UP FRONT

Yin and Yang of crime in Newark

By MARTY VALANIA

MVALANIA@CHESPUB.COM

Good news – bad news. There's nothing like a spree of shootings to get the media and city residents focused on crime.

That has been the case here in Newark over the last several weeks.

The bad news, obviously, is that there has been shootings, muggings and home invasions that have taken place in downtown Newark. Nobody likes to hear that and it ramps up the fear and call for action.

Valania

It just sounds so different from how most of us view Newark and, let's face it, nobody is comfortable hearing that we live and work in a place where these things go on.

The good news, though, is that university, city and county police have acted quickly and decisively. Muggers were caught last week and home invaders were apprehended this week.

More good news is the fact police statistics show that crime in Newark and on campus is actually down from last year.

Bad news – as we suspected, a lot of the recent crime can be attributed to the time of year we are currently in. That is, the influx of 20,000 people combined with the still-warm weather contributes to an annual two-month rise in crime that generally lasts through September and October.

Good news – the Newark Police Department has a fall crime suppression plan in place to combat this annual surge in crime. Last year – its initial year – the plan

30+ businesses agree to raise awareness this month

Lois Capone and Sandra Baldino don't work for the American Cancer Society.

They're not even residents of Newark.

But that didn't stop the two retired teachers from organizing what may be the city's first-ever coordinated effort to recognize October as Breast Cancer Awareness month.

"We just visited as many businesses on Main Street as we could, asking them to do something for breast cancer awareness," Capone said. "What we found was a lot of support and a great sense of community."

As a result of their effort – which they've named the Newark Hot Pink Project – city government and more than 30 Newark businesses have agreed to raise money, hold a special event or do something that otherwise brings attention to breast cancer.

"We think it's great," said Maureen Feeny Roser, the city's interim planning director and administrator of the Downtown Newark Partnership. "It's certainly a worthy cause and helps us get some awareness out there while also having some fun."

In honor of breast cancer awareness month, the Newark Municipal Center on Elkton Road will be swathed in pink spotlights for all of October, while the Newark Arts Alliance will wrap pink bows on Main Street's light posts starting on Oct. 6.

Capone said some businesses like Boulden Propane and Home Grown Café already had plans underway and were happy to be a part of the community wide effort.

Boulden's on Elkton Road painted one of their 3,200-gallon propane delivery trucks pink back in August, in honor of family matriarch Nancy Boulden, a five-year survivor of breast cancer.

Boulden also is donating a penny for each gallon of propane delivered by the pink truck to the American Cancer Society.

"When we first told the drivers about it no one wanted to be assigned to the pink truck," Tim Boulden said. "Now they all want a turn as driver because they understand how a simple thing like painting a truck pink can make a difference—maybe even save lives."

Teams up to battle breast cancer

More than 30 Newark businesses and city government have agreed to do something this month to raise awareness of breast cancer and/or contribute to research for a cure. Participating businesses include (from top to bottom) Salon by Anthony, Gecko Fashions, Primo Hoagies and Home Grown Café.

Pyle Academy holds open house

Students cannot graduate without at least a 'B'

By MARY E. PETZAK

MPETZAK@CHESPUB.COM

The Sarah Pyle Academy for Academic Intensity is not for the faint-hearted or for students with a history of discipline problems.

It is, however, so motivating that students often try to enroll themselves at the school, said school counselor Laura Malmstrom.

"They talk to [a friend] who's already here and decide they want to come," Malmstrom said. "But, even after the referral, we have an interview process before deciding whether to admit them."

The Sarah Pyle Academy, a part of the Christina School District, opened its doors in 2005 as a non-traditional option for high school students unsuccessful in traditional settings for reasons other than conduct.

"The mere makeup and size and format of the traditional high schools causes anxiety in large classes and just doesn't work for them," school counselor Laura Malmstrom said of the academy's students. "At Pyle, they get hands-on learning, which is different than the hearing- and visually-oriented learning in

Newark police break home invasion cases

Four arrested, two still at large

By SCOTT GOSS

POSTNEWS@CHES PUB.COM

Four men have been arrested and police are searching for two more who they believe are responsible for four recent home invasion robberies in Newark, including three in September.

The common thread among all four crimes appears to be Jason P. Folk, a 21-year-old Newark resident, who police say recruited his friends to participate in the home invasions.

Between Friday and Monday, Newark Police arrested Folk and three of his accomplices, including Newark residents Robert J. Priddy, 21, Jeffrey Graham, 20, and 20-year-old Bear resident Abdulhakimi Abdul-Ahad.

All four men were being held at the Howard Young Correctional Facility in lieu of bond on Monday, according to Newark Police Lt. Brian Henry.

Henry said two other accomplices are still at large, including 25-year-old Keith A. Weakley of Colchester, Conn. and 18-year-old Reginald Meadows of Newark.

"I commend the hard work and long hours put in by the members of the department in identifying and apprehending these suspects," Newark Police Chief Paul Tiernan said after the arrests. "Our Criminal Investigation Division is second to none and our clearance rate for robbery is twice the national average."

According to police, the first known home invasion involving Folk and his accomplices occurred on May 20 when Folk, Priddy and Weakley allegedly entered a home in the unit block of East Cleveland Avenue through an unlocked front door at about 7:30 a.m.

Folk was allegedly carrying a handgun when he ordered two victims into a bedroom, while he and his accomplices made off with a shotgun, cash, electronics and clothing.

Folk and his accomplices reportedly struck the same block again on Sept. 10 when he, Priddy and Graham allegedly entered a home at around 11 p.m. and ordered three men and a woman into a second-floor bedroom, where they were held at gunpoint.

The men reportedly made off with wallets, cash and illegal drugs.

Folk reportedly struck a third time at 3:10 a.m. on Sept. 24 when he and Meadows entered a home in the 100 block of E. Park Place through an unlocked front door and demanded money from a man and a woman.

Police said Folk and Meadows later fled the home without taking any property.

A day later, however, Folk, Priddy and a new accomplice, Abdul-Ahad, allegedly returned to East Cleveland Avenue at 5:30 a.m., entered the unlocked front door of a home and demanded money and drugs from five victims.

The three men, all of whom were reportedly armed with handguns, made off with cash and electronic items, police said.

Police said they found two handguns they believe were used during the robberies, as well as some of the stolen property, while executing search warrants at the suspects' homes over the weekend.

Henry said an investigation into the home invasions is ongoing and declined to comment on how police came to identify Folk and his accomplices as suspects in the four cases.

Folk has been charged with nine counts of first-degree robbery, two counts of attempted robbery, four counts of possessing a firearm during a felony, three counts of wearing a disguise during a felony, four counts of burglary, four counts of conspiracy, two counts of aggravated menacing and theft of a firearm.

