Vienna, September 25, 1936.

Dear Secretary Hull:

I last wrote you on September 18th, and this is just a word to say that, although we have a pouch leaving today, I am refraining from comment at this time, as I believe my despatch No. 914, of September 24th, which goes forward by this pouch, is of sufficient interest and importance for you to read. I have found it advisable to give in this despatch some of the more intimate comment that I would otherwise have put in a letter.

Believe me, with all good wishes,

Cordially and faithfully yours,

The Honorable
Cordell Hull,
Secretary of State,
Washington, D. C.
