

Cambridge in fact. <sup>(2)</sup> So we were both wrong.
" Did you read this month's installment of "Jenny & Gyzel"? Its most too good.
Also, did you start Edith Wharton's serial.
Its perfectly, perfect. Here.

Going to stop now & eat dummies. Take all kinds of care of your old dear self, and love ittee wife's lots.

Love of love from us all.

You ever
Dixie-wife.

Oh say, when I had finished writing my ghost story, I got afraid and darning our creation, and fell in bed at such a rate that I bruised my knee on the foot-board and waked Alice up. She and ma have been guying me so all day, that - to revenge myself on them, I read them the story & ma says she's going to get all her night-work done quick so's not to be in the dark. Ugh, its terrible!

To: Paul L. Dunbar

Chicago

From: Mrs Paul L. Dunbar Harman, Colo.

(1)

Tuesday, Feb 27.

[1900]

Huckleb's nurse. Wonder what you are doing to-day? You're in Chicago and its four below you, isn't it? I wonder if you are keeping in doors and taking lots of good care of your self. We had a great blizzard last night - but it isn't very cold to-day, just raw. Ma is pretty well, tho' she had a mean sick spell last night. Alice is cheery as ever and I am in a gorgeous humor. Wrote a good word ghost-story last night - called "St John's Eve", which I am going to send in to the Black Cat competition, and also two poems (?), one "A Common Plaint" and the "The West Wind." They are very fine, I have bundled them off to Miss Cyborster. Am I not almost too literary, too intellectual, in fact.

Ma tells me to say that - she was right about Daisy Nahan's married sister. Alice knew her well, spent much time at her house when she lived in