Priddy has been charged with nine counts of first-degree robbery, three counts of possessing a firearm during a felony, three counts of burglary, three counts of conspiracy, two counts of wearing a disguise during a felony, two counts of aggravated menacing and one count theft of firearm.

Graham has been charged with two counts of first-degree robbery, two counts of aggravated menacing, burglary, conspiracy and wearing a disguise during a felony.

Abdul-Ahad has been charged with five counts of first-degree robbery, burglary, conspiracy, possession of a firearm during a felony, and wearing a disguise during a felony.

Police said Weakley and Meadows would be charged with similar crimes once they are apprehended.

Second annual Main Street Mile to be run on Saturday

Event raises money for Newark Police K-9 unit

By SCOTT GOSS

POSTNEWS@CHES PUB.COM

This weekend's Main Street Mile foot race will be for the dogs – literally.

Now in its second year, the race is organized to raise money for the Newark Police Department's K-9 unit, as well as the Downtown Newark Partnership, which sponsors the contest.

"I love dogs," said organizer Nic DeCaire, who also owns Fusion Fitness on East Main Street. "Plus, a lot of the Newark police officers work out here, so we knew they were trying to get another K-9 and I figured it would make a great cause."

Thanks to last year's effort, rookie K-9 officer Sjors (pronounced "yours") will join the force in the next few weeks, doubling the dog power of the unit's current lone veteran, Paco.

"It's great," Newark Police Chief Paul Tiernan said of the race. "It has enabled us to have the extra resource without any cost to the taxpayers."

Paco's partner Cpl. Chris Jones said the K-9 unit receives its annual budget from the Main Street Mile and an annual fundraiser organized by the Newark Charter School's student government.

"It's huge for us," Jones said of this weekend's race. "It's helped us to not only purchase our two German Shepards, but it also provides us with our annual budget for incidental costs and additional training."

This year, as many as 200 serious runners and not-so-serious community supporters are expected to pay the $15 pre-registration fee or the $25 day-of registration fee for the honor of hoofing it down East Main Street from McDonald's to the Deer Park Tavern, starting at 8 a.m.

"Last year, we ran a series of heats, but it ended up taking longer than we wanted, so this year, we're going to have everyone run at about the same time," DeCaire said.

Serious runner, meaning those who are competing for a cash prize, will start their race a few seconds ahead of those running for fun.

The first male runner to complete the mile in less than four minutes and 10 seconds and the first female runner to reach the finish line in four minutes and 40 seconds will each receive a $500 prize.

An unnamed master prize will go to the runner over 40 years old who posts the best time, while the top male and female in seven age categories will receive prizes, including trophies, medals and downtown Newark gift certificates.

All runners also will receive a Main Street Mile T-shirt and admission to special post-race brunch at the Deer Park, where Miss Delaware Vincenza Carrieri-Russo will personally hand out the awards.

A special K-9 demonstration also will be held during the brunch.

To accommodate the race, East Main Street will be closed to traffic from about 7:45 a.m. until 8:15 a.m. on Saturday.

Anyone wishing to register for the race should call Fusion Fitness at 738-4580 or visit www.fusionfitnesscenter.com.

Registration on the day of the event will be available at Fusion Fitness in the Market East Plaza on East Main Street from 7 a.m. to 7:45 a.m.

Preventing dropouts

An early-warning system that uses academic indicators to identify students at-risk of dropping out is an effective strategy to improve the nation's graduation rate, according to a new brief from the Alliance for Excellent Education. "Using Early-Warning Data to Improve Graduation Rates: Closing Cracks in the Education System," argues that data on students' academic performance is more accurate at predicting the odds of students dropping out than the more traditionally accepted socio-economic factors and life experiences. Additionally, efforts to prevent early school-related risk factors improve the likelihood students will remain in school and earn a diploma. To read the brief, visit www.all4ed.org/files/

High school senior named Young Woman of Distinction

Charter School of Wilmington senior and Girl Scout Erin Lawler has been selected as a 2008 National Young Woman of Distinction by the Girl Scouts of the USA for her exceptional Girl Scout Gold Award Project titled "GEMS: Girls Empowered by Math and Science."

Lawler coached approximately a dozen girls from elementary and middle schools in the Wilmington HOPE Zone to design, engineer, build and program a robot in preparation for the FIRST Lego League Regional Competition at the University of Delaware.

Her Girl Scout Gold Award project eventually became the pilot of a Council-led after-school camp that teaches girls about these fields through hands-on experiments.

"The Girl Scouts of the Chesapeake Bay is incredibly proud of Erin," said Anne T. Hogan, chief executive officer of the Girl Scouts of the Chesapeake Bay Council. "On behalf of the Council, I would like to extend my congratulations to Erin and her mother, Teri."

Lawler is one of 10 Girl Scouts in the nation to be selected as a National Young Woman of Distinction. Together with the other nine winners, Lawler will attend the Young Women of Distinction event in Indianapolis, Ind., from Oct. 29 to Nov. 2.

The event includes a recognition dinner, leadership session and networking events with prominent women in and outside of the Girl Scouts organization. This year's Young Women of Distinction event will coincide with the 2008 National Girl Scouts Council Session/51st Convention, at which 11,000 Girl Scouts will be present.

According to several national studies, there still remains a gender gap in the fields of science, technology, engineering and math. Fewer women than men go on to earn degrees in these fields and even fewer pursue higher degrees and careers.

The Girl Scouts is dedicated to narrowing this gender gap by providing programming for girls to increase their awareness, knowledge and skills in these areas, and open doors to related career opportunities. "This year, we'll see the wellness policy move off the shelf and into the classrooms," Solge said.

The district is passing from the wellness policy development phase to the implementation phase in the 2008-09 school year. "We want to stay true to the policy and reinforce healthy food choices throughout the day," Stephens added.

Wellness teams are forming in each of the district's 30 schools, comprised of school nurses and nutritionists, physical education and classroom teachers, administrators and parents. The wellness teams will be looking at ways to create healthier school environments.

Military remembered in Delaware on 9/11

On Sept. 11, the Newark and Concord high schools' soccer teams honored the U.S. military by raising a flag previously flown in Iraq prior to their game.

Petty Officer Joseph Donnelly, the father of Newark soccer team member Quillan Donnelly, is now serving in Iraq.

He sent the flag to his son after it was flown over an Iraqi military combat zone on July 18.

After team introductions, Quillan Donnelly presented the flag to U.S. Marines Sergeant J.A. Denbow and Private Van Hise. They raised the flag to half-staff in remembrance of the lives lost on Sept. 11, 2001.

Extension educator named Afterschool Ambassador

The Afterschool Alliance selected Carol Scott, an educator with the New Castle County Cooperative Extension's 4-H after-school programs, to serve as a 2008-09 Afterschool Ambassador.

She is one of 18 local leaders from 15 states selected for the honor. Each ambassador will continue directing or supporting a local after-school program while also serving a one-year term organizing public events, communicating with policy makers and building support for after-school programs.

