Hesseltine Cites Problems With Milking Machines

Milking machines may be causing more problems than they should, according to two University of Illinois dairy scientists—mainly because machines on many farms are not in proper repair. Reporting at a recent meeting of the American Dairy Science Association, Leo Fryman and Jack Albright said vacuum pumps and pulsators are causing most of the problems.

W. R. Hesseltine, extension dairyman at the University of Delaware who attended the meeting, says these problems exist on many Delaware dairy farms.

Hesseltine points out that many of these problems can be solved by following manufacturer recommendations; observing a program of preventive maintenance; and being alert to mechanical failures or other problems as they develop.

Dinner Preparation Eased By Heat-And-Serve Food

How to get dinner without letting dinner get you is not the problem it used to be, says Janet Coblenz, nutrition specialist with the University of Delaware.

Part of the reason for this is the heat-and-serve frozen foods available.

These cooked and frozen ahead foods are wonderful if they have been chosen wisely and handled properly. That includes storage temperatures of zero degrees or colder, and good packaging.

Chrysler Awarded $110,861 Contract For Overseas Aid

The Chrysler plant in Newark, worth a spare parts for trucks and cars being sold overseas under provisions of the United States foreign aid program.

The Newark unit is filling orders under contracts awarded to the Chrysler Corporation by a firm in Istanbul, Turkey, and a buyer in Phnom Penh, Cambodia.

The purchases are being made under the U. S. economic assistance programs in Cambodia and Turkey, administered by AID.

Assistance agreements provide that American suppliers have an opportunity to bid on contracts for foreign countries. Through such restrictions approximately two-thirds of the money to finance American aid overseas remains in the U. S. economy.

Items shipped or their containers are shipped to the United States to inform people of assisted nations that the goods result from the U. S. aid program.

Quality In Buying Frozen Food Cited By Janet Coblenz

Are you getting top quality in the frozen foods you buy? Maybe not, says Janet Coblenz, University of Delaware foods and nutrition specialist. If the frozen fruits and vegetables are not properly handled at any time after they are packaged — they will lose color, flavor, texture, and nutritive value, she says.

As a shopper you have no way of knowing what's happened to the foods before they reach the retail store. But you can watch out for poor handling there and take proper care of the foods once they are yours.

Here's what experts in the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service say you should do to get the most for your frozen food money.

At the market, check the temperature of the food case. If possible, an indicator often is inside. It should register 0 degrees F. or below.

The case itself should be clean and the food stacked no higher than the fill line. Be sure you select packages that are clean and firm. Avoid misshapen packages, which may mean the food was thawed and refrozen.

Also, make sure packaging materials are not torn, crushed, or juice-stained. Frozen food that is exposed to poorly packaged dries out and develops off-flavors quickly.

So much for the market. The rest is up to you, says Miss Coblenz. Select frozen foods last, immediately before you go through the check-out line.

Ask the checker to place your frozen foods in a double grocery bag or insulated food carrier. This is especially important during warm weather, she warns.

As soon as you've bought your groceries, go home. Put the frozen items immediately into the freezer. They remember to use them within a few months.

Fruits and vegetables will last from eight to 12 months. But don't try to keep TV dinners or meat pies more than three months. Ice cream should be eaten the same month you buy it.

Business Women's Week Proclaimed By Governor

Delaware's business and professional women were accorded high praise this week as Governor Elbert N. Carvel endorsed for observance the period Oct. 7-13 as National Business Women's Week in the First State.

The state's chief executive asserted that "our state is blessed by the many qualified women who provide distinguished participation in the opportunities provided by our diversified industries and who assume leading roles in the professions."

Commander Lynch To Visit Newark In VFW Campaign

The Department of Delaware, Veterans of Foreign Wars has opened an intensive membership drive to back up a national program which Department Commander Samuel A. Lynch says will feature stepped-up community service and Americanism activities.

The state program will be based on mandates of the organization's recent national convention where it advocated an armed force combat and reserve strength of 2,000,000 men with adequate nuclear and conventional weapons and modes of transportation to help strengthen the nation in its cold war against communism.

The community service program will see new projects get underway in many towns this year, Lynch said, and the state organization along with the Delaware Association of Broaders will sponsor the Voice of Democracy contest for high school students.

