 years of the South Mountain Institute for Chronic Insane.—Philadelphia Record, July 9, 1927.

Newark Schools; Present, Future

By Superintendent Ira S. Brinser

Being Report Made To Newark And State Boards Of Education

The family tree of Newark has its root in some of the most sacred and historic soil of America. Three of the signers of the Declaration of Independence were among the school boys of 1776 who received their training in the old Academy Building whose service marked an important era in American education. Nearby is Cooch's Bridge where the Stars and Stripes were first unfurled in battle and which event marked the birth of a new emblem whose stars grow brighter as time grows older. To enjoy these historic spots is a high honor. To be worthy of them and of all that which a community has done during a century and a half for its posterity is a challenge for all of us.

Newark in her endeavor to more fully deserve the honored educational and historic tradition given her by her ancestry has attempted to keep pace with the necessary adjustment which the changing stage—set of a growing civilization demands and for which future generations may have an attitude of admiration and gratitude.

The Six-Three-Three Plan

The school system of Newark is gradually evolving from the old well established plan of eight years in the elementary school and four years in the high school to an organization known generally as the six-three-three-plan. It is composed of an elementary school of six years, a junior high school of three years, and a senior high school of three years. This is in accordance with the best present day practice approved by most thoughtful students of education in the field of education based on many school years of experience.

A change in organization of public schools does not mean a change in the subject matter, but it does mean a careful re-organization of subject matter. School progress can be recognized and measured only in terms of the comparison of results with recognized aims of public education and with the factors which the several school activities are expected to contribute.

Requiring a real living awareness of the aims, purposes, and achievements of our school on the part of all citizens and especially on the part of all those actually engaged in the instruction of our boys and girls, Public Education further demands that those in whom the special confidence and sacred trust of teaching is placed, shall not have only a necessary broad outlook but a mastery of the special field in which they are engaged.

Confusing, indeed, would be the outcome of Public Education unless the same general and specific outlook is maintained for each subject's relation with other subjects and activities and with the whole field of public education.

In order to provide a tangible educational policy for the partial realization of the aims of Public Education, revised courses of study build on the following principles have been progressively worked upon and have been in actual use:

1. A good course of study like successful living is not a static thing, but a dynamic thing like life itself.
2. The acceptance of the pupil as the center of interest instead of the subject matter.
3. The recognizing of great individual differences in the mental ability of pupils.
4. The choosing of subject matter which is as near to real life as is possible.
5. The reducing of the percentage of "failures" to the lowest terms by diagnosing pupils' difficulties and then applying the remedial measures of "catch-up," "make-up," and "keep-up."
6. The work in hand must have present values as well as assured future values.
7. Every lesson must be recognized as an opportunity for training in citizenship.
8. The realization, on the part of each teacher, of the social purpose of the school by giving pupils training in actual school citizenship and responsibility.

Elementary Courses of Study

In the primary and elementary school, courses of study setting forth the aims, purposes, objectives, content, and standards have been put into use in: Arithmetic, Penmanship, Written English, Oral English, Elementary History, Myths, Fables and Legends, Memory Work, Elementary Science, Elementary Geography, Picture Study, Spelling, and Character Education.

These courses have unified and made clearer the work of each grade in each subject. They are based upon the best research data available. In order to make these courses of greater service, the teachers supplemented and suggested changes where the subject matter was wrongly placed or where materials have been externally or arbitrarily chosen; and have, therefore, been revised by that which more nearly meets the need of the situation in which the pupil feels himself a living part and with which he wishes to deal successfully.

The field of Primary and Elementary Education probably need more attention and study than it had in the past. The real spirit of the scientist must permeate our daily doings so that better and better means may be found to adjust instruction and worth while activity to the capacity of the child to the end that every individual pupil receives that type of education best suited for the full development of his personality.

The inevitable result will be that our boys and girls will come to the Junior High School with enriched knowledge and training many times greater in quantity and much better in quality. Less waste both in money and minds will be probably a by-product of equal worth.

Special continuous emphasis need be placed upon selection and organization of subject matter; better objective standards must remove the haziness and in many cases unnecessary repetition which now unfortunately at times characterize the work. When these standards are mutually known by teacher, parent, and pupils, mutual understanding and progress will be the fruit of this labor.

Originality, self-reliance, appreciation and clear thinking—so much sought after in daily living, and incidentally in colleges and in Junior and Senior High Schools, must have its firm and foundational beginnings in actual worth while activity on the part of the pupil in the primary and elementary grades. The challenge which this policy demands is being met by progressive splendor on the part of the teaching staff.