"After-school programs keep children safe, inspire them to learn, and help working families," said Afterschool Alliance Executive Director Jodi Grant. "Americans strongly support after-school programs but there aren't nearly enough to meet the need, and rising fuel prices and tight budgets at all levels of government are putting financial pressure on the programs we have."

Grant stated that Scott will bring energy and talent to the task of spreading the word about the need to make after-school programs available to all families that need them. "I look forward to working with her to build support for after school among parents, business and community leaders, lawmakers, and the media," Grant added. "We are proud to have Carol on our team."

4-H Afterschool trains staff and develops quality after-school programs where young people learn leadership, citizenship and life skills. In Delaware, the 4-H Afterschool program is a statewide leader in developing partnerships with schools and community organizations to provide after-school and summer programs.

On a daily basis, more than 400 elementary and middle school students participate in 4-H after-school programs featuring enrichment activities in science, technology, nutrition, fitness and leadership. Scott has worked with the University of Delaware 4-H Youth Development program for seven years and shares her career-long experience in youth development programming as a member of the Delaware Afterschool Alliance.

Each ambassador will plan a major event for Lights On Afterschool, the Afterschool Alliance's Oct. 16 nationwide rally. The No Child Left Behind Act authorized $2.5 billion for after-school programs this year, but actual funding is less than half that level. Congress has not yet completed work on the education budget for fiscal year 2009.

Students in after-school programs have been shown to perform better in school and have greater expectations for the future, while children who are unsupervised in the afternoons are at greater risk of becoming involved with crime, substance abuse and teenage pregnancy.

The Afterschool Alliance is a non-profit public awareness and advocacy organization working to ensure that all children and teens have access to quality after-school programs. For more information, please visit www.afterschoolalliance.org.

POST COLUMNIST

The untold story of a premature birth

By RUTH KELLY

NEWARK POST COLUMNIST

In a recent column I shared my ecstasy at the successful parenting of my daughter Kim.

You all know that she was a preemie born at 25 weeks and weighing only 17 ounces. That was 22 years ago and at that time her prognosis was very grim. Her chance of survival was 50/50.

The success rate of these neonates has risen substantially in the last two decades and today I marvel at the advances in neonatology since Kim's birth.

For example, Kim was too small to breath on her own and had to be placed on a ventilator. She remained on artificial respiration for two months. Since 1986, surfactants to help the lungs mature have been used so these tiny infants don't have to be ventilated as long.

It's almost old hat now when you hear that a mother has a one-pound preemie. You dismiss all worry and concern knowing that the prognosis for success is a virtual slam dunk.

Usually when I speak about Kim, it's about her successes. I need to share with you now the other side — the trauma, the stress and the horror that comes with having a baby born too soon.

When I saw Kim in the neonatal intensive care unit, she looked like a newly-hatched chicken.

She was in an open bed with continuous lighting, alarms, and poking and prodding like I have never seen. Her tiny body was wrapped in Saran Wrap so as not to dry out her skin. Tubes were everywhere. She was fed through a tube that ran down her nose into her belly. She was attached to all kinds of monitors. As a new mom, I was unable to hold her in my arms. It would be months before I could experience that bonding between mother and baby.

Every day blood would have to be drawn from her to monitor her blood gasses. I watched as they took a razor-like instrument to cut the heel of her foot to draw the blood.

Kelly

The nurses told me she didn't feel pain, but the tears falling down the side of her face told me something different.

As the babies grow, technicians struggle to find other sites to draw blood. After all other sites are unsuccessful, the last best place to get a good vein is on their heads. No one prepared me for the sight of seeing an intravenous line in my daughter's head when I came to visit. I was very upset.

Blood transfusions came next. These babies are so small that whatever blood is taken has to be replaced. As I look back, I am thankful that by 1986 blood was being tested for HIV.

After my six-week maternity leave, I returned to work. I felt hurt because I had attended many baby showers, but none was held for me. I wanted to be congratulated for becoming a mom and to be recognized.

It took me a while to realize that my co-workers wanted to delay my shower to wait to see if Kim was going to make it.

I went to the hospital every day during my lunch hour at work and in the evenings. As the days progressed, I found myself getting angry because everyone else except me was taking care of my baby and I could only stand aside and helplessly watch.

At home, I dreaded the phone ringing because it could be the hospital. I was filled with dread and fear that once I got there the doctors and the chaplain would already be there.

To be honest, as the months wore on, I summoned the courage to tell the doctors that if they had to continue to do all of this to save my child, they should have mercy and just let her go.

We made it through all of that but not without a lot of mental anguish.

Kim was born on June 5 and I was finally given a shower a few days after she came home from the hospital, which was at the end of September.

Each preemie's story is different.

Many have had good outcomes like Kim, but there are many who will require longterm care for the remainder of their lives.

I do submit, however, that steps can be taken to prevent the chances of having a baby too soon. Pre-natal care is essential. Awareness is also sorely needed before one even considers becoming pregnant.

MAKING SENSE OF INVESTING

End animal cruelty on World Farm Animals Day

Neil Askins
Newark

Will 2008 mark the beginning of the end for the U.S. meat industry?

The escalating costs of corn and soybeans caused by harvest shortfalls, rising global demand and government-mandated ethanol production are forcing widespread cutbacks in the number of animals raised for food. So does the current credit crunch.

A recent report by the prestigious Pew Charitable Trusts recommends a phase-out of intensive confinement, which would force additional cutbacks.

For the animals and caring consumers, such cuts are long overdue.

The 10 billion animals killed for food in the U.S. each year, have no life before death. From birth, they are caged and crowded, deprived and drugged, manhandled and mutilated. At the slaughterhouse, they may be scalded, bled, skinned, and dismembered, while still conscious.

Although 93 percent of consumers condemn such abuses, no state or federal law prevents them.

Recent undercover investigations by humane organizations have documented egregious animal cruelty at California and Iowa slaughterhouses. The resulting media coverage has led consumers to examine their own role in subsidizing extreme animal cruelty with their shrinking food dollar.

This is why, on or about Oct. 2 (Gandhi's birthday), 400 communities in all 50 states and two-dozen other countries will observe World Farm Animals Day with public education events. The purpose is to expose and memorialize the cruel treatment of animals raised for food and to promote an animal-free diet.

It's a great opportunity for each of us to reject cruelty and embrace a healthful, cost-saving plant-based diet.

If it ain't broke, don't fix it

John Yasik
Chairman of the Delaware Association of Insurance Agents & Brokers

Bad mortgage-backed securities. Federal bailouts. Stock market woes. And now, a wolf lurking in sheep's clothing.

Some of nation's biggest financial institutions, their trade associations and a few congressional supporters are using the current problems to push — once again — for a federal takeover of insurance regulation.

Their ploy? Play the savior role in times of economic uncertainty. The result? Less regulation for the big guys and less protection for the consumer. And all of that instead of the proven system we've had in place for years.