Speaking of Money...

"Overseas College Education"

Speaking for the Wilmington Savings Fund Society

By JOHN BUCHANAN

Hello, John Buchanan here again with the series called SPEAKING OF MONEY. Let's talk about something exciting... the growing idea in educational circles that college students should spend time studying abroad and the transplanting of many American college campuses to foreign lands.

Right at this moment, there are between 15 and 20 thousand American students studying overseas... some of them enrolled in our new American college programs on foreign soil, but the greater part of them studying independently at places like Oxford, the Sorbonne and the University of Heidelberg.

Why this interest in studying abroad? Lots of reasons, but it all started because of the student-exchange programs begun after World War II, in an effort to promote better understanding among nations. The Fulbright Act passed by Congress to provide funds for student exchange pays the cost of the foreign students, as well as Americans.

How was this financed? Well, the United States sold the war material stacked up in various foreign lands at the end of the war, and spent the money in those countries to bring students here, finance Americans there, under the original Fulbright scholarships.

Today, some 41 foreign nations and territories participate in an outgrowth of that program, but they all pay their own way... and the new educational exchange program is administered by UNESCO. At last count, there were more than 36,000 foreign nationals studying in the United States; 12,500 foreign nationals studying in Russia, and other numbers in other lands, ranging from thousands down to 65 Americans studying on the island of Guam. All in all, however, there are only 7,000 Americans abroad on UNESCO scholarships right now.

Incidentally, if you're interested in one of these... here's what to do. For graduate study, you may apply for a UNESCO grant if you are under 35, in good health, hold a bachelor's degree from an accredited American college or university, and have a working knowledge of the language of the country in which you wish to study. You must also submit an acceptable plan of study which you intend to follow. Open competition for these scholarships starts in May. For further information, write to the Office of International Education, #1 East 67th Street, New York 21, New York.

If you're an undergrad, or planning to be one in the next few years, your best bet for going overseas is probably through one of the fast-growing foreign study programs at such universities as Stanford, Syracuse, University of Kansas, Oberlin, Fordham, New York University, Smith College, Antioch, and many others.

You can arrange to go abroad in your junior year, although some sophomores are now going. It doesn't matter if you're not taking a liberal arts course... scientific and engineering students are going, too... in order to round out their education. Except for travel, the cost is very comparable to what you'd spend on campus in the U. S. A.

Where will you live? Well, you may land right in a transplanted American campus. For example, Stanford's overseas branches now have students enrolled for six months courses teaching English... at three locations: Stuttgart, Germany... Florence, Italy... Tours, France. And you are being made to start Stanford courses in Tokyo, later in Hong Kong.

Of course, some educators say that some of our students are not properly prepared with knowledge of languages to derive benefit from overseas environment... but nevertheless it looks like colleges and students like it, and it takes some of the strain off educational facilities in this country.

Before I leave you, I want you to know that I have the new prospectus from the University of California. If you'd like to see engineering there next term, the full cost for tuition, books, room and board is only $3,000 a year.

At the Savings Fund our business is to help people save regularly. Why not start a savings program with us and make it your Savings Fund, too. Your money will earn interest at the current rate of 3 1/2%, even in a Special Purpose account. You may open an account with as little as one dollar with full passbook privileges at any ATM regardless of the one at which you open your account. You can even sit comfortably at home and bank by mail if you wish. Won't you drop in soon?

Good Breakfasts Advised As Cures For Tired Feeling

What to do for that mid-morning slow-up? How to avoid that tired feeling in the afternoon? How to improve concentration and efficiency on the job?

A good breakfast is the answer for many people, says Janet Coblenz, nutrition specialist at the University of Delaware.

Studies show that those who have an adequate meal before work get more done than those who skip or skimp breakfast.

Newark, Delaware, Thursday, October 11, 1962

BEFORE THEY START!

Every week is Fire Prevention Week for Newark's volunteer firemen of the Aetna Hose, Hook & Ladder Company, but this nationally proclaimed Fire Prevention Week is one in which each of us—in Newark and throughout the nation—is urged to help reduce the death and devastation caused by fire.

Our firemen on 24-hour duty throughout the year, provide protection after the fire starts, and their safety educational programs do much to prevent other fires from starting. But the real responsibility for fire prevention rests with each of us. Get rid of those fire hazards at home immediately!