Junior and Senior High School

In the Junior and Senior High Schools, courses of study based upon the general aims of education together with the aims of secondary education, the Cardinal Principles of Secondary Education and the aims of the Junior High School are being developed in: General Mathematics which is based upon the recommendation of the National Committee; General Science which is based upon a comprehensive study of the general science field. The laboratory procedure of this course is based upon seven types of projects each of which has its definite objectives and its individual problems. They are: (1) Identification, (2) Collecting, (3) Construction, (4) Dissection, (5) Observation, (6) Control projects, and (7) Reading. The study of the "Trees of Delaware" by Doctor H. V. Holloway has been a valuable help in planning the identification projects and will be a constructive means of helping boys and girls to know their tree friends.

In Social Science an attempt has been made to work out a "fusion" course which shall include: (1) History, (2) Geography, (3) Civics—community and national with United States Geography, and International Civics with World Geography, (4) Character Education and Safety Education, (5) Educational and Vocational Guidance, (6) Curricular and extra-curricular activities as based upon research and philosophy of Fretwell, Dewey, Foster, Wilds and others. This "fusion" course in Social Science (for the entire school) has been and is being built upon the following working guides:

1. What are the recognized assumptions with references to the Social Studies in general?

2. What are the assumptions concerning History, Economics, Geography, Civics?
3. What are the assumptions concerning the educational and vocational guidance?
4. What are the assumptions concerning the contributions which other subjects make toward the citizenship studied?

The fundamental purpose held in mind is to develop power to act in desirable civic and social ways. Power to act with ease, certainty, efficiency, and economy in any specific way is acquired mainly by acting in that specific way. Power to act wisely and forcefully in discharging ones duties—school, home, civic, and all other social responsibilities of today demands power to think in terms of general principles as applied to concrete situations. The opportunity to grow in the power of thinking, of judging, and of deciding must, therefore, be a part of the daily life and practice of the Social Science of each and every boy and girl from grade one to twelve. The school itself must be part of the laboratory for doing that which this social studies suggest in the classroom. In this way real citizenship will form into actualizing realities and cease to be merely a "Fourth of July Boast."

In the field of Biology and Chemistry, courses of study have been developed along the same principles. A committee is now at work on a course of study for the Junior-Senior High School in English, Mathematics, Latin, and French. Courses in Home Economics for the Junior High School to articulate with the Senior High School Home Economics course are also in formation.

High Spots

I. The working out of a course of study in Library from grade two to twelve.

Each pupil has had two periods per week of actual practice under guidance in the use of the library work in addition to other opportunity. The principles of library work upon which the use of the library is placed are:

1. That the use of the library is a science which can be learned and which must be kept alive by real application in all subjects and in all grades.
2. That reading habits over and beyond the actual text book should be begun and encouraged in grade one and continued through school life.
3. Books should be selected with the above principles in mind.

The Newark School Library is fully catalogued and classified according to the Dewey decimal system and now has more than three thousand volumes touching the interests of all school subjects and grades. Twenty magazines covering the above field of interest together with five daily and three weekly newspapers furnish ample opportunity for keeping materials of instruction up-to-date at all times. The reading lists for secondary schools as worked out by Mr. Shilling have been of great foundational value.

The administration of the library during the school day is in charge of fifteen pupils who are taking a course in Library Science, which is a part of the program of studies.

II. Assemblies were held by all grades from three to five times weekly with the principle in mind that the Assembly should be a common meeting ground where pupils learn to share their interests, experiences, express themselves intelligently, easily and naturally; and, there they grow toward higher standards of comradeship, scholarship, and citizenship through co-operative efforts of school affairs. The programs for assembly were planned by pupil-teacher committees and reflected not only a correlation of work of the class rooms and the procedures of deliberative bodies taught therein, but also the carefulness and the type of instruction, classroom activity, and classroom habits acquired in the learning of those subjects.

The opportunity for making the school a laboratory of learning by doing in the field of music, dramatics, debate, oratory, public speaking and the direct application of the learning of the classroom finds constantly recurring stimuli in the assembly hour. The oft heard criticism of pupil's poor enunciation, pronunciation, and poise, speaking in inaudible tones, and other types of similar factors soon finds constructive effective results when the daily class room procedure demands that pupil's recitations and discussion be actually heard and understood by all in the room and that the teachers repetition of answers to questions already answered will be conspicuous by its absence. The school assemblies were conducted on the six-three-three plan.

III. The School Cafeteria had a daily patronage of about two hundred pupils and teachers. It was operated by the school with the Home Economics classes using the cafeteria as a practical laboratory project in meal planning, budget and business management.