Under the current system, state officials oversee the safety and soundness of insurance regulation. They do a great job of making sure that insurance companies are financially sound and that consumers are protected.

The federal government, on the other hand, has a rickety track record when it comes to overseeing financial services. Commercial banks and investment firms are prime examples. Who could forget the savings and loan mess of the 1980s?

Need more proof? Take the AIG bailout. It wasn't the traditional insurance side of AIG that landed the complex company in trouble. Many of the company's non-insurance entities, which invested in complex credit-back securities, were overseen by a U.S. federal regulator.

Meanwhile, AIG's state-regulated insurance subsidiaries have remained stable and safe.

The old adage applies here: If it ain't broke, don't fix it.

The selection of "Pirate Gold," the production to be staged this year, was largely based on the possibilities available in this particular production for those local people who have always stood behind the Legion and assisted them with such talents as they had towards making a successful entertainment. The Talent Committee finds that, as far as available individuals are concerned, they stand ready, as they have always done before, to give every assistance the Legion requires for this entertainment. Protests flare at GHS, NHS

While tensions apparently have eased at Glasgow High School after two days of student protests, they have just begun to surface at Newark High School.

Approximately 20 white students walked out of Newark late Tuesday morning to protest alleged double standards in the application of disciplinary procedures. Late last week about 50 students staged a protest in front of Glasgow over the same issue.

Newark administrators reminded students they were in violation of the student code of conduct, and asked them to return to the building. Officials report some of the students returned to classes, but a number of them remained outside. Those students who refused to go inside were identified, and suspended, and their parents were notified.

Brookmont assn. sues county

The long bitter dispute between the residents of Brookmont Farms in New Castle County is going to have to be settled in court.

The community's civic association filed a class-action suit in federal court Monday on behalf of residents in the 544-unit development against several county officials, the builder and the bank which financed construction of the development.

Accusing the county of being "negligent" and "reckless," the residents contend that the county officials allegedly failed to properly inspect the homes or failed to inspect them with the proper care. According to the suit, the plaintiffs found numerous construction defects when they moved into their homes that violated county codes.

Courtyard party has no friends

The new Courtyard Apartments on East Main Street opened by Commonwealth Management less than three weeks ago have already been logged into the Newark Police reports.

According to media officer Mark Farrell, police were notified around 12:40 a.m. on Saturday, Sept. 26, of loud noise and disorder throughout the building complex. "There were about 200 subjects and loud music in the outside courtyard area when we arrived," said Farrell. "We weren't happy about it."

Farrell said the people attending the party began to flee in all directions when they saw the police.

Jeff Lang, president of commonwealth, said he was not happy about the incident either. "We designed this as a place where tenants could hang out and relax, and two weeks after we open, an incident of this proportion happens."

Right time for extracurricular fun

By JORDAN ASHBY

SPECIAL TO THE NEWARK POST

Phew! Now that the school rush has finally dwindled down, or at least lessened to a manageable amount, it is time to start thinking about how you can get involved with either your school or community.

Students should have developed their school-related routines at this point in the academic year. That includes factoring in when they program the ringing of their alarm clock, how many five-more-minute snoozes they can manage, the time it takes to gulp down breakfast, their rushed morning "commute," a fun-filled school day, their travel home from school and a general idea of the time that should be allotted for homework.

With all of those factors considered, students should be able to evaluate how much after-school time they have available.

Keeping that in mind, have them map out a schedule of their normal week. This is a great way for them to practice their time management skills by allowing them to really visualize the amount of time they spend on given topics, such as television, playing outside, after-school snacks, chores, etc.

Developing this weekly schedule can be a group effort, so Mom and Dad also should make a schedule in the hopes that everyone can become organized.

Once everyone is on the same page, a family can have a rough idea of what needs to be done and when it can fit into their already hectic daily lives.

If everyone has an understanding of what time they

Newark teen receives top aviation honor

Newark resident Jeffrey M. Adelman began training for a private pilot's license at age 12.

Now, at age 19, Adelman has been selected to receive the Delaware Aviation Hall of Fame's 2008 Youth Achievement Award during a banquet at the University of Delaware's Clayton Hall on Oct. 4.

"I am very honored and excited to receive this award," Adelman said. "I would especially like to thank my parents for their continued support through the years."

Founded in 2000, the Delaware Aviation Hall of Fame has inducted roughly fifty men and women who distinguished themselves in aviation training, career development and/or aviation community activities.

Along with Adelman, five others will also be added to the Delaware Aviation Hall of Fame this year.

Adelman said he joined the Civil Air Patrol at age 12 and devoted a large amount of time to increase his knowledge of aviation.

Adelman earned his pilot's license while attending the Charter School of Wilmington, where he graduated with honors in 2006. He also became the first cadet to be fully qualified as a Delaware Department of Transportation aerial observer and reporter.

Adelman is currently a junior at Kent State University in Ohio, where he is majoring in flight technology.

He now has a total of 300 flight hours and is presently working toward becoming a certified flight instructor, a certified flight instrument instructor and a multi-engine flight instructor.

"Young Jeff exemplifies the necessary traits for being a good pilot and a good leader while working toward his goal of becoming a corporate pilot and helping other youngsters achieve their goals in aviation," said Delaware Aviation Hall of Fame President Harry Van Den Heuvel.

Adelman said he plans to return home to receive his award in person.

Local writers will try to resurrect Poe at the Deer Park on Saturday

By PATRICIA ETHELWYN LANG

NEWARK POST CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Literature lovers will attempt to raise the spirit of Edgar Allen Poe this weekend, while keeping his infamous curse on the Deer Park Tavern at bay.

To commemorate the 159th anniversary of Poe's death, the Delaware Literacy Connection will hold an open poetry and prose contest at the Deer Park from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. on Saturday.

Literacy Connection board member Bob H. Davis said anyone who pays the $3 cover charge will get five minutes to read their original poetry or prose.

Writers also are welcome to enter the Channeling Poe contest, in which authors will have three minutes to read their Poe-inspired poems and prose in a battle royale to be judged by the audience.

Slam poet Matt McDonald also will perform a dramatic reading of Poe's classic "The Raven," while the winners of the Delaware Literacy Connection's Autumn Writing Contest will read their poems and short fiction.

Davis said the literary festival is intended to celebrate the locally treasured tales of Poe and the curse he is said to have placed on an inn that once stood near the Deer Park's West Main Street location.

Local writers are invited to channel the original master of the macabre at a Poe-try and prose reading sponsored by the Delaware Literacy Connection this Saturday.

According to the legend, Poe would frequently stay at the St. Patrick's Inn, while traveling between Baltimore and Philadelphia to lecture and push his work to publishers.

One version of the tale holds that Poe cursed the inn after falling face first in the mud outside of his carriage.

Another version holds that the curse came after Poe suffered from terrible dreams brought on by severe drunkenness.