TWO CHAMPIONSHIP TEAMS

Directed by J. Robert King and newcomer Eugene F. Gonzalez, Delaware's new marching band very nearly stole the show from Delaware's Fightin' Blue Hen football team last Saturday.

At halftime in the home opener with Lafayette at the Newark stadium, the Delaware Marching Band presented a brilliant, spectacular performance of precision marching and music with a War Between the States theme—and to a stepped-up cadence of 160 to the minute. If Coach Dave Nelson should need any more fancy stepping backs—and his Lambert Cup contenders appear deep enough—some likely-looking recruits are in Delaware Band uniform.

It was a great show, and when the band played "Dixie," a musician reviewing the game and halftime performance from the windy west stands—a musician from Alabama—almost fell with his applause from the top deck of the stadium.

Letters To The Editor

Oct. 8, 1962

Dear Sir:

First of all, let me say that I am not in the habit of writing letters. But something happened last weekend in our town which put this pen in my hand. And this time I am enjoying it.

Over the years I have heard it many times, and on some occasions I even have said it myself: "Where can you go to get some good clean entertainment at a reasonable price without leaving town if you have no car?"

To be sure, there are good plays—excellent plays—at the university, but there is room for more of this sort of entertainment. The Collegiate Players gave the people of Newark an opportunity to see some of it, and we missed the boat!

It may be that the show was not promoted enough or that many thought it was not worth the price. But let me tell you one thing, and

I am sure everyone who saw it will agree with me: It was worth every cent and then some.

It can only be hoped that the poor attendance will not discourage this spirited group of players and that they will give us more of their talent in the future.

My best wishes and thanks to the whole cast of The Collegiate Players.

Maybe you can tell the difference between Pontiac's Tempest (especially that Le Mans) and the high-priced jobs. Besides having a 4 that acts like a V-8, Tempest sports a new 260-hp V-8* that acts like nothing you ever got your hands on before. And besides its beautiful balance, Tempest has Wide-Track this year. And self-adjusting brakes and a tachometer* and fetching style and all kinds of niceties that'll make your Tempest smoother and tougher. About all it doesn't have is a big fat price tag. Gilmore B. Ott Addresses
School Business Seminar

Gilmore B. Ott, principal of the new Christiana High School under construction near Newark, discussed school construction problems last week before a seminar in school business management at the University of Delaware.

Starting from the proposition that a school must incorporate the philosophy and purposes of the people who will use it, Ott explained steps in putting up a school, from initial authorization to establishment of a manual for building policies and maintenance.

The seminar, under direction of Dr. Craig Wilson of the university's school of education, was conducted for Delaware school administrators.

Over the CLOVER

by Dean Bell
4-H Club Agent

The dairy judging team has returned from Richmond, Va. I wish I could say they placed first, but even though they didn't, they made a fine showing and gained a great amount of experience.

Lillian Dixon from Clayton led the Delaware team in judging. The fine support and cooperation of Lloyd Sheats, Middletown; Ronnie Robbins, Milford; and Joy Hudson of Milton completed the team.

Mrs. Dixon of Clayton and Wilbur Hasseltine, dairy specialist at the University of Delaware, accompanied the team. This competition was at the Atlantic Rural Exposition.

This is an event all you dairy members should be working for in all your project plans and events. An event coming up in November, but which needs immediate attention, is the window display contest. The County Leaders' Association approved the schedule of having the window display contest Nov. 5-10. This means quick plans and plenty of work on your part. The success of this event depends on you.

At the last Junior Council meeting a new treasurer was elected for a two-year term—Kai Schumann, a Blue Hen 4-H'er from Newark.

New projects are being selected and this is the time to invite new members. Pass the word around and gain new friends in club work.

The state favorite foods contest in Dover this year, has 14 New Castle County members entered. Georganna Perry of Christiansa, a member of the Green Leaf 4-H Club, won third place with her fried shredded wheat entry in the breakfast division.

Marilyn Whitten, a member of Green Leaf Club from Bear, won third place in the lunch division with her string bean casserole. In the dessert division, Mary Woodmansee of Newark and the Green Meadows Club won second place with chocolate covered cream puffs, and Beverly Butler from Townsend and Stump Corner Club won third place with a strawberry shortcake.