IV. The New Century Club provided one-half pint of milk each day for each child in grades one and two in co-operation with the Newark School Health program.

V. The School participated in the County and State Contest in public speaking and won second place in the county contest, which was held in the Du Pont School.

VI. For the first time in the history of girls' basketball in Delaware Newark won the county and also the State Championship.

VII. The Newark School has put forth every effort, not only to provide the most favorable conditions for teaching but to secure maximum results in terms of pupil initiative, scholarship, correct habits, achievements and worthy ideals. The diminishing number of failures bears commendable witness for the devotion and professional spirit of teachers, co-operation of pupils and helpfulness of parents. With the viewpoint that the school must account for the development of the pupil material it receives with more or less degree of responsibility practiced in the business world, the matter of diagnosing unsatisfactory marks together with pupil difficulties with the viewpoint of constructive remedial work has probably been one of the most constructive, so-operative enterprises of the school year.

VIII. As a part of a comprehensive plan for the Beautification of the School and Playgrounds, the Board of Education, in keeping with the plan and in keeping with the spirit of Arbor Day, authorized the purchase of and the planting of trees and shrubs. The actual planting and the laying out of the decorative corners was done by the pupils of the several classes in co-operation with the several class deans and teachers. A very attractive and a permanent driveway of asphalt penetration was constructed at the north end of the new building. It is a very combination of beauty and usefulness.

IX. The National Honor Society of Secondary Schools of the United States has granted the Newark School a Charter, authorizing it to form a chapter. The Newark Chapter will be organized some time during the first semester of the coming school term.

X. One hundred per cent membership, with one life member, in the National Education Association of the United States—one hundred per cent membership in the Delaware State Educational Association and one hundred per cent membership in the Newark Parent-Teacher Association shows a commendable, constructive and progressive spirit on the part of the Staff of the Newark Schools.

XI. In addition to the Rhythmic Orchestra of the Primary and Elementary Grades, a school orchestra of about twelve players has been developed. The orchestra plays for the assemblies daily and has been making encouraging progress.

Change In Board of Education

Mr. John S. Shaw, President of the Board of Education since the death of the lamented Doctor Steele, tendered his resignation to the Board late in May. Extensive travel throughout the United States together with necessary residence in Wilmington as Director of Safety in the Hercules Powder Company made it impossible for Mr. Shaw to give to the schools the time and attention which his interests in the work demanded that he should, and his resignation presented with regrets was accepted after a time with great reluctance. In accordance with the provisions of the charter (Continued on Page 2.)

Former Resident Opens New Restaurant

A week ago last Saturday, Scarborough's Restaurant opened in the building formerly occupied by the B. and O. Restaurant. Mr. and Mrs. Amos D. Scarborough, who have purchased the restaurant from its former owners, have had the place completely refurnished and redecorated. They will specialize in home cooked meals, all pastries being cooked in their own kitchen.

They will introduce to Newark palates a specialty, well known to the Middle West, but heretofore unknown here, called the Toastette Sandwich. It is a favorite wherever known and many restaurants in Western cities serve it exclusively.

Mrs. Scarborough has had considerable experience in the restaurant business, having catered for a number of large hotels. Mr. Scarborough is well known to many Newark people, having lived in Newark for a period of 5 years. He left here during the war. During his former residence in Newark, he was a member of several local lodges.

Newark Claims Play-off For League Title

J. Hafer, manager of the Newark baseball team, in a letter to the Wilmington Morning News, puts forth a strong and logical claim for a play-off for the pennant in the New Castle County League.

Mr. Hafer's letter states that inasmuch as Newark had a 1,000 per cent average in the first half of the league, not losing a game, and that due to no fault of their own were not able to compete in the second half of the league schedule, which was won by the Wilmington A. C., that Newark is entitled to a series of games with Wilmington A. C. to decide the championship. It appears that Newark was coldly shunted off the schedule in the second half of the league.

H. S. TEAM PRACTICING

DOLLAR DAY SEPT. 7

Merchant members of the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce will conduct their official dollar day on Wednesday, September 7th, according to an announcement received from that organization. This event, like all other official dollar days which are usually held in the spring and fall of each year, is sponsored by the Mercantile Section of the Wilmington Chamber.

The event is being widely advertised throughout Wilmington's trade area, comprising the eastern shore counties of Maryland, Delaware and the adjacent counties of New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Special efforts have been made by the merchants of that city who will participate in the official dollar day to present to shoppers the best values ever offered during an event of this nature. Seasonable merchandise, at reduced prices, will be offered during this event which has become a permanent institution promoted solely for the purpose of creating a stronger goodwill in Wilmington's trade area.