Yet another version claims Poe botched a lecture at Delaware College, became deeply depressed and cursed the town while getting plastered at St. Patrick's.

Whatever the cause, all three tales end with Poe placing a curse on the inn and Newark, in general, by declaring, "Whoever comes to Newark and enters this Inn will never be able to leave."

Eight years later, the St. Patrick's Inn burned to the ground, and the Deer Park Tavern was later built in its place.

Library series seeks to open cultural dialogue

Only in America could a Muslim practice Ramadan alongside her Jewish, Unitarian and Christian friends, according to News Journal reporter Angie Basiouny.

"If we want to be with people, who are different from us, we can in America," Basiouny said. "It wouldn't, couldn't happen, elsewhere."

An American-born Muslim, Basiouny was the keynote speaker at this month's Noon Book Discussion Group, a monthly chat session offered by the Newark Free Library.

The discussion group is part of the New Castle County

Public Libraries' "Let's talk about ..." series, which Newark library director Pat Birchenall said is intended to "build bridges through the exploration and understanding of other cultures."

This year's theme is "The Muslim Experience in Delaware" and in preparation for Basiouny's visit, the discussion group read "Acts of Faith: the Story of an American Muslim, the Struggle for the Soul of a Generation" by Eboo Patel.

"I'm a little bit country, and a little bit rock 'n' roll," Basiouny said, borrowing a line from a Donnie and Marie Osmond song to describe her mixed American and Egyptian heritage.

Basiouny, who holds a master's degree in political science with a concentration in Middle Eastern studies, talked also about growing up in America and about her mother, whom, she said, raised her children to believe, "It is not us against them; it's us."

"You have to take the best of both worlds," Basiouny said. "We are more similar than different. Ignorance breeds fear."

Following Basiouny's talk, members of the discussion group talked at length about Patel's search for his own spiritual truth.

The Newark Free Library will host two additional programs next month as part of its "Muslim Experience in Delaware" series.

More good news — this plan emphasizes enforcement between 10 p.m. and 4 a.m. Anybody that has read anything about some of these more violent crimes can see that the bulk of them come after midnight.

Bad news — umm, we still have a month or so to get through.

Good news — I was impressed with how quickly the city, county and university were able to put together a forum to talk about the recent problems, crime in general and precautions that can be taken.

It's not often that a community forum can be organized so quickly. And it's far less often that there are any concrete things that come out of these discussions. Mostly, officials learn what the community is thinking and say that they will come up with a plan.

At last week's forum, officials already had plans in place to combat the issues (the fall crime suppression, targeted patrols, and increased patrols in high crime areas are a few examples) and were able to explain those plans to concerned citizens and the media alike.

It was a good exercise for everybody that attended or was able to read about the discussion. All involved should be commended.

Yes, it is bad news when there is violent crime in the city, but the good news is that our law enforcement agencies are doing something about it.

have available, then it becomes apparent what extracurricular activities can fit into the schedule.

Extracurricular or group activities are a perfect way to get involved and make a difference in the lives of others, as well as among your school communities.

Schools today offer a wide range of interest-driven topics, including clubs that meet to discuss a common theme or others that actively engage student talents through outreach. Joining a club also provides students with an opportunity to learn a leadership role. When given the opportunity, children can feel excited and empowered by a position of leadership. They take on a whole new level of maturity and respect for others and tend to develop a mentoring relationship with younger members of a group or club.

In addition to school-based clubs, there are other organizations that meet at night or on the weekends.

4-H is good example of that kind of extracurricular activity. If you have an interest, 4-H most likely has a project in your area.

So if you are looking to try something new and cannot really find it within your school, I encourage you to give 4-H a try. 4-H has plenty of ways in which you can become involved and is overflowing with leadership opportunities.

If you would like more information about 4-H, please visit www.ag.udel.edu/4h or call 831-8965.

Newark TV ad could go to cable

► TV SPOT, from 1

YouTube, the city's Web site and in our e-newsletter," said Maureen Feeny Roser, administrator of the DNP and the city's interim planning director. "Depending on the spot's popularity, we may decide to buy airtime on cable."

The commercial follows a beleaguered family of four on their dreaded annual holiday shopping trip. The family's scorn quickly turns to delight, however, once Mayor Vance A. Funk III – in a full Santa Claus outfit – greets them on the Trolley and shows them the wonders of shopping in Newark.

The husband and wife and played by local actors, while the children are played by Feeny Roser's real life daughter and the step-son of city planner Mike Fortner.

"It's pretty exciting," Feeny Roser said of this week's shooting schedule. "I can't wait to see how it turns out."

The commercial is being filmed by the Wilmington-based Film Brothers production company, which previously gave cameos to Funk and Feeny Roser in its 2007 feature length independent film "Jack of Clubs."

"It's going to be a kind of an over-the-top piece that's both cute and funny," said Gordon DelGiorno, one of the two brothers behind Film Brothers. "We shot the bulk of it on Monday and Tuesday and we plan to have it ready in time to air before Black Friday."

Feeny Roser said the idea for the commercial came as a result of the city's recent interaction with military personnel and civilian employees who are considering moving to the area as a result of the Army's reassignment of certain functions from Ft. Monmouth in New Jersey to the Aberdeen Proving Ground in Maryland.

"Several of them have asked us if we have a DVD with information about our town," she said. "After some discussion, we decided we should be producing our own pieces highlighting what Newark has to offer."

Serving The Tri-State Area For 20 Years

City unites for Newark Hot Pink Project

BREAST CANCER, from 1

Home Grown Café, meanwhile, has been raising money for breast cancer research since September and will hold two benefit dinners on Oct. 16.

Tickets for the five-course meals, at 5:30 and 7:30 p.m., cost $60, of which $20 will go to the Susan G. Komen Foundation, the world's largest grassroots network of breast cancer survivors and activists.

"The dinners are in honor of my mom, Vicky, who passed away last July from breast cancer," said Home Grown's co-owner Sasha Aber. "We started raising money for breast cancer awareness last year and I think it's great that other people in town are doing something too."

In addition to the benefit dinners, Home Grown is also donating a portion of select wine sales and 10 percent of its Monday food sales to the Komen Foundation and the American Cancer Society. The restaurant will also field a team to walk in the Making Strides Against Breast Cancer 5k walk in Wilmington on Oct. 12.

Other local businesses agreed to join the fight after receiving a packet of suggestions from Capone and Baldino.

Primo Hoagies manager Lisa Yandell said her sandwich shop is planning to raise money for the American Cancer Society through an eating contest called "Feast to Beat the Beast" on Oct. 24.

"The contestants will race to eat one of our two-foot long, fully loaded hoagies," Yandell said. "I always wanted to sponsor an eating contest and when (Capone and Baldino) asked me for my support I thought this would be an awesome opportunity that also will benefit a good purpose."