A very fine job by all these contestants—and some very good cooks too!

Two Newark girls—Lea and Nina Tammi—have made the news again. They just returned from the NEPPCO Convention in Harrisburg, Pa., where they were in some judging contests.

Lea won first place among all individuals in the egg grading and judging contest. Nine placed second overall in the poultry judging and grading contest.

The Delaware team placed third in the East, so a very fine job was

Out-Of-City Homes Top 80 Per Cent Of New Building

More than 80 per cent of new homes constructed in Delaware between 1940 and 1960 were built in rural and suburban areas; and Gerald F. Vaughn, U. S. Department of Agriculture economist at the University of Delaware, reports more than 68,000 houses and dwelling units (including apartments) were built during this period for a total of 143,725 in the state by 1960— with 56,000 of them outside incorporated municipalities.

"This development is another significant indication of Delaware's rapid trend toward suburban living," Vaughn says.

Citing revised data from the Census of Housing, Vaughn indicates that in 1960, 58 per cent of the homes were in suburban and rural areas, compared with 56 per cent in 1940.

New Castle County had the largest boom in suburban housing. Of 47,000 homes built during the past two decades, 40,000 were in the suburbs.

In Sussex County, 11,000 homes were constructed—more than 7,000 of them in suburban and rural areas.

Statistics show that Kent County had an increase of 10,000 homes—8,000 of them in the country.

In 1960, New Castle County with a population of 307,000, had nearly 55,000 homes.

Sussex County with 73,000 people, had more than 29,000 homes.

Kent County with almost 66,000 people, had nearly 20,000 homes.

Information Cited As Primary Need To Aid Consumer

The consumer of today is better informed, but there is more to be informed about, according to Janet Reed, U. of D. clothing specialist. A half century ago a trip to town meant the purchase of a few yards of calico; a barrel of flour; some sugar — perhaps a new pair of shoes — and a nickel's worth of candy for the children.

Now when the homemaker goes on a shopping trip, chances are she will buy as many as 50 items in the grocery store in addition to her other stops for such things as housewares, ready-made clothing, appliances and furniture.

The homemaker has to move fast to stay abreast of the retailers who are competing for her shopping dollar.

Things consumers can do to better equip themselves for the difficult job of "family purchasing agent" are:

1. Be informed and use your head. Study the facts before making a major purchase. Do not buy quickly or on emotion. It's impossible to get your money's worth unless you know something about food, fiber, fabric and hardware. Read the labels and know what they mean.

2. Be objective. Was the purchase really defective or did you fail to follow the directions for its use and care? Many complaints are actually the fault of the purchaser. Make sure your complaint is legitimate.

3. You only get what you pay for. Be willing to spend more for extra value. One shirt manufacturer complained recently that it was impossible for him to sell a shirt for more than $4.50. But for 50 cents more he could make a product far superior to the one he was manufacturing.

4. Express yourself — to the right person in the right way. One manufacturer of blue denim material said he had never received a complaint about his material failing. Although homemakers have been plagued with fading denim for years, none of them have bothered to tell the manufacturer.

If the product isn't right, take it back to the store and be sure your complaint registers.

Model Of Thiokol Rocket Recovered By Policemen

Newark police found the model of a Nova rocket which disappeared Sept. 26 from the steps of First Presbyterian Church.

The 2½-foot wooden model had been loaned by the Thiokol Corp., Elkton, for a demonstration at a meeting of Cub Pack 56 sponsored by the church.

McAllister Cites Storage As State Corn Profit Aid

Corn growers have two opportunities to increase profits on their crop—first by using top flight production methods, and second by marketing their crop to the best advantage. Farm Management Specialist W. T. McAllister at the University of Delaware, reports.

Delaware farmers have demonstrated they can grow corn. Record yields of 100 bushels per acre or more are common. But too many farmers have been unwilling to apply this same effort to the important job of marketing. Too often they have been content to sell their crop out of the field for whatever price offered.

There is very little price risk in storing corn. And a producer can usually make 10 to 15 cents per bushel over storage costs.

For the past 12 years Delaware farmers have been able to get an average of 22 cents a bushel more by holding their corn in storage for only three months—a 17.6 per cent increase over the price at harvest.