Entrance in the contest will cost $20, while competitors will be allowed to hamper their opponents through additional donations, with a portion of the proceeds benefiting the American Cancer Society.

Meanwhile Salon by Anthony owner Anthony Barcola in the Newark Shopping Center is planning to raffle a gift basket and will enter a 12-person team in the Oct. 12 cancer walk.

"They really inspired me to do something," Barcola said of Capone and Baldino. "One of my dear friends is a cancer survivor and since I work on women all day, I figured that if I can do anything, no matter how small, it's worth it."

Capone said that's exactly the kind of difference she and Baldino, who are both residents of Cecil County, Md., were hoping to make when they started their two-woman mission this summer.

"This has been like our part-time job, except we don't get paid," Capone said. "But when someone like Formal Affairs dresses up their window in pink, we'll have the satisfaction of knowing that we helped contribute to raising breast cancer awareness in the best city in Delaware."

Lois Capone (left) and Sandra Baldino went door-to-door on Main Street in an effort to encourage local businesses to hold an event, raise money or otherwise help raise awareness of breast cancer. To date, more than 30 businesses have agreed to participate in their Newark Hot Pink Project.

traditional schools."

To attend Pyle, students must be referred by their regular high school, although most try to refer themselves to the approximately 160-seat school before being told to get a referral from their home school.

The curriculum at Pyle follows state standards for traditional high schools, but also includes career and personal socialization credits, planning for after high school, scheduling, life skills and professional training seminars.

"We help them develop self-knowledge through writing and talking about their goals," said Pyle job coach Joyce M. Lester. "We show them ways to reach those goals, we validate them. We're the whole package in one school."

On a recent morning, a few students at the school paused to talk in the halls during class time.

"They're allowed in the halls whenever they want for a brief time," Lester explained. "They have to learn to handle responsibility."

Lester's role is to find jobs and match them students, who spend half of their school day working.

"We get employers to take on the students as interns for up to 15 hours a week," she said. "We've placed students at legal aid, family services, government agencies, the senior center, Chasecard WSFS and others businesses — they really support us."

Some employers find money to pay the student interns after they've proved themselves, she said.

"And it often works out as a kind of mentorship," Lester added. "The mentoring piece is actually more rewarding than the job piece."

Malmstrom cautioned that the school isn't about students getting out of the classroom for work.

"This program is all about challenging them," she said. "Here, the material is not watered down; it's individualized, self-paced and all college prep."

Students work on computers at their own pace, but cannot proceed unless they get a B grade on any one assignment.

"Some subjects, a student can breeze through in a few months," Malmstrom said. "But, other times it gets very frustrating because a student is taking a very long time to get through the work."

Life skills and personal responsibility

► PYLE, from 14

Teachers work one-on-one with students to help them discover where they are going wrong or how they need to approach a problem differently so they can pass the difficult test point.

"We also teach them self-awareness about where they are sabotaging themselves — how to handle anger, stress, finances, life skills that are necessary in school and on the job," Malmstrom said.

At least half of Pyle's graduates are the first in their families to go to college.

"We do everything possible so they don't have excuses not to do 'something,'" Malmstrom said. "Some are teen parents with family responsibilities already, some are in their fifth year of high school and still don't have enough credits to graduate, but we keep them moving even if it means night classes at Groves Adult High School, as well as their classes here."

Malmstrom brought testers from Delaware Technical and Community College to the school last spring so the students wouldn't have to go through applying and evaluation by themselves.

"We find out what deficiencies they have and have them take remedial courses here before graduating so they don't have to pay for that when they enter college," Malmstrom said. "Only 6 percent of college freshmen nationally don't have to take remedial courses, but 45 percent of Pyle graduates don't.

It's a nice compliment for us."

Malmstrom reported that of the academy's 15 graduates in 2007, 10 were enrolled in a trade or technical school or college while four others were working full time.

"In 2007-2008, 28 of the 42 graduates applied to DelTech or some other college, one went to ATI [Career Training Center] and one to Goldey-Beacom," she said. "Some are starting in January, because they didn't finish all their courses here until the summer and couldn't get it together in time for the fall semester."

Malmstrom and other staff members keep in touch with the students until they surmount all their personal hurdles and enter college or a career.

"We don't give them a chance to start doubting themselves," she said. "I tell them that if I come to a road block on my way to work, I don't just turn around and go home. You find another way and continue with what you planned to do. It's all about having a plan."

Blue Hens face road test at UMass

By TOM TOMASHEK

TTOMASHEK@COMCAST.NET

In the University of Delaware's first four games, the Blue Hens defeated West Chester and Albany. They could have beaten Maryland with a little luck and Coach K.C. Keeler believes his Blue Hens should have defeated Furman.

But Saturday in Amherst, Massachusetts, the Blue Hens almost HAVE to beat the Minutemen to avoid being pushed to the brink in their quest for a place in the NCAA Football Championship Subdivision playoffs. The Blue Hens are still ranked No. 14 in the FCS coaches poll and No. 16 in The Sports Network poll, but a third loss would virtually require the Blue Hens to run the table in their six remaining CAA games, three of those opponents also ranked nationally and two among "others mentioned."

In addition to No. 18 UMass - 3:30 p.m. game time, CN8 TV - Delaware must play No. 1 James Madison and No. 7 Richmond on the road, and trips to Maine are seldom a picnic.

"They are in the same situation as we are," Keeler said comparing UD and UMass. "We are both 2-2 and lost to two very tough opponents on the road. So, obviously, this is going to be a huge game in terms of trying to be CAA champions, which is the goal of the program because [CAA title] guarantees that you get into the playoffs."

What possibly separates the two teams is the venue. The Minutemen are a good team, ranked as high as No. 12 in the FCS coaches' poll, and they will challenge Delaware on the UMass home field where they have won 15 consecutive games going back to their 2005 loss to New Hampshire. They also have many of the same players back - led by their dynamic quarterback Liam Coen - from a team that last year won the CAA title.

Massachusetts is also coming off a bye week to face Delaware, suffering from some key injuries and an identity crisis after four games. Even Keeler seems slightly puzzled by his Hens.

"We are not quite sure who we are or what we are," he said. "We will definitely find out who we are in the CAA, especially when we play at a tough place like Massachusetts."

The good news for Delaware is that the Blue Hens have only lost two times in visits to Amherst, the first time 43-29 in 1993 and 17-7 in 2002. Of the nine victories at UMass since 1980, five were by a touchdown or less, three being classic finishes - UD defeating UMass 21-14 when quarterback Rick Scully's 28-yard pass secured a 21-17 victory with nine seconds left in 1980, winning 14-13 in 1982 when UMass coach Bob Pickett went for a two-point conversion and failed with seconds to go; quarterback Rich Gannon connected with Fred Singleton to notch a 27-24 win in 1984, although UD also had to block a field goal to avoid a tie, and in 1989 Delaware held off a furious UMass fourth-quarter rally to claim a 21-14 victory.

Newark field hockey falls to St. Mark's

By JON BUZBY

JONBUZBY@HOTMAIL.COM

Senior forward Courtney Schweizer scored a goal and assisted on two others to lead St. Mark's to a 4-1 win over Newark (3-2) on Monday afternoon.

Regan Walsh scored less than five minutes into the game to get the Spartans on the board early, but then the Newark defense held tough until Jaci White and Kasey Prettyman each scored with under two minutes to play in the half, giving the Spartans a 3-0 advantage.

Newark gained some momentum when Yellowjacket Jocelyn Dressel scored just four minutes into the second half to cut the lead to two, but Schweizer answered three minutes later to get the three-goal cushion back for St. Mark's.

"We started quickly, scoring less than 5 minutes into the game, but didn't follow-up on that until late in the half," Spartan coach Bill Eichinger said. "Some of that was due to Newark's solid defensive play and some to our lack of movement to the ball."

"After a very impressive performance against Rising Sun on Saturday, we were a little flat today. But again, credit Newark for their level of play. They stayed at us until the end."

Newark's Emma Hopper battles for the ball during Monday's game against St. Mark's.

Meghan Logullo scored two second-half goals to lead the Lady Bucs to one of the biggest wins of their season, upsetting Wilmington Friends, 5-3.

Senior Taylor Brown also tallied two goals in the win and junior Sarah Werkheiser recorded eight saves, shutting out Friends in the second half.

"At the time Friends was ranked No. 4 so the girls realized that hard-work and intensity can win you games and that they need to believe in themselves and their teammates," coach Kyle Bianco said. "We have been working on playing as a team and moving the ball and supporting each other. The win was a team effort."

Following a narrow 1-0 loss to Wilmington Christian, Caravel rebounded on Monday to defeat St. Elizabeth, 9-0, behind two-goal games by seniors Taylor Brown and Nikki Gayle and junior Katie Bailey. Werkheiser recorded three saves to earn the shutout.

Spartan runs to personal best: St. Mark's senior Greg Morrin overcame a bad cold and windy conditions to capture first place at the Delaware Military Academy Invitational, held last Thursday at Banning Park.

Morrin became the first Delaware high school cross-country runner to break the 16-minute mark this season with a personal-best time of 15:59. St. Mark's finished in second place - Unionville (Pa.) finished first - in the 14-team field.

Local football teams prep for stretch run

By JON BUZBY

JONBUZBY@HOTMAIL.COM

St. Mark's coach John Wilson says that the fourth game of the season is "when you really find out where your team is at." With some of the local teams coming off their fourth games, we summarize the first four and look ahead as they prepare for the rest of their seasons.

For the previously-ranked No. 1 St. Mark's Spartans, the fourth game brought with it an upset defeat, 42-27, at the hands of an unranked Newark team playing without its starting quarterback. To make matters worse, quarterback Brandon Baker went down with a hamstring injury and will be a game-time decision this week when St. Mark's looks to rebound against Dover (3-1) on Friday night.

Senior Kyle Sullivan continues to sparkle for the Spartans, scoring nearly half (45/99) of the team's points and routinely putting kickoffs in the end zone for touchbacks (10).

"Now the bull's eye is off us [after our first loss] and we can get back to work on fundamentals heading into the second half of the season," Wilson said.

Following their stunning upset victory over St. Mark's in their fourth game, Newark (2-points per game since defeating Albany 28-16 in its opener. The Minutemen inexplicably yielded 42 points to a modest Holy Cross in their second game then lost a 52-38 shootout to the dynamic Dukes of James Madison and were thrashed 56-14 by major-college Texas Tech two weeks ago.

Whatever concerns and questions Brown might have about his defense, they are perhaps matched by Keeler's questions about a Blue Hen offense that has struggled under first-year quarterback Rob Schoenhof. The Ohio State transfer had no major problems against Division II West Chester, but was lackluster against Maryland, unsettled against Furman, and last weekend struggled through the first half against Albany before the defense helped put the offense on track.

Keeler, who said he has changed three starting quarterbacks in 3-0 seasons in his coaching career, continues to support his 6-foot-6 junior quarterback, saying he continues to progress in what is a complicated system. If you are to give credence to Keeler's assessment of the UMass defense, you might have a better idea of Schoenhof's future as the Hens' starting quarterback. Delaware hasn't played UMass since 2005, but he certainly saw the Minutemen several times in game film before this season.

"Don't be deceived by their point differential, they have played some tough teams," Keeler said. "They have enough talent to be one of the best defenses in the league. I think you're going to see them play some good defense the rest of the season... and they're coming off a bye week and have had a chance to get healthy."

Keeler added that in his history with Brown, the UMass coach has demonstrated a crafty defensive acumen, sculpting multiple schemes that can confuse the opposition and keep them off guard.

Norwood leads Newark into big game

► FOOTBALL, from 17

2) will rely on senior running back Brandon Norwood (628 yards, 7 touchdowns) to continue to carry the load behind an offensive line - led by Rutgers-bound Malcolm Bunche - that according to coach Butch Simpson is "finally coming into their own."

The No. 3 Yellowjackets will look to extend their winning streak to three and stay atop Flight A when they travel to William Penn (2-2) for a 1 p.m. showdown on Saturday.

"The William Penn game has always been thought of as a state rivalry," Simpson said. "That's always a big game for both teams."

Glasgow has rebounded from their season-opening loss to St. Mark's to even its record at 2-2. Senior quarterback Chris Cruz has scored seven touchdowns - three on the ground and four through the air.

With Middletown (2-2) coming to town on Friday night, the Dragons hope to get a win and head into the second half of their season when, after the Newark game in week six, the schedule gets significantly easier. Their last four opponents have a combined 6-14 record.

"We are showing some promise," coach Shannon Riley said, "but we need to be consistent for the entire four quarters."

Hodgson went into Baynard Stadium for their fourth game and upped their perfect record to 4-0 by soundly defeating Salesianum, 32-14.

Junior quarterback Jamie Treml has engineered the Silver Eagles' offense to near perfection this season - completing 70 percent of his passes for 541 yards and 11 touchdowns. On the receiving end of those passes have been seniors Jamal Merrell (5 TDs) and Jamil Merrell (4). Junior running back Jamaal Jackson has rushed for 654 yards and 12 touchdowns.

"Each game the team has made great improvement, and we want to continue doing so," coach Frank Moffett, Jr., said. "We expect to be competitive throughout the remaining schedule, and hopefully position ourselves to make a run at winning another Division II state championship."

Hodgson puts their perfect record on the line this week when they travel to play conference-rival Concord (3-1) on Saturday at 2 p.m.

Artist's visit raises more than $1,100

Artist Steve Dillon and Captain Blue Hen Comics raised more than $1,100 last week for a non-profit that aids comic book creators in need.

An Englishman, Dillon is touring the United States to raise money for the Hero Initiative, which provides emergency medical aid and financial support to aging comic book artists and writer.

Captain Blue Hen Comics raised money for the Hero Initiative through customer donations and a charity auction, while Dillon sold sketches for $15.

union's 30th biennial national convention in Louisville, Ky., from Sept. 7 to 11.

Dan Adcock, NARFE's legislative director, warned delegates that a perfect storm might be approaching that threatens federal retirement benefits.

NARFE is the nation's single biggest contributor to Alzheimer's research. To date, NARFE members have donated over $7.6 million. The convention delegates pledged to reach a goal of $9 million by NARFE's 90th birthday in 2011.

Babatunde Q. Ogunnaike

Ogunnaike named William Friend Chair

Babatunde Q. Ogunnaike has been appointed the William Friend Chair of Chemical Engineering, UD Provost Dan Rich announced.

The professor heads the Ogunnaike research group at UD, whose efforts are organized around the general theme of first understanding the dynamic behavior of complex systems, including industrial processes and biological control systems, through mathematical modeling and analysis and then using this understanding for innovative designs and improved operations. The group focuses on three areas: control and system theory, systems biology and product engineering with the goal of engineering desired characteristics into products.

Ogunnaike also serves as a professor in the Center for Systems Biology at the Delaware Biotechnology Institute. He joined UD in 2002 after 13 years with DuPont Central Research and Development.

William L. Friend '58M, received UD's Medal of Distinction for his 41-year career in international engineering and construction, retiring as an executive vice president and director of the Bechtel Group.

UD promotes "Commitment to Delawareans"

Terry Whittaker, assistant provost for student success and diversity, is getting the word out across the state about UD's "Commitment to Delawareans," which offers a detailed roadmap for students preparing for college in general, and for admission to a four-year program on the university's Newark campus, specifically.

UD has committed to meet every fully demonstrated financial need of all freshman from Delaware up to the cost of in-state tuition, fees, a stipend for books and, for students living on campus, room and board, so long as they file the Free Application for Federal Student Aid, or FAFSA. The goal is for no Delaware student to have loans in excess of 25 percent of the cost of a four-year education. The financial commitment will begin with the fall 2009 freshman class.

Also, Delaware residents whose applications are complete and who meet all the requirements will be notified of their admission on a rolling basis starting Jan. 1 and continuing through the winter.

For more information, contact Sabriya Miller at 831-8125, or by e-mail at Sabriya@udel.edu.

September blood drive sets new UD record

For the second time in as many years, the UD community set a new blood drive record for the month of September.

During the opening blood drive of the fall semester on Sept. 17, 159 potential donors turned out and Blood Bank of Delmarva (BBD) staffers were able to accept blood donations from 126 individuals.

The event was sponsored by Greek Council, Sigma Chi, Alpha Xi Delta and Kappa Sigma.

The next blood drive at UD is the seventh annual Colonial Athletic Association (CAA) "Have A Heart" Blood Challenge, set for 7:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Nov. 12, in the multipurpose rooms of the Trabant University Center.

Students, faculty, staff and friends of UD can call 1 (888)-BLOOD-8 or 737-8400 to schedule an appointment.

UD is home to ASPIRA academies for Latino youths

ASPIRA is a nationwide organization devoted to the education and leadership development of Latino youth.

This fall, ASPIRA of Delaware has moved to the UD campus for its Saturday academies, which encourage high school seniors to continue with their education, inform them of the opportunities that are available and help them select a college or university, take college entrance exams, and complete college and financial aid applications.

Topic: I've heard professional athletes and musicians speak of being "in the zone" - where they are performing at such a high level they can almost detach themselves from their performance and watch what is going on. The Bible speaks of being "in the Spirit" - is this comparable to the experience of an athlete or musician "in the zone"? (continued on Sunday)

► UD BRIEFS, from 23

Havidán Rodríguez

"ASPIRA is a critical and innovative program aimed at increasing the presence, voice and visibility of Latino or Hispanic students in institutions of higher learning," said Havidán Rodríguez, vice provost for academic affairs and international programs at UD.

The Saturday academies program began with an orientation for the parents of the ASPIRA students and on Sept. 13, students began meeting on a regular basis during the academic year. UD hosted the students for lunch at the Blue & Gold Club at the first meeting.

Unsupervised bail-out plan could be disaster, UD finance experts say

The current financial crisis occurred because no one paid enough attention and the U.S. Congress could repeat the pattern if it doesn't closely examine the proposed bailout plan, a panel of University of Delaware financial experts said on Sept. 24.

The panel of experts spoke to a packed crowd of approximately 400 in the Loudis Recital Hall of the Amy E. du Pont Music Building.

UD Distinguished Scholar in Residence William Poole told the crowd the hidden inner-workings of companies like AIG and Lehman Brothers are what led to the current crisis, while noting that foreseeing potential pitfalls is difficult even for economists.

Poole, who recently retired as chief executive of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, joined three current and one former UD professor on stage, including Donald Puglisi, UD professor emeritus of finance and director of Puglisi & Associates financial advisers; economics professor James Butkiewicz; and Robert Schweitzer, the Donald J. Puglisi Professor of Finance and a professor of economics.

Alum Anthony Varallo receives literary award

When 1992 alumnus Anthony Varallo received a phone call telling him he had won the prestigious 2008 Drue Heinz Literature Prize from the University of Pittsburgh Press for his new short story collection, "Out Loud", he said he couldn't believe it and thought someone was kidding him.

But the award was real and in addition to prize money, his book was published by the University of Pittsburgh Press. Manuscripts are judged anonymously by nationally known writers such as Robert Penn Warren and Joyce Carol Oates. Scott Turow, an attorney and best-selling author of suspense novels, was the judge who selected "Out Loud" from close to 300 entries.

UD Library posts online voter's guide

The University of Delaware is offering a new Web page, "Election 2008: A Voter's Guide," that provides an online guide to the 2008 elections, with information about the presidential race and Delaware elections.

"Election 2008" includes links to sites for the major and minor presidential candidates, the national conventions, the national parties, analysis of current political issues and Delaware election information, including the gubernatorial candidates, voter registration sites and a multitude of news sources. Also included on the Web page are several election simulators, political fact monitors, multimedia sources and political humor.

"Election 2008" was created by Michael Gutierrez, an associate librarian in the Reference Department.

Japanese ELL students visit Early Learning Center

Fourteen English Language Institute exchange students from Kobe Shoin Women's University in Kobe, Japan, visited classrooms at UD's Early Learning Center on Sept. 17 as part of their field learning experience.

After taking a tour of UD's facility, the group visited individual classrooms, where they shared their culture with young learners through origami and traditional games, as well as through counting and calligraphy activities.

Here for four weeks, the exchange students from Kobe attend regular classes at UD, including a foreign language class in Japanese.
